The measure now goes back to the Senate whose bill also would grant ex-Presidents free office space, clerical help and free mailing privileges.

An appeal by Democratic Leader John W. McCormack to "Keep partisanship out" of the debate went unheeded by lawmakers critical of giving pensions to Truman or later, to President Eisenhower.

AMENDMENT APPROVED

An amendment by Rep. August E. Johansen R-Mich. to limit the House bill to presidential pensions only was approved by a standing vote of 127 to 76.

Both House and Senate versions also would provide $10,000-a-year pensions for widows of ex-presidents.

Backers of the bill pointed out that pensions now are provided for military officers, judges, federal employes and members of Congress, who can draw up to $15,000 a year under their contributory retirement system.

"Why discriminate against the highest official we have?" demanded Rep. James H. Morrison D-La.

McCormack made his appeal after Rep. John M. Robsion Jr.—R-Ky.—said that "if Mr. Truman wants to continue his cheap demagogic politics, let him do it on his own time and at his own expense." Robsions remarks drew some GOP applause and some boos from Democrats.

Emphasizing that no individual had requested the bill, McCormack said it was "based on decency." He said some past Presidents had suffered seriously and financially after leaving the White House.

Science Aid School Bill Wins First Test As House Rule Committee Approves Resolution To Bring Bill To Floor For Consideration

Passage Of Bill Would Set Up $840,000,000 Four Year Plan

Washington, Aug. 7—The science aid school bill won its first test in the House today. The resolution for its consideration was adopted 265 to 108, with the chairman of the Rules Committee, Representative Howard W. Smith, Democrat of Virginia, leading the opposition.

Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican of Massachusetts, who is the minority leader, spoke for the science aid bill and voted for the rule.

Proponents considered the vote a favorable indication that the legislation may be passed tomorrow.

The measure would set up a four-year, $840,000,000 program of scholarships, student loans, fellowships, equipment and teaching-aid funds, stimulation to guidance and counseling programs and other devices to raise the level of education in this country.

The "phasing out" of scholarships and fellowships until students awarded them are graduated would raise this sum to $1,070,000,000.

'Half Baked' Legislation

Mr. Smith called the school bill "half-baked" and "the kind of crazy legislation that comes in at the end of the session."

Representative Cleveland M. Bailey, Democrat of West Virginia, longtime proponent of Federal education aid, retorted: "If doing something to help the education of the children of the country can be called crazy, I am glad to be counted in that category."

More Republican than Democratic opponents rallied to Mr. Smith in the floor debate and ballot. Voting against the resolution were Representatives Charles A. Hallock, Republican of Indiana, and Graham A. Barden, Democrat of North Carolina, chairman of the House Education and Welfare Committee that approved the bill by a 23 to 2 vote.

Under today's resolution, general debate was limited to two hours, forty-five minutes of which remained as the House adjourned. It will reconvene at 11 A. M. tomorrow, debate for forty-five minutes and then proceed to amendments.

President's Plan Noted

Representative Carl Elliott, Democrat of Alabama, author and floor manager of the bill, told the House that the amendments required by President Eisenhower reducing the number of scholarships from 23,000 to 10,000 and specifying that they be offered on a basis of need only, will be the first offered. It is regarded as certain of adoption.

Representative William H. Ayres, Republican of Ohio, served notice he would offer a substitute bill providing Federally insured loans to students and $10,000,000 annually to states to employ either more teachers of science or more laboratory equipment. This amendment is not regarded as having strong backing.

Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat of Manhattan, told reporters he would offer an amendment requiring that there be no discrimination in awards because of race, religion or sex. This anti-discrimination provision is now in the school lunch, civil service and Hill-Burton hospital laws.

Much of the debate today centered on whether or not Soviet scientific education, as evidenced by the launching of the first sputniks in October, is a real threat to this country. Also debated was the Russian lead in languages.

Measure Before State Legislature Would Simplify Civil Procedure

By W. D. WORKMAN JR.
Capital Correspondent

COLUMBIA — Every legislative session of the South Carolina General Assembly has its share of [illegible] bills, but this year the Legislature has before it an omnibus bill which affects the [illegible]

The intent of the bill, in the words of the Judicial Council of South Carolina, is "to improve the administration of justice, to relieve and prevent congested dockets, to facilitate settlements and to expedite the handling of litigated matters" in the field of civil actions. In short the bill seeks to streamline, modernize and simplify the procedure in the state's civil courts.

LOT OF WORK

Back of the bill are several years of work by members of the bar of the State, bolstered since 1949 by the active participation of the Judicial Council. That council was established last year to make continuing studies and recommendations for the improvement of South Carolina's legal and judicial system. It consists of representatives of the various courts of the state, from the Supreme Court on down, the Legislature, the Bar Assn., the University Law School and the attorney general's office.

The bill itself is a voluminous affair, running to 156 printed pages (including Judicial Council notes explaining the proposal in some cases.) Despite its length, it represents an appreciable consolidation and simplification of the rules of civil procedure which have grown up in South Carolina since 1870. Its adoption would mean the compression of 375 of the said states into a new code of 88 rules of civil procedure.

PRIMARY FEATURE

The primary feature of the new code is its correlation with the federal rules of procedure which apply in the U. S. courts. Where the state rules on the federal will have these advantages:

1. It will capitalize on a thorough revision of federal procedure made in 1938 after joint efforts of the American Bar Assn. and the Congress.

2. It will permit lawyers to familiarize themselves with what is essentially one, rather than two, patterns of procedure.

3. It will, by numbering state rules so as to conform with federal rules, make possible ready reference to a considerable body of court interpretations affecting particular rules.

SIMPLIFIES PROCEDURE

From the viewpoint of attorneys, the new rules will make for simplified procedures through the elimination of many technicalities and the substitution of common sense for legal technology at many stages of litigation. For example, plaintiffs attorneys may make only short statements, citing a claim for relief, in lieu of detailed and technical complaints now required. Furthermore, all complaints and counterclaims growing out of a single incident may be combined in one action instead of being brought separately.

Of even more importance to the layman, however, is the avowed aim of the new code to prevent injustice and unnecessary expense. Here is one instance of how that might be done:

Present South Carolina procedural rules strictly limit that phase of legal preparation known as "discovery," which involves the right of one party to learn something about the other party's case. The proposed rules, patterned on the federal rules, would permit broad discovery rights, thereby permitting opposing attorneys to learn the true extent of their opponent's case.

PROMOTES SETTLEMENT

This would tend to lessen the degree of "surprise" which might be sprung by one lawyer on another, but the litigants in the matter are more interested in obtaining justice than in legal maneuvers. Consequently, full exploration of both sides of a law suit will tend to promote settlements based on existing facts without having all cases go through full and expensive trials.

The elimination or lessening of such trials not only will save money for litigants, but for the taxpayers of the state as well, since each day of civil court costs the state between $700 and $1,000.

ANOTHER STEP

Another step in the same direction is the provision for pre-trial conference of opposing lawyers with the presiding judge. Here again, the real issues can be brought to light and, where facts are not in dispute, frequently can be settled short of a costly trial. But in these, as in all cases, the rights of individuals to have jury trials would be fully protected whenever facts are at issue.

Adequate safeguards are incorporated into the bill to prevent the harassment of either side by the other in a law suit. Additional safeguards protect the right of plaintiffs in the matter of medical examination. That particular point was one of the chief points at issue when the House of Representatives joined debate on the bill. A small band of young lawyers contended that their plaintiffs would be at the mercy of "insurance company doctors" under the provisions of the initial bill.

FLIBUSTER AVERTED

What loomed as a filibuster over that question was averted by the adoption of an amendment by Rep. Edward B. Cottingham, of Marlboro county. His amendment added these two sentences to the section on medical examination: "Upon objection to the physician designated (to examine the plaintiff) and if the parties shall fail to agree as to who shall make the examination, the court may designate a physician. Upon request, a physician or physicians designated by the person to be examined may be present at the examination."

With the Cottingham amendment, the section represents a major step forward in minimizing the likelihood of one-sided medical testimony in damage suits, whether such testimony be intended to benefit the plaintiff or the defendant.

The essential fairness of the proposed new rules is validated by the support given them by outstanding lawyers of the state who are recognized as "plaintiff's attorneys" as well as by those recognized as "defendant's attorneys."

The bill has passed the House and is now before the Senate.

BILL ON STATES RIGHTS SCORES IN HOUSE TEST

Plan to Curb Court to Be Debated Today

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

WASHINGTON (AP)—A disputed states' rights bill took a big stride toward House passage Tuesday as its backers scored a better than 2-1 victory in an initial test.

By a roll-call vote of 268-114, the House agreed to debate the measure for six hours and vote on it sometime Wednesday.

The lopsidedness of the vote surprised even the most ardent backers and dismayed opponents who had hoped to block consideration.

The bill is an outgrowth of the supreme court's ruling in the case of Communist Steve Nelson. The court held that a federal law against sedition superseded a Pennsylvania law on the same subject and under which Nelson had been convicted. The ruling was that state laws against sedition were invalid.

Sponsored by Rep. Howard W. Smith (D-Va.), the pending measure simply says that when there are state and federal laws on the same subject, the former prevail unless the federal act specifically provides the contrary or there is a direct and positive conflict that cannot be reconciled.

NEED IS CLAIMED

The bill's backers say the measure is needed because recent supreme court decisions have nullified many state laws by the doctrine of federal pre-emption.

"It affects not only the sovereignties of the states but the liberties of thousands of people," Rep. William E. Colmer (D-Miss.) told the House.

"This bill," he said "simply says the supreme court, which has been going pretty far afield, shall not nullify the statutes of the sovereign states of this Union which are otherwise constitutional, unless Congress says so by affirmative legislation."

Colmer called it "a stop, look and listen sign to the courts."

He said there was not a word of truth in claims that the bill would upset federal laws dealing with civil rights, labor and other subjects.

'DEVASTATING EFFECT'

Rep. Ray J. Madden (D-Ind.) argued that the bill would "shatter the basic relationship between the legislative and judicial branches of the government" and would have a devastating effect on existing civil rights and labor legislation.

Chairman Emanuel Celler (D-N. Y.) of the judiciary committee, contended that the bill's enactment would cause chaos in the ranks of organized labor, railroads and other groups operating in interstate commerce under federal laws. This would be so, he argued, because the bill would be retroactive.

Rep. Kenneth Keating (R-N. Y.) also complained against the retroactivity provision.

Rep. William M. Tuck (D-Va.) accused Chief Justice Earl Warren of being "bent upon the establishment of a judicial oligarchy to supplant not only the states but also the Congress of the United States."

He said the bill would let the supreme court know "in no uncertain terms the rules and conditions under which the Congress would have its own intentions determined."

Group Votes To Overthrow Court Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee voted 8-4 Friday for a bill to overthrow a Supreme Court ruling and let states enforce their laws against sedition.

The court decision, in 1956, threw out the conviction of Communist leader Steve Nelson under a Pennsylvania sedition law. The court held that Congress had pre-empted the sedition field by passing the Smith Act and other anti-communist measures.

The effect was to invalidate the sedition laws of 42 states.

Rep. Howard W. Smith (D-Va), author of the Smith Act, and others argued there was no intention in the federal legislation to do away with state laws in the field.

The House has passed a broad states right bill saying federal laws may not supersede state laws on any subject unless Congress specifically says so, or unless there is an irreconciliable conflict between them.

The Senate committee Friday refused to take the House bill as an amendment to its own, much narrower, legislation.

Chairman James P. Eastland (D-Miss) of the Senate committee said the agreement not to tack on the House bill was on motion of Sen. John J. Carroll (D-Colo).

The chairman said he would ask the Democratic Policy Committee of the Senate on Tuesday to schedule the sedition bill for action.

Congress is getting adjournment fever and it is uncertain whether there will be any final legislation on the matter this session.

The bill is a direct outgrowth of the Steve Nelson case in which the Supreme Court set aside a sedition conviction of a communist under a Pennsylvania law because there was a Federal statute on the same subject.

Speaker after speaker supporting the bill told the House the Supreme Court went too far in the Nelson case and in other cases involving construction of state laws.

Behind the opposition is an openly-voiced suspicion the bill, if it becomes law, will be used by many states to get around Federal labor laws and the Supreme Court's desegregation ruling.

But with the present session of Congress drawing to an end, the chances of the bill becoming law this year seemed slim, since it has not yet been considered by the Senate.

State Righters Gaining Ground

But House Vote Is Delayed On Court Measure

WASHINGTON, July 16. (AP)—Major opposition to a disputed states rights bill appeared to be crumbling Wednesday, in a second round of legalistic argument in the House.

But a showdown vote, originally scheduled for Wednesday afternoon, was put off until Thursday to give both sides in the controversy more time to air their views.

Backed by most Republicans and almost all Southern Democrats, the bill is aimed at the doctrine of pre-emption under which, sponsors say, the Supreme Court has been invalidating state laws.

It provides that Federal laws shall not supersede state laws on the same subjects unless there is a direct and irreconcilable conflict or unless Congress specifically gives the Federal act priority each time it passes a law.

AIMED AT SUPREME COURT

Senate Refuses To Kill State Rights Measure

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Wednesday night refused to kill a states rights bill aimed at Supreme Court decisions and then adjourned until Thursday without completing action on the measure.

Adjournment was voted at 11:30 p.m. after a 12½-hour session.

The states rights bill is identical to one passed last month by the House except for minor amendments. It is designed to prevent state laws from being declared invalid because of parallel federal legislation.

Opponents of the bill denounced it as another assault of the Supreme Court. They tried to table it, but lost on a 46-39 roll call vote.

Earlier the Senate killed by a 49-41 vote a bill to curb the review powers of the Supreme Court and to undo the effects of its decisions in several Communist cases.

The House bill provides that federal laws shall not be construed as superseding state laws in the same field unless Congress expressly says so or unless there is a direct and irreconcilable conflict between them.

Target Date Set

WASHINGTON (AP)—Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex) said Wednesday night Senate leaders hope to adjourn this session of Congress by Saturday night. Johnson for the first time set a definite adjournment target as the Senate met in another extra-hour session wrangling over bills aimed at decisions of the Supreme Court.

In addition, it would specifically nullify the effect of the Supreme Court's decision in the Steve Nelson case by restoring to the states the right to enforce their own antisubversive laws.

Sen. William Langer (R-ND) won acceptance of an amendment providing that the measure should not apply to any treaties or acts of Congress relating to federal leases with Indian tribes.

Atty. Gen. Rogers advised Sen. James O. Eastland (D-Miss), chairman of the Senate Judiciary committee, earlier in the week that he was opposed to the bill. The Labor Department also has opposed it.

During House debate on the measure, opponents warned that it was likely to be vetoed by President Eisenhower should it be passed.

Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex) had informed the Senate before the tabling vote that he and other Senate leaders hoped for adjournment of the present session of Congress by Saturday night.

Earlier, in the midst of the dispute over the court bills, Sen. Paul H. Douglas (D-Ill) proposed that Congress go on record in support of the Supreme Court's school desegregation decision.

The measure killed by the 49-41 vote was sponsored by Sen. William E. Jenner (R-Ind) and Sen. John M. Butler (R-Md). Jenner urged its adoption to check what he called "a runaway wild court" that he said is tearing down the Constitution.

But opponents denounced the bill as punitive and as an attempt to impose the will of Congress on the court. They said it would upset the constitutional balance of power the judiciary and the legislative branch.

Voting to kill the measure were 30 Democrats and 19 Republicans. Voting to keep it alive were 1[illegible] Democrats and 25 Republicans.

As soon as the Jenner-Butler proposal went down to defeat Douglas moved that Congress express "its full support and approval of recent historic decisions" declaring racial segregation in public schools to be unconstitutional.

He said this would put the real issue out in the open. He called various bills that have been offered to overcome the effects of other Supreme Court decisions just a smokescreen.

Douglas' move caught Senate leaders by surprise. They immediately countered with an attempt to call up another bill that would undo the effect of a Supreme Court decsion by restoring to the states the right to enforce their own anti-subsersive laws. The Senate agreed to make this bill the pending business.

Earlier Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex) told newsmen he hoped the Senate could finish Thursday with a series of bills aimed at recent rulings of the court.

Chief Justices Of 10 States Attack Court

PASADENA, Calif. (AP)—Chief justices of 10 states charged the U.S. Supreme Court Wednesday with unrestrained policymaking.

They also voiced a strong plea for states' rights in a report submitted by a committee on federal-state relationships when the Conference of Chief Justices opened Wednesday.

The 10 justices, representing states both North and South of the Mason-Dixon line, accused the nation's highest tribunal of adopting "the role of policymaker without proper judicial restraint."

The report also said it found in the high court's actions an impatience extending to "an unwillingness to wait for Congress to exert the power conferred upon it by the Constitution."

Conclusions in the report were based upon cases involving interpretations of the Fourteenth Amendment, which safeguards civil rights.

Cited were a wide variety of cases which the report writers found applicable to policymaking acts of the Supreme Court. Other citations concerned rulings that involved interference with states' rights. A number of the citations were decisions in which the high court was divided, sometimes 5-4.

The report was signed by Chief Justices Frederick W. Brune, Maryland; Albert Conway, New York; Jom C. Dethmers, Michigan; William H. Duckworth, Georgia; John E. Hickman, Texas; John E. Martin, Wisconsin; William C. Perry, Oregon; Taylor H. Stukes, South Carolina; Raymond S. Wilkins, Massachusetts, and Associate Justice Martin A. Nilson, Minnesota.

Senate Action Is Big Victory For The South

By ROULHAC HAMILTON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — The South won a major victory here Wednesday night as the Senate refused to adopt a leadership-inspired plan to kill the McClellan-Thurmond effort to write into law a strong states' rights bill, and then refused to reconsider its action.

The Senate voted 39-46 against a motion to kill the McClellan amendment — in effect the House-approved Smith bill — to the Bridges compromise bill, and then voted 47-40 to kill a move for reconsideration of the first vote.

STRONG BACKING

Strength of the backing for the effort to kill the McClellan amendment was revealed when Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex) voted against the South by voting for the Hennings motion to table the amendment.

But Southern backing for the amendment, coupled with Midwestern Republican support, saved the Southern position at least until tomorrow, when a showdown vote on actual adoption of the amendment is slated to take place.

Both Sen. Strom Thurmond and Olin D. Johnston voted against the move to kill the try for reconsideration of that vote.

Thurmond said afterward that "this was a great victory for the people and the principles of constitutional government." He said he had expected 44 votes in favor of the South, but was pleased at having garnered three more. He hoped this would be sufficient to "hold the line" against any effort by liberal forces to offer what he called "adverse amendments" before the bill wins final action in the Senate.

Immediately following the two votes, the Senate voted to recess overnight, and resume consideration of the McClellan amendment Thursday.

LIBERALS IRRITATED

Johnson later was the focal point of a meeting on the floor of irritated liberals who had not wanted to bring to a vote so quickly the effort to kill the McClellan amendment, but had been assured by the majority leader that he had the votes in his pocket to do so.

What strategy will develop from the meeting was not certain, but notice already has been served that an effort will be made Thursday to kill the states' rights bill by returning it to committee.

Wednesday night's move came nearly six hours after the Senate, after a day-long series of delays, had finally gotten down to brass tacks on the states' rights issue.

PRESIDENT SIGNS BILLS—President Eisenhower takes time out from his vacation and goes to work on 135 unsigned bills at Newport, R. I., yesterday. 105 New Laws Signed, 12 Killed by President

By a Star Staff Writer

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 3.—New laws easing some tax burdens, providing for Federal loans to college students among other educational aids and raising the national debt limit were on the books today.

These were among 105 bills passed in the closing days of the 85th Congress and signed into law by President Eisenhower in an afternoon work session at his vacation office here yesterday.

The President gave pocket vetoes to 12 other measures, including one to expand Federal aid to States and cities for building and improving airports.

Four Big Bills Signed

Among the major measures signed by the President yesterday were those to:

1. Raise the permanent national debt ceiling from $275 billion to $283 billion, with another $5 billion temporary increase for the current fiscal year—making the ceiling $288 billion through next June 30.

2. Provide $887.4 million over a four-year period for "national defense" aid to education, featuring loans of up to $1,000 a year to qualifying college students.

3. Revise some excise taxes, effective next July 1, to ease burdens on whisky distillers and movie goers among others at an estimated loss of $42 million a year in Government revenue.

4. Give some tax relief to small business and make scores of technical adjustments in the tax laws that will close loopholes for some taxpapers and give some others special new advantages.

Rejected Measures

Ten of the 12 bills disapproved by the President were minor relief measures. The measures of general interest killed by pocket veto would have:

1. Increased the currently authorized program of $63 million Federal aid in airport building and improvements during the current fiscal year by $100 million and extended the program for four years at a total increased Federal outlay of $437 million.

2. Given multiple plaintiffs in civil cases in Federal district courts the same three peremptory challenges of prospective jurors as now available to multiple defendants.

Calls Education Act Sound

In signing the National Defense Education Act, Mr. Eisenhower said:

"While the Congress did not see fit to provide a limited number of national defense scholarships which I recommended as an incentive to our most promising youth, I consider this act to be a sound and constructive piece of legislation."

He said the new law will "do much to strengthen our American system of education so that it can meet the broad and increasing demands imposed upon it by consideration of basic national security."

Now that the Federal Government is doing its share, he said, local governments and private agencies "must redouble their efforts" to help bring American education up to levels consistent with the country's needs.

Besides loans for college students, the education act provides for fellowships to those training for college teaching, and Federal grants for such things as science equipment, foreign language training institutes and educational counseling institutes.

Two Tax Revision Acts

The President signed the two tax revision measures and the debt ceiling bill without comment.

One of the major provisions of the excise tax measure would permit distillers to hold whisky in bonded warehouses for as long as 20 years—raising the limit from the present eight years—without paying the $10.50 a gallon alcohol tax. This applies to existing stocks as well as future production.

Among other things, the measure also raises from 90 cents to $1 the portion of movie theater ticket cost exempt from tax; exempts teen-ager "milk bars" and suspends Federal club dues tax on community swimming pools and skating rinks.

Closes Tax Loopholes

The other tax revision bill, mostly technical in nature, closes some loopholes by such things as forbidding the listing of a mistress as a dependent on income tax returns, and banning the deduction of bribes to foreign officials as a business expense.

One provision prevents police officers from deducting their daily subsistence allowance from taxable income.

Another gives a special benefit to retired couples over 65 and disabled. It raises from $10,000 to $30,000 a year the limit on tax-exempt medical expenses they may claim.

Special tax relief to small business firms is estimated to cost the Treasury $260 million in revenue the first year. It speeds up depreciation for tax purposes on new plant and equipment costs, permits losses to be carried back three instead of two years, and let heirs pay estate taxes over a 10-year period, among other things.

New Airport Request Slated

In disapproving the bill for expansion of the Federal airport aid program, the President said he will recommend to the next session of Congress a "transitional program to provide aid for the construction of urgent airport projects that are essential to an adequate national aviation facilities system."

He said no community would be hurt by his pocket veto now, because the existing program continues through next June.

"I am convinced that the time has come for the Federal Government to begin an orderly withdrawal from the airport program," Mr. Eisenhower asserted.

He said "others" should begin to assume the full cost of civil airports, and added pointedly "Aviation generally has achieved a state of maturity in which the users should be expected to pay an increasing share of airport costs."

The President recognized the need for a "transitional" period during which Federal aid would be needed for urgent airport projects essential to an adequate national aviation facilities system and which cannot be completed in any other way.

He complained that the bill before him did not provide for special aid to most urgent airport projects, but sharply increased the existing program with its allocation formula "not related to broad national aeronautical needs."

Veto of Civil Suits Bill

Mr. Eisenhower said he would have approved the other bill to which he gave a pocket veto if it had been limited to its "original purpose" to allow plaintiffs in civil suits additional peremptory challenges.

He based his disapproval on another provision of the measure which would have modified the procedure under which the Federal Government may take immediate possession of property before final court determination of just compensation for the property. He said the changes appeared to be "unnecessary and unwarranted."

STATES RIGHTS BILL

House Group Approves 'States'-Rights' Bill

Washington, May 27 (U.P.I.)—The House Judiciary Committee Tuesday approved a sweeping "States'-rights" bill designed to prevent present or future federal laws from nullifying State laws on the same subject.

The measure was approved over the objections of Chairman Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) and the Justice Department. Celler charged that the main purpose of the legislation was to curb Negroes' rights.

"Of course, it is unconstitutional," he said. Celler said the committee vote was fairly close, with Northern Democrats unanimously opposing the bill and some Republicans joining Southern Democrats in support of the legislation.

The committee also approved a separate bill to reinstate State antisubversive laws struck down by the Supreme Court in its controversial decision in the Steve Nelson case.

The broader "States-rights" bill was introduced by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), an influential leader among house Southerners.

Under its provisions no court could construe a federal law as nullifying a State law on the same subject unless the federal law contained a specific provision to that effect or unless there was a direct and irreconcilable conflict between the two statutes.

The bill would apply to both laws on the statute books and to future legislation.

Celler said "most civil rights would be endangered" by the bill. He said it would also cause widespread confusion in the enforcement of laws dealing with crime, aviation, shipping, labor, aliens, and natural gas.

In the Nelson case the Supreme Court held that Congressional passage in 1940 of the Smith Antisubversive Act automatically nullified State Communist control laws. Nelson, a Communist leader in western Pennsylvania, had been convicted of violating the state's sedition law.

States' Rights Roadblock

The Southern-backed states' rights bill, recently approved by the House Judiciary Committee, will have a Southerner as its strongest foe: Speaker Sam Rayburn of Texas.

Rayburn is convinced that the bill is not only anti-civil rights but anti-labor, as well.

The measure would not only prevent the courts from upsetting a whole list of Jim Crow laws; it also would uphold tough state labor laws, which the Supreme Court might otherwise throw out.

State Rights Fight Looms in Congress Over 10-Line Bill

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The House appeared Monday to be in for a states' rights fight, possibly this month, with the issues ranging into racial matters and the proper role of the Supreme Court.

The row is over a 10-line bill approved by a sharply divided House Judiciary Committee. Rival reports are being put in final form by proponents, led by Southern Democrats but including some Republicans, and opponents led by the committee chairman, Rep. Emanuel Celler (D., N.Y.).

The bill would declare that no law passed by Congress shall be considered to supercede or exclude state laws on the same subject unless Congress expressly so provides, or unless the federal and state laws are in such "direct and positive conflict" that they cannot be reconciled.

Proponents say such a congressional declaration is needed to save vital state laws which Congress never intended to invalidate.

It was specifically inspired by a Supreme Court decision reversing the conviction of Communist Leader Steve Nelson under a Pennsylvania sedition act. The high court held the federal statute preempted this field.

Opponents of the measure contend it would be unconstitutional, since it would amount to amending by simple statute the constitutional article establishing the supremacy of federal law.

They also contend that in practice it would create widespread confusion over the validity of old state laws in many fields, such as transportation and labor-management relations, where the standards set by federal statutes have come to be generally accepted.

Proponents and opponents agree the measure has a good chance of passage in the House, but is likely to run into trouble in the Senate.

Bill Is Approved To End Voiding Of State Laws

'Rights' Measure Is Aimed At Curbing Negroes, Celler Claims

House Judiciary Committee Also Backs Measure To Reinstate Anti-Subversive Statutes

By BETTE PRYOR
United Press International Writer

WASHINGTON, May 27 The House Judiciary Committee Tuesday approved a sweeping "states' rights" bill designed to prevent present or future Federal laws from nullifying state laws on the same subject.

The measure was approved over the objections of Chairman Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) and the Justice Department. Representative Celler charged that the main purpose of the legislation was to curb the rights of the Negroes.

"Of course, it is unconstitutional," he said. Representative Celler said the committee vote was fairly close with Northern Democrats unanimously opposing the bill and some Republicans joining Southern Democrats in support of the legislation.

Struck Down By Court

The committee also approved a separate bill to reinstate state anti-subversive laws struck down by the Supreme Court in its controversial decision in the Steve Nelson case.

The broader "states' rights" bill was introduced by Representative Howard W. Smith (D., Va.), an influential leader among House Southerners.

Under its provisions, no court could construe a Federal law as nullifying a state law on the same subject unless the Federal law contained a specific provision to that effect or unless there was a direct and irreconcilable conflict between the two statutes.

The bill would apply to both laws on the statute books and to future legislation.

'Rights Endangered'

Representative Celler said "most civil rights would be endangered" by the bill. He said it also would cause widespread confusion in the enforcement of laws dealing with crime, aviation, shipping, labor, aliens and natural gas.

In the Steve Nelson case, the Supreme Court held that congressional passage in 1940 of the Smith Anti-Subversive Act automatically nullified state communist control laws. Nelson, a communist leader in Western Pennsylvania, had been convicted of violating the state's sedition law.

A provision to reinstate state subversion laws recently was included in a bill approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee. The Senate bill was designed to nullify some other controversial rulings of the high court besides the Nelson decision.

State Laws Bill Aimed At Negroes

WASHINGTON —(UPI) — The House Judiciary Committee last week approved a sweeping "state's rights" bill designed to prevent present or future federal laws from nullifying state laws on the same subject.

The measure was approved over the objections of Chairman Emanuel Celler (D) N. Y., and the Justice Department. Celler charged that the main purpose of the legislation was "to curb the rights of the Negroes."

"OF COURSE, it is unconstitutional," he said.

Celler said the committee vote was "fairly close" with Northern Democrats unanimously opposing the bill and some Republicans joining southern Democrats in support of the legislation.

THE COMMITTEE also approved a separate bill to reinstate anti - subversive laws struck down by the Supreme Court in its controversial decision in the Steve Nelson case.

The broader "States' Rights" bill was introduced by Rep. Howard W. Smith (D) Va., an influential leader among House Southerners.

UNDER ITS provisions, no court could construe a federal law as nullifying a state law on the same subject unless the federal law contained a specific provision to that effect or unless there was a direct and irreconcilable conflict between the two statutes.

The bill would apply to both laws already on the statute books and to future legislation.

CELLER SAID "most civil rights would be endangered" by the bill. He said it also would cause "widespread confusion" in the enforcement of laws dealing with crime, aviation, shipping, labor, aliens and natural gas.

In the Steve Nelson Case, the Supreme Court held that Congressional passage in 1940 of the Smith Anti-Subversive Act automatically nullified state communist control laws.

Nelson, a Communist leader in western Pennsylvania, had been convicted of violating the state's sedition law.

State Rights Upheld by House Vote

Supreme Court Ruling Skirted

WASHINGTON, July 17 (UPI). — The House, in an answer to recent Supreme Court decisions, passed a double-barreled states' rights bill today aimed at preventing Federal legislation from taking precedence over state laws.

The controversial measure was sent to the Senate by a roll-call vote of 241 to 155. Backers and foes issued conflicting claims as to whether the Senate would take up the measure and whether President Eisenhower would veto it if it did reach his desk.

Bill Broadening

The House beat down a series of efforts to restrict the scope of the legislation, which was an outgrowth of the Steve Nelson case. The Supreme Court set aside the conviction of the Pennsylvania Communist leader on grounds that Federal anti-subversive laws took precedence.

Instead, the lawmakers broadened the original bill, sponsored by Rep. Howard W. Smith, D., Va., chairman of the House Rules Committee, by specifically adding a section reviving state anti-sedition laws.

What Bill Provides

As passed by the House, the bill:

Declares that no Federal act shall be interpreted as excluding states laws on the same subject unless the act says so specifically or unless there is a "direct and positive conflict" between the two which cannot be reconciled.

Declares that Federal anti-subversive laws shall not prevent enforcement of state legislation in that field.

Rep. Smith said the bill would tell the Supreme Court: (1) "Don't undertake to read the minds of Congress; we will do our own mindreading," and (2) "Don't knock down state laws unless they are in irreconcilable conflict with Federal laws."

Before passage, the house rejected by a 236-161 roll call vote a move by Rep. Kenneth B. Keating, R., N. Y., to send the bill back to the Judiciary Committee for more study. Previously it voted 249-147 to attach the sedition law amendment to the original Smith Bill.

Rep. Francis E. Walter, D., Pa., sought to restrict the bill to restoration of state sedition laws on grounds that this was the only provision which stood a chance of final Congressional enactment. His move was defeated 157-93.

Hopeful on Senate Action

Opponents contended the Smith bill would upset Federal-state legal relations dating back to "the dawn of the Republic."

Rep. Charles A. Halleck, R., Ind., rejected these contentions. Rep. Halleck said he had talked to responsible Senate leaders and was assured the bill would be considered. He also said there was no reason to think Mr. Eisenhower would not sign it.

Quick Passage Due On Little Rock Bill

Almond Draft Signed by 123 In Assembly

By MARY LOU WERNER
Star Staff Writer

It carried the signature of 123 out of the 140 Senate and House members. There were 90 signatures from the 100-member House, and 33 signatures among the 40 Senators.

The Governor's bill provides for the automatic closing of any school whenever Federal troops are employed at the school or in its vicinity. Another "Little Rock" measure introduced two weeks ago is more complex than the Governor's measure, and presumably will be pushed aside indeference to the administration proposal.

Only the Governor would have authority to bring about reopening of a closed school under the measure introduced yesterday.

Of the 10 House members who did not sign the bill, four were absent and six were present but did not sign. Among the House members who declined to sign were Delegates Elmer Hirst and John Webb of Fairfax-Falls Church and Mrs. Kathryn Stone of Arlington. The other three House members who declined to sign were Mrs. Charlotte Giesen of Radford, Joseph H. Poff of Floyd and V. H. Shaffer of Woodstock. All three are Republicans.

Dalton Absent

In the Senate, four members were absent and three were present who did not sign. The Senators who were present but failed to sign were Stuart Carter of Botetourt, Edward E. Haddock of Richmond and Blake T. Newton of The Hague. Among the four absentees was Republican State Senator Ted Dalton of Radford.

Delegates Webb and Hirst said they declined to sign the bill, because they had not had an opportunity to read it before it was passed around to all House members for their signatures.

Mrs. Stone said she intended to offer an amendment to forbid the use of any forces—Federal or State. As written, she explained, the bill prohibits only the use of Federal forces. She said her amendment would ask that the word Federal be removed.

Opposes Military Force

"I am opposed to coercion to enforce decisions on segregation and integration, which means that I am opposed to military force," she declared.

The "Little Rock" bill is the only new proposal involving segregation that Gov. Almond has asked the current General Assembly session to adopt.

The Senate Privileges and Elections Committee yesterday approved a resolution sponsored by State Senator Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington to provide for annual assembly session. The committee vote was 7 to 3 on the measure Senator Fenwick sponsored at Gov. Almond's request.

At present, the Assembly convenes every two years. The committee-approved measure would add an interim 30-day session in off years to deal principally with budget problems. The proposal now goes to the floor of the Senate for passage, and then will be sent to the House.

Senator Stuart E. Hallett of Hampton introduced a resolution yesterday calling for a Virginia Advisory Legislative Council study of parimutuel betting on horse races. His resolution would direct the VALC to consider how Virginia might benefit financially by legalizing parimutuel betting on the horses.

Housing Law Amendment

The Arlington County House delegation sponsored a measure to broaden the State's present housing authority law so the county could redevelop commercial areas as well as residential areas. A delegation spokesman said the county primarily was interested in the commercial redevelopment of Rosslyn at this time into an office building center.

Another House bill introduced by the Arlington delegation would allow the creation of a county parking authority with power to issue bonds and establish public parking facilities.

Delegates Webb and Hirst sponsored legislation to:

1. Return to the counties and cities recordation taxes on deeds and contracts, taxes on wills and administration of estates and writs taxes.

2. Return to the local governments taxes on marriage licenses.

3. Rebate to the local governments one-third of all income tax payments made by individuals and fiduciaries.

They said the net effect of their bills would be to return over $2 million to Fairfax County each year, and a considerable sum to other counties and cities all over the State.

Charge Race Question Involved At Magazine

MOBILE, Ala. (ANP)—Following vigorous protests by citizens' groups in this section the Post Office Department held in abeyance the scheduled closing of the Magazine, Alabama, post office Feb. 1. Magazine is now an all-Negro community.

The action extended the Post Office service to Feb. 28, pending an investigation to determine if the race question might have been subtly contained in the recommendation made to shut down the office there. The town is located about five miles from Mobile.

The Post Office department sent Joseph A. Clarke, staff assistant to the First Assistant Postmaster General, from Washington to Mobile last week to explore all angles of the Magazine post office situation.

INFLUENCE CLAIMED

A number of organizations in Magazine as well as Mobile charged that any recommendation made by Mobile Postmaster Taylor H. Henry or the Regional Office in Memphis to close the Magazine post office, was probably influenced by the fact that all white residents have moved out of the community. This would lead to the selection of a Negro as postmaster or postmistress. Whites have always held the position as head of the post office there.

Acting upon the urgent request of Mack Coates, chairman of the Magazine unit of the Non-Partisan Voters League, Cong. Charles C. Diggs wrote the Post Office Department demanding an investigation of the proposed closing of the office. He pointed out that the recommendation to do so was made despite the fact that several industries and hundreds of families would be served by the Magazine Post Office.

Segrest Assumes Office As Acting Postmaster Here

John Fletcher Segrest has taken over his duties as acting postmaster here, succeeding his wife, who resigned after holding the office for about four months.

Postmaster Segrest this week called attention to certain changes in postal service here resulting from discontinuance of two trains on the Western Railway of Alabama serving Chehaw.

To maintain postal service here, the Postoffice Department has placed in service two trucks between Montgomery and Atlanta which will prevent any curtailment in mail service here, Postmaster Segrest said. Actually, he pointed out, the trucks should provide better service on all parcel post and on all mail service to Notasulga, Shorter and Millstead.

Under the new service, all mail in the morning should be put up at postoffice boxes by 9:15 or 9:30. The later mail should be up by 12:30 p. m., Mr. Segrest said.

Buys into gas station—

Gov. Folsom's Negro chauffeur has prospered from his state ties

Birmingham Ala.

Sun. 7-6-58

BY HUGH W. SPARROW
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., July 5—Gov. Folsom's Negro chauffeur, Winston Craig, reportedly will be one of the first to walk the plank when the Patterson administration takes over, but there's no denying that thus far Craig has prospered handsomely from his state ties.

As driver of Alabama's No. 1 car, Craig has been given boosts amounting to $10 a week at the end of each six months. His salary is now $500 a month, plus expense accounts which in some years have run as high as $5000.

SPARROW

The thin, suave fellow, too, can point with pride to his record because he is one of the very few Alabama Negroes in recent years at least, to hold a state political appointment.

He is a member of the Tuskegee Institute Supervisory Commission—a body which is appointed by Alabama governors with authority to check into the Institute's books and records to make sure that the $5,000 annual state grant to Tuskegee to aid in suppport of the graduate school is properly expended.

AT THE TIME Gov. Persons appointed Craig, he was Persons' chauffeur and the first Negro to serve on the Supervisory Commission. He was, in fact, the first Negro since days of the Reconstruction to be appointed to a high state position.

His appointment to the commission made him a politico.

But he is entitled to that classification because of even more monetary qualifications.

FOLSOM'S CHAUFFEUR HAS LUCRATIVE SIDELINE

Winston Craig's service station sells lots of gas to state

ABOUT A YEAR ago Craig bought into the Arbuckle Filling Station at 1129 Highland Avenue, in Montgomery. Reportedly he owns just about all, if not the entire affairs, of the station. For reasons all his own, however, Craig did not change the station's name. It is still called "Arbuckle's Filling Station."

FROM OCT. 1, 1957, to June 5, 1958, about $14,600 of the amount appropriated this fiscal year for maintenance of motor vehicles assigned to the governor's office had been expended.

As might have been expected, it turned out that Gov. Folsom did not use any of his mansion fund to service cars assigned to the mansion. Instead he used money, supposedly earmarked to provide gas, lubrication, washing and repairs of cars assigned to the governor's office, for about half a dozen cars assigned to the mansion.

AMONG the mansion cars serviced out of money intended to be used to service only governor's office cars, reportedly used exclusively by Chauffeur Craig for his own needs when not driving the governor about in his big black limousine.

Another state car which Gov. Folsom's brother, Fred, drives about exclusively—though he is no state official or employe—is serviced out of this appropriation, as is still another state car assigned to the governor's sister, Ruby, holder of a minor job in the Department of Civil Defense.

BUT THE MOST significant thing about use of money appropriated to maintain cars assigned only to the governor's office is that about 90 per cent of the $14,600 expended to June 5 went for gasoline.

Furthermore, a check disclosed that about 90 per cent of the gasoline was purchased from Chauffeur Craig's station—virtually all of it the high test kind.

It is against the law for a state official or employe to sell to the department he heads or is connected with. But that apparently did not stop Craig. A number of gas tickets were signed by Craig for gasoline provided by the Craig station.

In other words, during the first eight months of this fiscal year Craig's station sold the state about $12,000 worth of high test gasoline.

At 36 cents a gallon the $12,000 would have bought about 33,330 gallons.

Craig's station did an extensive business of washing and lubricating governor's office cars, fixing tires and selling new tires, anti-freeze, etc.

ANOTHER QUESTION in connection with operations of Craig's station is:

If Criag's station got just about all the gasoline business for cars supposed to be operated by the governor's office, what about gasoline purchases for cars of other state departments over which the governor and perhaps Craig exerts political influence?

This reporter made a check only of the expenditures from the governor's office motor vehicle operation fund.

It involved a painstaking check, to inspect each of thousands of gas station tickets signed by state car users to ascertain just where the gas was bought.

To conduct checks of other departments would involve similar painstaking efforts but perhaps it should be done.

CRAIG HAS DRIVEN cars for three Alabama governors, including Dixon, Folsom (two terms) and Persons.

Not only is this chauffeur a politico when it comes to landing state business and an appointment for himself, but there has been talk that Craig has interested himself in certain campaigns.

Several months ago Craig reportedly was spotted in Russell County mingling with certain politicos.

There has been much talk from time to time that persons anxious for an audience with Gov. Folsom might find a short cut by contacting Craig.

THE REPORT that Gov.-Nominate Patterson is going to employ a new chauffeur in January did not come from Patterson direct. It did come from a reliable source who apparently does have close ties with the state's next chief exec.

Varner Resigns Position As Assistant U. S. Attorney For Private Practice

Robert E. Varner, native of Tuskegee and former practicing attorney here, has resigned his position as first assistant U. S. attorney at Montgomery to re-enter the private practice of law, it was announced last Saturday by U. S. Dist. Atty. Hartwell Davis.

Mr. Varner, who is the son of Probate Judge and Mrs. William Varner, will become associated with the Montgomery firm of Jones, Murray and Stewart with offices in the First National Bank Building.

The 37-year old attorney has served as first assistant in charge of the criminal division of the district attorney's office since May of 1954.

A graduate of Alabama Polytechnic Institute and the University of Alabama Law School, Mr. Varner is also a veteran of World War II.

He served for four years in the Naval Air Corps.

His grandfather, William H. Thomas, served as a justice of the Alabama Supreme Court for many years.

"Mr. Varner has been an able loyal and conscientious attorney during the entire time he has been in this office," Davis said in announcing the resignation.

"He is a fine trial lawyer and shows maturity in all his considerations and judgements. His resignation is a great loss to this office and to the Department of Justice and it is with great regret that I have received it. His associates in the private practice will benefit greatly from his splendid qualities," Davis continued.

Mr. Varner also had a statement to make on his resignation. "It has been a privilege to have worked in the courts of our state and of the United States with men of integrity, ability and industry like Hartwell Davis and Ralph Daughtry and other members of the staff."

Mr. Varner is married to the former Carolyn Self, of Auburn. They have two children; Robert E. Varner, Jr., age 8, and Carolyn 6.

ROBERT E. VARNER

Craig Is A Marked Man

OF ALL THE state officials now living on borrowed time, and from all indications a lot of them are in that position, almost certainly the first one to go will be Winston Craig, the well-paid Negro who has chauffeured Alabama's governors since the days of Frank Dixon.

Craig is the lamest of the lame ducks, and he knows it. Perhaps it should not be surprising, but the demand among Patterson supporters for Craig's dismissal is tremendous. There seems to be a surprisingly large group of Patterson supporters who will hail his administration as a complete success if he does nothing other than oust Craig.

Patterson is well aware of this and he is also well aware of how simple it will be to fire Craig. It's as good as done.

The job will probably go to some member of the Highway Patrol.

There are many reasons for Craig's tremendous unpopularity among the white people. Not the least is the fact that he was (and perhaps still is) a deacon in Dr. Martin Luther King's church. Nothing more need be said.

The Appointment Of Negro Postmasters

For over half a century Negroes have figured more prominently in the United States Civil Service than in any other department of government. A generation ago, a look-see into the mail trains and the city post offices would disclose the faces of colored men carrying their portion in the distribution of the United States mails.

Today it will be observed that in the Civil Service, there is still excellent accounts our racial group is giving of itself in the honorable trust involved in the handling of the mail.

In our own local post office we have Negro foremen of clerks, head of post office station, and in other capacities than mere distributors of the mails. That would speak for itself as to the honor, deservedness and capabilities of the Negro anywhere in the agenda of the mail service.

It is quite befitting, therefore, for Congressman Diggs of Detroit to cause an inquiry into the closing of a post office down in Alabama a few miles from Mobile, known as Magazine, Alabama, allegedly because all the white folks moved out of the county.

It is stated there are still industries and plenty of citizens to be served at Magazine; that other arrangements have been made for the distribution of the mails purely upon the grounds to get around the appointment of a Negro postmaster at Magazine.

A Negro man, Monroe B. Morton once held the postmastership at Athens, Georgia, the seat of the University of Georgia. Bishop Turner was once appointed postmaster at Macon, Georgia. On a few occasions Negroes have successfully carried RFD routes; one in Russell county, Alabama, just across the river from Columbus, Georgia.

The verdict of Joseph A. Clarke, who has been appointed to probe conditions surrounding the liquidation of the Magazine, Ala., post office is awaited. Being what he is, one of the administrators looking to the end of economy in postal service, he can be trusted to make proper recommendations.

Surely a decision from him would be more to be relished than for a stigma to gain float to the effect that a post office was abolished purely to get around the appointment of a Negro as postmaster.

It is our understanding also that Joe Clarke is a Cuthbert, Georgia native who has made good in the postal service administration.

Anyway, Congressman Diggs has not allowed the matter to go by as just so much thrift.

Mrs. Segrest Takes Office As Tuskegee Postmaster

Mrs. John Fletcher Segrest took office Tuesday as acting postmaster of the Tuskegee Post Office, succeeding J. H. Meadows, who retired effective April 1, after serving for the past several months as postmaster on leave. Permanent appointment of Mrs. Segrest to the position is pending.

MRS. JOHN F. SEGREST

A native of Tuskegee and member of one of its oldest and most prominent families, Mrs. Segrest is the former Miss Frances Cobb. She is the daughter of Mrs. Mabelle Massey Cobb and the late Benajah Bibb Cobb.

Mrs. Segrest was educated in the public schools of Tuskegee and Huntingdon College, later studying for a time at the University of Mexico.

Her first business experience was in the public relations department of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce, where she was secretary and assistant to Hal Fisher, at that time director of the State Chamber department and now publisher of The Tuskegee News. She resigned that position to become instructor of languages to Air Force personnel at Gunter Field, Montgomery. During the war she was enployed as translator in the Office of Censorshop at New Orleans.

After the war she returned to Tuskegee and worked here in the Department of Public Welfare. She was married in 1945 to John Fletcher Segrest on his discharge from the Air Force. The Segrests have three children.

Governor To Be Among Top U.S. Earners

WASHINGTON (AP)— Alabama's next governor will be one of the highest paid elective public officials in the nation.

Only the President, two other federal officers, two other governors and some New York officeholders will be receiving bigger pay checks.

And when it comes to fringe benefits, Alabama's governor will shame many federal officers, including the President.

Beginning in January, 1959, the governor of Alabama will receive $25,000 a year. This was raised by the Legislature from $12,000 a year.

And there are other benefits by winning the election.

The governor will have a free mansion, at least one free car, two free airplanes, plus a mansion fund of $60,000 a year to pay his food bills, utilities, servants, entertainment and numerous other expenses.

He will travel at state expense and can use funds from various state departments to pay these and other costs.

The President is paid $100,000 a year, plus $50,000 a year for expenses. He is allowed a maximum of $40,000 a year for travel and entertainment.

The vice president's salary is $35,000 annually, plus $10,000 for expenses.

Alabama's governor will have a larger cash box to dip into for entertainment and miscellaneous expenses than the President or vice president.

Gov. James E. Folsom has exceeded the $60,000 figure and has transferred money from the governor's emergency fund, a fund of $100,000, for use of the mansion.

Besides the President and vice president, House Speaker Sam Rayburn, who is paid $35,000, is the only other elected man in Washington being paid more than Alabama's governor will receive.

Neither the vice president nor the speaker have a home furnished to them.

Cabinet officers receive $25,000 a year, but their financial fringe benefits don't approach those available to Alabama's chief executive.

Highest paid governor is New York's with a $50,000 salary followed by $30,000 in New Jersey. California, Illinois, Missouri, Ohio, Pennsylvania and Texas all pay their governor $25,000.

Big Jim Half Century From Farm

By BOBB INGRAM

Fifty years ago Wednesday on a small farm in Coffee County a son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Folsom. The baby boy was named James Elisha Folsom.

In the half century that followed that baby boy has come a long way. On his 50th birthday, Gov. James Elisha Folsom can look back on a record of political success never before equaled in Alabama history.

Only one other man in the history of the state has served two four-year terms as governor. That man was the "Little Colonel," Bibb Graves. But Graves was 54 years old when he took office for the first time, in January 1927. At the completion of his second term Graves was 66.

Folsom completes his second term at the age of 50, which means he is running 16 years ahead of Graves' timetable. What the future holds for Folsom and his politics only time will tell.

At an early age Folsom began receiving his political education as his father served one term as sheriff in Coffee County. Later, during a brief stay at the University of Alabama where he aspired to play basketball (standing 6-8, he looked like a natural) Folsom learned more politics on the campus.

He was a member of the campus "machine" headed by a student from Birmingham, Albert Boutwell. The latter will be Alabama's next lieutenant governor.

Failing to make the basketball team at the University, Folsom transferred to Howard College where he thought his chances of playing might be better. But this was cut short by the tragic Pea River flood of 1929, which all but wiped out the Folsom home in Elba.

Folsom quit school and returned home to help out. Next came a stint in the Merchant Marine, a job as a king-sized doorman in New York City, and later a job with the WPA.

FOLSOM IN 1938
Candidate For Congress

10 YEARS LATER-1948
During First Term

THE FOLSOM OF 1958
Second Term Ending

It was not until 1936 that Folsom made his first venture into politics. The 29-year-old Folsom challenged veteran congressman Henry B. Steagall in the Third District.

DIDN'T DO BADLY

For a first race, Folsom didn't do badly, polling 8,585 votes to Steagall's 13,977.

Apparently encouraged by this showing, Folsom fired again at Steagall in 1938. This time he didn't do quite so well, finishing third behind Stegall and J. Hubert Farmer. In this second race he received but 25 per cent of the total vote, compared with 38 per cent the first time.

But this didn't discourage the big man. In 1942, now a resident of Cullman and a burial insurance salesman, Folsom qualified to run for governor.

It was then that fate stepped in and promoted Folsom from an also-ran into at least a major contender. Gov. Graves had qualified for an unprecedented third term and was an odds on choice to be successful.

But Graves died after the qualifying date, leaving the field wide open to his most serious challenger, Chauncey Sparks of Eufaula. Sparks won in a breeze with no runoff necessary, but Folsom, picking up some Graves support, polled 75,000 votes for second place.

BRIEFLY IN ARMY

This put him in good position for 1946. During the four years of Sparks' administration Folsom served briefly in the U.S. Army, after being turned down earlier for being too tall.

Folsom critics have charged that his Army service came about after some nifty string pulling in Washington, claiming that he needed to be a member of the "Heroes Union" (the American Legion) if he was to be successful in the '46 race.

Nevertheless, Folsom served for some five months and was discharged shortly after his first wife died.

In that 1946 campaign, armed with a string band and suds bucket, Folsom led the field in the primary then brushed off Handy Ellis in the runoff by a comfortable margin.

As has been the case in his second administration, after winning the governor's office Folsom saw his political stock dip sharply.

In 1948, during his first administration, Folsom sought to be a delegate to the Democratic National Convention. He qualified for the runoff, then finished eighth in a field of eight.

In 1956 this story was repeated when Folsom ran for Democratic national committeeman. He was whipped by more than a 3-to-1 margin by State Rep. Charles W. McKay.

KISSING JIM'

In one respect, Folsom's campaigns of '46 and '54 were different. In 1946 Folsom became known as "Kissing Jim." He later claimed to have kissed 50,000 babies "16 years and older during the campaign, bragging that every woman he kissed voted for him.

A pretty state employe from Berry changed all that. He was married to Jamelle Moore in 1948 (the morning after his humiliating defeat for party delegate) and from that date on the title of "Kissing Jim" has been a misnomer.

Of his two successful campaigns for governor, perhaps his stunning victory in 1954 was most outstanding. Folsom had gone out of office in 1950 an extremely unpopular man, mired to his neck in a prison scandal.

Yet in '54, against a field of apparently strong candidates Folsom swept to a landslide victory, winning without a runoff.

The circumstances are in some ways similar at the present time. Folsom will be succeeded in January by John Patterson, the one candidate in the 1958 gubernatorial race who publicly attacked the Folsom administration.

The biggest thorn in Folsom's side during this second administration has been the race question. The governor has been repeatedly accused of being "soft on segregation," this stemming in part from his reference to the nullification resolution as being "so much hogwash." He also has been condemned for having a drink at the mansion with Negro Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York.

NO INTEGRATION

But to all of these cries of protest, Folsom has responded with the observation that no school has been integrated in Alabama nor is there any court order pending to that effect.

Where Folsom goes after January 1959 is anybody's guess. He has insisted repeatedly that he is an "old man in politics" although the record doesn't back up this contention.

It will only be in the years ahead, when cooler heads prevail, that a clear and accurate appraisal can be made of Folsom's record in public service.

But whether such appraisals treat the big man from Cullman kindly or unkindly, one thing is certain—whatever is said will make fascinating reading. Folsom is a fascinating figure.

Charge Race Question Involved At Magazine

MOBILE, Ala. (ANP)—Following vigorous protests by citizens' groups in this section the Post Office Department held in abeyance the scheduled closing of the Magazine, Alabama, post office, Feb. 1. Magazine is now an all-Negro community.

The action extended the Post Office service to Feb. 28, pending an investigation to determine if the race question might have been subtly contained in the recommendation made to shut down the office there. The town is located about five miles from Mobile.

The Post Office department sent Joseph A. Clarke, staff assistant to the First Assistant Postmaster General, from Washington to Mobile last week to explore all angles of the Magazine post office situation.

A number of organizations in Magazine as well as Mobile charged that any recommendation made by Mobile Postmaster Taylor H. Henry or the Regional Office in Memphis to close the Magazine post office, was probably influenced by the fact that all white residents have moved out of the community. This would lead to the selection of a Negro as postmaster or postmistress. Whites have always held the position as head of the post office there.

Acting upon the urgent request of Mack Coates, chairman of the Magazine unit of the Non-Partisan Voters League, Cong. Charles C. Diggs wrote the Post Office Department demanding an investigation of the proposed closing of the office. He pointed out that the recommendation to do so was made despite the fact that several industries and hundreds of families are served by the Magazine Post office.

CONGRESSMAN JAMES T. RAPIER
ALABAMA - 43rd CONGRESS 1873

Alabama's Negro Congressman Story Told In Ebony

CHICAGO—The story of James T. Rapier, a Negro congressman from Alabama in the 43rd Congress is told in the current issue of Ebony Magazine.

Rapier, born during slavery wrote a clause in the Alabama state constitution giving all men the right to vote.

Rapier was born on a Florence Alabama plantation. After instruction by a private tutor, he attended a Presbyterian school in Canada and later studied at Bedford Grammar School in Glasgow in Scotland.

He won the election to Congress in 1873 against a former Confederate Colonel, by a 3,000-vote majority.

While in Congress, Rapier made a lengthy, important speech in behalf of the Civil Rights Bill, and was supported by four white Alabama congressmen. The bill was passed, only to be declared un-constitutional by the U. S. Supreme Court a few years later.

Rapier was concerned with improving economic conditions in the South, says Ebony, and introduced a measure to construct government buildings in his district and to improve the state's rivers and harbors, as well as a measure that made Montgomery a port of entry. He and his contemporaries built Alabama's first public school system, hospitals, and helped to spark the industrialization of the Birmingham area.

AMBASSADOR TO ROUMANIA

Bostonian is nominated Ambassador to Roumania

Afro-American 2-1-58
Baltimore, Md.

WASHINGTON, (NNPA) — President Eisenhower Thursday sent to the Senate the nomination of Clifton R. Wharton, of Boston, to be Ambassador to Roumania.

Mr. Wharton, who entered the Foreign Service during the Coolidge Administration, has the distinction of being the only person ever to matriculate in the State Department's Foreign Service School and be graduated on the same day.

The reason for the distinction is the fact that he is colored, and in those days colored persons were not being accepted in the Foreign Service School. He was immediately sent to Liberia as the secretary of the mission there. At present he is serving as consul general at Marseilles, France.

He is the first colored person to be given an ambassadorship to a non-colored country.

That was from 1932 to 1936 "when I had plenty of time because of the depression," he explained. He said the duties involved primarily organizational problems since there weren't too many Negro people living here at the time.

As a lawyer, Bussey is well prepared for his new duties. "We must have someone in the post," Holtzman said, "who will understand Africa—her people and her problems—(and) someone who will be an ambassador of good will from the United States."

Jailed at Own Request

Judge Scott's Efforts Fail to Achieve Release by Christmas for 'Vagrant'

By Jack MacKenzie
Staff Reporter

Ralph White will spend Christmas in jail in spite of the best efforts of Municipal Court Judge Armond W. Scott, who sent him there.

White is the 20-year-old vagrant who asked to be jailed because he was friendless, penniless and so desperate that he feared he might turn to crime. He appeared in Scott's court on a charge of drunkenness Dec. 2 and pleaded for a three-month sentence.

Scott reluctantly gave him 60 days and said he would release White sooner if a plan to help him turned up.

Stories about the man's plight drew at least one offer of aid.

A woman called to say her private welfare organization was especially set up to help people like White. Her group (which Scott refused to identify) had a committee which would find a job for White and rehabilitate him, the caller said. Overjoyed, Scott told reporters that arrangements would soon be made to set White free.

Before completing the arrangements, however, Scott took the precaution of having his clerk, William A. Burleson, advise the woman that White was a Negro.

When told of this, the woman said the project was off.

"Did you know that Judge Scott is a Negro, too?" Burleson asked.

"Oh, my goodness, no," she said, and hung up.

Scott said the woman later sent a written apology, saying she had no racial prejudice but her organization drew a color line. She sent along $2 for White, which Scott turned over to the Probation Office.

"I know the woman was sincere, and I told her so," Scott said. "There are plenty of people all over the country with liberal hearts, but they are captives."

First Negro Named Here To Court Unit

William B. Bryant became the first Negro to serve on the Committee on Admissions and Grievances of the District Court yesterday when his appointment to that group was announced by Acting Chief Judge F. Dickinson Letts.

Bryant, 47, was named to the nine-man committee for a full three-year term. He succeeds James C. Wilkes, who asked that he not be reappointed.

The Committee, the most influential body of lawyers connected with the Court, processes applications for admission to the local bar and complaints of professional misconduct filed against local lawyers. One of its jobs is to administer the bar examination given twice each year to those seeking to practice law in the District.

Two of its veteran members were reappointed yesterday by an executive session of the District Court Judges. They are Vernon E. West, committee chairman, and Francis W. Hill Jr.

Bryant, who lives at 3725 17th st. ne., has been in private practice here since 1947 with the exception of three years during which he was an Assistant United States Attorney.

His most noted case has been his defense of Andrew Mallory. Mallory's conviction and death sentence on a rape charge were set aside by the Supreme Court in 1957 in a decision which narrowed the time during which police may question persons under arrest before taking them into court.

Bryant is a graduate of Howard University and of its law school. He served four years in the Army during World War II before being discharged in 1947 with the rank of lieutenant colonel.

Dr. George W. Snowden Given New Post In FHA

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Commissioner Norman P. Mason of the Federal Housing Administration announced the promotion of Dr. George W. Snowden to the new position of assistant to the commissioner, Intergroup Relations Service, in Washington recently.

For the past five years, Dr. Snowden has been Minority Group Housing Advisor on the commissioner's staff. Mr. Mason said that the creation of the new position was in keeping with a broadening emphasis on making good housing equally available to all segments of the population.

COMMISSIONER Mason said that housing markets free of racial and religious restrictions are now firmly established in many states and communities. Dr. Snowden, he said will continue the work he has directed in the past with added responsibilities for enlarging the scope of activities of the agency's intergroup relations specialists in the field service.

It is their job to assist FHA field office staffs and industry to assure that all American families can benefit equally from the opportunities for better housing offered by FHA's loan insurance program.

THE SPECIALISTS whose work in the field is coordinated by Dr. Snowden will be known henceforth as Zone Intergroup Relations Advisors.

In announcing Dr. Snowden's new position, Commissioner Mason said, "Whenever a government agency is concerned with the public welfare, it is its responsibility to see that no elements in the population are excluded from its program and, indeed, to make sure that all elements have the same chance of inclusion. If FHA did not make it a practice to look over the shoulders of some parts of the population and seek to induce industry to serve all parts equally its programs would not be used to the fullest advantage of all the people."

Dr. George W. Snowden, right, is congratulated by Federal Housing Administration Commissioner Norman P. CAPITOL HILL — Look for the White House to announce shortly the appointment of E. Frederic Morrow, a Negro, as Ike's adviser on minority problems replacing Maxwell Rabb, who has resigned. He's now director of the White House special-projects section, will be the first Negro to hold the racial adviser's post.

Ike Lauds Resigning Delegate J. Ernest Wilkins

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — President Eisenhower declared that he was "particularly thankful" for the service of J. Ernest Wilkins as chief United States delegate at meetings of International Labor Organization.

The President accepted the resignation of Mr. Wilkins as Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs, but said he hoped he would continue to serve as a member of the Civil Rights Commission.

Mr. Wilkins resignation was effective Saturday. He was succeeded by George C. Lodge, son of Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge to the United Nations. The new Assistant Secretary of Labor was formerly director of information for the Labor Department and accompanied Mr. Wilkins on some of his trips to Geneva to attend meetings of the ILO.

HIS INTENTION

Mr. Wilkins informed President Eisenhower of his intention to resign several months ago. His decision to resign was attributed to the advice of his physicians. But shortly after he saw the President at the White House, there were circulated reports that he was being forced out of his "Little Cabinet" position by Secretary Mitchell to make room for Mr. Lodge's promotion.

None of the principals would comment on these reports. At a press conference, however, President Eisenhower said he know nothing about the reports but admitted that Mr. Wilkins had informed him that he planned to resign.

Mr. Wilkins was the first colored person to serve in a Little Cabinet position since the late William H. Lewis, Boston attorney, was an Assistant Attorney General under President William Howard Taft from 1909 to 1911.

Mr. Mitchell was responsible for Mr. Wilkins' appointment. The two men had served together on the President's Government Contracts Committee, and the Labor Secretary, impressed by the Chicago lawyer, offered him the Assistant Secretaryship.

MORE ON RUMORS

Current rumors are that Mr. Wilkins probably will be offered a Federal judgeship, a position to which he has aspired.

The text of President Eisenhower's letter to Mr. Wilkins follows:

"Dear Mr. Wilkins: "While I am sorry that you are concluding your service as Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs on November eighth, I am accepting your resignation in accordance with your request.

"I am particularly thankful for your service as chief United States Delegate at meetings of the International Labor Organization. The ILO has long fostered and promoted programs to improve working conditions everywhere, and our participation at these conferences has afforded the world a better understanding of our national principles and ideals.

"Although you are leaving your post at the Department of Labor, I am hopeful that you will continue your important work as a member of the Civil Rights Commission, and that I may call upon you from time to time for special assignments.

"With my appreciation of the leadership you have already provided during your succesful career in public life, I send best wishes for your continued success and happiness."

The text of Mr. Wilkins' letter to the President follows:

"Dear Mr. President: I hereby submit my resignation as Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs and, with your approval to become effective November 8 1958.

FOUR AND HALF YEARS

"As you know, I have held this position for slightly more than four and one half years during which time it has been an interesting and challenging assignment. I believe that the United States through its participation in the work of the International Labor Organization, with which my work has been principally concerned, makes an important contribution to the cause of raising the standards of work and living for all people throughout the world, and thereby, to the cause of world peace.

"I am glad to have had an opportunity to assist in making that participation effective, and I feel certain that you will continue the interest and support for this program which you have shown during the period in which I have been associated with it.

"I, therefore, regret very much that personal considerations make it impossible for me to continue with this work and necessary for me to take the action indicated above. You may be assured, however, that I will continue to support this program."

Mr. Wilkins Resigns

J. Ernest Wilkins, Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs, resigned for "personal" reasons on November [illegible].

President Eisenhower, accepting Mr. Wilkins' resignation "in accordance with your (his) request," said he was "particularly thankful" for Wilkins' service and expressed hope he would continue to serve on the Civil Rights Commission.

At his press conference, the President recalled that Mr. Wilkins had informed him several months before of his intention to resign on the advice of his doctor.

So far, everything is according to Hoyle.

Now the rumors come in.

Rumor No. 1 — that Mr. Wilkins was forced to resign so that his $20,000 a year post could be given to George C. Lodge, of Massachusetts, son of the U.S. ambassador to the UN.

Rumor No. 2 — that Secretary Wilkins was sick. He denied this charge.

Rumor No. 3 — that Mr. Wilkins will be offered a Federal judgeship.

Aside from denying that he was ill, Mr. Wilkins himself saveth naught.

George C. Lodge, son of the U. S. Ambassador to the United Nations, Henry Cabot Lodge, was named to succeed him. No mention of another appointment for Wilkins was made by the President although he expressed the hope that Wilkins will continue as a member of the Civil Rights Commission.

The nomination of Lodge to the post will be subject to Senate approval when it is submitted next year. The post pays $20,000 a year.

Fire Wilkins From 'Little Cabinet' Post

In a post-election move, J. Ernest Wilkins has been fired from his position as the only Negro in President Eisenhower's "little cabinet" to make room for the 31-year-old son of U. S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge.

Informed persons on Capitol Hill said, in August, that President Eisenhower turned down Wilkins' crying pleas to halt his forced resignation from the position of assistant Secretary of Labor.

George Cabot Lodge, who was mentioned in the early reports as Wilkins' successor, is to be sworn in within the next few days into Wilkins' position.

SYNDICATED columnist Drew Pearson, one of the first to report that Wilkins would be forced to resign, said that Secretary of Labor Mitchell gave the firing order.

Pearson said that Mitchell told Wilkins to spend "all his time on the Civil Rights Commission . . . "

During the pleading with President Eisenhower, who had been told that Wilkins was resigning because of ill health, Wilkins "wept pathetically" over the idea of leaving the cabinet, Pearson said, and said also he was in good health.

Eisenhower Denies Asking J. Ernest Wilkins To Quit

President Eisenhower has denied that he has asked J. Ernest Wilkins to resign as Assistant Secretary of Labor or that he would replace him with George Lodge, son of Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge.

The denial was made during the Chief Executive's press conference Wednesday in answer to a query by Miss Alice Dunnigan of the Associated Negro Press.

President Eisenhower denied the firing rumor which has been widely circulating in the East during the past few weeks. He added, however, that he had had some talks with Secretary Wilkins about the possibility that Wilkins might resign from the post, but that nothing had been settled.

FIRST IN CABINET

Wilkins who in 1954 became the first Negro official to sit in on Cabinet talks as a departmental representative, was appointed to the post in March, 1954, and his selection by Mr. Eisenhower was regarded as the President's strongest blow against racial discrimination.

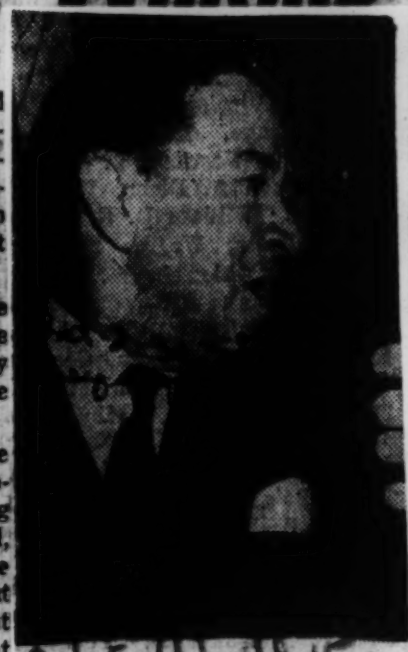
A leading Chicago citizen and attorney, Wilkins also is a member of the Commission on Civil Rights and has served on the Government's Contracts Committee which is set up to guard against racial discrimination in firms with federal contracts.

In reference to Wilkin's status in the cabinet President Eisenhower said at his press conference:

"I did remember that during our talk I said to him if ever he did decide he wanted to resign there, that he would, I hope keep his other position." (The one with the Commission on Civil Rights).

"By the way," the President added, "I never heard of any contemplated replacement for someone whose resignation I have not yet accepted."

FRICTION



J. ERNEST WILKINS

The exact source of the firing rumor is not known, but some sources claim that there is friction between Wilkins and his superior Secretary of Labor James P Mitchell. Others say that the ambition of Ambassador Lodge's son is behind the matter.

Wilkin's principal job is as a liason man between the United States and foreign labor organizations.

In addition to being the first Negro appointed to a Cabinet or subcabinet post, Wilkins was the first Negro to be nominated for circuit judge in a major political party in Cook County. He was the GOP nominee in 1954.

The Labor Department aide was also the first Negro to be elected a member of the Methodist Judicial Council which rules on all legal questions in the Methodist Church.

Ike Denies Report Resignation Of Wilkins Requested

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA)—President Eisenhower, at his news conference wednesday, denied reports that the resignation of Assistant Secretary of Labor J. Ernest Wilkins had been requested so that George C. Lodge, son of Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., American Ambassador to the United Nations, could succeed him.

The NNPA reported two weeks ago that Mr. Wilkins had called at the White House and thanked President Eisenhower for the opportunity he had to serve in his administration and to advise him that under the advise of his physician he was resigning from both his Labor Department post and as member of the Federal Civil Right Commission.

A week later, Drew Pearson syndicated columnist, reported that secretary of Labor James P. Mitchel had requested Mr. Wilkins' resignation in order to promote Mr. Lodge who is the Labor Department's Director of Public Information, and that Mr. Wilkins had wept as he protested to the President against his ouster.

ASKED TO COMMENT

At his news conference, Mr. Eisenhower was asked to comment on newspaper stories that the White House had asked Mr. Wilkins to resign as Assistant Secretary of Labor in order to make the position available to Mr. Lodge.

From who asked the President dent.

"For Mr. Lodge," the reporter replied.

"Well, I never heard of that," the President said.

"What Mr. Lodge is this?" he asked.

"George Lodge" replied the reporters.

"No, I haven't heard that," the President said.

"I will say this," he added: "I have had some talks with Secretary Wilkins, who was talking about the possibility that he might resign from that particular position in the Labor Department.

"I have never urged him to nor asked him to, or anything else.

"I have had a very- as a matter of fact, very congenial talk with him about it.

"He is also, as you know, a member of the Commission on Civil Rights, and I did remember that I said to him that if ever he decided he wanted to resign there, that he would, I hope he would keep his other position.

Columnist Says J. Ernest Wilkins Is To Be Dropped

WASHINGTON. — (ANP) —In his syndicated column Drew Pearson last week declared that J. Ernest Wilkins is being forced out of his cabinet post to make room for George Lodge, son of Henry Cabot Lodge, UN ambassador.

Wilkins, appointed assistant secretary of labor by President Eisenhower refused to be fired by Sherman Adams who usually handles such matters, Pearson reported.

Instead, the distinguished attorney from Chicago, long a champion of civil rights, demanded to take his troubles to the President. Eisenhower listened to Wilkins' plea, praised him for the work he had done as chairman of the President's committee on government contracts and as assistant secretary of Labor. But Eisenhower told Wilkins he was sorry but he had to accept his resignation.

He explained that cabinet officers had a right to pick their own assistants and Secretary of Labor Mitchell had found it "necessary" to change various members of his official family.

The famed columnist pointed out that Wilkins was recently appointed to the Civil Right Commission as a step toward casting him out of the Labor department."

"No one expected the mild-mannered Wilkins to hesitate over acceding to the President's request," Pearson said.

Case of J. Ernest Wilkins

Reports emanating from the vicinity of the White House have it that J. Ernest Wilkins, the first Negro ever to hold a "Little Cabinet" position since the administration of William Howard Taft is about to get the skids.

The unforunate angle of this rumor is that Mr. Wilkins who is serving as the Assistant Secretary of Labor has done a good job and his position is a point of pride to the Negroes of the nation and a show-piece for this country to point to abroad as an example of its utter democracy.

But, it seems, that is neither here nor there. The fact is, according to the reports, that Mr. Wilkins' job has been promised to some one else and he has got to go.

It is being bruted about that his job is going to George C. Lodge, the son of Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., currently one of our big guns in the United Nations.

It is said that Mr. Wilkins has made a rather determined effort to hang on, but that nothing can save his job. It is reported that he appealed to Mr. Eisenhower recently about the matter, but Ike, after listening to his plea, informed him that there was nothing he could do about the matter since to do so would be a sort of repudiation of the Secretary of Labor, Mr. Mitchell.

Writer Drew Pearson gave an interesting angle on the Wilkins job situation last week in his column, "The Washington Merry-Go-Round." He said:

"While President Eisenhower and Ambassador Lodge were trying to woo the African-Asian block in the United Nations, the President and Young George Lodge could alienate the very people they were trying to win over."

Drew Pearson said that Mr. Wilkins has been a victim of the treatment for some time, and that his work with the Civil Rights Commission was a part of the plan to ease him out of the Labor Department.

It is reported that Mr. Wilkins is reluctant to leave the Labor Department, that he was in tears when he became aware of his ousting, but like a good politician he braced up and stated that his health was not too good and that he wanted to return to his law practice in Chi-

Of course it is difficult to shift the wheat from the [illegible]ations, but when a healthy official suddenly develops ill health and a lawyer office holder suddenly gets a strong yen to return to his law practice, there is usually more to it than that which appears on the surface.

However, we would feel a sort of betrayal, racially,

If Mr. Wilkins is to be ousted from his position for no reason other than that some one else wants the job he holds.

His removal for such a cause would not be fair to Mr. Wilkins or to the millions of Negroes who have had faith in the fairness of the Eisenhower administration and the men who compose his cabinet.

Want job for son of UN envoy

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (NNPA)—Informed sources kept mum Friday on the report that J. Ernest Wilkins, a "Little Cabinet" member, is being ousted from his Government job to make way for George C. Lodge, the son of Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge Jr., the United States Permanent Representative at the United Nations.

Rumors have persisted for sometime that Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell was planning to dump Mr. Wilkins, who is the first colored person to hold a "Little Cabinet" position since the administration of William Howard Taft. In 1911 the late William H. Lewis of Boston served as an Assistant Attorney General.

Mr. Wilkins has been ill. At the meeting last spring of the International Labor Organization, Mr. Mitchell exercised his prerogative and replaced Mr. Wilkins as the aide of the American Government delegation.

AS THE Assistant Secretary of Labor in charge of international affairs, Mr. Wilkins has headed the delegation.

The International Labor Organization is a tripartite organization representing 70 countries. It is the only international organization in which the governments, the employers and the workers of the 70 countries are members and meet together.

The presence of Mr. Wilkins at ILO meetings in Geneva has been regarded as a good antidote to Russian propaganda. Soviet Russia, by virtue of its membership in the United Nations, asked for and obtained a seat in the ILO conferences.

APPEARING WITH Mr. Wilkins last Feb. 3 before the House Appropriations Committee, Mr. Mitchell testified that "if we don't put our best foot forward, if we don't approach our meetings in the ILO with the best kind of knowledge we conceivably have, then we will permit the Russians to make greater propaganda of their position in the ILO than they have."

In his column, "The Washington Merry-Go-Round," Friday, Drew Pearson said while President Eisenhower and Ambassador Lodge were trying to woo the African-Asian bloc at the UN, the President and George Lodge may alienate the Afro-American bloc in Washington.

According to Mr. Pearson, Mr. Wilkins is being asked to resign to make way for young Lodge to become Assistant Secretary of Labor.

One oddity about the Pearson column was the fact that persons who are quick to call Pearson a liar and charge that there is not a shred of truth in some of his columns, denied nothing he said concerning Mr. Wilkins.

AT HIS press conference Friday morning, James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, was asked about the Pearson column.

"I have nothing here on it at all," he replied. "I have not checked. There is nothing I can say."

Mr. Hagerty referred reporters to the Labor Department.

Asked whether he knew if Mr. Wilkins had discussed resigning with the President when he had an appointment at the White House two weeks ago, Mr. Hagerty said he did not know.

WHEN MR. WILKINS talked with the President two weeks ago, he came and left by the side door and reporters at the White House did not see him and had no chance to ask him about what he talked with the President.

At that time, an informed source told the NNPA that Mr. Wilkins had called to thank the President for the opportunity to have served in the government under him and to tell him that he was resigning on the advice of his physicians as both Assistant Secretary of Labor and as a member of the Civil Rights Commission.

Pearson, in his column, pointed out that "a big fuss" was made over Wilkins some years ago as the first colored person to attend a cabinet meeting. At that time, Secretary Mitchell was absent and Mr. Wilkins sat in for him.

"BUT NOW he's been told by his boss, Secretary Mitchell, Pearson continued, "that he should spend all his time on the Civil Rights Commission of which he is a member and to which he was appointed as a step toward easing him out of the Labor Department."

Pearson said Wilkins objected to this. "He took his case followed,' pearson said. He the idea of leaving the 'Little Pearson said. He added that He added that Wilkins 'wept over the idea of leaving the 'Little Cabinet.' "

Asked for comment on the Pearson story, Mr. Wilkins said: "Not a word."

George C. Lodge, director of information for the Labor Department, was out and not available for comment, his office reported.

John W. Leslie, deputy director, when asked about the Pearson story, said: "We know nothing about it."

Pearson also reported that Wilkins had refused to be fired by Sherman Adams, the Assistant to the President, who usually handles such matters. "He argued that as Assistant Secretary of Labor, appointed directly by the President, he had a right to state his case," Pearson stated.

AT THE session which followed, Pearson wrote, Wilkin told the President that he enjoyed his work and believe that a colored American in top international relations position could do the United States much good with countries whose people are of dark er skin.

"Adams had told Eisenhower that Wilkins was ill and had to retire for that reason," Pearson wrote. "But Wilkins told the President that he was not ill."

Pearson reported that Eisenhower praised the work Wilkins had done both as vice chairman of the President's Government Contracts Committee and as Assistant Secretary of Labor. But he said he was sorry he had to accept his resignation.

Cabinet officers, Mr. Eisenhower explained, had a right to pick their own assistants and Secretary Mitchell had found it necessary to change various members of his official family.

ACCORDING TO Pearson, Wilkins told the President he would think about the request for his resignation. Wilkins has been considered a rather mild mannered member of the Labor Department, Pearson said adding: "Nobody expected him to hesitate over acceding to the President's request.'

"However, Wilkins, now 64, has spent a life-time fighting civil rights battles and also in work for the Methodist Church," said Pearson. "He not only objected to resigning, but some of his friends have been even more vigorous."

Mr. Wilkins has been the Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs since March 18, 1954.

He was sworn in with much fanfare. The oath of office was administered to him by Justice Harold H. Burton of the Supreme Court. Secretary Mitchell introduced him as the first colored person named to a subcabinet post.

A NATIVE of Farmington, Mo., Mr. Wilkins graduated with high honors from the University of Illinois, served overseas in World War I, and later practiced law in Chicago.

He has been active in Methodist Church affairs for many years, having been elected to its Judicial Council in 1948 and as council secretary in 1953.

In August, 1953, President Eisenhower appointed him vice chairman of the President's Government Contracts Committee, of which Vice President Nixon is chairman. Mr. Mitchell is a member of this committee.

The secretary became impressed with Mr. Wilkins while the two were serving on this committee and recommended his appointment as an Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Wilkins, Prodigy In Ebony

Chicago, Ill. — Dr. J. Ernest Wilkins, a former Chicago child prodigy, now a top nuclear scientist, is completely adjusted, happily married, and one of the brightest, more respected and aggressive men in his field. The scientist is featured in the February issue of EBONY Magazine.

Dr. Wilkins finished grammar school at 10 and high school at 13. He became the youngest student ever admitted to the University of Chicago. He earned his A.B. degree at 16, his Masters at 17, and his Ph.D. at 19 — all with high honors. Earlier Dr. Wilkins had scored 163 on a test where over 150 is considered "genius."

Wilkins, son of the Assistant Secretary of Labor J. Ernest Wilkins, and a recent Eisenhower appointment to the new Civil Rights Commission, has disproved all of the popular misconceptions about persons of exceptional intellectual ability. Among these were the beliefs that bright children are physically frail, can't keep good jobs, are never well adjusted, poor marriage risks, and that they do not remain bright as they grow older.

According to EBONY, Wilkins, 34, is a stockholder in the $4 million Nuclear Development Corporation of America in White Plains, N. Y., a private research organization which designs nuclear reactors.

Among Wilkins' other scientific contributions was his work on the Manhattan Project at the University of Chicago in the historic development of the atomic bomb, and his mathematician in the development of special space probing optical instruments for the American Optical Company.

Wilkins is married and the father of two children, who eminent psychologists say are far brighter than most children.

J. Ernest Wilkins, Eisenhower Leader, And Churchman, Puzzled By Segregation

Washington, D. C.—A member of the Eisenhower Administration, who holds the top lay post in The Methodist Church (as president of the denomination's so-called" Supreme Court"-The Judical Council) said here today he could not understand "how any Christian can advocate a continuation of segregation on the basis of any Christian principle."

J. Ernest Wilkins, Assistant Secretary of Labor, the first Negro to hold that office, spoke at the Wednesday evening session of the second National Methodist Congregation on Urban Life in America at the session held in the Washington Cathedral. He is also a member of the President's new Civil Rights Commission.

Speaking to the more than 1,000, including 60 Negroes to the convocation that had headquarters at the Willard Hotel, February 18-20, on the subject "The Layman in Our Government," Mr. Wilkins said that never has the Christian layman been needed more in meeting some of the social issues of today, issues which bring Government officials at all levels to grips with the practical application of Christian principles to social problems.

"One issue in particular that is in the spotlight is civil rights." Mr. Wilkins said. "I sometimes suspect that some Christians both in and out of government are uncomfortable about this issue. They would like to think that it is not basically a religious issue or an issue with which the church should be concerned. They would rather call it a sociological problem, or a political problem, or a problem in human relations--anything but a problem on which there should be any divine guidance."

"I want to say clearly that in my judgment no member of a Christian church can dodge the issue of civil rights on this basis One can turn almost at random in the four Gospels and find a reference to brotherhood as the under lying principle of Christianity."

Mr. Wilkins told the convocation that "being an active Christian layman helps me on my job."

"The inner strength that comes from the deep and abiding faith demanded by our church affiliation stands us in good stead as we pursue our daily tasks, no matter what they might be. And there certainly is a need in this complex modern world for people to call upon that inner faith."

Some government leaders are sincerely seeking to aply Christian principles to their tasks, Mr. Wilkins said. "There are prayer groups in the nation's capitol", he said, "groups of men mostly associated with the Federal Government, who gather together at breakfast time to dedicate their actions to Christian principles"

Odum To Practice Before United States Supreme Court

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (SNS) — Atty. J. Edmund Odum of Birmingham has been admitted to practice before the United States Supreme Court.

Receiving his accredilment, June 9, the youthful former asistant city attorney apparently applied for admittance to practice before the high tribunal in anticipation of appealing to the court the dismissal case of a former Birmingham policeman.

Atty. Odum said the case of B. W. Noble is on the way to the nation's highest court. The Alabama Supreme Court has rejected Noble's appeal. It was learned that Noble refused to take a lie detector test at the time the police department asked him to submit to one after a fellow officer said he was allegedly involved in a series of burglaries, Mr. Odum said.

Atty. Odum said the city dismissed Noble "because he refused to cooperate."

Assistant Secretary Wilkins Lays It On The Line

(From The Atlanta Daily World)

Speaking from the theme: "Hours of Sharing" at the Warren Methodist Church here Sunday, Hon. J. Ernest Wilkins, Assistant Secretary of Labor and high Methodist churchman, well expressed the doctrine of sharing. Ringing somewhat like some of the themes running through the sermon on the mount, well did the speaker drive home the fact that this America should share its Democracy with the world. This sharing is contingent, he would have us believe, upon beginning, like charity, here at home.

No country or organization has ever been able to make that effective impression on any phase, order, religion or government without first laying the groundwork at home.

That a Democracy should be a living objective, was among the sound truths the eminent speaker would lay down. A Democracy walking, was the kind of political doctrine he would preach. He had no patience with the inanimate spectacular gesture of "famous quotes and lifeless phrases" from the old days without that substance of a willingness to let the world see a Democracy walking.

It was unanimously agreed that Civil Rights is the chief subject before civilization at this time. To this end was much of the powerful message directed.

He expressed the desire to see no more "Little Rocks, Clintons" and other such datelines that of late have made unpleasant world news for points in the old world wedded to their idols of dictatorial practices and inhuman exploitation, while holding up for their license such happenings as came out of an unwillingness on the part of certain interests and sections to obey the mandates of their own government.

The speaker scoffed at the intimation that a depression was in the offing; that normal recessions are always within the grasp of an efficient government such as we enjoy today. That the recession will be short lived, has already been demonstrated in the measures proposed by the White House in the huge spending program which will furnish real employment which will boost our normalcy out of the area of "made work" and wet-nursing.

Those who brought Mr. Wilkins here were the means of making of valuable investment in the interests of measures directed in the line of making our own Democracy work.

He Didn't Show for Hearing

Where Was Cong. Powell?

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON (ANP)—After waiting 10 minutes Thursday for the scheduled witness, Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, who never showed up, the House Judiciary subcommittee heard testimony from Senator Jacob Javits and Congressman Charles A. Vanik on civil rights bills now pending before the committee.

Both Congressmen Powell and Charles C. Diggs were originally scheduled to appear before the committee on Wednesday, the opening day of the hearings. Diggs (D., Mich.) asked that his testimony be postponed until July 9, in order that he might have additional time to prepare a statement which would approach the subject from a different angle.

Powell agreed to appear on the following day, and sent notices to the House press gallery to assure reporters that he would testify Thursday at 10 A.M. "sharp." The committee assembled at the hour which would be convenient to the New York representative, but he failed to make his appearance. Word later circulated around the committee room that he had called in "sick."

Members of the committee and of the press, along with spectators, sat around idly waiting to hear the next witness, Senator Javits, who was scheduled to appear a half hour later. Mr. Javits arrived in the committee room at 10:40 apologizing for being 10 minutes late, but explaining that he had been held up in the Senate.

The New York Senator emphasized the need of congressional action on a stronger civil rights bill which would include Part III deleted from the act which was passed last year. The need is very urgent now, he said, due to the frustrations and failures summed up in the conditions on which the recent district court decision in Little Rock halting desegregation in public high schools is said to be based.

CONGRESSMAN POWELL

Representative Vanik (D. Ohio) claimed that additional civil rights legislation was necessary, not for the South alone, but to combat discrimination in the North as well.

"While segregation in the South is the result of the operation of Southern laws which protect, it exists in the North under the protection of economic laws which are equally as effective in producing the same result."

McGraw, Davis Move To Higher Positions

34 2(1) D.C.

WASHINGTON — Beginning August 23, 1958, two employees of the Racial Relations Service - Booker T. McGraw and T. [illegible] Davis, are being appointed to the Statistical Reports and Developments Branch of the Division of Plans and Programs in the Housing and Home Finance Agency.

This is the first time in the history of the Agency that Negroes have occupied positions in this Division carrying the grade and salary ratings comparable to that of McGraw and Davis.

This Branch has a major role in the development of estimates of long-term housing needs for both the general population and groups within the general population having special housing problems in common, such as those related to inadequate income and the special needs of elderly and minority families, and in the continuing analysis of the housing inventory and market and other factors which affect the programs for which the Housing and Home Finance Agency is responsible.

Mr. McGraw is an economist; Mr. Davis is a statistician. There is an immediate need for the use of their special skills in view of increasingly rapid developments in the urban renewal picture throughout the Nation.

Wilkins' Ouster Raises Problem

Post & Times Herald P.B.11
Washington, D.C.

By Drew Pearson

While President Eisenhower and Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge are trying to woo the African-Asian bloc at the United Nations, the President and Lodge's son, George, may alienate part of the Afro-American bloc in Washington.

Pearson

J. Ernest Wilkins, distinguished Negro attorney from Chicago, is being asked to resign as Assistant Secretary of Labor in order to make way for young Lodge to become Assistant Secretary.

A big fuss was made over Wilkins some years ago as the first Negro to attend a Cabinet meeting. But now he's been told by his boss, Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell, that he should spend all his time on the Civil Rights Commission of which he is a member and to which he was appointed as a step toward easing him out of the Labor Department.

To this Wilkins objected. He took his case direct to President Eisenhower and a pathetic scene followed during which the Negro leader wept over the idea of leaving the "Little Cabinet."

Wilkins had refused to be fired by Sherman Adams, who usually handles these matters. He argued that as Assistant Secretary of Labor, appointed direct by the President, he had a right to state his case to Ike direct.

At the session which followed, Wilkins told the President that he enjoyed his work and believed that a Negro in a top international relations position could do the United States much good with countries whose people are of darker skin.

Lodge and Hatch Act

Adams had told Eisenhower that Wilkins was ill and had to retire for that reason. But Wilkins told the President that he was not ill.

Ike praised the work Wilkins had done both as Chairman of the President's Committee on Government Contracts and as Assistant Secretary of Labor. But he said he was sorry he had to accept his resignation. Cabinet officers, Mr. Eisenhower explained, had a right to pick their own assistants and Secretary Mitchell had found it necessary to change various members of his official family.

Wilkins told the President that he would think about the request for his resignation. Wilkins has been considered a rather mild-manner member of the Labor Department. Nobody expected him to hesitate over acceding to the President's request.

However, Wilkins, now 64 years old, has spent a life-time in fighting civil rights battles and also in work for the Methodist Church. He not only objected to resigning, but some of his friends have been even more vigorous. They claim young Lodge might have trouble getting confirmed by the Senate because he was reported to have violated the Hatch Act when he accompanied Secretary Mitchell to the San Francisco Republican Convention in 1956. There he was reported to have issued press statements and called press conferences for him. As a member of Civil Service Lodge is forbidden by the Hatch Act from engaging in politics.

Queried on this point, Lodge said he had acted as an aide to Secretary Mitchell while Mitchell was helping draft the labor plank in the GOP platform. Lodge said he had called press conferences merely as a clerk and had kept aloof from politics.

"Lodge has been director of the Labor Department's Public Information Bureau where he has done a good job and won friends for the Secretary. He has also been of indirect help to his chief, because his father, U.N. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, attends Cabinet meetings and is close to Mr. Eisenhower personally.

The elder Lodge, incidentally, is being urged as the successor to Sherman Adams, when and if the latter retires. C. D. Jackson, of the Time, Life, Fortune magazine empire, has been in Washington recently helping Mr. Eisenhower with Near East policy, and has especially pushed Ambassador Lodge as Adams successor. He even said he would put Lodge's picture on the front page of Time as a build-up for the job. Jackson has argued that Lodge's work as manager of Ike's 1952 campaign, plus his vigor and his knowledge of Washington gained as a Senator, made him the ideal replacement for Adams.

Jackson further cautioned that it would be smart to promote young Lodge to Assistant Secretary of Labor before Ambassador Lodge was appointed to the White House. Otherwise it would appear as if Ambassador Lodge was promoting his own son to a Little Cabinet post.

Senator "Long Jim" Murray of Montana has written a letter to Howard C. Porter, president of the Billings, Mont., Chamber of Commerce, acknowledging Porter's letter opposing aid to education.

"However," replied Murray, "on March 25 and again on April 9 you, as president of a business college, asked me to liberalize this same education bill so it would extend to private business schools.

"Your various positions on this issue reminds me of testimony delivered by the National Chamber of Commerce in hearings held recently by my education subcommittee," said the Senator. "The Chamber witnesses testified against subsidies for school construction, but admitted that the Chamber of Commerce works for subsidies for various business interests."

More Scholarship Needed Wilkins Tells Va. Grads

PETERSBURG, Va. — J. Ernest Wilkins, assistant secretary of labor, U. S. Department of Labor, told 205 graduating seniors at Virginia State college, "we are in need of a greater emphasis on scholarship, on learning for its own sake and on academic achievement in the basic objectives of our educational system."

"Along with such a re-emphasis on scholarship needs to come an end to the nonsensical, belittling ridicule and sarcasm directed in some quarters at people who are considered to be thinkers, or intellectuals, or scholars, he said.

"There must be a cessation of this and there has been switch since sputnik of poking fun at educated men, particularly professors."

TECHNOLOGICAL

Speaking on the subject, "Highway to the Future," the government official stated emphatically that the "continuously expanding society with its emphasis on technological development has placed serious stresses and strains on our system of education."

"It may be," he said, "that one of the by-products of the Sputnik experience will be a return to a greater degree of respect for knowledge, scholarship, and learning."

"The underlying key to all of these, problems," he continued, "is that first we have a society composed of individuals who are basically educated in those channels of knowledge which lead to the ability to think, to assume responsibility, and to exercise leadership."

Turning in his speech to the subject of civil rights, Wilkins who is a member of the Civil Rights Commission, stated that civil rights activities constitute a crusade for freedom which cannot be stopped until its total objective has been accomplished.

PAST OF CRUSADE

"You who are being graduated today will become a part of this great crusade by assuming a responsible place in society and by performing your individual role with dignity, efficiency, sobriety and integrity."

tional Labor Organization, Mr. Mitchell exercised his prerogative and replaced Mr. Wilkins as the aid of the American Government delegation.

As the Assistant Secretary of Labor in charge of international affairs, Mr. Wilkins has headed the delegation.

TRIPARTITE ORGANIZATION

The International Labor Organization is a tripartite organization representing 70 countries. It is the only international organization in which the governments, the employers and the workers of the 70 countries are members and meet together.

The presence of Mr. Wilkins at ILO meetings in Geneva has been regarded as a good antidote to Russian propaganda.

Soviet Russia, by virtue of its membership in the United Nations, asked for and obtained a seat in the ILO conferences.

Appearing with Mr. Wilkins last Feb. 3 before the House Appropriations Committee, Mr. Mitchell testified that "if we don't put our best foot forward, if we don't approach our meetings in the ILO with the best kind of knowledge we conceivably have, then we will permit the Russians to make greater propaganda of their position in the ILO than they have."

In his column, "The Washington Merry-Go-Round," Friday, Drew Pearson said while President Eisenhower and Ambassador Lodge were trying to woo the African-Asian bloc at the UN, the President and George Lodge may alienate the Afro-American bloc in Washington.

According to Mr. Pearson, Mr. Wilkins is being asked to resign to make way for young Lodge to become Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Speculate Ouster For Son Of Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr.

BY LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA)—Informed sources kept mum Friday on the report that J. Ernest Wilkins, Little Cabinet member is being ousted from his Government jobs to make way for George C. Lodge, the son of Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., the United States Permanent Representative at the United Nations.

Rumors have persisted for some time that Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell was planning to dump Mr. Wilkins, who is the first colored person to hold a "Little Cabinet" position since the administration of William Howard Taft. In 1911 the late William H. Lewis of Boston served as an Assistant Attorney General.

Reported Asked to Resign

Wilkins Told: 'Quit Little Cabinet Post'

WASHINGTON—Syndicated columnist Drew Pearson has reported that J. Ernest Wilkins, the only Negro in President Eisenhower's "little cabinet," has been asked to resign to make room for the son of UN Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge.

Chicago's J. Ernest Wilkins is shown when he was sworn in as Assistant Secretary of Labor in charge of international labor affairs. Administering the oath is U. S. Supreme Court Justice Thomas Burton.

and charge that there is not a shred of truth in some of his columns denied nothing he said concerning Mr. Wilkins.

At his press conference Friday morning, James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, was asked about the Pearson column.

"I have nothing here on it at all," he replied. "I have not checked. There is nothing I can say."

Mr. Hagerty referred reporters to the Labor Department.

Asked whether he knew if Mr. Wilkins had discussed resigning with the President when he had an appointment at the White House two weeks ago, Mr. Hagerty said he did not know.

When Mr. Wilkins talked with the President two weeks ago, he came and left by the side door and reporters at the White House did not see him and had no chance to ask him about what he talked with the President.

CLAIM HEALTH ADVICE

At that time, an informed source told the NNPA that Mr. Wilkins had called to thank the President for the opportunity to have served in the Government under him and to tell him that he was resigning on the advice of his physicians as both Assistant Secretary of Labor and as a member of the Civil Rights Commission.

Pearson, in his column, pointed out that "a big fuss" was made over Wilkins some years ago as the first colored person to attend a Cabinet meeting. At that time, Secretary Mitchell was absent and Mr. Wilkins sat in for him.

"But now he's told by his boss, Secretary Mitchell, Pearson continued "that he should spent all his time on the Civil Rights Commission of which he is a member and to which he was appointed as a step toward easing him out of the Labor Department."

Pearson said Wilkins objected to this. "He took his case direct to President Eisenhower and a pathetic scene followed," Pearson said. He added that Wilkins "wept over the idea of leaving the 'Little Cabinet.'

Asked for comment on the Pearson story, Mr. Wilkins said: "No a word."

George C. Lodge, Director of Information for the Labor Department, was out and not available for comment, his office reported.

John W. Leslie, Deputy Director, when asked about the Pearson story, said: "We know nothing about it."

Pearson also reported that Wilkins had refused to be fired by Sherman Adams, the Assistant to the President, who usually handles such matters. "He argued that as Assistant Secretary of Labor, appointed direct by the President, he had a right to state his case," Pearson stated.

At the session which followed, Pearson wrote, Wilkins told the President that he enjoyed his work and believed that a colored American in a top international relations position could do the United States much good with countries whose people are of darker skin.

"Adams had told Eisenhower that Wilkins was ill and had to retire for that reason," Pearson wrote. But Wilkins told the President that he was not ill."

THE PRESIDENT, told by Adams that Wilkins was ill and had to retire for that reason, was told by Wilkins that he was not ill, the columnist said.

However, Eisenhower told Wilkins that cabinet officers had a right to pick their own assistants and if necessary to change various members of the official family.

Pearson said that Wilkins told the President that he would think about the request for his resignation.

In an appeal of the proposed firing by Presidential Aide Sherman Adams, Wilkins, during a talk with President Eisenhower, "wept pathetically" over the idea of leaving the cabinet, Pearson said in his Aug. 15 column in the Washington Post and Times-Herald.

Pearson's "Washington Merry-Go-Round" column said that Wilkins was to resign as assistant Secretary of Labor so that George Lodge, now director of the Labor Department's Public Information Bureau, could replace Mr. Wilkins.

PEARSON SAID that the 64 year-old Wilkins, who has been a civil rights fighter for a lifetime, was expected by Government officials to accept the resignation order.

However, he and some of his friends are fighting it, the columnist pointed out.

Secretary of Labor Mitchell had told Wilkins to spend "all his time on the Civil Rights Commission, of which he is a member and to which he was appointed as a step towards easing him out of the Labor Department," Pearson said.

Wilkins objected to Mitchell's order and also to Sherman Adams' intention to fire him, and went directly to President Eisenhower, Pearson explained.

Resignation Of Judge Rejected

By JOHN MORTON
Herald Staff Writer

Judge John D. Johnson, the Negro municipal jurist who was found in contempt of County Court, submitted his resignation to the Miami Commission Wednesday but the commission refused to accept it.

JOHNSON

Instead, commissioners ordered the city legal department to investigate the case and submit its report for study.

The action postponed a commission investigation of the case originally set for 2 p.m. today. Judge Johnson will continue to serve until the probe is completed.

"I think he's had the hell scared out of him," said Commissioner James W. Hi "And he may be trying to s down because he doesn't want to embarrass the commission."

County Judge W. Frank Blanton cited Judge Johnson for contempt after he failed to comply with another court order asking him to file an accounting of an estate which he represented.

Judge Johnson was given a choice of $50 fine or 10 days in jail. He paid the fine, and has submitted an accounting of the estate.

"The commission's minds are open," Commissioner George W. DuBreuil said, in reference to the legal department investigation.

Mayor Robert King High said Judge Johnson's docket load sometimes included as many as 165 cases a day.

"It could have been a situation where his judicial work made so many demands that his private law practice was neglected," the mayor said.

Madame Eboue also addressed the Hungry Club Wednesday.

Atlanta Visited For First Time

French Union's Only Negro Member In City

By WILLIAM A. FOWLKES
(WORLD Managing Editor)

The only Negro woman member of the Assembly of the French Union paid her first visit to Atlanta Tuesday and Wednesday and was overwhelmed by its courtesies and welcome.

She was Madame Eugenie Eboue Delegate-At-Large for France and the Overseas Territories, in the Assembly of the French Union. Widow of the late great Felix Eboue, administrator of French Equatorial Africa during World War II days, Madame Eboue is a member of the municipal council of Guadaloupe in South America to which she must commute three times yearly from Paris, France; vice president of the French Commission of Defense, member of the French Union Assembly Commissions on Social Affairs and Public Education.

The distinguished "senator," as she is known in many lands, charmed Atlantans with her French, being accompanied and aided by an interpreter, and her broken English with which she made herself eloquently understood at a Moral Re-Armament honor fete Tuesday night and the Hungry Club on Wednesday.

LITTLE ROCK . . . IMPOSSIBLE

Of America's race problems and progress, she said:

"I think things have changed a bit, but what happened at Little Rock . . . At the time, I thought it was impossible . . . in America . . . it was disturbing . . . you can understand."

Has France solved its color problem?

"Yes," Madame assured us. "Josephine Baker loves France so much that she and her family have become naturalized Frenchmen. She recently was awarded the Legion of Honor for services in the Air Force, having already been given the Croix de Guerre and the Cross of Resistance."

Madame Eboue herself wears the Cross of Resistance for work in the hospitals during World War II.

What about the Communists in France?

"They are dangerous and numerous, but can never take over in France," the dimunitive leader declared.

What about the fighting between French colonies in North Africa and the resistance there?

Her remarks were off record.

The visitor confided that she has lived in Paris since 1903. Sixty-six years of age (she doesn't look it), she has three children, three grandchildren. She constantly keeps in touch with them in Paris where they all live.

It was Madame Eboue who was chosen by the French Government to make France's highest award—the Legion of Honor—to Dr. Frank Buchman, leader of Moral Re-Armament, for his work in bringing France and Germany closer together. Madame Eboue stopped in New York Monday and paid a visit to MRA headquarters. It was then she decided to fly to Atlanta for the MRA reception at the Waluhaje Tuesday night.

Of MRA, Madame Eboue declares: "Follow this line of MRA, plant it in your heart, plant it in your family life—it is what the world needs."

PARIS.—(UPI)—Gen. Charles de Gaulle announced Sunday a 15-man cabinet that included a Negro as Minister of State.

Outgoing moderate Premier Pierre Pflimlin also received a portfolio as Minister of State and famed French Author and Archeologist Andre Malraux was given a ministerial post.

Louis Jacquinot (Conservative)—Minister of State.

Felix Houphouet-Boigny (Resistance)—Minister of State.

Pierre Pflimlin (Moderate Republican)—Minister of State.

Michel Debre (Conservative Senator)—Minister of Justice.

Jean Berthoin (Left Republic Party Senator)—Minister of Education.

Other ministers and secretaries whose precise jobs have not yet been designated:

Bernard Curnut-Gentille—Ambassador to Argentina.

Edouard Ramonet (Radical).

Houphouet-Boigny, the Ivory Coast Negro Gen. Charles De Gaulee picked for a top cabinet job, is a cheerful, nattily-dressed man of 53 with considerable political prestige and a well-developed taste for good living.

In Paris, where he has been a legislator or a cabinet minister continuously since the end of the war, he lives in a sumptuous apartment not far from the Arch of Triumph. He gets about town in a chauffeur-driven limousine.

Recently, however, Houphouet-Boigny has told friends he has decided to become an "ascetic." He says he is ready to give up "one luxury a year."

On the Ivory Coast, a territory a little bigger than New Mexico and the richest area of French West Africa, Houphouet-Biogny owns a string of plantations and is the unchallenged political leader.

He was one of the founders of the African Democratic Rally party—the most powerful political group in French West Africa—and has been its president since 1945.

He is a physician as well as a politician and planter.

Something of a leftist in his youth, Houphouet-Boigny is now a moderate and a leading campaigner for a federal French-African community.

Houphouet-Boigny held ministerial posts in the past four French governments, starting with the administration of Socialist Guy Mollet in 1956.

He was Health Minister in the Felix Gaillard government and a minister of State under Pierre Pflimlin in the Short-lived government that preceded De Gaulle's return to power.

The Ivory Coast sent Houphouet-Boigny to Paris as a deputy right after World War II. It has reelected him every five years since then.

The Appointment Of Negro Postmasters

For over half a century Negroes have figured more prominently in the United States Civil Service than in any other department of government. A generation ago, a look-see into the mail trains and the city post offices would disclose the faces of colored men carrying their portion in the distribution of the United States mails.

Today it will be observed that in the Civil Service, there are still excellent accounts our racial group is giving of itself in the honorable trust involved in the handling of the mail.

In our own local post office we have Negro foremen of crews, head of post office station, and in other capacities than mere distributors of the mails. That would speak for itself as to the honor, deservedness and capabilities of the Negro anywhere in the agenda of the mail service.

It is quite befitting, therefore, for Congressman Diggs of Detroit to cause an inquiry into the closing of a post office down in Alabama a few miles from Mobile, known as Magazine, Alabama, allegedly because all the white folks moved out of the town.

It is stated there are still industries and plenty of citizens to be served at Magazine; that other arrangements have been made for the distribution of the mails purely upon the grounds to get around the appointment of a Negro postmaster at Magazine.

A Negro man, Monroe B. Morton once held the postmastership at Athens, Georgia, the seat of the University of Georgia. Bishop Turner was once appointed postmaster at Macon, Georgia. On a few occasions Negroes have successfully carried RFD routes; one in Russell county, Alabama, just across the river from Columbus, Georgia.

The verdict of Joseph A. Clarke, who has been appointed to probe conditions surrounding the liquidation of the Magazine, Ala., post office is awaited. Being what he is, one of the administrators looking to the end of economy in postal service, he can be trusted to make proper recommendations.

Surely a decision from him would be more to be relished than for a stigma to gain float to the effect that a post office was abolished purely to get around the appointment of a Negro as postmaster.

It is our understanding also that Joe Clarke is a Cuthbert, Georgia native who has made good in the postal service administration.

Anyway, Congressman Diggs has not allowed the matter to go by as just so much thrift.

The three voted this way . . .

WASHINGTON (NNPA)—The votes of Reps. William L. Dawson of Illinois, Adam Clayton Powell of New York, Charles C. Diggs of Michigan, and Robert N. C. Nix of Pennsylvania, all Democrats, on important roll calls last week follow:

On the motion of Rep. Daniel Reed, (Rep., N.Y.) to recommit to the House Ways and Means Committee, without instructions, the Reciprocal Trade bill extending for five years the authority of the President to enter into trade agreements under the Tariff Act of 1930, rejected, 146 to 268: Dawson, Diggs, Nix and Powell, nay.

On passage of the bill, passed, 317 to 98: Dawson, Diggs, Nix and Powell, yea.

ON THE MOTION of Rep. Cliff Clevenger, (Rep., O.) to recommit to the House Armed Services Committee the Defense Department Reorganization Act of 1958 with instructions to insert the following three amendments requested by the President:

1. Deleting from the bill the requirement that the Defense Secretary's authority must be exercised through the Secretaries of the Army, the Navy, and the Air Force.

FOREIGN RELATIONS

Substance in Speculation?

Russia's Khrushchev and Red China's Mao, meeting in Peking in early August, were accompanied by their defense ministers—a fact that led to a rush of speculation. Gist of the rumors: Communist China was again preparing to attack Formosa or the Nationalist-held offshore island chains of Quemoy and Matsu. Later events gave some substance to the speculation: Communist MIG-17s and Nationalist F-86s and F-84s began tangling more often above Formosa Strait; Communist gunners began to pound the islands, last week put down thousands of shells in two hours of the heaviest bombardment that Quemoy has ever taken.

Last week U.S. Secretary of State Dulles took official notice of the speculation—and its possible substance. U.S. policy, he made clear, has not changed since 1955, when Communist China made its most threatening passes at Quemoy and Matsu. U.S. firmness eased that crisis—and Dulles was still being firm. "We are indeed disturbed by the evidence of Chinese Communist buildup," said he. "I think it would be highly hazardous for anyone to assume that if the Chinese Communists were to attack and seek to conquer these islands, that that could be a limited operation. It would, I fear, constitute a threat to the peace of the area."

Red China's reply: eight Communist fighters made the Red China air force's first strafing run over Quemoy.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Catholics Won In Many Races

By Drew Pearson

It's time the American people got over the idea that a Catholic should not be elected President of the United States, and last week's election indicates that they are doing so.

Pearson

Four Catholics were elected to the Senate, not because of their religion but because they were good men, while two states — Pennsylvania and Colorado— elected Catholic Governors for the first time in history. Two other important states also elected Catholic Governors — Pat Brown in California and Mike DiSalle in Ohio, both outstanding men.

In Ohio, once a stronghold of the Ku Klux Klan, no Catholic, a few years ago, had a chance. But after Frank Lausche, a Catholic, proved such a popular Governor that he was re-elected four times, Ohioans got over their fear that the Pope would move into the State House at Columbus.

In Connecticut last week the people of that largely Catholic state turned round and re-elected a Jewish Governor, Abe Ribicoff, by the largest plurality in the state's history. Indirectly, this was an answer to the hate-mongers who bombed a synagogue in Atlanta.

The four new Catholic Senators are Phil Hart of Michigan, Eugene McCarthy of Minnesota, Thomas Dodd of Connecticut, and Ed Muskie of Maine, all Democrats, all fine men. The victory of Congressman McCarthy in Protestant Minnesota is especially significant. For McCarthy, from the city of St. Paul, defeated an able Republican, Sen. Ed Thye, a former Governor. Religion was raised by some voters privately, but when the votes were counted, the majority had put religion on the sidelines.

Simultaneously, three Catholic candidates, Democrats, were defeated. Maryland, first settled by Catholics fleeing from England, defeated Mayor D'Alesandro of Baltimore, running for the Senate. Religion, however, was not an issue. Maryland had previously elected a Catholic Governor, Herbert O'Conor, later made him Senator.

Democrat Frank Hogan, Manhattan District Attorney, was defeated in New York, and in this case religion was an issue—in reverse. Some Protestant and Jewish voters got sore at the insistence of Carmine De Sapio, head of Tammany, that a Catholic must run for the Senate. De Sapio barred Tom Finletter, a Protestant, and non-Catholic voters resented it. Congressman Kenneth Keating, a Republican and a Mason, defeated Hogan in this undisguised bid for "the Catholic vote."

This highlights the fact that the choice of candidates by religion can boomerang. When voters feel that a man is picked because of his religion rather than his ability, they can react vigorously. There was some early resentment in Connecticut against Governor Ribicoff, a Jew, handpicking Tom Dodd, a Catholic, to run for the Senate, but this evaporated before election.

Last week's demonstration of nonsectarian balloting should help the presidential aspirations of Massachusetts' Sen. Jack Kennedy. Here, again, if voters are judging a candidate not on his religion but on qualifications, Kennedy's youth may be against him. As a Senator, he did not at first live up to his publicity agent. He straddled issues and voted wrong. Latterly he has become farsighted, courageous, has grown in stature. But he is still young.

His greatest handicap may be his father, one of the wealthiest men in the United States, who increased his fortune by securing the agency of one of the top Scotch whisky brands right after prohibition. The New York election showed that wealth does not need to be a political handicap. But Rockefeller's father is a militant dry, Kennedy's father a militant wet, who not only contributed heavily to the late Sen. Joe McCarthy, but arranged meetings at his Cape Cod home between McCarthy and Cardinal Spellman. This was probably why young Kennedy never stood up to be counted against Senator McCarthy — a fact which Mrs. Roosevelt hasn't let the public forget.

Kennedy, however, has become an A-1 Senator, and if the Democrats nominate a Catholic for President, the American people have come a long way from the Herbert Hoover-Al Smith campaign of 1928. The outcome may be far different.

U. S. Warns Of Vote Tampering

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29 (UPI) —Atty. Gen. William P. Rogers ordered U. S. attorneys today to be ready to act promptly on all reports of ballot box tampering and discrimination at the polls next Tuesday.

Rogers instructed the Federal attorneys to stay on the job as long as the polls are open and to be prepared to move swiftly on all complaints of Federal election law violations.

The Justice Department's civil rights division will have a staff on hand throughout election day.

Rogers noted that the primary responsibility for running elections rest with the state and the Federal Government has no authority to supervise generally the conduct of balloting.

However, he added: "Where violations of Federal statutes occur, the Department of Justice will promptly and vigorously take prosecutive action."

48 Million Expected to Vote

Democrats Confident, Republicans Hopeful

By J. W. DAVIS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The angry words of a bitter campaign faded Monday night and it was left up to the voters: will they gratify the sky high hopes of the Democrats, or surprise the experts with a Republican triumph?

More than 76 million men and women are eligible to vote Tuesday and about 48 million are expected to.

Their votes will decide which party will control Congress for the next two years—and by how much—and they'll choose the men who'll govern 32 states.

Their votes may indicate, too, how blow the winds for the 1960 presidential campaign.

A 48-million voter turnout would be a record for a nonpresidential election year. Good weather was forecast for most areas, but a surprise snowstorm hit western New England and upstate New York Monday.

The Democrats grew so confident of sweeping gains that one of their top strategists, Sen. George Smathers of Florida, talked somberly of the duties that devolve on those in a place of great power.

Republicans made no sweeping claims. They talked hopefully, though, of startling upsets they said were in the making, something like the upset former President Harry Truman administered to overconfident Republicans in 1948.

In this 1958 campaign, Truman admonished his party not to grow too confident, but in the end he too threw restraint to the winds. He predicted the biggest Democratic landslide since 1932 when the Franklin D. Roosevelt years began.

Truman, 74, was the most vigorous of the top Democratic campaigners. Vice President Nixon, 45, carried the ball hardest for the Republicans. However, President Eisenhower, 68, got in some surprisingly hard blows himself.

Eisenhower and members of his family planned to vote at Gettysburg, Pa. The President will fly there by helicopter Tuesday morning and return to Washington after casting his ballot.

Smathers, chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee, predicted that the next Senate will contain 14 new Democrats. The division in the last was 49-47 in favor of the Democrats; since then Maine has voted to replace a Republican senator with a Democrat, and Alaska will elect two senators Nov. 25. Thirty-three senators are being elected Tuesday.

The best available composite opinion of political writers and analysts and newspapermen who have been watching politics for many years gave the following anticipated result, in an Associated Press survey:

Democrats are favored to take 8 to 12 Republican seats in the Senate, they are expected to increase their House total by 17 to 40 or more, and could pick up two or so additional governorships.

The present House division, including vacancies, is 235 Democrats to 200 Republicans.

Of the 32 governorships at stake, 19 are in Democratic hands now, 13 in Republican. Over the country, including states whose governors are not up for election the division is 29 Democrats and 19 Republicans.

Personalities played a large part in this; there was also the intriguing question of how the outcomes might affect the presidency in 1960.

In New York it was a contest between multimillionaires — Democratic Gov. Averell Harriman and Republican Nelson Rockefeller, with the new-to-politics Rockefeller being accorded a slight edge by the experts.

Should Rockefeller win, he would be in a choice spot to maneuver for the presidency two years from now. The Constitution, as amended, bars Eisenhower from running for a third straight term.

Presidential aspirations of Vice President Nixon ride importantly on what happens in California. California Democrats are predicting a sweep that could severely weaken Nixon on his own home grounds.

Republicans are plainly split in California. Gov. Goodwin Knight, who reluctantly decided to run for the Senate when Sen. William Knowland chose to try for the governorship, has refused to say that he will even vote for Knowland.

Dr. C. A. Bacote To Democratic Post in Atlanta

ATLANTA, Ga. — Dr. Clarence A. Bacote, professor at Atlanta University, was recently elected to a seat on the Fulton County Democratic Executive committee. He was one of two Negroes elected to the committee, both defeating white incumbents.

Final tabulations showed Dr. Bacote received 4,832 votes to 3,478 for the white incumbent, George T. Johnson. Attorney Daughterty defeated John F. Cloud, the incumbent ty a vote of 5,361 to 2,808.

Dr. Bacote did not seek the post, but was drafted by local citizens who noted his outstanding civic work in that area.

A native Kansas Citian, he received his bachelor of arts degree from the University of Kansas, and his master's and doctor of philosophy degrees from the University of Chicago.

He attended the biennial conclave of the Boule at Hampton Institute, after which he vacationed in Institute, West Virginia, as guest of his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Mrs. Roberta Arnold named to Chicago Board of Health staff

CHICAGO (ANP) — Mayor Richard J. Daley on Thursday announced the appointment of Miss Roberta W. Arnold to the position of Chief Nutritionist on the staff of the Chicago Board of Health at $7,104 a year.

Miss Arnold joined the staff of the Chicago Board of Health in September, 1955, as nutritionist consultant. In addition to two years of service in that capacity, Miss Arnold's qualifications for the position include a bachelor of science degree in home economics from Spelman College, Atlanta, Ga.; a dietetic internship at Freedmen's Hospital in Washington, D.C.; and a master's degree in public health nutrition from Teachers College, Columbia University.

24th Ward

First Negro Alderman Is Sworn In

CHICAGO — (ANP) - Benjamin F Lewis, city building inspector who won the recent primary election as alderman of the 24th ward was sworn into office last week by City Clerk John Marcin.

Lewis, who received 11,671 votes to 3,666 for his opponent, Arthur N Hamilton, also colored, is the first Negro alderman the erstwhile all-white ward has had. The ward, once Jewish and Italian, is now heavily populated by Negroes.

Dawson proposes remedy

(Our Editorial)

With so many southern states devising so-called anti NAACP laws and tricky legalisms to defy the Supreme Court desegregation decision, it is good to see some effort being made to counteract these subterfuges which tie the hands of communities which honestly seek to comply with the law.

It is especially good to see that one of these corrective measures has been introduced by that veteran legislator, Congressman William L. Dawson, who has permitted his more agressive colleagues to steal the limelight in this field.

Dawson introduced in the House last week what he calls a constitutional rights bill which seeks to shore up the civil rights measure passed last session.

,Dawson claims that his bill is not aimed at creating new civil rights but simply providing additional practical means for protecting existing rights.

It authorizes Federal grants of funds needed by States or school districts to desegregate their public schools in compliance with the decisions of the Federal courts.

The bill would also authorize the Attorney General to seek the aid of the courts to achieve elimination of public school segregation, to protect the constitutional rights to equal protection of the laws for persons, who because of poverty or community hostility, are unable to institute court suits, to prevent interference with officials who are seeking to provide equal protection of the laws, to prevent interference with persons obeying a court order protecting such rights, and to protect those who are being denied their constitutional rights because they have protested actions which deny such rights to others.

We hope Congressman Dawson can muster support for this measure which can be used as a weapon by communities like Arlington and Northern Virginia to combat the impediments of the Virginia "massive resistance" program.

Measure Aimed At Dixie States

WASHINGTON — A civil rights bill aimed at forcing states to abide by the U. S. Supreme Court desegregation rulings was introduced in the House of Representatives this week by Rep. William L. Dawson.

Termed the "Civil Rights Act of 1958," the measure is designed to protect the constitutional rights of all persons regardless of race or color.

The federal courts have opened the way for America to fulfill its traditional goal of equal justice under the law for all persons. The false doctrine of legalized separation, which was used to support the many cruel and indecent discriminations inflicted upon millions of Americans, solely because of their ancestry or color, is now dissipated.

NO LONGER

"No longer may government power be legally used to compel racial segregation."

In addition to helping eliminate the cost to an individual of getting his legal civil rights, the new law would give the Secretary of Health Education and Welfare the authority to aid in eliminating or preventing denials of constitutional rights because of race, religion or ancestry;

Would provide U. S. grants to areas where racial desegregation in public education is being carried out; end racial segregation in education and authorize the district courts to expedite, not delay, the elimination of segregation in schools.

Congressman Dawson lauded the churches, professions, business, labor, veterans and the majority of Americans who have fought staunchly for the rights of all U. S. citizens and noted that a great deal of progress had been made in race relations in the past four years.

He pointed out, however, that there are still many areas and many groups who refuse to comply with the requirement of the Constitution and the courts, and who foment strife and violence in an effort to preserve an outmoded system.

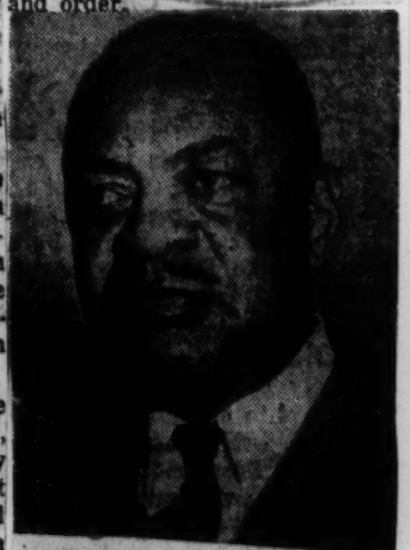
NEW MEASURE

His new measure is aimed at this latter group.

Rep. Dawson said his bill will put the government squarely on the side of the protection of Constitutional rights and added: "It is high time that this be done."

The Illinois Representative also pointed that our nation cannot afford the passive, do-as-little-as-possible attitude which the President and Attorney General have been expressing.

He emphasized that plans and programs must be initiated now to deal with the mounting crisis of widespread resistance to law and order.



Wm. L. DAWSON

Congressman Dawson Presents Rights Bill

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — Representative William L. Dawson, Democrat, of Illinois, Monday introduced a civil rights bill which he said will put the Federal Government "squarely on the side of the protection of constitutional rights."

"It is high time that this be done," Mr. Dawson told the House in offering his measure.

The powerful Illinois Democrat took [illegible] President Eisenhower and Attorney General William P. Rogers. This country, he said, "cannot afford the passive do-as-little-as-possible attitude" which Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Rogers have been expressing.

"Plans and preparations must be provided to deal with the mounting crisis of widespread resistance to law and order and to protect the constitutional rights of all Americans.

"Unless we do so, we may see increased violence and disregard of law which will weaken our national strength and unity."

In asking for prompt enactment of his bill, Mr. Dawson told the House that the Congress is duty-bound to protect the constitutional rights of the people whom it represents."

He called the Civil Rights Act of 1957 "an initial but minimum step in that direction."

The Dawson bill would create no new civil rights, but would simply provide additional means for protecting existing rights to equal protection of the law, which are now guaranteed by the Constitution.

Title I of the bill would authorize the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare to provide technical assistance to aid, through education, in eliminating or preventing denials of constitutional rights on the basis of race, color, religion, ancestry or national origin, and also to aid school districts to comply with the Supreme Court decision against segregated public schools.

Title II of the bill would authorize Federal grants-in-aid to states or school districts to desegregate their schools in compliance with Federal court decision.

"Shocking" Dawson Tells Subcommittee Of Terrorism

WASHINGTON, D C (NNPA — Representative William L Dawson, Democrat, of Illinois, Friday called "shocking and sickening" the report of terror and death directed against colored people in Dawson, Ga.

Testifying before the House Judiciary subcommittee holding hearings on civil rights bills, Mr Dawson said such police "tyranny is reminiscent of the police brutality fostered by the Hitler and Stalin regimes, and the current Russian terror behind the Iron Curtain. It shames America in the eyes of the world."

Mr Dawson testified in support of his bill which provides for federal technical assistance and financial grants to local communities to aid them to comply with the Supreme Court decision against segregated public schools.

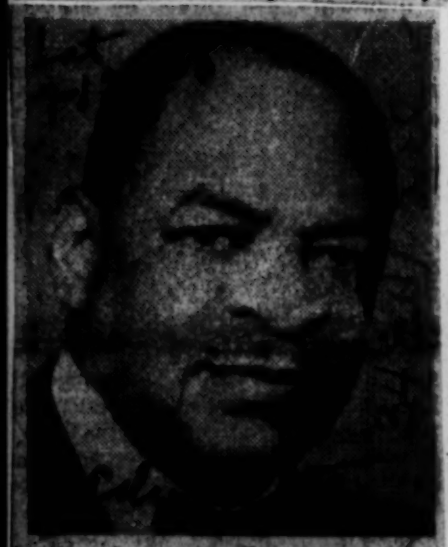
CONG. DAWSON BACKS HIS RIGHTS BILL IN BRILLIANT HOUSE SPEECH

Washington, D. C. July 6—Rep. William L. Dawson (D., Ill.), presented a brilliant and comprehensive statement before the House Judiciary subcommittee, Friday, outlining specific reasons whoy Congress should pass additional civil rights legislation in this session.

"It is the duty of Government to deal with the problem of segregation in America today," explained Dawson, "And it is the duty of Congress to provide the leadership. We can not afford to let the mobs and the hoodlums set our moral tone; nor can we sit idly by until they force use to resort to frantic improvisations after they have created dangerous civil disorder, violence and riot."

The Illinois congressman appeared in behalf of his own bill introduced last February, a measure differing from those pending before the subcommittee in that he does not treat on the 14th Amendment but draws on the entire Constitution for strength.

The Illinois representative charged those who want to preserve segregation with the guilt of "destroying the basic rights of all Americans . .. they are destroy-



CONGRESSMAN DAWSON

What They Say . .

Rep. William L. Dawson (D.-Ill.), before the Committee on the Judiciary of the House of Representatives on H. R. 10928 and other civil rights bills:

Rep. Dawson

• "This crisis which America faces has been fomented by people who fail to understand the heritage of America. They seek to preserve an outmoded system of caste and second-class citizenship. They strive to repeal court rulings by intimidation, violence and coercion. The recent order by Judge Ronley forbidding integration in the public schools of Little Rock for the 2½ years remaining in Governor Faubus' term is a direct outgrowth of that intimidation and coercion. It will surely encourage the mobs to use organized violence to subvert the supreme law of the land."

"American newspapers print the most fantastic lies about our living and our progress. Your historians, like John Gunther, distort our mode of living after staying long enough to have a cocktail or two. Your journals and writers make fun of formal ways of living. Surely, we wear top hats and morning coats. That's what we like. Yes, we give lots of parties. That's our business and the way we want to live. We are a gracious people."

Dr. James Mason Nabrit, dean Howard U. School of Law:

• "If you are going to be a first-class citizen and have the rights of a first-class citizen, you're going to have to take on the duties of a first-class citizen."

Dawson Vows To Fight For Rights

WASHINGTON — Rep. William L. Dawson urged last week passage of a series of civil rights bills which he introduced in Congress to "help protect the guarantees of equal protection of the laws and due process to which all Americans are entitled."

Dawson, testifying before the Judiciary committee of the house, stated in regard to the legislation he has proposed:

"If and when any or all of these bills come to the floor of the house, I shall support them with all my strength."

Dawson said that he had introduced a bill (H. R. 10928) for the "purpose of dealing with the mounting crisis of widespread resistance to law and order that is growing in many areas."

The Chicago congressman said his bill is intended to prescribe additional practical means for protecting the rights of all persons to receive equal protection of the laws.

The bill would also provide $3 million a year in federal funds to gather and publish information concerning the racial problem and to call conferences on the subject.

Dawson would also provide up to $50,000,000 each year to assist states and loaclities in meeting the costs necessary to comply with the Supreme Court's decision against compulsory segregation in public schools.

He suggests that the secretary of health, education and welfare would cooperate with communities to work out plans for school desegregation.

Dawson speaks out for stronger rights

WASHINGTON

Rep. William L. Dawson (D. Ill.) has presented a comprehensive statement to the House Judiciary subcommittee outlining specific reasons why Congress should pass additional civil rights ligistation during this session.

In the statement, Congressman Dawson declared:

"It is the duty of Government to deal with the problem of segregation in America today. It is the duty of Congress to provide the leadership.

WE CANNOT AFFORD TO LET the mobs and hoodlums set our moral tone, nor can we sit idly by until they force us to resort to frantic improvisations after they have created dangerous civil disorder, violence and riot."

The Illinois Democrat charged those who want to preserve segregation with the guilt of destroying the basic rights of all Americans, the exercise of free speech, free assembly and free thought in a large section of our country."

"In their madness," he continued," they would pull down the whole edifice of public education which is the key to the future."

Mr. Dawson appeared before the committee in behalf of his own bill introduced last February. He described his measure as one intended to:

"PRESCRIBE ADDITIONAL practical means for protecting the existing rights of all persons to receive the equal protection of the laws."

The Congressman's bill would provide ligislative direction to the Executive branch of the Government to furnish assistance and make financial grants to local communities for moving ahead in compliance with decisions of the Supreme Court.

CALLS DAWSON GROUP A TOOL OF PROPAGANDA

Arends Says Dems Play Politics with Missiles

[Chicago Tribune Press Service]

Washington, Aug. 13—Rep. Leslie C. Arends [R., Ill.] charged Wednesday that the House government operations committee under Chairman William L. Dawson [D., Ill.] has been used to spread spread "Democrat party propaganda."

Arends specifically referred to a report issued by the committee this week accusing the Eisenhower administration of holding back the development of missiles by cutting down research and development funds. Arends is G. O. P. House whip and ranking Republican on the armed services committee.

He backed up a minority report of six Republicans on the committee which accused the majority Democrats of issuping political propaganda and "carelessly playing politics with national defense."

Assails Chairman Dawson

"The political nature of the report also is pinpointed by the fact that the committee chairman [Dawson] is a vice chairman of the Democrat national committee and serves as secretary of the Democrat congressional campaign committee," Arends said in a statement.

"This is obvious use of the majority instruments of Congress as a pipeline for Democrat party propaganda and perhaps the costs of the report could more logically be borne by the Democrat political committees."

Arends said the report from Democrats on the government operations committee were attempting "to drag our eminently successful weapons programs into a dangerous arena of partisan politics."

Charges "Tardy Concern"

"It comes from a committee whose Democrat members voted to a man in 1957 against an administration plea to restore 313 million dollars to the defense money bill, which had been gutted a total of 2.6 billion dollars by the Democrat House appropriations committee," Arends continued. "A large part of the 313 million dollars they denied was stripped from the very missile program about which they now show such tardy concern."

Arends said the United States spent $17,473,000,000 on missile programs in fiscal years 1946 thru 1958, and of this amount $16,248,000,000 was budgeted and spent by the Eisenhower administration, including 99 per cent of the expenditures made so far on the Atlas intercontinental ballistic missile.

"When this administration took office, our missile arsenal was almost bare," Arends said. "Now we have 11 operational types and work is being rushed on 35 more advanced types.

"In the years from 1946 to 1952, the party which now claims military preparedness vision spent $117,000,000 for peanuts [price supports]. This was 30 times as much as they spent for ballistic missile research while the Russians were working feverishly on missiles.

"If the United States program does lag, the blame lies on the tragically confused Truman administration."

Howard Challenges Dawson To Civil Rights Debate

CHICAGO, (ANP)—A "Lincoln-Douglas" type debate on the civil rights issue was proposed last week by Dr. T. R. M. Howard, former Mound Bayou physician and currently GOP candidate for Congress in the 1st congressional district of Illinois. His opponent would be the incumbent Rep. William L. Dawson, Democrat, whom Dr. Howard seeks to unseat during the coming November election.

Dr. Howard issued a telegraphic challenge to Rep. Dawson to explain "your shocking record of absenteeism—the highest in Congress along with your peculiar inability to use the power and status of your office to join hands with other Americans in combatting the outrages against the rights of Negro citizens and in initiating constructive programs to improve the welfare of our people."

"VOTE TO UPHOLD"

Nothing that the "central domestic issue confronting our nation today is the achievement of full citizenship rights for our 18 million Negro citizens." Dr. Howard said the record of the Democratic party " is such that a vote for a for a Democratic congressman, either North or South, is a vote to uphold those who actively deminate that party, the Gov. Faubus' and Sen. Eastlands."

"Inasmuch as the issue of Negro rights has brought our nation to the same crossroads as it did during pre-Civil War days," the GOP congressional aspirant wired, "it seems imperative that all candidates be as open and forthright as was Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas and present their views in free, public debate...

"...In response to demands of voters in this district and citizens throughout the city...I tender you this challenge to debate these issues or any other issues...at any time or any place the Democratic party considers convenient."

Howard Hits Charges Of Rep. Dawson

Denying any violation of the corrupt practices act Dr. T. R. M. Howard attacked the charges filed against him by Congressman William L. Dawson with the House campaign expenditures committee last Tuesday as "preposterous."

Dawson reported that over $65,000 in campaign contributions raised on behalf of his defeated Republican opponent, Dr. Howard, were not accounted for.

The report filed by Dr. Howard with the clerk of the House of Representatives showed that he had received the sum of $2,425 in campaign contributions and had spent $1,711.

Dr. Howard told the Defender Wednesday: "I was given instructions that I was to report money given me and the money which I had spent. And this I reported correctly.

In his request for an investigation, Dawson charged that his opponent had failed to account for $25,000 raised at a testimonial dinner and $40,000 raised at a tea at the Trianon ballroom. Dawson also stated that the Fuller Products company had spent nearly $3,000 on behalf of Dr. Howard.

When questioned by the Defender, Congressman Dawson stated: "My action in filing charges against Dr. Howard for violating the corrupt practices act was not motivated by any personal animosity toward him. When sums of money are collected from the public, the people are entitled to know what was done with it."

Commenting of the situation, Dr. Howard stated: "I am wondering what is behind the action. Somebody must have been touched at a vulnerable spot during the campaign." Congressman Dawson pointed out the corrupt practices act limits the amount of money that can be spent on a Congressional election.

Edward Smith Named Head Of Gary FEPC Commission

By ERNESTINE COFIELD

Last month city officials of Gary, Ind., appointed their first Negro to the tough job of executive director of the Fair Employment Practice Commission.

Edward E. Smith, who took over the job has already began to outline his program. His first job, he said is to educate the ordinance that was adopted by the City council in 1950.

Ed Smith

The ordinance makes discrimination in employment because of race, color, religion or ancestry unlawful. Only two other Indiana cities have FEPC laws. They are Indianapolis and East Chicago.

The new executive director said, "People have to learn to use the commission. I don't think the ordinance has been interpreted to let them know how trey can use it or where they can go. That's why I want to start from the ground floor."

His method of "startiing from the ground floor" is "to see how I can best fit into the community because I haven't been here long enough to know."

SHORT TIME

In the short time Smith has been in Gary, he has filled speaking engagements and attended meetings and churches to acquaint himself with the city and its problems.

In addition, he praised the commission for the wholehearted way in which they are eagerly helping to formulate a working worthwhile program.

Offering Smith day to day help whenever he needs it is Garyite Opal Johnson, who has been FEPC secretary since 1953.

So that the director can do the best job possible, he hopes that the working force of 75,000 Negroes in the 170,000 population will learn to bring cases of discrimination to his attention as soon as they happen. No more than 60 days can elapse after discrimination has been shown for the commission to take action.

EMPLOYMENT BASIC

In somber tones, Smith stated, "I feel I'm doing a service because employment is basic."

He reported that as far as he knows at present, Negroes are hired in almost all areas in the city.

He added, "I woule to work myself out of a job which means that all things would be equal for all men. Until that time I'll continue serving."

Well qualified for his job, Smith came to the Calumet region from Oklahoma City, Okla., where he had served for three years as industrial relations secretary.

Prior to that he had served for five years as educational advisor in Cleveland, Ohio, for the United Steelworkers. Smith was also YMCA secretary in Cleveland for three years and for four years in Newcastle, Pa.

His educational background includes a bachelors degree from Lincoln university, Jefferson City, Mo.; and a masters in social work administration from Western Reserve university. He also attended the University of Pittsburgh.

Born in Evanston, Ill., the executive director received his grade and high school education in St. Paul, Minn.

SECRETLY MARRIED

While attending Lincoln university, he secretly married his classmate, the former Glenna Jenkins of Tulsa, Okla. The couple have two children, Wayne, 13, a freshman at Roosevelt High school, and Patricia, 2.

In September Mrs. Smith will teach third grade at Garnett school. They are living in Means Manor.

When Smith finds any free time from his strenuous job, he likes to play the piano or listen to all kinds of music. His other hobby, bowling, has brought him local recognition. In 1954 Smith was a member of the Class B championship bowling team in Cleveland. His average is 158. Ice skating is another one of his pastimes.

Although the summer season has made it impossible for the newcomer to affiliate with local organizations, he holds memberships in the Urban League, Chamber of Commerce, NAACP, National Association of Social Workers, National Association of Intergroup Relatins Organizations, Mayor's Committee in Oklahoma City and Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity.

The Negro citizen must also realize that citizenship also imposes a duty. It has come to my attention that numberless Negro children are being placed on the welfare rolls every year because the fathers of these children either neglect or refuse to support them. Attorney Amedee was born in New Orleans and received his education in the public schools here. He was graduated from Xavier University, receiving his B. A. in 1940. Assistant D. A.

—Atty. Earl J. Amedee, New Orleans, has been named special aide to handle Negro cases in Juvenile Court by Orleans Parish District Attorney-elect Richard Dowling who will take office May 5. Mr. Amedee was an unsuccessful candidate for city councilman.

Amedee In As Assistant DA

History was made Monday when Richard A. Dowling was sworn in as District Attorney in Criminal Court, Judge William O'Hara's chambers. With Dowling taking office, so did Earl J. Amedee, the first Negro Assistant District Attorney in the history of New Orleans.

During the ceremony, John Dowling, nephew of the new District Attorney, in introducing him, said: "Mr. (Richard) Dowling is aware of the need for tolerance, mutual understanding and mutual responsibility among the citizens.

"Mr. Dowling has made an outstanding contribution to the improvement of race relations in the city of New Orleans by his hostoric appointment of Earl J. Amedee as Assistant District Attorney."

Tuesday, Amedee put in his first full day at his office in the juvenile court building on Chartres Street. Amedee estimates he heard some 50 persons register complaints with reference to alimony and non-support cases. A great many of these cases were referred to his office by the welfare department, he explained.

After hearing the cases, Amedee had to decide what action would be taken. To Amedee, it was a busy, but routine day.

Amedee Gets $8,500 As Assistant DA

Assistant District Attorney Earl J. Amedee's salary is fourth highest of all District Attorney Richard A. Dowling's present staff of thirty persons, according to figures released last Wednesday by David McNeill, Dowling's Executive Assistant.

Amedee will receive $8,500 annually, with $5,500 coming from the city and an additional $3,000 being allocated by the state to augment the city salary for his work as Assistant District Attorney in the Juvenile Court.

Dowling's staff includes 15 assistants, five investigators, a secretary, seven clerical workers and a custodian, when totaled will receive $176,840 annually. The figures, however, do not include a First Assistant District Attorney who has not taken office, another investigator Dowling plans to hire, and a monthly retainer for a Public Relations man, Dennis Bryant.

Diggs blasts waste of Federal funds

IN A NUTSHELL

- Rep. Diggs reports $192 million have gone to states crowded by children of military personnel or Federal employees.
- Agrees with Rep. John Roosevelt that anti-segregation amendment should be passed to end this state of affairs.
- Says the measure should not be construed as an anti-Southern one.

REP. CHARLES C. DIGGS

WASHINGTON, D.C.—Cong. Charles C. Diggs Jr. (Dem., Mich.) charged Wednesday that more than $192 million in Federal aid has gone to segregated school systems under a government program of assistance to school districts crowded by children of military personnel or Federal employees.

In a speech on the floor of the U.S. House of Representatives, the Michigan representative fought for an anti-segregation amendment to the bill to extend the program.

The amendment presented by Cong. James Roosevelt (Dem., Calif.) would have denied funds for the so-called impact program to segregate school systems.

THE HOUSE defeated the amendment by a vote of 132 to 25 after sponsors of the bill successfully argued that its adoption would jeopardize the legislation.

The House action rejected the Roosevelt-Diggs distinction between the general school aid construction bill and the impacted school measure.

Roosevelt had declared that it was imperative for those opposing the use of Federal funds for segregated facilities to support the amendment because of the "shocking do-nothing attitude of the Republican Administration."

He read into the record a letter which Secretary Folsom of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare had written to Roy Wilkins of the NAACP denying the responsibility of the Executive Branch of Government to reserve or withhold such funds to help bring about compliance with the Supreme Court school decision.

CALLING THIS abdication of responsibility, Roosevelt cited an opposite view of Federal Policy in the Executive Order prohibiting contractors who do business with the government from discriminating in hiring or firing.

Diggs said that the anti-segregation amendment could not be classified as an anti-Southern measure.

He said the amendment was aimed at those states which, among other things, have made it a criminal offense to attend an integrated school and that the amendment would apply to only three or four states.

It has not been twenty-eight years since one of the most popular of Nashville's educators left this city and went "up higher" to one of the lucrative educational positions in the Federal Government becoming thereby a really and truly "integrated" official in education."

This well known educator is Dr. Ambrose Caliver, who for some time before going to Washington was dean of Fisk University.

Dr. Caliver was elevated to his present position as Chief of Adult Education in 1950.

He was quite well known here while at Fisk University. His residence was at 17th Avenue North, and Scovel Street now owned by Mr. and Mrs. Baxter Collier, Sr.

The past week a release to the press from A and T College in Greensboro North Carolina stated that the keynote annual Pre-Session Faculty Staff Conference at A&T would be delivered by Dr. Ambrose Caliver, of the brilliant educator the following was said:

Diggs to Seek Foreign Affairs Committee Seat?

U. S. Congressman Charles C. Diggs Jr. (D., Mich.) will seek to become a member of the important House Foreign Affairs Committee, when the House convenes next term, The Courier learned recently.

• A spokesman, who asked that his name not be used, said the veteran lawmaker, who was re-elected with ease in the Nov. 4 balloting for his third term, said Diggs "feels it is highly important for a Negro to gain a seat on that committee now that many African countries, such as Ghana and the Sudan have already become free and independent and others are fastly working toward the day they, too, will gain self-determination."

The Congressman's office had no comment on the statement.

DIGGS, one of four Negro Congressmen in the United States, is presently a member of the Veterans Affairs' Committee.

• The spokesman, who should know, emphasized that Diggs will make a "determined effort" to gain membership on the House Foreign Affairs Committee. He declared "the Congressman has a pretty good chance of making it, too."

"The African giant is awakening . . . American Negroes would do well to note this, he said.

Negro Appointed To Post In St. Joseph City Hall

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — For the first time in the history of the city of St. Joseph, a Nego has been named to a clerical post at City hall.

The appointee is Mrs. Janet Whyte, 900 Pendleton St. She has been named a temporary deputy assessor by City Assessor A. J. Bielby Jr.

Mrs. White has been assigned to secretarial duties and later will be handling regular assessment work, Bielby stated. She started work last Friday.

Mrs. Whyte was a student at the former Bartlett high school here for two years and completed her high school work in San Diego, Calif. She is the wife of Everett Whyte, a waiter at the Elks club. The Whytes have two children.

Courthouse deputies said last week that there has never been a Negro appointed to any deputyships or clerical positions in the county government.

"This is not a matter of race or anything else. She is qualified for the job, so I hired her. That's all there is to it," said Bielby.

Negro Set For Appointment To Asst. U.S. Atty.

St. Louis (NNPA) — It is speculated that the Justice Department may soon name Attorney William C. Martin as the first Negro to ever serve as an assistant United States Attorney, for the eastern district of Missouri, which includes St. Louis.

Attorney Martin, who has offices in the Peoples Finance Builting, 11 N. Jefferson, has been recommended for the post by United States Attorney Harry Richards.

The position which pays $7,500 a year, was left vacant when Robert C. Tucker resigned recently to accept a position as clerk of the United States Court of Appeals.

The two Republican leaders in the State of Missouri, Roscoe C. Hobbs, Republican national committeeman for Missouri and H. Kenneth Wangelin, chairman of the State Republican Committee, have said they will endorse Attorney Martin for the position if he gets clearance from the Justice Department, in this case a mere formality.

Attorney Martin, a native of Muskogee, Oklahoma, received his bachelors and law degree from the University of Illinois. After practicing law in Chicago from 1935 unitl 1944, he came to St. Louis to become professor of law at Lincoln Law School. He remained on the faculty until 1955, when the law school closed.

Since that time, Attorney Martin has been in private pracitce. He is 46 years old and lives at 4822 Ashland avenue, with his wife, Sarah, and their two children.

Uncle Sam Sending FAMU Players' Group To Africa

34c(1) International Program for cultural presentations

TALLAHASSEE — The Florida A. and M. university Playmakers under the direction of S. Randolph Edmonds, have been selected to tour West, Central, East and North Africa, according to an announcement by Robert W. Dowling, chairman of the board of the American National Theatre and Academy of New York City. The tour will be made in cooperation with the President's Special International Program for Cultural Presentations, which is administered by ANTA for the State Department.

The A. and M. Playmakers is the fourth academic theatre troupe selected to tour under the President's program, but the first to venture into Africa. Their itinerary is expected to take them to Liberia, Ghana, Sierra Leone, Nigera, Uganda, Egypt and Morocco and possibly other countries of the African continent. The trip will commence next October and last two to three months.

THE STUDENT players will be directed and supervised by Edmonds who will be assisted by his wife, Mrs. Irene C Edmonds. Both Mr. and Mrs. Edmonds will lecture to university and civic groups on the American educational theatre and kindred subjects, while the performances of their students will serve to demonstrate the results now being achieved in that field in the United States.

Edmonds was the first Negro to enter the educational theatre as a lifetime profession. He holds degrees from St. Paul's college, Oberlin college and Columbia university as well as having studied at the Yale university drama school. He has had several fellowships for study abroad and has published a number of books of original plays and other articles on the theatre.

MRS. EDMONDS is also a pioneer in the academic and children's theatre fields. She is a graduate of Syracuse and John Hopkins universities and is also a member of the Florida A. and M. university faculty. She has written numerous plays for the children's theatre which have had wide presentation.

Due to the pioneering nature of the Playmaker's tour and the transportation and housing limitations in the countries to be visited, the troupe will be held to a membership of 12. They will carry and "work" their own scenery and technical equipment.

Gourdin Gets High Court Position

BOSTON — Gov. Foster Furcolo last week administered the oath of office to Edward O. Gourdin as the first representative of the Negro race on the Massachusetts Superior Court Bench. Attending the services in the historic State Senate Chamber were hundreds of friends of the new jurist, who formerly served as Judge of the Roxbury District Court.

Among those attending the ceremony were Chief Justice Raymond S. Wilkins of the Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court, Justice Calvert Magruder of the United States Circuit Court and Thurgood Marshall, Esquire of New York, Legal Counselor the NAACP.

Attorney Marshall praised Governor Furcolo's appointment of Judge Gourdin to the Superior Court by saying that he is a great lawyer, a great soldier, and a great Judge. He continued by saying that this appointment this morning is doubly important in that it is the first of its kind in New England.

STEP FORWARD

It is neither the beginning nor the end, but it is a step along and it is for that reason I believe all of us are indebted to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and Governor Foster Furcolo for continuing this steady move toward the time when throughout this country men will exist as equal in a true democracy and be able to take office, punishment, or get their justice on anything other than race, creed or national origin.

Judge Gourdin of Quincy is a Harvard college graduate, AB 1921, Harvard Law School, LLB, 1924. He was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar 1925, and to the Federal Bar in 1929, and served as Assistant United States Attorney from 1936 to 1951.

During World War II, he served as Colonel, Commanding Infantry and retired as Brigadier General in the Massachusetts National Guard. He served as Aide-de-Camp to the late Governor Paul A. Dever, and Special Justice. District Courts in 1951.

WON RECORD

He is married and has four children. In October of last year he was appointed by Governor Furcolo to serve on the Judicial Council.

Among the many invited guests were Governor and Mrs. Foster Furcolo, Thurgood Marshall, legal counsel of the NAACP; President Julian Steele of the Urban League; Silas F. Taylor, former parole board member and Massachusetts Electorial college for four terms; Malcolm Taylor, president of the United Negro Democratic League; Chief Justice Paul C. Reardon, of the Superior Court and Herbert Tucker, president of the NAACP in Boston;

Also Ruth Batson, Massachusetts Democratic State committeewoman; Robert Segal, Sol Kolack, William Belanger, president of the Massachusetts C.I.O.; John L. Saltonstall; attorney Matthew W. Bullock, former parole board member; Atty. John Louden, assistant insurance commissioner; and Colonel Alexander David of the 372nd Infantry, Massachusetts National Guard.

OPPOSING PAY TV.—Rep. Charles C. Diggs, Jr., (D-Mich.) welcomes a fellow resident of Detroit — State Sen. Harold M. Ryan — to the nation's capitol where Sen. Ryan presented petitions bearing more than 20,000 signatures in opposition to pay television proposals. Sen. Ryan has been conducting a personal campaign against proposals to charge viewers for programs transmitted over the nation's television channels. He reported to Rep. Diggs on a six-day, cross-country street corner speaking tour from Detroit to Washington. "Everywhere I went," he said, "I found people infuriated over the idea of being charged to look at the television sets in their homes. They were anxious to let their representatives in Washington know how much they oppose pay-television."

Diggs asks postal probe in Alabama

WASHINGTON — Congressman Charles C. Diggs, Jr., (D. Mich.) asked Postmaster General Summerfield Thursday for an immediate investigation of the scheduled closing of the Post Office branch serving the all - colored community of Magazine, Ala.

In a telegram to Mr. Summerfield, the Michigan Democrat stated:

"IT HAS BEEN brought to my attention that the Post Office at Magazine, Ala., is scheduled to be closed Feb. 1. The last white family, including the postmistress, has recently moved out of Magazine, making it now an all colored community.

"I suspect that the decision to close has racial implications and respectfully urge an immediate investigation, a report of your findings and suspension of the scheduled closing until the matter is cleared."

Ex-Orleanian Is Named To Loyalty Post

Detroit - A former Louisiana Weekly circulation manager, last Tuesday, became the first Negro in the history of Detroit to head a city commission, with his appointment by Mayor Louis Miriani.

He is Leon M. Wallace, 46, business manager of Haynes Memorial Hospital, who was appointed director-secretary of the Detroit loyalty investigating commission, an organization that screens prospective city employees.

Wallace is widely known in New Orleans where he was a life insurance company executive before taking up residence here. He is married to the former Rosalie Quinn of Baton Rouge. The job's salary is $8,500 a year.

City Councilman—The Rev. Ralph D. Abernathy (center), leader in the Montgomery bus boycott, congratulates Clarence B. Sabbath (right), and Hezekiah McDonald following their election victories in River Rouge, Mich. Mr. Sabbath was elected to City Council and will serve as Mayor pro tem, and Mr. McDonald won a position as corstable.

Diggs Demands Action On FBI Report Of Dawson "Terrorism"

Michigan Solon Points Out "Obvious" Violations

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—Representative Charles C. Diggs, Democrat, of Michigan, asked the Justice Department Wednesday for a report of the action it plans to take as a result of the FBI investigation of terrorism and the deprivation of constitutional rights in the souh Georgia blackbelt town of Dawson in Terrell County.

The text of Mr. Diggs' telegram to Attorney General William P. Rogers follows:

"For this nation's safety and the welfare of our whole system of government, swift action by your department is demanded with respect to recent and continuing atrocities directed against colored citizens of Dawson, Ga.

"The device of voting intimidation and 'under-color-of-law' outrage brutality on the part of law enforcement officials in the locality seem clearly within the purview of existing statutes giving the Federal Government jurisdiction to act against these outrages.

"The ire of every decent-thinking American of whatever race, creed, color, or nationality is aroused to its fullest height by these abuses, which are publicly acknowledged by the perpetrators and are the counterpart of the worst Nazi abominations from which the world still seeks to recover.

"In light of reports that the FBI has looked into the matter, please advise me of the extent and status of its investigation and as to what further action your department has initiated or contemplates taking to correct this wholesale deprivation of rights guaranteed by our Constitution and laws. An immediate reply is respectfully requested."

ROSELLE, N.J. — Political history was made here in two ways by the same public official when members of the new Borough Council were sworn in New Year's Day.

It was the first time that a colored councilman, George G. Woody Jr., 31 - year - old undertaker, had been inducted into office.

And, because of a political deadlock in selecting a president — the Council is composed of three Republicans and three Democrats — Mr. Woody, a Republican, was the unanimous compromise choice, thus setting a second precedent.

WHEN THE three Democratic councilmen refused to agree on a Republican for council president, and the three Republicans refused to endorse a Democrat for the post, the session became deadlocked.

When it became evident that neither side would budge, Councilman Wally Mitchell, First Ward Democrat and president of the outgoing Council who was eligible for re-election, nominated Mr. Woody to succeed him.

The vote was unanimous.

In the absence of the mayor, Mr. Woody will act in that capacity.

OF THE 28,000 residents in Roselle, about 20 per cent, 5,600 to 6,000, are colored, among whom are 1,100 registered voters.

Credit for the unprecedentd political influence now enjoyed by colored residents is given by leaders to Leonard (Bud) Simmons, owner - manager of the Veterans' Cleaners, who organized the Republican Progressive Club, became its first president and now its secretary.

Mr. Simmons first initiated an intensive registration drive and urged qualified persons to run for public office.

When a vacancy occurred on the board of education a few years ago, he became a candidate for the post and defeated his white opponent. He was re-elected two years ago for a full term.

Until his election to the Board, no colored public school teachers were employed. Now there are several.

THE REPUBLICAN Progressive Club, now headed by Jerry Barner, sponsored Mr. Woody's candidacy for the Borough Council. He received substantial support from white voters, many of them in business and the professions.

Mr. Woody, who was born in Roselle Park, has lived in Roselle for 26 years and is a World War II veteran.

His induction was witnessed by his wife, Mrs. Magnolia Woody, a teacher at the Camden Street School, Newark, and their two children, George 3rd, 5, and Carla Renee, 4½ months, community leaders and officials of the Republican Progressive Club.

Mr. Woody is a graduate of Roselle public schools and McAllister School of Mortuary Science, NYC, and the Alexander Hamilton Institute, NYC.

He is a leader in many civic, professional, interracial and social welfare and religious organizations.

COUNCIL PRESIDENT — George C. Woody Jr., Republican, set two precedents New Year's Day when he was sworn in by Jean Krulish, clerk, as the first colored member of the Roselle (N.J.) Borough Council, and later was elected as its president. His son, George 3rd, 5, and Mayor James G. Argyros are looking on. The council president is a mortician and a leader in many civic and interracial organizations.

FIRST NEGRO NAMED TO NEWARK BENCH

New York Times

Special to The New York Times

NEWARK, Oct. 18—Harry J. Hazelwood Jr., an assistant Essex County prosecutor, became the first Negro to be nominated for a municipal judgeship here Saturday.

Mayor Leo P. Carini announced that he would submit Hazelwood's name to the City Council for confirmation at its Nov. 5 meeting, together with that of Samuel H. Lohman, the city's License Commissioner.

If their nominations are approved, Mr. Hazelwood and Mr. Lohman will succeed A. Milton Jacobs and Milton Hodis, whose three-year terms as magistrates expired last June 15.

Mr. Hazelwood is 36 years old. He was born in Newark, attended Rutgers University on a scholarship and later went to Cornell Law School where he was graduated in 1945.

Mr. Lohman also is a native of Newark. He was graduated from Upsala College and Rutgers Law School. Before his appointment as License Commissioner he served as a Tax Commissioner.

Atty. Frank H. Wimberly Elected President

Negro Heads Trenton, N. J., School Board!

Courier Pittsburgh Pa. p. 3.

TRENTON, N.J. — This capital of New Jersey last week became the first major city in the United States to elect a Negro president of its Board of Education when Atty. Frank H. Wimberly succeeded Frank L. Casey whose two-year term expired.

Wimberly, who is a native of Tarboro, N. C., has lived in Trenton for nearly 20 years, moving from Moorestown, N. J. He was appointed to the Trenton School Board by Mayor Donal Connelly in 1952.

Wimberly's election, unanimous by the board, was in marked contrast with a 10-year fight by Negro leaders to be represented on the board. Years before full integration became common-place in Jersey schools, Trenton was one of the sore-spots of separate schools in the Garden State. Negro teachers are now integrated into every school faculty in the city, including the huge Trenton Central High School, and the pupil integration is likewise.

A board member, J. Joseph Gribbins, stated, "Wimberly is not only a credit to his race, but to all the people of Trenton." Retiring President Casey said one of Wimberly's most arduous duties will be signing hundreds of diplomas at the end of the school term. Wimberly's vacated vice presidency was filled by Eugene T. Urbaniak, a deputy State attorney general.

Attorney Wimberly as a barrister has participated in numerous outstanding cases in Jersey, namely the sensational Duck Island murder case of 1944 as co-counsel with Counselor Robert Queen, and was paired with the same associate in the first internationally known "Trenton Six" murder trial.

Married to the former Edythe Walden of Moorestown, they have two children, Walden and Natalie, of New York and East Orange, N. J., respectively.

ANOTHER PRECEDENT — Charles Baskerville is sworn in by Mrs. Roma E. Ives, town clerk, as superintendent of streets and sewers of the Town of Montclair, N.J., as James D. Grodd, general superintendent, Department of Public Works, looks on. He has been acting superintendent since Sept. 13, 1957, and began his career in the muncipal government 33 years ago as a truck driver in the Department of Public Works. He's the first colored person to hold such a position in modern times. (Photo by DuValier)

NEW JERSEY

N.J. Parole Board Chairman

New appointee will get $12,000 yearly

By SAMUEL A. HAYNES

TRENTON — Governor Robert B. Meyner set a double precedent on Wednesday, July 23, that set political circles buzzing.

He named Deputy Attorney General Harold J. Ashby chairman of the three - man New Jersey Parole Board.

It is the first time that the Board has been integrated, and while the governor's intention to do so was a well-kept secret until this reporter bared the impending appointment in the AFRO for July 5, no one knew that the governor would name Ashby as the new Parole Board chairman.

AS CHAIRMAN, Ashby, a 36-year legal expert, will succeed Homer C. Zink, 75, a Republican, former assemblyman and state senator, and chairman of the Board since 1949.

Ashby's appointment to the $12,000 a year post must be confirmed by the Senate.

This is the highest position to which a colored person has been named in the government of New Jersey.

And it is the only position of its kind held by a member of the race throughout the nation.

THIS IS Governor Meyner's third precedent - setting appointment since he became the state's first Democratic chief executive in 10 years on Nov. 3, 1953.

The other two were:

The appointment of Dr. Marie Carpenter of Jersey City to the Board of Control of the Department of Institutions and Agencies, a non - salaried post; and

The appointment of former Deputy Attorney General Roger W. Yancey as an Essex County District Court Judge at $16,000 per year, the first time a colored lawyer had been named to the state judiciary.

ASHBY, who was highly recommended by Judge Yancey and Frank Tucker, two of the governor's most trusted advisors on minority problems, was given the coveted post over James E. Abrams, assistant corporation counsel for Newark who had the recommendations of Mayor Leo P. Carlin and State Senator Donal Fox.

Ashby is legal advisor for the Mary Bethune Democratic Club of Essex County which he helped to organize last April. Frank Tucker is the president.

The new Parole Board chairman has a distinguished family and legal background.

A native of Allentown, N.J., where his father still lives, he has been a Newark resident since 1937.

HIS grandfather, George Ashby, who died in 1946 at the age of 102, was a Civil War veteran who enlisted in the Union Army in New Jersey.

Ashby holds the B.S. degree from Rutgers University, and has pursued further studies at NYU School of Business, Atlanta University and Trenton Teachers College.

He was an agent for the Internal Revenue Service from 1948 to 1954.

He served a year as a legal assistant in the Attorney General's Office.

ASHBY was also law secretary to Superior Court Judges C. Thomas Schettino and Milton B. Conford.

He was appointed Deputy Attorney General in 1957.

He lives with his wife, Mrs. Isabel Ashby, and son, Harold, at 609 Belmont Ave., Newark.

NEW PAROLE CHAIRMAN — Political history was made in New Jersey last week when Governor Robert B. Meyner set another precedent by appointing former Deputy Attorney General Harold J. Ashby to the State Parole Board and naming him as its chairman simultaneously. The 36-year-old legal expert and former Internal Revenue Service agent is shown being congratulated by his wife, Mrs. Isabel Ashby, and son, Harold Jr., at their home 609 Belmont Ave., Newark. The three-man Parole Board heretofore has been lilywhite. The chairman gets $12,000 and other members $10,000 annually. As far as is known, Ashby is the only colored chairman of a State Parole Board in the country. This is the highest position ever held by a colored person in the government of New Jersey.

Camden gets 2nd officer of probation

LAWNSIDE, N.J. — James O. Mayfield, 33-year-old veteran of World War II, and the Korean Conflict, has been appointed a probation officer for Camden County.

The announcement was made a week ago, effective Aug. 1, at a minimum salary of $4,000 annually.

Mr. Mayfield, who has lived in Lawnside about three years, was among a number passing a state Civil Service test for the County Court assignment in the early spring. He nosed out the other candidates for top place due to his veteran's status.

HOUSING HEAD — Charles Hall, recently was appointed chairman of the Carteret, N.J., Housing Authority, marking the first time a colored person has been named to such a post in the state.

Jersey Public Relations Post To S. A. Haynes

TRENTON, N. J. — The appointment of Samuel A. Haynes of Neward, a veteran newspaperman and civic leader, as public relations assistant for the New Jersey Department of Labor and Industry, was announced Friday by Commissioner Carl Holderman.

The appointment was approved by Governor Robert B. Meyner and sets another precedent for his Democratic administration's policy of appointing qualified Negroes to responsible positions in the state government.

MR. HAYNES resigned from the editorial staff of the Afro-American newspapers of Baltimore, Md., last August, after 13-one half years of service.

He spent 6 years as a copy editor in the Afro's home office, and seven and one-half years as editor-manager of the New Jersey Afro.

BEFORE GOING to Baltimore he was a member of the staff of the Norfolk, Va., Journal and Guide for seven and one-half years.

He became a Guide reporter on Jan. 1, 1937, and in quick succession became a feature writer and columnist, and bureau manager of the Guide's Peninsula Bureau in Newport News.

U.S. Court Upholds Indicting Of Powell For Tax Evasion

Powell had sought to have it thrown out on the ground that the grand jury had been steamrollered by two outsiders, Thomas A. Bolan and William F. Buckley Jr.

Bolan, a former assistant U.S. attorney, presented much of the original evidence to the grand jury but resigned from office during a 14-month period in which the jury did nothing on the case.

Buckley is editor of the National Review Magazine. The Negro congressman asserted that Bolan supplied "inflammatory" information on which the magazine based articles calling attention to inactivity in the case.

Copies of the articles were mailed to grand jurors, it was said, and subsequently the jury resumed the deliberations which led to the indictment.

Powell was charged with preparing a false 1951 income tax return for his wife, pianist Hazel Scott, and with evading approximately $3,000 in a joint return for 1952. No charge was brought against Miss Scott.

Bolan, who was called before the grand jury in the latter days of the case and once was reported favored by the jury for hiring as a special prosecutor, said he thought a political deal had been made for dropping any Powell prosecution.

This, Bolan claimed, apparently was in exchange for Powell's support of President Eisenhower's re-election in the 1956 campaign. The grand jury had begun work earlier that year but recessed before the election.

The congressman, who supported Eisenhower, holds considerable political power in the Harlem section of Manhattan.

Mangum, De Sapio Protege, Gets $15,000 Post as Mayor Assents

By Robert A. Poteete

Former Deputy Police Commissioner Robert J. Mangum, center of a storm that shook the Police Department last winter, was appointed Deputy Hospital Commissioner yesterday.

Mr. Mangum was reprimanded on Feb. 14 for intervening in an arrest—an impulsive and improper act—but kept his job.

On July 7, Mr. Mangum resigned from the department to take a leading role in the campaign of Councilman Earl Brown—personal candidate of Tammany leader Carmine G. De Sapio—who tried unsuccessfully to unseat Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Harlem Democrat.

Hospital Commissioner Morris A. Jacobs announced yesterday that he would swear in Mr. Mangum at 11 a. m. Monday as deputy commissioner at $15,000 a year—$2,500 a year less than Mr. Mangum's predecessor was paid.

Mr. Mangum's salary as deputy police commissioner was $12,300.

Dr. Jacobs was asked:

"There have been persistent and presumably reliable reports that when Mr. Mangum left the Police Department, Mr. De Sapio promised him . . . this job. In view of this, can you tell if you were directed or guided in making this appointment?"

Dr. Jacobs replied:

"No, I was not directed or guided. . . . Some one did speak to me. I'd rather not say who."

Commissioner Jacobs, in response to questions, said he had "cleared" the appointment with Mayor Wagner this week.

This was considered significant. Mayor Wagner fought and was defeated by Mr. De Sapio in the selection of a Democratic candidate for Senator at the party's Buffalo convention Aug. 26.

The fact that the Mayor, after the convention, approved a De Sapio appointment dating from before the convention indicated that there would be no out-and-out patronage warfare at City Hall, at least for the present.

Dr. Jacobs praised Mr. Mangum warmly, saying:

"I was most favorably impressed with his qualifications, his experience, his manners, and his work in the field of community relations . . . most favorably impressed."

Mr. Mangum, who is a lawyer and holds a master's degree in public administration, will be in charge of personnel (35,000 employees in the department); institutional inspection for forty-four proprietary hospitals and 125 nursing homes licensed by the department; labor relations; legal matters and departmental hearings.

Dr. Jacobs said that for a number of years the position has been held by lawyers. The City Charter provides for two deputy commissioners.

Why Pay Was Cut

Dr. Jacobs said he cut the pay of the Mangum commissionership to give first rank to the other deputy commissioner, Dr. Henry I. Fineberg, a veteran of thirty years' service in the department, who is in charge of medical matters. Dr. Fineberg's pay is $17,500 a year.

Mr. Mangum, who is thirty-seven, joined the police force in 1942 and became a deputy commissioner in 1954 in Mayor Wagner's first administration when Francis W. H. Adams was Police Commissioner.

1957 Incident Recalled

On Sept. 25, 1957, Mr. Mangum, who is a Negro, voided the arrest of a woman, also a Negro, on a traffic charge, in a visit to a police station. He failed to report the action to Police Commissioner Stephen P. Kennedy. A much-headlined investigation was started, but it was impeded by severe injuries that Mr. Mangum suffered in an automobile accident on Oct. 12.

On Feb. 14, Commissioner Kennedy — noted as a firm disciplinarian—announced that Mr. Mangum had been reprimanded, but cited Mr. Mangum's "outstanding record." Mr. Mangum then was directing the department's Youth Division.

On July 1, Mr. Mangum announced he was leaving the department to work in Councilman Earl Brown's campaign against Rep. Powell for the Democratic nomination for Congress. Mr. Brown was defeated decisively on Aug. 12.

It was reliably reported that Mr. De Sapio had assured Mr. Mangum of a good position after the election. Some speculation developed that the appointment might not go through after Mr. De Sapio and other Democratic leaders forced the nomination of New York County District Attorney Frank S. Hogan for the United States Senate over the combined opposition of Mayor Wagner and Gov. Harriman.

Patronage Strife Possible

Despite the fact that Mayor Wagner cleared the Mangum appointment this week—after the convention—some observers believed that this was not necessarily indicative that peace would prevail in patronage matters.

Mr. Mangum married the former Gladys Scott. They have a son, Paul, nine, and live at 2235 Fifth Ave.

This Raw Political Deal Smells to High Heaven!

In 1956 Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY), Harlem's pride, was having tax trouble. He suddenly found it useful to make up with the Republicans, headed a cloying harmony meeting in which he announced his full support of President Eisenhower.

This last September Powell ran for nomination as both a Democrat and a Republican. He won both nominations. He beat his Democratic rival, who was backed by Gov. Harriman and Tammany leader Carmine de Sapio—by a 3 to 1 vote.

The New York Times has compiled some of the brighter sayings of the campaign. To De Sapio, Powell was "not a Democrat." Harlem, said De Sapio, has "a faker as a congressman." Harlan Jack, Democratic borough president, said that Powell was "preaching hate" in his racial pronouncements. Powell said that Jack had better avoid "walking down the streets of Harlem." He said that the "bosses of Tammany plan to use every bit of chicanery, trickery, bribery and illegality to try to steal this election." He said that De Sapio was "a liar" and a "Mississippi boss."

But the boys had a meeting. They came out happily and joyfully to announce that all is well. Powell is supporting Harriman and loves De Sapio and Jack. Harriman and Jack and De Sapio are right behind Powell all the way.

Here's certainly the most cynical and nauseating example of political expediency in a long time. Powell is, as Jack said, a preacher of hate. He lives on it. And it is degrading for any group of politicians to clasp him to their bosoms and call him an honor to their ticket and ask voters to support him.

HARLEM POLITICS:

Powell, Hedgeman may support GOP

IN A NUTSHELL

- Woman aide to mayor reportedly forced out of job after 30 years in politics.
- Mrs. Hedgeman leaves post to join New York newspaper staff. No replacement named yet.
- Hear she will not withdraw from politics despite resignation.

BY LOUIS E. LOMAX

Mrs. Hedgeman handed in her resignation from the $12,500 a-year post after a five-hour meeting with the Mayor on Thursday.

The resignation came as reports swept New York that the veteran of 30 years in Democratic politics was being forced to quit. Reached at her office, she denied the report and refused to confirm or deny that she was leaving the Mayor's office.

TWO HOURS after this refusal, the Mayor's public relations office announced her resignation. The official announcement said Mrs. Hedgeman was leaving the post to become public relations director of the Fuller Cosmetic Enterprises and associate editor of the New York Age, a Harlem weekly.

S. H. Fuller, a Chicago cosmetic dealer, operates the Fuller Enterprises and purchased the New York Age several months ago.

The Hedgeman announcement caught Harlem flatfooted. There is no mention of her replacement and few believe that Mrs. Hedgman has withdrawn from politics.

FULLER IS an old line Taft Republican. For 30 odd years he has been the backbone of the Republican Party on Chicago's South Side.

When he purchased the New York Age, speculation was that this meant he was entering New York politics in the interest of the Republicans.

This feeling was enhanced when Fuller brought his Chicago aid, Golden B. Darby, to New York and named him associate editor of the paper.

Darby has been an active Republican politician whereas Fuller has been a powerful financial force in the background of GOP doings in Illinois.

Against this backdrop, it must be recalled that Mrs. Hedgeman was front runner for the Tammany bid to run against Rep. Adam Powell. In the final days of the campaign, Mrs. Hedgeman was ignored and was not even invited to the meeting that named Earl Brown as Powell's opponent.

IN 1956 Mrs. Hedgeman headed the New York Partisans for Adlai Stevenson despite the fact that New York Gov. Averell Harriman was an aspirant for the Presidential nomination.

Stevenson won the Democratic nomination and Harriman-Hedgeman relations have been strained ever since.

Further, Mrs. Hedgeman has never been a Tammany regular. She did not rise through the Harlem Democratic ranks to the City Hall Post. Rather she descended into the slot after moving out of the National politics picture.

These factors add up to one thing. Mrs. Hedgeman is going to head up the Harlem Campaign for Nelson Rockefeller in his bid to unseat fellow-millionaire Averell Harriman.

This also presages the fact that Mrs. Hedgeman will join forces with Adam Clayton Powell, who returns to New York Sunday.

Powell and Hedgeman will not bolt the party and become Republicans. Instead, they will head an independent for Rockefeller move and then link arms with Powell's campaign manager, J. Raymond (The Fox) Jones, to sweep every Tammany Harlem District leader out of office next afll.

The only leader who will survive this purge will be Lloyd Dickens of the 11th Assembly District, who balked at Desapio and supported Powell.

BY RESIGNING now, Mrs. Hedgeman escapes the running feud between king-maker Carmine Desapio and Mayor Wagner, who received the set back of his political life when Desapio upsurped the local Democratic convention and ruled with an iron hand that forced Wagner to the sidelines while District Attorney Frank Hogan was given the coveted senatorial nomination.

As predicated several weeks ago, it has been a long hot summer in New York and every indication is the fall will be hotter.

Harriman was elected last time by a smaller plurality than he received in Harlem. Should the 50,000 voters who made Adam Powell a victor over Earl Brown in the recent Democratic Primary follow Powell and switch to Rockefeller, the GOP is almost sure to capture the State House.

There is every indication that a new day is coming in New York politics and Harlemites are scheduled to play a leading, if not, dominant role.

Powell Crows Over Victory In Primary

Brown Dignified In Defeat; Pledges Continued Fight

By WOODY KLEIN,
World-Telegram Staff Writer.

They flocked early to his church at 132 W. 138th St., and, when their leader appeared midway through the evening, they were already preparing for the certain victory to come—a lopsided 14,837 to 4935 vote, as it turned out.

The tall, handsome Congressman didn't let them down. Smiling, handshaking, bellowing orders to his aids, he strode into the midst of his crowd and whooped it up as the returns began to come in.

Finally, shortly after midnight, he raised his arms in a great "V" motion and shouted: "OK, it's all over. Let's go up to 145th St. and have a real party."

Street Procession.

Through the streets to the Carver Ballroom at 1723 Amsterdam Ave., they followed him, whistling and singing "Powell All the Way," and "Let's Go, Adam!"

Hundreds of them had filled the two large rooms Mr. Powell had designated for campaign purposes in the church. They were laughing, slapping each other with pride, and following every word of their easy-moving, relaxed candidate.

He mingled with all of them, wearing a short-sleeved checked shirt, black tie, sports pants, and a pair of shiny black loafers. He was their man and he knew it.

Stemming the drama for a few moments of sober comment, he allowed himself to be swept away into back room for a press conference to announce his claim of victory. He held a 2-1 advantage when he called in the press.

As he stepped out of the tumult for a few moments, he lowered his voice and quietly told reporters: "This is a significant victory for the people. Not for me. I'm just a figurehead."

Angry Pitch.

Carefully, with chosen words of modesty, he continued: "I am very humble in the midst of this victory. This is not the end. This is the beginning. We plan to capture the Democratic party from its bosses and Uncle Toms."

Slowly he worked himself up to an angry pitch. "I am going to stimulate the people to further action. Carmine de Sapio is finished. This is the end of Hulan Jack, a stooge and not the real representative of the people."

Dignity in Defeat.

Nearby, at the Hotel Theresa, 125th St. and Seventh Ave., another drama was enacted in Harlem early today, a story of pessimism and hopelessness, and yet a story of dignity. For it was the quiet second-floor hotel room of this hotel that City Councilman Earl Brown conceded his defeat.

In contrast to the Powell festivities, his headquarters was like the waiting room of a doctor's office. A few dozen loyal party workers stood by as the scene grew grimmer.

Finally, at 12:50 a.m., Mr. Brown, looking drawn though somewhat relieved, stepped into a side room and read off a prepared statement to reporters.

He made the usual thank you remarks to his "loyal Democratic party captains," and then, raising his voice to emphasize his point, added: "Unfortunately, because of many complex situations which developed prior to my designation, many emotional issues entered into the campaign which I feel we did not overcome.

"As a result, the campaign was waged on an emotional basis rather than on the issues and sound reasoning. It is a personal victory for my opponent, but not a defeat for the Democratic party."

They're Out to Get Him

Sharpening Axe For Adam Powell

NEW YORK—If there are such things as ghosts, then the spectre of the late Senator Joseph McCarthy must be rubbing its hands in glee over the rhubarb involving Rep. Adam Clayton Powell and his income tax returns.

• The case reached the crystalization stage in Washington last week when the House of Representatives, by a voice vote, agreed to make available to a Federal grand jury official records involving Representative Powell and his taxes.

However, there is more than meets the eye in this case and there is the distinct possibility that strong political forces, composed of strange components, are out to push the accusations against the Rev. Mr. Powell.

MR. POWELL has begun to feel the effects of the relentless pressure and has already told his congregation at Harlem's Abyssinian Baptist Church that "no minister of God has ever been persecuted as much as I," with the exception of the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, famous 19th century Brooklyn religious figure.

• The late Mr. McCarthy's interest in the case would stem from the fact that Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas A. Bolan is in charge of the Powell grand jury. Mr. Bolan, it seems, is a confidant of Roy Cohn, who was the late Senator McCarthy's right hand man during the burlesque stage of anti-Communist hysteria in Washington a couple of years ago.

ANOTHER MOOT point at issue is the question of religious denominattion. Mr. Powell is a Baptist and, therefore, a Protestant and many of his supporters are charging that the campaign against Mr. Powell is Catholic-inspired.

• The reasons for the point of view are couched in the fact that, first, Senator McCarthy was a Catholic and received quite a bit of support from the church during his heyday. Secondly, Tammany Hall is dominated by Catholics and the president of Manhattan Borough, Hulan Jack, is a Catholic and very much anti-Adam Clayton Powell.

Big Names Involved In Jury Probe

Solon Indicted On 3 Charges; Plans To Fight Back

NEW YORK—(INS)—The arraignment of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., (D-N. Y.) on tax evasion charges appeared to be in for delay, as the Congressman scheduled three speaking dates for this week.

The "too hot to handle case," which has kicked up a furore in national politics and has already drawn in some "big names," seemed certain this week to be heading for some sort of congressional probe. The fact that Rep. Powell deserted the Democrats in 1956 and supported President Eisenhower keeps cropping up ominously as the political pot boils. Democrats, headed by New York's powerful Tammany Hall, have been looking for ways to "dump" Powell, according to persistent reports.

It charged him with falsifying a joint tax return statement on the finances of his wife, pianist Hazel Scott, in 1952, and aiding in the preparation of a fraudulent return for her 1951 taxes.

A guilty verdict on all three counts would carry up to $30,000 in fines and 15 years imprisonment.

FEDERAL authorities previously indicated Powell would be "contacted" for arraignment this week. However, a Powell attorney, Harrison Jackson, would only speculate the arraignment "might" take place.

Hints that Powell might tell his side of the tax evasion story — which he had refused to discuss—from the pulpit of the church where he is minister, were proved false Sunday.

POWELL FAILED to show up for the 10 a. m. and noon sermons he was to preach. However, the congregation of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, largest in Harlem, showed its loyalty to him as over 6,000 persons jammed into the building for services.

Members of the church indicated "100 per cent support of our minister in his fight to evade persecution."

A FORMER assistant U. S. Attorney charged Friday that Attorney General William Rogers ordered the income tax investigation of Rep. Powell dropped in 1957 because it was "too hot to handle."

An angered N. Y. federal grand jury—spurred on by its foreman, a nationally prominent insurance executive—indicted Powell after former assistant U. S. Attorney Thomas A. Bolan testified before it on his part and the role played by high Justice Department officials, who allegedly stalled the case for 14 months.

BOLAN, 33, one-time head of the Subversive Division of the U. S. Attorney's office, urged a "no holds barred congressional investigation into why the Powell case was stopped and why nothing was done for 14 months."

Bolan, who was in charge of the Powell case, said he was informed by his superiors in the U. S. Attorney's office in New York on March 18, 1957 that Washington has decided to drop the case.

MEANWHILE, in Washington the chairman of the House Judiciary Committee said

diciary Committee said charges that Attorney General Rogers ordered a federal jury tax probe of Rep. Powell stopped should be fully investigated.

"I think Mr. Rogers ought to make some comment. It is incumbent upon him. Here we have the prosecution held up, undoubtedly because Mr. Powell supported the Republican ticket. If that is not the case, we certainly want to know it, I certainly want to know what Mr. Rogers has to say.

THE WHITE House refused to comment on the charge.

Sen. George Smathers (D) Fla., said that in view of the fact "so many important names are involved, I would think some congressional committee should take a preliminary look at least to see if any undue influence was used."

Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney (D) Okla., said he was sure the proper committee in either House or Senate would give the charge careful attention.

Powell will beat charge—Lomax

By LOUIS E. LOMAX

NEW YORK — Congressman Adam Clayton Powell will never go to trial. Moreover, he will be returned to Congress by the greatest plurality in his sixteen year history as a national figure.

This was the consensus in New York, Friday, following the screaming headlines announcing that the Harlem minister - politician had been indicted on three counts of income tax evasion by a Federal grand jury.

Behind these far reaching predictions lies a maze of legal and political maneuvering. The following analysis of the Powell indictment shows how legal and political experts arrived at the conclusion that Powell will never face trial and will be re-elected to Congress.

The first two counts of the indictment accuse Powell of "procuring and causing to be filed a fradulent income tax return for his wife, Hazel Powell Scott for the year 1951."

Specifically the counts say that Powell caused a return to be filed by Mrs. Powell in which she alleges that her net income for 1951 was $3,815.31 in which she owed a tax of $590.63 when in fact he knew her income was $9,181.08 which there was a tax owing of $[illegible].

The AFRO put this matter directly to the Director of Internal Revenue for New York. He said:

"I cannot comment on Mr. Powell's case. However the law says that no matter who prepares or helps prepare a Federal Income Tax Return the taxpayer signing it is responsible for its accuracy and for being able to prove any claims made in it."

This statement was endorsed by the three tax commissioners for the New York area, Kenneth W. Moe. Thomas Scanlon and Raymond Meiseils.

The significance of this is, of course, that even though Mr. Powell may have caused to be prepared a fraudulent tax return for his wife, Mrs. Powell had to sign the return and is certainly responsible for its contents. The failure of the grand jury to indict Mrs. Powell also led legal and political figures to conclude that the indictment was returned as a face saving device and that it has no real merit.

The entire Eisenhower administration faced national criticism after former Assistant District Attorney Thomas Bolan declared that after prosecuting Powell's aids he had sufficient evidence to gain an indictment against Powell but that the Justice Department in Washington had called him off the case.

Following Bolan's disclosure the jury reconvened after sixty six weeks of inactivity and, on its own motion, began to reconsider evidence against Powell.

The legal and political ex-

...ers say that the Thursday indictment removes the onus from the Eisenhower Administration yet, because of its vagueness, the indictment is doomed to be thrown out of court once a judge gives it a serious review.

The same stricture applies to the third count of the indictment which accuses Powell of filing a fradulent return for both himself and his wife for 1952.

The count says specifically that Powell alleged that the couple's net income was $5,252.39 and that no tax was due. But as a matter of fact the couple's income was $8,952.39 upon which there was owing a tax of $1,663.48.

The law states that "when a joint return is filed the couple assumes full responsibility (legally) for the tax; that if one of the couple fails to pay the tax the other party must pay it."

Again the failure of the jury to name Mrs. Powell is seen as the key factor. This failure again indcates that the indictment is without major merit and will be dismissed.

Should the indictment against Powell be thrown out of court, the Harlem Congressman would be politically invincible. Even the Harlem Republicans are now hesitant to name a candidate to oppose Powell until the indictment is cleared. Potential candidates are afraid of the political ruin that would certainly come in the wake of a futile battle with Powell.

Failure to convict Powell will give strength to the charge that he is the victim of racists, a charge that has been rampant following the AFRO disclosure that the Dixiecrats in Washington and a segregationalist magazine in New York sparked the anti-Powell move.

U. S. Jury Indicts Adam C. Powell

The Congressman was indicted on three counts. The first two charge him with filing a fraudulent return on be half of his wife, Hazel Scott Powell, for the year 1951.

The third charges him with income tax evasion for the year 1952.

If convicted on the indictment charges the New York solon faces a possible five-year prison term and a $10,000 fine.

Meanwhile plot to dump Congressman Powell in the coming election was bared Thursday when it was revealed that seven Harlem Democratic leaders and a group of leading citizens agreed that he must go.

Powell, who has represented Harlem's 16th Congressional District for almost two decades, was put on the political skids by six of the seven political leaders in his district.

They deny that his present income tax difficulties are the cause. They claim they are seeking a representative who is "a true organization man."

Sentiment among the district leaders seems to be leaning toward Anne Arnold Hedgeman, an assistant to Mayor Robert Wagner, as Powell's successor. She has been approached by several district leaders and liberal party representatives.

Carmen DeSapio, Tammany leader, while not reportedly a member of the cliche that got together and ordered the dumping of Powell, is supppose to be well aware of the action and has given his silent approval.

William F. Ryan of the Seventh Assembly District, is quoted as saying' "I have an open mind on the issue. There has been no formal meeting but we have informally discussed the matter."

Robert Butler, a close political associate of Elijah Crump, leaders of the 12th Assemby District, said "Powell is politically unsuitable to the organization but the people like him. We will have to wait and see what happens."

Others mention as possible successors to Powell are: "Elijah Crump who political insiders say looks good to the organization, but is not too-widely known; (2) State Sen. James L. Watson who is also in good favor with the organization, but like Crump has very little "man on the street appeal." He is the son of the late Judge Watson.

(3) Assembly woman Bessie Buchanan, who has an excellent assembly record and commands considerable liberal support.

However, Anne Hedgeman is reported to have the greatest support among those who formerly supported Powell and are now ready to dump him. Two Republican leaders, Harold Burton of the 12th Assembly District and Williamis Cornelius of the 12th Assembly District, north, are reportedly considering throwing their support to Powell.

NEED GOP

However, they need the support of other GOP leaders to be of any real assistance to Powell.

In the meantime, Adam Powell who is said to be aware of the effort to undercut his political support, told a New York newspaper that "the Tammany leaders in Harlem are a bunch of political sissies. I don't care who they nominate, I'll be ready for them when they hit the streets of Harlem. I am definitely in the race to the finish.

Harlem Gets Behind 'Ousted' Powell in 'New' Campaign

New York City., — (CNS) — Even as Adam Powell walked free from the Federal Courthouse, after pleading innocent to tax evasion charges, plans were being made here to oust the debonaire Congressman from renomination — and heavy support given Mrs. Bessie Buchanan, Assemblywoman, Mrs. Buchanan received 4 votes in the meeting among 13 Democratic district leaders—with Thurgood Marshall, brilliant attorney for the NAACP, receiving three and Councilman Earl Brown and Senator James Watson receiving one each.

POWELL

Definitely Out

Tammany Leader Carmine DeSapio stated that Powell will definitely NOT run for re-election on the Democratic ticket "because he is not a Democrat." On hearing their decision, Powell stated "Thank God I got rid of Tammany Hall!" Then he added "I'm going to fight them as a Democrat. I'm going to run candidates in every area where there is a concentration of Negroes and Puerto Ricans in all five boroughs."

Staunch Followers

The people of Harlem are stanuchly behind Powell and his most trusted followers have joined forces to bring in more sympathizers. They intend to win for Powell the next election by a landslide. They also intend to stick with him "through thick and thin" in his effort to clear his name in the tax evasion charge.

Small Victory

Jubilant over the first small victory—Powel's freedom (his lawyer was allowed 30 days for filing motions—he was also granted permission to travel anywhere in the U.S., or its territories on Congressional business.

New Campaign

Powell himself, looking worn but ready for the fight, is building a whole new and exciting campaign for re-election. With his people behind him, he intends ot talk his way into another victory. He began at the Brooklyn Zion Baptist church by telling the crowd that had gathered there to greet him on his return from Washington, that he had every confidence.

He quoted a statement made by Roy Wilkins of the NAACP which boosted his cause and rallied his fllowers. It was "What a mess our government has got into with Adam Powell." The people accepted this statement as a sort of slogan to pass around. They buzzed with delight as the handsome Congressman told it. "And", Powell added, with his famous gestures, "for the tremendous sum of $1,600!"

It is safe to say that Powell has lost few friends and followers because of this upset in his political career. If any, he has gained many. For those who believe in him do so as with a strong faith which is not easily broken.

N.A.A.C.P. ATTACKS POWELL AS RACIST

Jack Joins Denunciation—Says Harlem Chief's View 'Can Lead to Disaster'

By RICHARD AMPER

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People denounced Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. yesterday for "extreme racialism."

The Harlem legislator and Baptist minister also was accused by Hulan E. Jack, Manhattan's Borough President, of preaching racial and religious hatred. Mr. Jack said it "can only lead to disaster."

The association's criticism was the more severe. As the chief national organization championing Negro civil rights, it has long professed political nonpartisanship. Mr. Powell has been associated with it for years, as his Congressional career has been built mainly on the civil rights cause.

Powell Attack Disavowed

The association, in a statement issued by Roy Wilkins, its executive secretary, accused Mr. Powell of having tried to "drag our name" into his personal political feud with Tammany Hall. It said it dissociated itself "completely" from the bitter attacks Mr. Powell made over the week-end.

Mr. Powell, who is under indictment on a charge of income tax evasion, has been disowned by the New York County Democratic organization. He attributes his troubles to racial bias and has vowed an all-out fight against Tammany to win re-election in November.

At a Harlem rally sponsored Saturday by the New York branch of the N. A. A. C. P. to celebrate the fourth anniversary of the Supreme Court's decision outlawing school segregation Mr. Powell converted the meeting into a personal political forum in defiance of the association wishes.

He said this was a "white man's country" and he called his Negro political opponents "Uncle Tom" tools of white political bosses. He denounced Carmine W. De Sapio, Tammany leader, as a "Mississippi boss" and accused him of trying to change "Harlem into Mossissippi."

Retaliation Was Hinted

On Eunday, the Abyssinian Baptist Church of which he is pastor, Mr. Powell warned Mr. Jack and Mr. De Sapio to avoid "walking up and down the streets of Harlem. He said that "we would not subject them to the degradation of attacks similar to those Vice President Richard M. Nixon suffered on his recent Latin American trip, "but we will make it very uncomfortable."

In his rebuke, Mr. Wilkins said that Mr. Powell and his followers as well as the N. A. A. C. P. would appeal for police help if their own right ao walk on New York streets were threatened.

The association emphasized that it was nonpartisan, but it defended Mr. Powell's support of General Eisenhower in the 1956 election to the extent of saying that there were other Democrats who bolted their party's ticket without suffering reprisals.

Mr. Jack, Mr. Powell's chief political opponent, assumed leadership of the Tammany attack against the Representative yesterday.

"I would say he is preaching hate, and all that spews out of his mouth can lead to very serious trouble if people follow him," Mr. Jack declared.

He said he hoped Mr. Powell was not trying to play on peoples' "emotions and passions and get them into an ugly mood where anything can happen."

No Fear of Being Chased

He also said that he lived at 45 West 110th Street and that Mr. Powell "will not chase me out of Harlem."

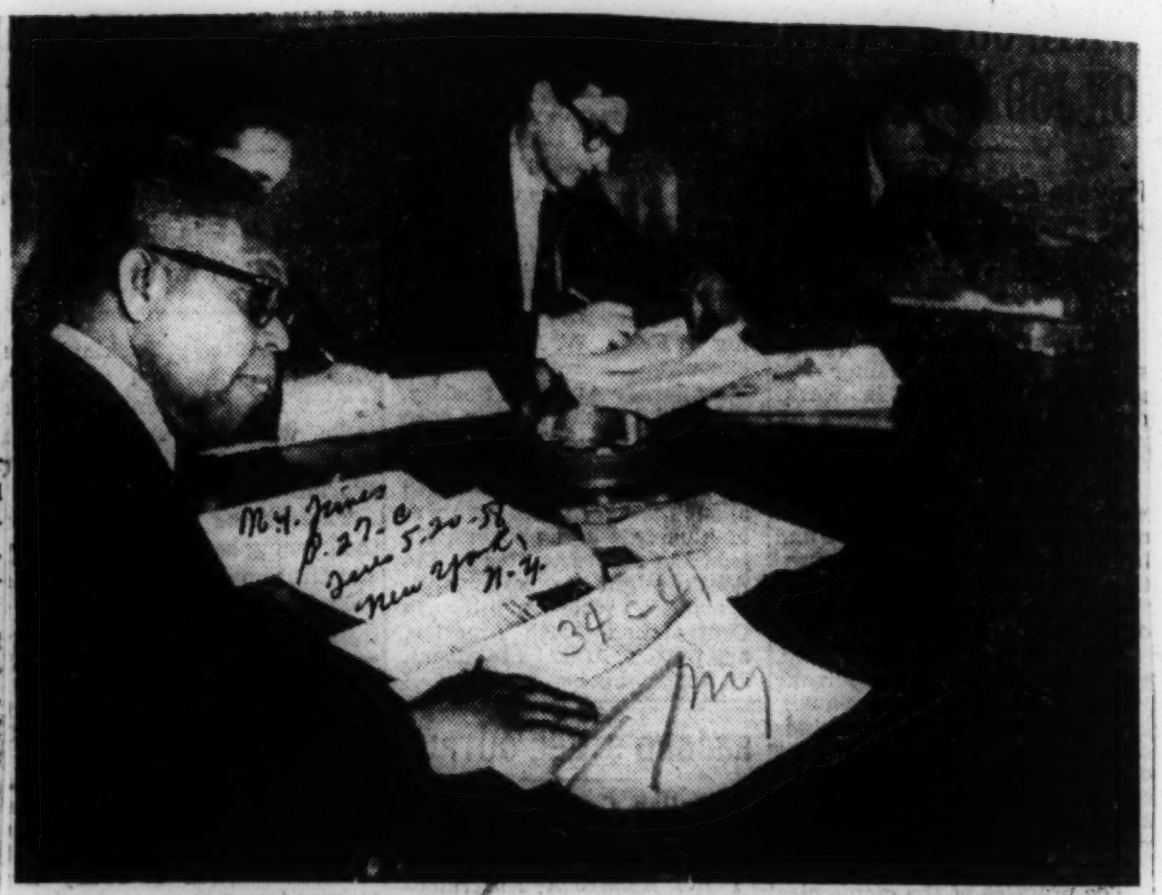
"Mr. Powell does not live there," the Borough President dcelared. "He lives in Westchester somewhere."

Mr. Jack charged that Mr. Powell has organized "a hissing and booing squad" that prevented the Borough official from speaking at the N. A. A. C. P. rally until Mr. Powell appealed for tolerance.

The Borough President said he had received anonymous warning letters and that he would hold Mr. Powell responsible for the safety of his family. He also charged without elaborating that Mr. Powell had raised a religious issue in Harlem. Mr. Jack is a Roman Catholic. Mr. Powell has declared in a speech that Harlem is "a Protestant community."

He said in reply to Mr. Jack's attack:

"I didn't dump him; the community did. I'm not mad at him, the community is; and I can't control the community."



The New York Times

To Mr. Jack's statement that the threats against him and Mr. De Sapio were "hooliganism," Mr. Powell said: "I deplore any form of hooliganism."

The Borough President upbraided Mr. Powell on the ground that he sought to stir resentment between Negroes of American origin and those, like Mr. Jack, who came from the West Indies.

"I never thought I would live to see the day when the so-called champion of civil rights would be violating the spirit of decency as we know it by raising the West Indian issue," Mr. Jack said. "That Powell was born in America and I in the West Indies was not dictated by either of us.'

Mr. Powell denied raising any issue over origins, saying that his wife, Hazel Scott, the pianist, came from the West Indies.

Primary Fight Begun

The Repressentative left yesterday afternoon for Washington and said that barring interefrence of committee work he would return today. His backers, meanwhile, conducted the first class last night at his church to teach precinct workers how to obtain valid signatures to petitions designating Mr. Powell to run in the Democratic primary.

Mr. Powell said he also planned a write-in campaign to win the Republican and Liberal party nominations.

Tammany leaders are scheduled to meet today to try to agree on a designee for the congressional nomination in Mr Powell's Sixteenth district.

ASSOCIATION STATEMENT

The text of the N. A. A. C. P statement against Mr Powel follows:

At a May 17 rally, called by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to celebrate the fourth anniversary of the United tSates Supreme Court school desegregation decision Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. included in his address a strong partisan political appeal and engaged in a highly personal attack on those whom he regards as his political enemies. On May 18, in the contect of the May 17 meeting, he issued a warning to certain political figures against "Walking the streets of Harlem."

The N. A. A. C. P. wishes to dissociate itself completely from the threats made by Mr. Powell or the Powell organization against any person's right to go freely about the City of New York or about the nation.

The most important right in America is the right of a group or of a single individual to difer with others. If anyone threatened Mr. Powell's right to walk the streets of Yorkville or of Greenwich Village unmolested, he and his followers—and we—would promptly request police protection, if not that of the F. B. I.

Leaves Tax Case to Courts

It may very well be, as Mr. Powell asserts, that his income tax troubles stem from his consistently outspoken and vigorous championship of civil rights for his people. Whatever the motivation for this indictment, the question of his involvement will be determined by the courts.

As for his support of Mr. Eisenhower in 1956, we know of other Democrats elsewhere in the nation who did not support the Democratic ticket in that election and who have not been dropped by the party.

The N. A. A. C. P. is not in partisan politics. The trouble between Mr. Powell and the New York County Democratic organization will have to be settled by contests between party members and party factions. That is not our business and we repudiate any effort by Mr. Powell or anyone else to drag our name into it.

In addition we deplore and dissociate ourselves from the banner of extreme racialism raised by Mr. Powell in his May 17 address. If Negro citizens are to win permanent victory in the long run, we must be consistent.

Powell Introduces 4 Civil Rights Bills

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat, of New York, Thursday introduced in the House four civil rights bills covering a variety of subjects ranging from violence against members of the Armed Forces to fair employment practices.

The introduction of these bills, of which he has long been a sponsor, is regarded as a part of his fight to win renomination for Congress in the Democratic primary in New York on Aug. 12, despite the opposition of Tammany Hall.

Under the guidance of Carmine G. De Sapio, New York County chairman, Democratic district leaders in Mr. Powell's Congressional district, by a vote of 11 to 1, rejected him as a candidate for re-election.

SEEKS RENOMINATION

Mr. Powell has announced his intention first to seek renomination in the Democratic primary which would give his Congressional majority. If he fails to win renomination he has announced he will run as an independent in the general election next November.

The Harlem Congressman is the second ranking Democrat on the House Education and Labor Committee. If Representative Graham A. Barden, of North Carolina, chairman of that committee, should retire, be defeated, or die, and Mr. Powell retains his seniority as a Democrat, he would succeed to the chairmanship of the Education and Labor Committee.

OMNIBUS MEASURE

One of the bills Mr. Powell introduced is an omnibus civil rights measure. One section of that bill would make the Civil Rights Commission a permanent agency. Under the Civil Rights Act of 1957, the Commission is doomed to die sixty days after it submits its final report to the President and the Congress. The final report is due to be submitted by Sept. 9, 1959.

Another provision in the bill would add a new section to the Civil Rights Act. This section would require the Attorney General to increase the personnel of the Federal Bureau of Investigation to the extent necessary for the effective investigation of civil rights cases.

It also provides that the Director of the FBI shall, with the approval of the Attorney General, include in the training of agents and other FBI personnel "appropriate training and instruction for the investigation of civil rights cases."

A Joint Committee on Civil Rights also would be created by the bill. This committee would be composed of seven Senators, appointed by the Vice President, and seven members of the House, appointed by the Speaker. The two major parties would be represented on this committee in proportion to their membership in the Senate and House.

CONTINUE STUDY

The Joint Committee would make a continuing study of matters relating to civil rights and advise with the Congressional committees which handle civil rights matters.

It would be authorized to hold hearings and would have subpoena powers to require the attendance of witnesses and the production of books and papers.

The bill also would amend existing Federal criminal civil rights laws and also the laws against peonage.

Any person, whether acting in a private, public or official capacity, who denies or attempts to deny any interstate passenger equal accommodations on a public carrier, or incites or participates in such denial or attempt, would be guilty of a misdemeanor under the omnibus bill and, upon conviction, would be subject to a fine of not more than $1,000 for each offense.

COMMON CARRIER

The bill also makes it unlawful for any common carrier to segregate interstate passengers on the basis of race, color, religion or national origin, or for any operator of any transportation facility to do so. Violators of this provision also would be subject to a fine of not more than $1,000.

By the terms of the bill there would be created an "Equality of Opportuntiy in Employment Commissions," composed of seven members, who would be appointed by the President. Their pay would be $15,000 a year each.

The proposed commission would be empowered to investigate complaints of racial and religious discrimination and, if it fails to eliminate such discrimination through conference, conciliation, and persuasion, to hold hearings and issue cease-and-desist orders.

FEDERAL COURTS

Such orders would be enforceable by the Federal courts. Any person aggrieved by a final order of the commission also could obtain a review of the order in the appropriate United tSates Court of Appeals.

An employers would have to have 5 0or more employees to be subject to the provisions of the fair employment practice section. Religious, charitable, fraternal, social, educational and sectarian organizations would be exempt from the provisions of the bill.

OMNIBUS BILL

The omnibus bill also contains what would be an anti-lynching act if it should become law. Under its terms, persons who participate in a lynching would be subject to a maximum penalty of 20 years in prison and a fine of $10,000.

The other three Powell bills would—

1. Prohibit the use of Federa funds for loans, grants or aid t provide housing in which there would be racial or religious discrimination against occupancy.
2. Prohibit racial discriminatio or segregation in interstate travel.
3. Protect uniformed members o the Armed Forces against bodily attack.

Dixie bloc fears seniority rights

By LOUIS LOMAX

NEW YORK — Why are they out to 'get' Congressman Adam Clayton Powell?

This question comes to mind as the "purge Powell" campaign gathers steam in New York and Washington.

The Federal grand jury probing Powell's tax returns has suddenly come to life after 66 weeks of inactivity. The revival of this investigation — just before the primary campaign — smells strong of Tammany Hall.

First, to rob him of high seniority as a member of the powerful House Education and Labor Committee.

By reason of seniority, the outspoken New York Congressman is next in line for chairmanship and could use this position to push his school bill amendment, which would deny Federal funds to districts still maintaining racially segregated public schools.

The second reason could be revenge.

Powell incurred the wrath of Tammany Hall when he came out for President Eisenhower in the 1956 presidential election.

Since then the New York political machine has been trying, so far without success, to find a candidate to run against him in the coming primary.

RECENTLY POWELL has publicly declared his independence of downtown political dictation, which did not endear him to the powers that be, but won him tremendous community support.

The entire colored community rallied to his side in his running fight with the machine. The Baptist and Methodist ministers of Harlem united in a mass protest against "rule from Tammany Hall."

The Federal grand jury now reopening its probe of Powell's tax returns, was originally convened in December, 1956.

In a three - month period it heard testimony from more than 100 persons, including Congressman Powell and his wife, Hazel Scott.

IN MID - February, 1957 the jury was recessed. In December, 1957, Thomas A. Bolan, a former U. S. Attorney who handled prosecution of the Powell case, charged in the National Review, a segregationist right-wing weekly journal, that he had been forced to drop the Powell case "on orders from Washington."

This article was brought to the attention of the dormant grand jury, which, in turn, wrote to the office of the United States Attorney inquiring as to the status of the Powell investigation and why it was not continuing.

In the panel's latest letter the Government was informed that if it did not convene the grand jury the jurors would meet on their own in the U.S. Court House in Foley Square. (A freedom allowed under law.) The government then asked the grand jury to reconvene.

LAST WEEK Bolan appeared before the re-convened grand jury and, under oath, confirmed a report in the National Review that while serving under U.S. Attorney Paul W. Williams he gathered what he thought was sufficient evidence to get a true bill against the Harlem Congressman and that Williams had taken him off the case.

However, the following day Williams said he had not removed Bolan from the case and branded as a lie Bolan's charge that the case was whitewashed on orders from Washington.

Bolan immediately let it be known that he would be "glad" to serve as a special investigator on the Powell matter. However, Williams has said he will personally take over the Powell case when the jury reconvenes on Monday.

FIRST THE jury must resolve the matter of truth as between District attorney Williams and his former aide, Bolan. It seems the jury cannot dispose of the Powell case without branding one of them a liar.

Moreover, the Powell case has been agitated by the National Review, which in the same issue in which it exposed the Powell case carried an article asserting that college fraternities have the right to exclude colored applicants from membership.

The publication has also been sharply critical of the Supreme Court for its 1954 school desegregation decision.

BOLAN, PRIME prosecutor for the New York district attorney's office during the McCarthy era, is now in private law practice as an associate of Roy Cohn, who along with David Schine, captured national attention in the Army-McCarthy fracas.

The charges pending against Powell are that he submitted improper tax returns; padded his Congressional payrolls and demanded kickbacks from his Congressional employees.

Powell will be invited to testify during the current session of the grand jury, Williams said.

THE TAX charges have been well - aired and concern the years 1950-53. It involves the disposition of $3000 allegedly received by Powell and his associates, William Hampton and others.

The kickback charges turn largely on testimony of John Ford, a long - time Powell associate, who has charged that Mrs. Hattie Dotson once told him that she was returning a portion of her salary to Powell.

THE PAYROLL padding charges have grown out of charges that Mrs. Dotson and other members of the Powell staff have received Congressional pay for services they have not rendered.

The charge is also made that much of this allegedly unearned salary was returned to Powell.

These charges have been clouded by political issues injected into the investigation and a growing belief that efforts are being made to discredit Powell.

However, an aide, Dunbar S. McLaurin, said he believed Tammany Hall was involved in the revived grand jury probe.

"IT MAY well be that this is another link in what appears to be a pattern of discrediting any type of independent colored leadership," said Mr. McLaurin. "To have him convicted would be a more effective way of silencing him, than defeating him at the polls."

Tax Data on Powell To Go to Grand Jury

By EDWARD RANZAL

Battle lines were drawn yesterday between the Government and a potential "runaway" Federal grand jury investigating the tax returns of Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Jr.

When the grand jury reconvenes on Monday the Government will ask the panel to sit daily until its presentation is completed. This is expected to take until the second week in May.

On the other hand, an aggressive group within the grand jury, which was reportedly dissatisfied with the Government's prior handling of the case, has asked Thomas J. Bolan, former assistant United States Attorney, to be "available" as a legal adviser.

Mr. Bolan presented evidence to the grand jury in December, 1956, and in January and February, 1957. He had been in charge of the investigation with him the possibility of his becoming their special counsel.

Mr. Bolan could be appointed only by a Federal judge. The grand jury would have to say that it no longer wished Government lawyers to assist it.

New Data Prepared

The jury was angered when the investigation, on orders from the Justice Department in Washington, was taken from Mr. Bolan and given to the Treasury Department. As a result, the grand jurors did not sit for more than a year. They were finally recalled after they had threatened to act on their own initiative.

The investigation was dumped into the lap of Arthur H. Christy, chief assistant United States attorney. He and a group of aides have been working ten to twelve hours a day. It is believed that they have amassed new information and documents.

It was understood that it was the Government's intention to put everything it had before the grand jury, advise the jury of the law and let it decide if there was sufficient evidence to indict Mr. Powell.

Mr. Christy also has questioned two former Congressional secretaries of Representative Powell, a Democrat of Harlem. They were Mrs. Hattie Dodson, who was sentenced to seven months for income tax evasion and Acy Lennon, now serving a year and a day on the same charge. Lennon, who was brought here from the Federal penitentiary at Danbury, Conn. faces another indictment, charging that he fraudulently prepared tax returns for others.

Another of Mr. Powell's aides, John J. Harmon, pleaded guilty to embezzling funds from the Abyssinian Baptist Church Federal Credit Union. He received a suspended sentence and a year's probation. Mr. Powell is pastor of the church.

A third Congressional secretary, William J. Hampton, has been indicted on income tax evasion charges. His case has been marked off the calendar. It was erroneously reported in an earlier story that he had been convicted of the charges.

United States Attorney Paul W. Williams, who will go before the grand jury on Monday, said yesterday: "I deny flatfly that it is a runaway jury, since my office has been in continuous communication with its foreman, Clarence J. Myers."

Mr. Myers, president of the New York Life Insurance Company, was not present at the grand jury meeting last Tuesday. He is now in Florida and is expected back Monday, his office said.

Mr. Williams also said that no jurors had indicated to him that they intended to employ Mr. Bolan. Explaining the jury's fourteen - month inactivity, he said, "They were idle because the Government was using that time in order to make an evaluation of the case."

Mr. Williams said that "at some point" Mr. Powell would be invited to appear. As a potential defendant Mr. Powell could defuse to invitation and, if subpoenaed, refuse to testify against himself.

Move hints politicians are behind indictment

IN A NUTSHELL

- Fiery congressman says he is ready to meet the Tammany Hall challenge.
- Will not withdraw: "I am definitely in the race to the finish."
- Elijah Crump seen as Powell's political opponent.

NEW YORK — "If they drop me as a Democrat, I'll put candidates in the field against all their candidates."

Thus spoke Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., Saturday as he squared off for an all-out political fight with Tammany Hall.

He is under Federal grand jury indictment for alleged income tax evasion, and faced with being dumped by the Democratic Party.

A HEARING on the indictment is set for Tuesday morning. The Baptist Ministers' Conference of New York is expected to send a large delegation to the courtroom as a gesture of its support of Powell.

Powell told the AFRO he has retained Edward Bennett William, the famed civil rights lawyer, as counsel.

HOWEVER, the fiery Harlem legislator was his usual explosive self as he talked of future plans.

Taking up the challenge to his political leadership, Powell said:

"The Tammany leaders in Harlem are a bunch of political sissies. I don't care who they nominate. We'll be ready for them when they hit the streets of Harlem.

"I am definitely in the race to the finish."

HE WAS referring to the six of seven Harlem district leaders who reportedly are out to drop him from the Democratic ticket this year.

Tammany leader Carmine De Sapio has challenged Powell's claim to leadership in Harlem by withholding the Democratic indorsement.

MEANWHILE, Powell's political strategy remained a secret while observers speculated as to his next move.

Some Democratic leaders said that it was possible he would not challenge the machine for the Democratic nomination in the August 12 primary. Instead, he might sit out the primaries and make his bid as an independent in the November election.

It is reported, however, that Tammany Hall leader De Sapio may try to thwart Powell's running as an independent.

It is estimated that Powell would need 12,000 signatures to insure 3,000 good ones in order to get on the ballot.

GETTING THE signatures would not be difficult for the popular legislator and church leader, who already has the Baptist and Methodist ministers of the community on his side.

Ironically, Powell's greatest threat lies in Crump, who rode into power with Powell's support.

Also opposing Powell will be Borough President Hulan Jack. Asked about Powell, Jack said:

"I won't back him.

"There are certain yardsticks by which you measure a man's fitness for candidacy, and certainly Powell's behavior has not been in the best interests of the Democratic Party."

POWELL'S current troubles began late in 1956 when a Federal grand jury began an investigation of his tax returns.

After a 14-month lapse the panel reconvened and, last Thursday, produced an indictment, which added to his political woes.

The indictment obviously caught Powell by surprise. In Washington, one of his secretaries reported that he had left his office 15 minutes "after the news broke."

THAT NIGHT he was slated to speak at Tabor Presbyterian Church in Washington and reporters and photographers waited for his arrival. But the Confressman failed to show.

Reached later by telephone, Powell said:

"I can make no comment at this time as to my reactions to the indictment or when I will be available. I must talk with my attorneys before any statement can be given."

In New York City, U.S. Attorney Paul Williams, when asked when the defendant will be arraigned, said:

"In view of the fact that he is a Congressman, we will get in touch with him and try to make suitable arrangements for next week."

MERRY-GO-ROUND

Rep. Powell Hides Out in White House

By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—The White House is about the last place in Washington you would expect to find a missing person. That may be why Rep. Adam Clayton Powell of Harlem, indicted for income tax evasion, was hiding out there while Democratic colleagues searched the town for him to vote for the Hells Canyon Dam project.

Powell's "yes" vote in the committee probably would have meant that the biggest undeveloped dam site in North America would be developed by a high federal dam instead of giving it to the Idaho Power Co. for ineffecient low-dam development.

Republican Reps. Edgar Chenoweth of Colorado and Phil Weaver of Nebraska were wavering and appeared ready to vote against the Idaho Power Co. if the Democrats could line up Powell. But the elusive Negro congressman, pastor of the biggest Baptist Church in the world, was nowhere to be found. He had shunned his Washington office for several days and repeated phone calls, local and long distance to New York, failed to locate him.

None of his congressional colleagues dreamed, as the House Interior Committee prepared to vote, that Powell would be in the office of assistant president Sherman Adams. However, they should have known that Adams, longtime friend of the private utilities, is the man who has always pulled wires on Capitol Hill to block public development of Hells Canyon.

Most Elusive Man in Harlem

Powell has established quite a pattern for ducking out on Hells Canyon. Last year he asked Con. Rep. Clair Engle of California to authorize a free trip to Germany just before the Hells Canyon vote. Engle refused. So Powell went to New York and stayed there. The head of the Sleeping Car Porters union, Philip Randolph, tried to get Powell to come back and vote. So did Clarence Mitchell, counsel of the NAACP. So did Negro Rep. Charley Diggs of Detroit. All failed.

At that time the Justice Department had intervened to delay a grand jury in New York which was considering Powell's indictment. Though Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas Bolan wanted to indict, the Justice Department had issued instructions that the case be sidetracked. So Powell was anxious to do anything the White House wanted. He did not come back to vote for Hells Canyon. The big public power project was defeated.

But this year Powell was effusive in assuring congressmen that he would be on hand to vote.

"How can you fellows think of me like that?" Powell asked other congressmen, his voice heavy with emotion. "I would like to do something to emphasize my good faith in liberal causes. I didn't support the Hells Canyon bill last year because I was angered at some of those Senate liberals from the Northwest who backed a soft civil rights bill."

"You can emphasize your good faith and answer some of your critics by signing a proxy vote for Hells Canyon this year," he was reminded.

"I'll do that," promised Powell. "I'll either be present to vote for the bill or I'll leave a proxy in my office."

Mr. Adams was busy

It was agreed that the proxy would be picked up and voted by Democratic Rep. Gracie Pfost of Idaho, a member of the Interior Committee and a strong battler for Hells Canyon. However, Mrs. Pfost was unable to get the signed proxy, though she contacted Powell's office numerous times by phone and in person. Each time she was told by a secretary that Powell hadn't "released" the proxy.

Time after time Powell's office was called. Callers were usually told that the congressman was in New York. When his New York office was contacted, the word was, "He's in Washington."

"Mr. Powell gave me his word that his proxy would be turned over to Mrs. Pfost," his secretary was told. "We happen to know that it has been signed and is right here in his office." But the secretary remained adamant. Finally, as the hour of the vote approached, Powell's secretary burst into tears. But she would not surrender his proxy. Nor would she reveal where the congressman was.

Finally, as the committee began to vote, a friend of Powell's revealed that he had an 8:30 a.m. date with Sherman Adams. It was then about 9:30. He called the White House.

"This is an emergency," he explained to the White House operator. "I would like to talk to Congressman Powell. I believe he has an appointment with Gov. Adams."

"I would like to talk to Congressman Powell," Adams's assistant was told. "This is very urgent."

"Just a second," came the reply. There was a brief interval, then: "I'm sorry, but it is impossible to disturb the governor. He's still in conference with Congressman Powell."

He remained in conference until after the Interior Committee voted against the high dam for Hells Canyon.

What Powell's collegaues in Congress are now watching is to see what the administration does regarding his indictment for income tax evasion. The Justice Department would have a hard time dropping it because U.S. Attorney Paul Williams in New York is reported vigorously opposed to playing politics with law enforcement.

Powell's Harlem Congregation Gives Him Vote Of Confidence

Powell, pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church for 20 years, did not appear yesterday to deliver two scheduled sermons.

His followers jammed the Harlem church. At the end of the noon service the ministers, board of deacons, board of trustees, women's committee, men's committee and the staff of the church passed a resolution affirming their full support of the Negro minister.

Powell has shunned public appearances since a federal grand jury indicted him last Thursday on three counts of income tax violations. If convicted on all counts he would face a possible maximum penalty of 30 years in prison and $30,000 in fines.

The congressman's troubles have been compounded by Democratic party moves to refuse him renomination.

Powell reportedly is planning a full slate of candidates if Tammany Hall drops him.

An overflow crowd of more than 3,000 appeared for each service yesterday at his Negro church, which has one of the largest Protestant congregations in the country.

Among those attending were Powell's stepmother, Inez Powell, and his 11-year-year-old son, Adam Clayton (Skippy) Powell III. Powell's wife, pianist Hazel Scott, is in Paris, where she has remained for most of the last three years.

Meanwhile, an investigation seems likely into why government counsel delayed 14 months in presenting material on Powell's tax affairs to the grand jury.

Sen. Jacob K. Javits (R-NY) said yesterday a public explanation of the delay is called for.

Rep. Emanuel Celler (D-NY) chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, has asked for a White House probe of reports that U. S. Atty. Gen. William P Rogers ordered the Powell case dropped.

POWELL IS ABSENT FROM HIS PULPIT

Harlem Church Is Crowded at 2 Services—Support in Tax Case Is Voted Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. avoided public contact yesterday.

Mr. Powell, who was indicted last Thursday by a Federal grand jury on charges of income tax evasion, failed to preach at two scheduled services at the Abyssinian Baptist Church, 132 West 138th Street, he could not be reached in his Washington office.

The Representative has been pastor of the Harlem church for many years. It is regarded as one of the largest Negro Baptist churches in the country.

According to the weekly church bulletin handed to worshipers as they entered the edifice, Mr. Powell was listed as the preacher for the 10 A. M. and the noon service'.

Both services emphasized the Christian home and the sanctity of motherhood. But the Rev. Oberia D. Dempsey, assistant minister, preached at 10 A. M. and the Rev. David N: Licorish, associate minister, delivered the sermon.

The two services were crowded to more than capacity. Some worshipers stood in the rear of the church and others were seated in a side hallway. More than 6,000 persons attended the two worship periods. Some churchgoers were unable to get inside.

zThere was some tension as the crowds milled around between the services. One well-dressed woman turned to three reporters and said, "Let the poor man alone, go home now." Another angrily asked, "Why don't you publicity seekers get off the church steps?"

After the noon service William Hampton, Mr. Powell's Congressional secretary, said that the Harlem Representative would issue a statement from his Washington office at 2:30 P. M.

Reporters in the capitol found the office door locked, however. And efforts to reach Dr. Powell in New York were unavailing.

One member of the congregation reported that an announcement had been made at the 10 A. M. service that Mr. Powell would not preach. This could not be confirmed, since reporters were not permitted to attend that service because of of the crowds.

Dunbar McLaurin, a lawyer who described himself as an independent Democrat, told reporters that he was 'working closely" with Mr. Powell in planning a full slate of candidates if Tammany Hall should attempt to drop Mr. Powell for re-election to the House.

Statement on Lawyer

Meanwhile, a spokesman for Mr. Powell issued the following statement, apparently in lieu of a Washington comment:

"To clear up some misunderstanding may I state that my attorney, Edward Bennett Williams, agreed to help me in my present situation only after an appointment had been arranged at my request to see him in his office in Washington Friday morning, May 9, at 11:45 o'clock.

"I approached Mr. Williams without his solicitation, presented my problem and he agreed to take the case, pending a longer conference this week with him concerning details."

At the end of the noon service, the ministers, board of deacons, board of trustees, women's committee, men's committee and staff of the church passed a resolution affirming their full support of the minister.

It said: "We call on the religious community to stand with us and to offer constant prayers to Almighty God that his enemies may be confounded so that he can continue to fight wnerever God gives him an opportunity for the rights of common men."

Rep. Powell Absent from His Church

NEW YORK, May 11 (INS)— Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., under indictment on income tax charges, failed to preach at his Harlem church today.

The congressman and pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church had been expected to preach his usual sermons at the 10 a.m. and noon services.

However, church officers said he was in Washington.

He has so far refused any comment on the indictment, handed up by a federal grand jury Thursday. The jury charged him with three counts of tax evasion. If convicted, he would face a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each count.

William Hampton, one of Powell's congressional secretaries, gave newsmen copies of two resolutions. One was from the church committees and staff and backed "our minister 100 per cent in his fight to evade persecution." The other resolution came from 10 other ministers and called the circumstances of the indictment "wholly outside the realm of justice."

Reporters were barred from the morning service at the church.

HARLEM LEADERS MAY DROP POWELL

Tammany Chiefs in District Are Reported to Oppose His Renomination

Six of the seven Tammany district leaders in Harlem were reported last night to be in favor of dropping Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. from the Democratic ticket this year.

Two years ago Mr. Powell, a Democrat and minister of one of the largest Negro congregation in Harlem, publicly supported President Eisenhower for re-election. At the time his Federal income tax returns were under investigation; this investigation has since been renewed.

Only Lloyd Dickens of the Democratic assembly district leaders in Mr. Powell's Congressional district is reported to favor his renomination. Elijah Crump, another district leader who had backed Mr. Powell, is reported to be seeking the nomination himself.

As yet a decision to replace Mr. Powell has not been made official reportedly, because of the inability of the district leaders to agree on a candidate to replace him.

Those under consideration include Mr. Crump, City Councilman Earl Brown, State Senator James L. Watson; Mrs. Bessie Buchanan, an Assemblywoman and Anna Hedgeman, assistant to Mayor Wanger. Like Mr. Powell, all are Negroes.

The Mayor is reported disturbed at the efforts of Miss Hedgeman to win the nomination. He is said to be fearful that he will be suspected of advancing her ambitions, which is said not to be the case.

The decision to drop Mr. Powell is said to be based not on his income tax difficulties but on dissatisfaction with his conduct in office. Several of his adversaries have accused him of waging an anti-Catholic and a racial campaign. They refer to speeches he is said to have made in Harlem in which he referred to some Democratic leaders as "white overlords."

Tammany Ditches Negro Lawmaker

NEW YORK (AP) — Tammany Hall leaders have dropped Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D-NY) as a Democratic candidate for re-election, assertedly for his support of President Eisenhower in 1956.

Powell, his political back to the wall, has said he will retaliate with an independent organization to keep the Harlem congressional seat he has held since 1945.

Powell Says Montgomery Jest Wrong

NEW YORK (AP)—Harlem Congressman Adam Clayton Powell said Monday he made a mistake recently in warning Democratic foes it would be uncomfortable for them to walk the streets of Harlem.

"I said that in a bantering way," the long-time Negro Democrat told a Republican luncheon. "I didn't say anything might happen but I did say it might have been uncomfortable."

Powell was denied the Democratic Party's backing for re-election, but says he will challenge the party candidate, Manhattan Borough President Hulan E. Jack, in a primary.

It was wrong of me, I'm conceded. "But there is resentment against Tammany Hall in Harlem." Powell, who now has Republican endorsement in his re-election fight, added:

"It would be fine if De Sapio and Jack did walk the streets of Harlem. . . they could really learn something from the people."

Powell, under indictment on income tax evasion charges, said he didn't think his tax troubles had anything to do with his political standing.

Rev. King Backs Adam C. Powell

Dr. Martin Luther King, famed civil rights leader of Montgomery Ala., has thrown his support to Adam Clayton Powell in the congressman's fight to win re-election against the wishes of his party.

Powell, who supported President Eisenhower in the last presidential election, was dropped by the Democrats after the indictment for income tax evasion.

The congressman's headquarters this week released a letter from Rev. King, who led the successful bus boycott in Montgomery promising Powell his "wholehearted support."

NAACP Denounces Powell's Racialism

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People Monday denounced Negro Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. for extreme racialism.

He also was accused by Hulan E. Jack. Negro borough president of Manhattan, of preaching hate and stirring an ugly mood in Harlem.

Powell had been associated with the NAACP for years. The association's statement, issued by Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins, disassociated the NAACP from Powell's fight with Tammany Hall the Manhattan Democratic party organization.

The Harlem legislator and minister is under indictment for alleged income tax evasion and has been dumped by Tammany Hall. He suggested Sunday that Tammany leader Carmine DeSapio and Jack, who supports DeSapio, "better not walk up and down Harlem streets too much."

The NAACP accused Powell of having tried to drag its name into his personal political feud with Tammany Hall.

"The trouble between Mr. Powell and the New York County Democratic organization will have to be settled by contests between party members and party factions," the statement said.

"We deplore and disassociate ourselves from the banner of extreme racialism raised by Mr. Powell. If Negro citizens are to win permanent victory in the long run, we must be consistent. We cannot condemn racism in others while using it ourselves."

HULAN JACK FIRES BACK

Negro Official Says Powell Preaching Hate In Harlem

NEW YORK (AP) — Hulan Jack, Negro borough president of Manhattan, Monday accused Negro Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. of "preaching hate" and trying to get the people of Harlem "into an ugly mood" over politics.

Powell is under indictment for alleged income tax evasion and has been dumped by Democratic Tammany Hall. Sunday he suggested that Tammany leader Carmine DeSapio and Jack, who supports DeSapio, "better not walk up and down Harlem streets too much."

He said that DeSapio and Jack would not get "the same treatment" given Vice President Nixon in South America (spit and stones) "but we will make it mighty uncomfortable for them."

Powell has promised an all-out fight for renomination without Tammany backing.

The National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People joined in the criticism of Powell.

NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins said in a statement that his organization "wishes to dissassociate itself completely from the threats made by Powell or the Powell organiation against any person's right to go freely about the city of New York or about the nation."

Jack said at a news conference it was not likely Powell could chase him out of Harlem, since Jack lives on West 110th street in the heart of Harlem.

He (Powell) lives in Westchester somewhere," Jack added.

Jack said he hoped the congressman, who is pastor of a big Harlem church where he issued the warning during a sermon, was not "attempting to incite the people."

"It can only lead to disaster," he added. "He is playing upon their emotions and passions, and it can get them into an ugly mood where anything can happen."

Jack said he had received threatening anonymous letters and that while he could take care of himself, he would hold Powell "responsible for the safety of my family."

The borough president attacked "Powellism," which he described as "preaching of hate at a time when all of us in the city are involved in trying to bring about integration, better understanding and full cooperation among citizens of all races, creeds and origins."

Jack said he thought the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People should repudiate Powell for using an NAACP antisegregation meeting Saturday for what Jack described as a political "tirade."

Jack, a scheduled speaker at the Saturday meeting, was booed to silence by the crowd, which quited down only at Powell's urging.

The NAACP statement said that "the NAACP is not in partisan politics," adding:

"The trouble between Powell and the New York County Democratic organization will have to be settled by contests between party members and party factions.

"That is not our business and we repudiate any effort by Powell or anyone else to drag our name into it."

Referring to Powell's Saturday speech, in which he accused DeSapio and other leading Democrats of believing that "white is right," Wilkins' statement said:

"We deplore and disassociate ourselves from the banner of extreme racialism raised by Powell . . . if Negro citizens are to win permanent victory in the long run. we must be consistent.

"We cannot condemn racism in others while using it ourselves."

About 800 supporters of Powell turned out Monday night for the first of four classes in the procedures for obtaining primary petition signatures in his fight for renomination.

A Powell assistant gave no reason for the congressman's departure but said he is expected back in time for the last class session Saturday.

Powell Gets GOP's Nod

NEW YORK — (AP) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D., N.Y.) Thursday gained the Republican nomination for re-election as congressman from Harlem. His own Democratic Party had refused his renomination.

Harlem district leaders overrode opposition from Manhatten GOP Chairman Thomas J. Curran to vote 6-1 in favor of Powell's nomination. Curran said the county committee of Powell's 16th Congressional District would ratify the selection within a week.

Powell, a Negro, has said he will run in the primary as an independent Democrat against Tammany Hall's choice as his successor, Councilman Earl Brown, also a Negro.

Tammany dumped Powell because he backed the Republican Eisenhower administration in the 1956 election. Powell gave the racial segregation issue as his reason for crossing party lines two years ago.

The decision seemed to assure Mr. Powell of an opportunity to run in the November election even if he should lose his Democratic primary battle against Councilman Earl Brown, the Tammany Hall designee.

However, Powell failed to gain the endorsement of a United States Senator, who said Sunday his "normal inclination" was to support Powell, but wanted to do some checking first.

Senator Javits, (R., N.Y.), added "I would want to take a look at what record I can find of this imbroglio he is in with the federal authorities in order to see whether there is any moral reason why I should withhold my support. I am not going to support blindly anyone whom the Republican Party endorses."

All this may not mean too much to Powell, however. He has termed a victory in the Democratic Primary vital for the retention of his committeee seniority in Congress.

Under state election law, he was prohibited as a Democrat from entering the Republican primary without the party's consent. The Harlem Republicans voted him that right in a meeting at the Square Deal Republican Club, 2350 Seventh Avenue. This is the headquarters of the organization for the Twelfth Assembly District South.

POWELL WINS LEGAL BACKING OF N. Y. GOPs

NEW YORK — Representative Adam Clayton Powell Saturday night won the legal right to run on the Republican ticket in his campaign for re-election, but a powerful GOP official withheld his support pending further investigation.

A total of 125 of 281 State Republicans defied the wishes of Thomas J. Curran, Republican chairman, and voted to designate Mr. Powell for the nomination in the August 12 primary.

NEW YORK

REP. ADAM CLAYTON POWELL

Powell Due Dumping in Election Bid

(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

NEW YORK, May 7 — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, perennial Harlem political leader who two years ago thumbed his nose at Tammany Hall and supported President Eisenhower, will be dumped by the Democrats, liberals, and labor organizations in his bid for an eighth consecutive term in Congress, it was learned today.

The rebellious Negro minister-politician, a power in Harlem's 16th Congressional District for almost two decades, has been slated for the political skids by six of the seven leaders in his district.

The assembly district chieftains deny they decided to dump Powell because of his federal income tax problems, stating they want "a true organizational man" to represent them. But it's an open secret that, aside from Powell's tendency to stray from the Tammany fold, he has become persona non grata because he can still face federal indictment on charges that he made false income tax returns for 1952-53.

In addition, he is still liable to investigation for an alleged salary kickback and payroll padding charge. His secretary, Hattie Dodson, served a one-year jail term on an income tax fraud charge and now is back as Powell's confidential aide.

It was learned several informal meetings have been held to consider the manner in which Powell was to be thrown into the Democrats' political discard as well as considering his successor. These were held with the knowledge of Tammany leader Carmine De Sapio and a formal get-together has been slated for tomorrow.

But the Negro congressman-clergyman declares "I am definitely in the race to the finish."

Powell, seeking his eighth two-year term in Congress, added that he has been aware of the efforts to dump him.

Six of the seven Democratic leaders in Powell's congressional district are reported to have agreed on giving him the skids.

The leaders scheduled a meeting today with Carmine G. DeSapio, Democratic national committeeman, New York secretary of state and leader of Tammany Hall, the Manhattan Democratic organization. The purpose was to pick a candidate to oppose Powell in the party's Aug. 12 primary election.

Many Democratic leaders have been gunning for Powell since he actively supported President Eisenhower in the 1956 campaign because of the segregation issue.

Tammany Hall set to dump Powell

NEW YORK, May 8—(AP)—Tammany Hall district leaders in Harlem are about ready to drop Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. from the Democratic ticket this year.

Jammed Against Wall

Harlem Seen Going Along With Powell

By EVELYN CUNNINGHAM

NEW YORK—More and more vinegar was poured on the Adam Powell pickle over the week-end as local and national developments became more involved.

Indicted last week by a Federal grand jury on income tax evasion charges Congressman Powell had absolutely nothing to say on his return to New York, but wheels were turning frantically both here and in Washington.

Here's what happened:

Harlem's Democrat leaders—with the sole exception of Lloyd Dickens of the 11th Assembly District—turned thumbs down on Powell's candidacy for a return to Congress.

Manhattan Borough President Hulan Jack said he would not back Powell because his "behavior has not been in the best interests of the Democratic party."

THE FOLLOWING congressional hopefuls started jockeying for position: Elijah Crump, leader of the 12th AD; State Senator James L. Watson; Mrs. Anne Arnold Hedgeman, assistant to Mayor Wagner; Assemblywoman Bessie Buchanan; and, George Gregory, civil service commissioner. None of these persons, however, made any public statements.

A suddenly reconvened grand jury indicted Powell.

The National Review, a conservative weekly magazine, entered the picture and its Editor William F. Buckley Jr. was subpoenaed by a Federal grand jury for appearance Tuesday, this week, as part of an inquiry into "the entire matter of any effort by the editor of the magazine to communicate with any members of the Powell grand jury."

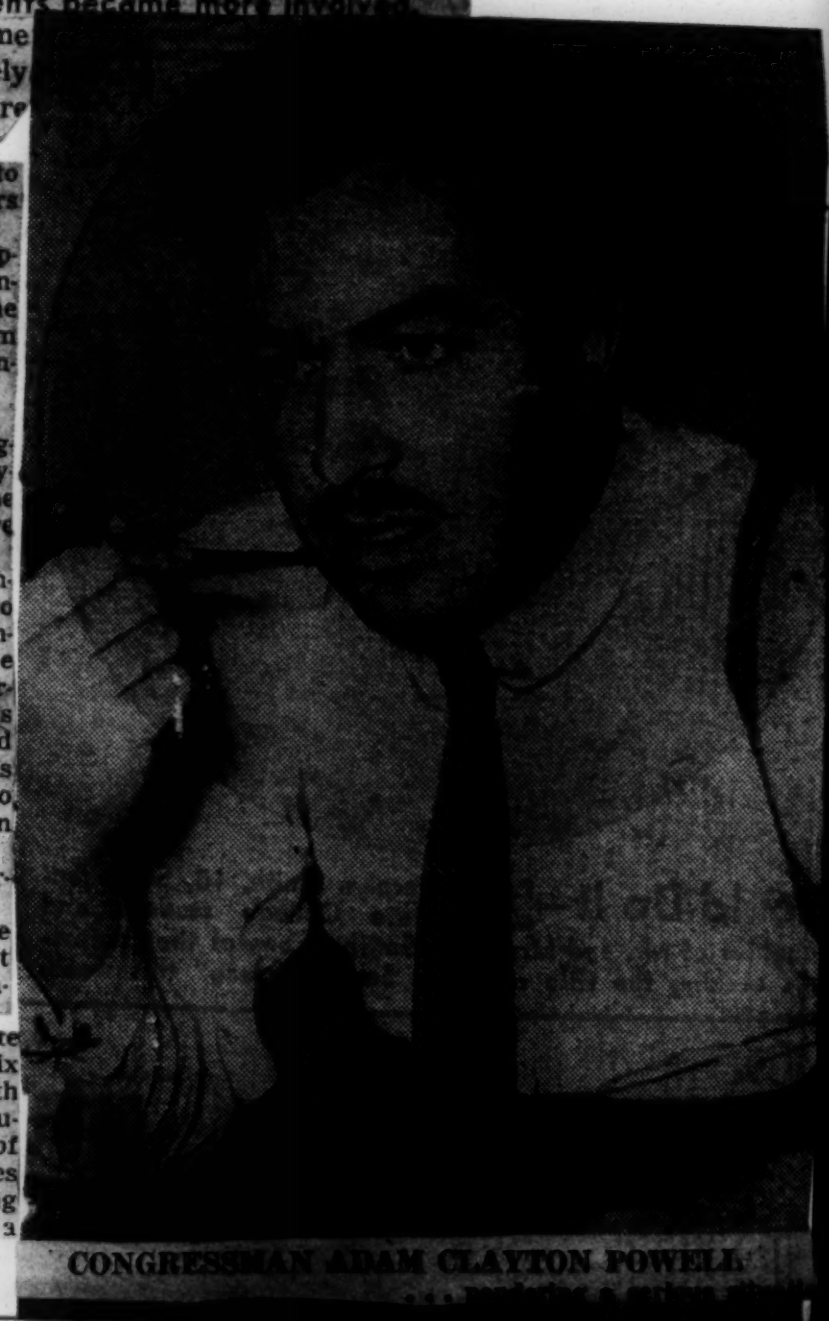
CHARGES AND countercharges flew about as to who if anybody was responsible for the Powell grand jury being inactive for 61 weeks.

Back in New York from Washington and completely "lost" to all reporters, Powell let it be announced that he had hired the services of two prominent attorneys. Edward Dennett Williams of Washington, D. C., who would handle the indictment, and Boris Berkovitch of New York, who would handle any possible action against National Review.

Powell was expected to be arraigned this week.

He was also expected to move for a dismissal of the indictment on the basis of the stories in National Review.

The law involved is a statute providing a $1000 fine or six months imprisonment or both "for whoever attempts to influence any grand or petty jury of any court of the United States upon any issue or matter pending before the jury of which he is a



CONGRESSMAN ADAM CLAYTON POWELL

Adam, Hazel Separated!

NEW YORK—Congressman Adam Powell failed to appear at either of the two Sunday morning services at Abyssinian Baptist Church where he was expected to deliver Mother's Day sermons. More than 50 reporters and photographers were on the scene. It had been reported that the U. S. Congressman and minister would make a statement concerning his current troubles.

Those close to the popular minister said he was closeted with lawyers.

Meanwhile, it was announced that Powell and his wife, pianist Hazel Scott, have reached an out-of-court separation agreement. Mrs. Powell eventualliy will receive custody of their 11-year-old son, Adam III, and will have full possession of the Powell home in Westchester.

It was learned too that Mrs. Scott had purchased a $35,000 home in Paris where she plans to live. Rev. Mr. Powell's congregation, determined that he'll have a home, is building him a $50,000 parsonage in Westchester County.

Hazel was quoted as saying: "Adam and I dig each other the most. We have a perfect understanding." She made the statement in Paris.

A MEETING was held Friday night in Harlem of pro-Powell forces. Among those known to be present were James Christian, candidate for the assembly of the 14th AD; Dunbar McLaurin, chairman of the Negro Voters League; Rev. Alfred Isaacs, pastor of Union Baptist Church; Rev. Thomas Kilgore, pastor of Friendship Baptist Church; Rev. George Lawrence of Friendship Baptist Church; Noel Austin, candidate for the Assembly; William Hampton, official of Abyssinian Baptist Church of which Congressman Powell is pastor, and the Rev. David Licorish, assistant pastor of Abyssinian.

Another leadership conference of Republican and Democratic civic and political figures was held Saturday afternoon. No announcements or plans were forthcoming from either meeting. However, it was clear that somebody—Republican or Independent—was going to run Adam Clayton Powell for Congress.

IT WAS ALSO CLEAR that the vast majority of voters in Harlem considered that Powell was being "persecuted"; that the sums involved in the tax evasion charges were "nothing compared to what other government officials have gotten away with"; that there was "nobody in sight who could beat Powell"; that "how can they let a guy like Eastland stay in Congress and pick on Powell"; that "Powell is the only independent voice of the Negro in this country."

In short, Harlem by and large was behind Powell.

Meanwhile, speculation was rife about this Saturday's NAACP Freedom Fund Rally in front of the Hotel Theresa at 125th St. and Seventh Ave. as to what Powell and Hulan Jack would say.

Both are scheduled to appear and speak.

Whatever happens to Powell in the courts it is little likely to affect his standing in the House. The House takes the traditional view that it is up to the voters in each district to elect their own representative.

Powell's pay and congressional prerogatives would continue, even if convicted, and he would remain a member of the House unless he resigned.

Rep. Thomas J. Lane (D-Mass.), jailed for tax evasion in 1956, continued in office, while behind bars, and won re-election after serving his sentence.

If Powell leaves the House it will probably be through failure to get re-elected.

RULES POWELL MUST STAND TRIAL IN TAX CASE

By LOUIS E. LOMAX

NEW YORK — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell J., (D., N.Y.) pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, must stand trial on the three - count indictment charging him with filing improper income tax returns for himself and his wife Hazel Scott.

This was the decision of Federal Judge William B. Herlands as the jurist denied Powell's three motions asking that the indictment be dismissed.

Powell's lawyers, Harrison Jackson and Edward B. Williams, had contended that the indictments "were fruits of a poisoned tree" because an ex-member of the U.S. Attorney General's staff had admittedly leaked confidential grand jury information to the editors of a weekly publication unfriendly to colored persons.

POWELL'S lawyers also said that the editor of the weekly had contacted members of the grand jury and had influenced their decision.

In a 30-page opinion, Herlands denied Powell's motion to dismiss, but left the future of National Review Editor William Buckley very much up in the air.

The consensus of opinion had been, that the Attorney General would proceed against Buckley and all others working in concert had the judge granted Powell's motion.

Now that Powell's motion has been denied observers feel it unlikely that the government will proceed against Buckley because such a move would embarrass the government's effort to obtain a conviction in the Powell case.

JUDGE HERLAND concluded that whatever harm was done by Buckley's articles and needling was overcome by the "painstaking effort of the U.S. Attorney in presenting the case to the jury. A most unusual case was handled in a very commendable manner." Herlands maintained.

However Judge Herlands reserved a final broadside for Buckley. In a gratuitious paragraph, obviously meant to be a suggestion to acting District Attorney Arthur Christy, Judge Herlands said:

"If there was anything criminally improper it was Buckley's sending of articles to the grand jury. . . ."

LIBERALS MAY AID FIGHT ON POWELL

Leader Says Party Would Join Democrats to Back Marshall or 3 Others

By CLAYTON KNOWLES

A possibility arose last night that the Liberal party might join forces with the Democrats in an effort to unseat Adam Clayton Powell Jr. in Manhattan's Sixteenth Congressional District.

Murray Baron, the Liberal party's chairman in New York County, said the organization would rally with the Democrats behind a "candidate of the stature of Thurgood Marshall."

He said that Mr. Marshall, counsel to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, could, if elected "not only counteract the demagogic activities of Mr. Powell but would introduce into the Congress one of the nation's leading lawyers and outstanding Negro citizens." Mr. Marshall argued the school segregation case before the United States Supreme Court.

Mr. Marshall had barred a contest with Mr. Powell after the Democrats decided last week not to rename Mr. Powell because of his support of President Eisenhower in 1956. Mr. Marshall said he and Representative Powell "stood for the same things."

Believe He May Yield

It was understood, however, that the Liberal party, like the Democrats, were unwilling to accept "no" from Mr. Marshall. The Liberals believe that Mr. Marshall will yield to a widespread demand.

Other Liberal party sources, however, said that three other prominent Negroes would be acceptable in a joint campaign to oust Mr. Powell from Congress.

They named Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the N. A. A. C. P.; A. Philip Randolph, president of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, and the Rev. James H. Robinson, pastor of the Church of the Master in Harlem.

The Liberal position became known several hours after Mr. Baron had announced that his party had never endorsed Mr. Powell in any of his eight races for Congress.

"That our policy has been amply justified is now abundantly clear," he said. "Our party, which was the first to suggest the possible nomination of Ralph Bunche for the United States Senate, and which has an outstanding record in the struggle for civil rights, need not re-emphasize its concern for the rights of all minorities." Mr. Baron continued:

"Congressman Powell's announced intention to invade our primary will be met and rebuffed. We join with the N. A. A. C. P. in opposition to racialism from any source."

Conversations between the Democrats and Liberals, it was said, were being carried on between a third party that was influential in Harlem affairs.

Jack Declines Challenge

Meanwhile, Hulan E. Jack, Manhattan Borough President, spurned Mr. Powell's challenge to oppose him. Mr. Jack, one of the Harlem leaders who voted against redesignating Mr. Powell, said his own job was "the highest elective office ever attained by a Negro in the United States."

First elected in 1953, Mr. Jack was re-elected last year. Mr. Powell has served in Congress since 1944.

Carmine G. De Sapio, Tammany leader, responded with a barb to Mr. Powell's charge that he was guilty of hypocrisy in running Abe Stark, a former Republican, on the Democratic ticket while denying redesignation to Mr. Powell as a Democrat.

Mr. De Sapio said that there was "a big difference between changing party affiliation and betraying the party one purports to represent."

Harlem Democratic leaders are scheduled to meet again this afternoon at Tammany Hall, 231 Madison Avenue, in an attempt to pick a candidate.

REV. ADAM CLAYTON POWELL
ATTEMPT MADE TO BUY HIS SUPPORT (BRIBE)

Betty Granger Files $250,000 Suit

Was Powell Offered A $50,000 Bribe?

One of the protagonists is Mrs. Betty Granger, managing editor of the New York Age, who has reportedly filed a $250,000 suit against Mr. Powell who had charged that she was directly involved in the bribe effort.

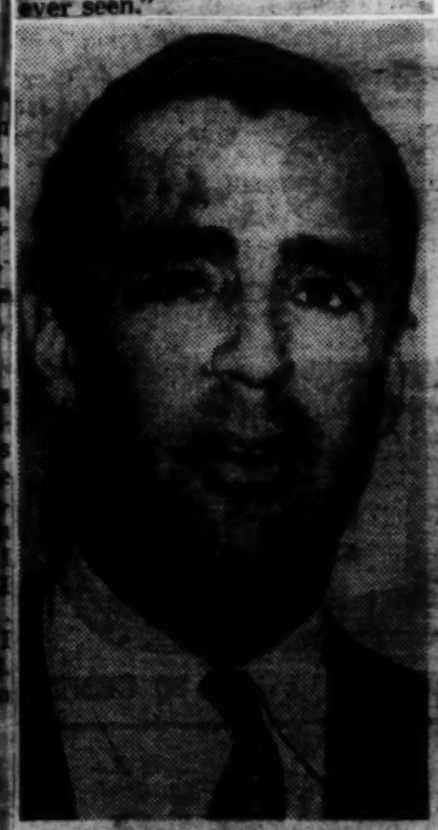
According to Powell, he was lunching with Jackie Robinson in a Harlem restaurant when Mrs. Granger approached him saying that Charles F. Willis Jr., former White House aide, had $50,000 for him if he would endorse GOP candidates.

JACKIE ROBINSON was quoted by New York's Herald-Tribune as having said, "I was there briefly. There was some money mentioned by Mrs. Granger, but I didn't pay too much attention to what it was for. I did hear about $50,000 but I didn't hear what it was for . . . I don't know him (Willis). I didn't hear his name mentioned. I was only in the conversation a few minutes."

On the other hand, Mrs. Granger told the New York Amsterdam News, "I never met Mr. Robinson or Mr. Powell together at any restaurant. I met Mr. Powell at a radio station about four days ago. I haven't seen Mr. Robinson since the baseball season."

Powell had charged from the pulpit of Abyssinian Baptist Church that GOP leader Harold Burton and Gloria Toote were also involved in the case. However, Burton said that he would not file suit. "The man's finished. I sympathize with him, despite all he's done to me." However, Miss Toote indicated that she would file suit.

Mrs. Granger asserts, "I have had papers served on Adam Powell in a $250,000 Supreme Court slander suit . . . his injury to my person, character and integrity by these remarks is the most shocking example of an irresponsible attitude I have ever seen."



CHARLES F. WILLIS
. . . did he offer Adam cash?

HAROLD BURTON

JACKIE ROBINSON
. . . "I heard about $50,000"

NEW YORK—A raging controversy over whether or not Adam Clayton Powell was offered a $50,000 bribe in connection with the recent political campaign was fanned into even hotter heat this week as prominent figures, including Jackie Robinson, became involved.

ASKED G.O.P. AID, POWELL REVEALS

Says He First Sought and Later Refused a $50,000 Campaign Donation

The Rev. Dr. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. sharpened yesterday his charge that an attempt had been made to buy his support for the Republican slate. He named Charles F. Willis Jr., a former White House assistant to Sherman Adams, as the man, and $50,000 in small bills as the amount.

He made these statements to his congregation at the Abyssinian Baptist Church, 132 West 138th Street. Between services, however, he told reporters that he himself had solicited a Republican campaign contribution before he made peace with the county Democratic organization.

Mr. Powell told newsmen that during his feud with the Democratic organization last summer he had written and phoned Mr. Willis saying: "I'm being dumped, get me some money for my campaign, please."

He said Mr. Willis, with whom he had worked for President Eisenhower's re-election in 1956, first agreed, but later refused when Mr. Powell said Sherman Adams, the former assistant to the President, should resign. Mr. Powell said Mr. Willis finally sent offers to contribute $50,000 in small bills.

On Sept. 28, Mr. Powell said, he called Mr. Willis and told him that he had needed help prior to Aug. 12, but had not received it, and that he had subsequently worked out a method of paying his campaign debts "honestly."

Last Bid for Votes

In his final scheduled appearance before Election Day, Mr. Powell referred to a Harlem newspaper, The New York Age, as "Rockefeller-controlled" and "Republican-controlled."

Mr. Powell is seeking re-election to the House as a Democrat. He appears also on the Republican ticket. He defeated the Democratic organization candidate in the Aug. 12 primary and made peace in time to announce on Oct. 7 that he would work for the election of the entire Democratic state ticket.

He made no explicit reference to his own candidacy or that of other Democrats from the pulpit. But he did praise Paul M. Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, for his recent suggestion that Democrats who did not support the party's stand on civil rights should go their own way.

Mr. Powell said he had discussed The New York Age because it had headlined a story that he was going to dismiss the Rev. David N. Licorish, associate minister of the church. He said this was not true.

Harlem Another Montgomery Or Little Rock, Powell Says

NEW YORK (AP) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D-NY) Sunday pictured Harlem as a testing ground for the revitalization of democracy.

"In 1956 it was Montgomery, in 1957 it was Little Rock and so far in 1958, it is Harlem," the Negro congressman said.

Powell addressed an overflow rally of more than 3,000 persons in the Abyssinian Baptist Church, where he is pastor. He called the rally to protest the granting of a delay in school integration at Little Rock.

One of the central figures in the Little Rock dispute was honored at the rally by the special voluntary citizens committee, an affiliate of the church. The committee designated Melba Patillo one of the nine Negro children who attended Central High School as girl of the year. Her mother, Mrs. Lois Patillo, also received an award.

Powell told the rally Harlemites have been "robbed of the fruits of democracy" by political machines, big business and much of the press, radio and television.

"The evils of the plantation pursue us," he said. "We are overcharged for our needs, we have to pay a tax for being black, we are poorly housed, we are underpaid, we are ridiculed for our failings and we are socially shunned and avoided by the majority."

He continued: "But huddled in our boss-made northern ghetto, we do have a vote -- a vote that can change the complexion of America if we refuse to be fragmented, if we refuse to serve as hostages to the opposing sections and factions developing in their community."

Powell, though a Democrat, supported the re-election of President Eisenhower in 1956. He consequently lost the backing of Tammany Hall, the Mannattan Democratic organization, for re-election this November.

Tammany designated city councilman Earl Brown, also Negro, as its primary candidate.

Powell meanwhile was endorsed for the Republican nomination for Congress, but also will run against Brown in the Democratic primary.

POWELL ATTACKS U. S. INDICTMENT

Plea Made to Quash Charges Over 'Inflamatory' Actions by Bolan and Buckley

The dismissal of an indictment charging Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. with income tax evasion was urged yesterday because of "irregularities" described as "criminal in nature."

Judge William B. Herlands reserved decision in Federal Court on a motion made by Edward Bennett Williams of Washington, attorney for the Harlem clergyman and lawmaker.

Mr. Williams charged that the indictment returned May 8 was beclouded as the result of actions by former Assistant United States Attorney Thomas A. Bolan and William F. Buckley Jr., editor of The National Review, a magazine.

Mr. Bolan, who had handled the case for the Government until his resignation nine months ago, was accused by Mr. Williams of having supplied information to Mr. Buckley of "highly inflamatory articles that were mailed to jurors of the grand jury before the indictment was returned.

Such conduct, the defense lawyer maintained, violated Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure inasmuch as it was "illegal, criminal tampering" with the processes of a grand jury.

It was suggested that both Mr. Powell and the Government would benefit if a new grand jury were to be assigned.

United States Attorney Paul W. Williams accepted the facts but drew opposite conclusions in defending the indictment.

Criminal Action Denied

"There was no criminal activity, as Mr. Williams so cavalierly charges," the Federal attorney declared. "Mr. Bolan only fed back to the jurors what they already knew. Certainly nothing in the law says that a grand juror is disqualified because he reads or is sent material."

The Government prosecutor did not defend his former assistant further. Mr. Bolan wrote for The National Review "perhaps improperly and ill advisedly," the prosecutor asserted, but did nothing that could invalidate the indictment.

While the defense contended that the courts were unanimous in quashing indictments in which grand jurors had been subjected to outside influence, the Government held the reverse to be true. Paul Williams said the innocence of a grand juror could exist only at the time of his selection and that thereafter he was entitled to be "passionately biased."

The article in The National Review, published Dec. 14, 1957, was headed: "Death of an Investigation. The Wheels of Justice Stop for Adam Clayton Powell Jr." It developed a theory that the investigation had been stifled by Republican politicians to reward Mr. Powell, a Democrat, for supporting President Eisenhower in 1956.

The indictment charged that Mr. Powell had prepared a false 1951 income tax reutrn for his wife, Hazel Scott, a jazz pianist, and that he evaded $3,000 in a joint return for 1952. The investigation of his affairs began in 1956. The grand jury heard evidence for several weeks and then was not called into session for fourteen months.

Won't Drop Powell's Tax Trial!

NEW YORK—With the die cast, Adam Clayton Powell's counsel prepares to fight in court against charges that the Harlem Congressman is guilty of income tax violations after a Federal jurist ruled against dismissal of the indictment.

Army Harrison S. Jackson told the press that he was "shocked" at the 30-page report which the judge handed down in his ruling.

POWELL'S COUNSEL had argued that the actions of former Assistant Attorney Bolan and the National Review editor in circulating information about the case had "beclouded" the indictments.

However, Judge Harland's opinion claimed that there was "no criminal intent" in the actions of Boland and the publication concerned.

A trial date will be set within the near future in Federal Court. The tax involved in the case amounts to $3,700. However, if convicted, Powell could receive as much as fines of $10,000 on each count and sentences ranging up to five years.

Rev. King And Rev. Powell

DOCTOR KING displayed a readiness to whoop it up for unsavory cases when he conducted the Easter political rally here over the execution of a rapist whose trial was so fair not even the U.S. Supreme Court would intervene.

Now King has embraced a Negro demagogue, the Rev. Rep. Adam Clayton Powell whose vicious racism has been denounced by Eastern newspapers and even by the NAACP.

King has offered his support for the Harlem hellmouth in his bid for reelection to Congress. In a letter to Powell, released to New York newspapers June 8, King said he was "deeply concerned" for Powell's reelection, continuing:

"For many years you have been a militant champion of justice, not only as a congressman from Harlem, but necessarily as a spokesman for disenfranchised millions in the South."

King went on to sympathize with Powell because he is "now being assailed with desperate weapons of political destruction because [he exercised] independence and acted with militant singleness of purpose." The attacks on Powell, King said, are "in reality an effort to destroy the Negro's political independence."

It is difficult to believe that a man of King's supposed academic accomplishments could be naive enough to swallow the above, which is essentially a parroting of Powell's pious ravings about being persecuted: by the Internal Revenue Service, by the Democratic Party in New York, by all the nameless white folks conspiring against him.

Thus King's endorsement must be put down as a shameless embrace of Powell's racial rabble-rousing, which the NAACP says offends even that organization. King knows that Powell has a vast following among the Negro masses; perhaps this accounts for the endorsement.

Here is Powell, the man Hulan Jack, Negro borough president of Manhattan, has accused of "preaching hate"; the man NAACP Executive Secretary Roy Wilkins has accused of "extreme racialism"; the man The New York Times has described as "sometimes the most contradictory and irresponsible Negro leader in America," whose brand of racism "is ... only dangerous [but] stupid as well."

Such a thug is actively supported by a man who has arrogated to himself the precepts of Christ and Ghandi.

Trouble Brewing In Harlem

Richmond Times-Dispatch

REP. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. seems almost certain to be returned to Congress this year by his 340,000 Harlem constituents, mostly Negroes. Such is the concensus of most observers.

This is partly because a great deal of hatred of white people has been stirred up in Harlem by the controversy over Rep. Powell. A substantial part of it has been aroused by Powell himself, who has made demagogic statements that he has been indicted on income tax evasion charges and dropped by Tammany Hall because he is a Negro.

It appears, however, that Congressman—the Rev. Mr. Powell (who is pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church) has for some time been stirring up race hatred in sermons to his congregation of over 10,000 members.

A recent article in The Washington Star says, for example, that "his message to them generally is, 'blessed are the poor—especially if they have been made poor by the white man.'"

THE effect of all this propaganda may be appreciated from an article in the June 21 issue of the Afro-American newspaper by Louis E. Lomax, in which he writes:

"Powell will win reelection, but Harlem will lose. It will lose representation in the city government. It will lose dignity because of the extreme racism that spews from its street corners.

"Night after night street corner orators mount stepladders on Harlem corners and shout hatred of white persons.

"Few people know it but Harlem police take extra precautions to keep whites from congregating near the hate rallies in fear of outbreaks. Respectable Harlemites are concerned.

"A top NAACP spokesman told the Afro this week:

"'If a white man said the things about us that are being said about white people on Harlem street corners, we would have a race riot. There is no doubt about it.'"

Afro Writer Lomax goes on to say that Powell's chances are being hurt by the support of these "ranting racists," but in the next breath says these tirades are greeted with cheers.

NO DOUBT Mr. Lomax is right in saying that the Harlem hate-mongers engender "concern in the minds and hearts of well meaning people who have fought race hatred all their lives." The question is whether there are enough of these to be effective.

The political contest between Rep. Powell and his Negro opponent, Earl Brown (a native of Charlottesville), is expected to reach a much faster tempo in the near future. The writer in the Afro says that "already people are predicting violence" and that "two Tammany Harlem leaders admitted . . . that they have secured gun permits and carry pistols for self protection."

A cheerful picture, this. It is possible that an even worse race riot than the New York riot of 1943 will break out this summer in the district of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. If so, this man, whom the pro-integrationist New York Herald Tribune terms a "demagogue of racism," apparently will bear a large share of the blame.

Powell amendment to science bill due

WASHINGTON

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell told members of the House Committee on Education and Labor last week that he will offer amendments from the floor to prevent racial discrimination in administration of the proposed Hill - Elliott Science Education bill.

The New York Congressman, whose name has become synonimous with anti - discrimination clauses for bills involving Federal expenditures, told the committee hearings, Friday, that he would not propose amendments to the measure before it was reported out of committee.

Such amendments, he declared, would provide opportunity only to tie the measure up in the Rules Committee and delay action upon it at a time that the nation needs it to go forward with a 100 per cent, all-out offensive in the and technology.

The bill as written, authorizes grants to individuals to pursue scientific and technical education in colleges and universities of their own choice.

His contempated amendments, Mr. Powell said, will be aimed at barring discrimination in the awarding of grants in addition to preventing them from being denied on the basis of religion, creed or sex, thus opening the way for utilizing the brainpower of women students as well as those who are of the Catholic or other religious beliefs.

Justice Dept. Is Quiet On Powell

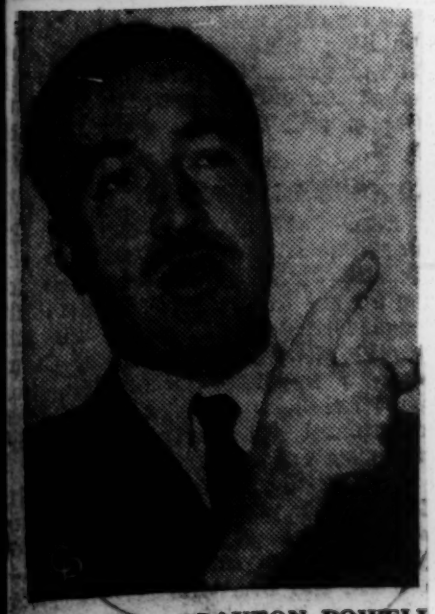
WASHINGTON — (INS) — The Justice Department refused comment Monday on the whereabouts of the files in the income tax evasion case involving Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D) N. Y.

A official spokesman had only th to say about a New York re- pc that the Powell files had been ma ed "top secret" and trans- Ne to the Attorney General's offic in Washington:

"T at is regarded as being an inter al matter in the Justice De- partm nt."

Th spokesman added that any statem nt on the issues in the case of the New York Congressman, who was i dicted by a Federal Grand Jury last Thursday, would have to come from Attorney General William P. Rogers.

Rogers was unavailable. He was expected to be on return from Bing- hamton, N. Y., to Washington.



REP. ADAM CLAYTON POWELL

Powell Not In Pulpit On Sunday

NEW YORK — (INS) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., under indictment on income tax charges, failed to preach at his Harlem church Sunday.

The Congressman and Pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church had been expected to preach his usual sermons at the 10 a.m. and noon services.

However, church officers said he was in Washington.

MADE NO COMMENT

He has so far refused any comment on the indictment, handed up by a Federal Grand Jury Thursday. The jury charged him with three counts of tax evasion. If convicted he would face a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each count.

William Hampton, one of Powell's congressional secretaries, gave newsmen copies of two resolutions. One was from the church committees and staff and backed "our minister 100 per cent in his fight to evade persecution." The other resolution came from 10 other ministers and called the circumstances of the indictment "wholly outside the realm of justice."

REPORTERS BARRED

However, reference was made at the 10 a.m. service to the need for the church to have faith, and at the noon service a prayer was offered asking for strength to help Powell fight his opponents.

Powell's attorney in the tax case, top Washington Defense Attorney Edward Bennett Williams, will arrange with federal authorities for Powell's arraignment this week on the tax charge.

Powell Urges Group: Use Your Civil Rights

NEW YORK CITY — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., (D-NY) main speaker here Saturday during the celebration of the Fourth Anniversary of the Supreme Court decision outlawing segregation in the public schools, outlined an eight-point work program to revitalize Negro political spirit and kill the growing philosophy that "white is right."

Powell's program, attacking the thesis that "this is a white man's country of dedicated hypocrisy and of organized but legalized contempt for all colorities," called on New Yorkers to:

1. Campaign to get out the vote of every Negro group;
2. Protect the NAACP;
3. Call on the press to campaign against "creeping Eastlandism that has come to our community . . . ;"

DISREGARD RISKS

4. Use civil rights with emotion, fervor, dedication and disregard of risks and persecutions;
5. Serve notice to the people of this city "that we are not going to tolerate any group of people sitting outside of our community dictating to us who our candidates should be within our community;"
6. Reject any philosophy of "education, gradualism, moderation, and go-slow;"
7. Break through the "McCarthy-Eastland blanket of mediocrity;"
8. "Communicate regularly our problems with the massive bloc of two billion colored peoples through out the world."

Powell said an indictment against America for failing to practice democracy is written between the lines of reports concerning Vice President Nixon's trip through the Latin American countries.

CITES HIGH COURT

Only the U. S. Supreme Court, he said, has not fallen prey to the philosophy that "white is right." However, he pointed out that the highest tribunal, which issued the school desegregation decree four years ago, is supported by an all-white jury system.

Powell also attacked Negro leadership in the North, declaring it "a farce." He said, "I submit that a voteless Negro in the South is worth more than a boss-controlled voting Negro in the North because he is at least fighting for manhood and we have lost ours."

He hastened to point out that bombings, murders, legalized defiance of federal law are "going totally unchallenged . . . and our voting strength in the North is being completely ignored."

BUCKLEY QUERIED ON POWELL JURY

Says He Sent Article From Magazine to Tax Panel on Member's Request

By EDWARD RANZAL

William F. Buckley Jr., editor of The National Review, said yesterday he had sent copies of an article in the magazine to a Federal grand jury investigating Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. at the request of a juror.

The grand jury later indicted Mr. Powell on income tax evasion charges. The article, which appeared in the Dec. 14, 1957 issue, was mailed to members of the grand jury with a covering letter, Mr. Buckley said.

The article was critical of the Justice Department's handling of the case. The covering letter said that the magazine had established an "irregularity of the suspension of the investigation."

After the article and letter were mailed the investigation was reopened on the insistence of the grand jury and the indictment followed.

Mr. Buckley appeared under subpoena before another Federal grand jury yesterday. The Government is seeking to determine whether the decision of the first grand jury to indict Mr. Powell was influenced by the communications.

After his appearance, Mr. Buckley gave a prepared statement to newspaper men.

The editor said that on April 2 he met with a member of the Powell grand jury at the latter's request.

Mr. Buckley said the juror was convinced that Washington had interfered with the Powell investigation. The juror then asked that copies of the article be sent to every member of the panel, Mr. Buckley said.

"The juror told me he intended to lunch the very next day with the foreman," Mr Buckley said," that he intended to announce to the foreman that if Mr. Williams [United States Attorney Paul W. Williams] persisted in his refusal to reconvene the grand jury, he and other dissatisfied members of the jury would take matters into their own hands.

"To that end, he said he had arranged to rent a suite of rooms at the Commodore Hotel to which the jury would be invited, there to resume the investigation."

In his statement, Mr. Buckley called upon Mr. Williams to disqualify himself as prosecutor "as there are no grounds, given the record, for public confidence in his management of the case."

Later, Mr. Williams said he would not withdraw from the case. He added that he had no intention of bringing Mr. Buckley back before the grand jury and that he did not intend to ask members of the Powell grand jury to testify before the Buckley grand jury.

"At no time," he continued," has the Department of Justice, directly or indirectly, instructed me that the investigation was to be killed or closed. In fact, my specific instructions were not to discharge the grand jury pending evaluation of the case."

Powell Sees 'Persecution'

WASHINGTON, May 13 (AP) —Repesentrative Powell told a news conference today that his indictment was "persecution."

Mr. Powell was interviewed after he had addressed a closed meeting of Negro leaders. In response to questions, he said he did not know how he would plead to the indictment Friday. Asked whether the charges were true, he said:

"I don't know until I talk to my lawyer tomorrow."

Edward Bennett Williams is representing Mr. Powell.

POWELL TO ENTER TAX PLEA FRIDAY

Justice Department Blocking of Investigation Charged —Bolan Faces Inquiry

BY EDWARD RANZAL

Representativec Adam Clayton Powell Jr. will plead on Friday in Federal Court to income tax evasion charges. The Harlem Democrat will be represented by Edward Bennett Williams of Washington.

The indictment, returned last Thursday, charged the Representative, who is also a minister, with preparing a false tax return for his wife Hazel Scott, the jazz pianist, in 1951, and evading taxes on a joint return for 1952.

Meanwhile, it was charged that a second assistant United States Attorney had been blocked by the Justice Department from reopening the Powell tax investigation when it was dormant.

In March, 1957, former Assistant United States Attorney Thomas A. Bolan, who was then in charge of the case, was told the Powell investigation was being turned over to the Treasury Department.

From that date until last April 17 the case reportedly was pigeon-holed by the Justice Department. Then the grand jury, which had not met for fourteen months, threatened to take matters into its own hands. The case was reopened and the indictments resulted.

A week after Mr. Bolan resigned on Sept. 20, 1957, the Powell case was assigned to Assistant United State. Attorney Fioravante G. Perrotta, now in private practice.

Witness Available

Within a short period Mr. Perrotta learned that an important potential witness against Mr. Powell was available for questioning. The prospective witness was a close associate of the Representative.

Mr. Perrotta discussed the matter with Daniel McMahon, chief of the criminal division. Mr. McMahon said he thought it was a good idea, but first wanted to check with United States Attorney Paul W. Williams.

Thereafter, it was said, Mr. McMahon told Mr. Perrotta to "sit tight; this case is a hot potato." Mr. Perrotta was told not to do anything until Washington approved, it was charged. He was told further to inform Morris Emanuel, Treasury Department agent in charge of the investigation, not to get in touch with the prospective witness.

In a storage room in the United States Court House at Foley Square, five cabinets containing material that had been presented to the grand jury by Mr. Bolan gathered dust. In December, 1957, The National Review, a conservative weekly magazine, reviewed the case.

Files Taken Away

Shortly thereafter the Justice Department requested that all the files be shipped to Washington. A week later Mr. Perrotta asked that the Powell case be reassigned. It was given to Chief Assistant United States Attorney Arthur H. Christy, who, with Mr. Williams, the Federal attorney, presented the final phases of the action to the grand jury. Mr. Perrotta resigned last March.

Today William F. Buckley Jr., editor of The National Review, will appear under subpoena before a Federal grand jury. Mr. Williams has said that he wanted to investigate Mr. Buckley's actions in sending copies of the magazine to grand jury members. Communicating with members of a grand jury to influence their decision is a crime.

Mr. Williams also said that he would investigate Mr. Bolan. The latter was approached by several grand jury members who wanted him to take over the Powell investigation if the Government's case bogged down.

Mr. Perrotta refused yesterday to comment on his part in the investigation. However, he said he was "completely shocked" by the fact that Mr. Bolan was being investigated.

In a statement issued yesterday Mr. Buckley said that he intended to lodge a complaint with the American Society of Newspaper Editors that the Justice Department had interfered with freedom of the press.

Powell Pleads Innocent Of Tax Charges

Of Tammany Ouster, Says He's Glad To Be 'Rid Of Them'

NEW YORK, May 16 (U.P.)—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., pleaded innocent today to charges of cheating on income tax returns he filed for himself and his wife, Pianist Hazel Scott.

The Negro Democrat, 50, appeared to be unperturbed by charges that could put him in prison for 15 years. The congressman, who also is a minister, was outspoken in welcoming Tammany Hall's decision to dump him as a candidate for re-election this year because he supported President Eisenhower in the 1956 election.

"Thank God, I'm rid of them," Powell said, "And now it's time for the city to get rid of them."

A crowd of about 100 of Powell's Harlem friends, followers and ministerial colleagues greeted him when he drove up to the federal courthouse in a chauffeur-driven limousine.

By the time his six-minute court appearance was over, the crowd outside had swelled to 300.

Powell's wife was not in court. Miss Scott has been living in Paris and was reported planning to divorce Powell.

He was charged with preparing a fraudulent return for Miss Scott in 1951, listing her income as $4815, when it allegedly should have been $9181, and listing their joint net income in 1952 as $5252, when it allegedly should have been $8952

POWELL CHARTING OWN PARTY SET-UP

At Rally He Bids Jack and De Sapio Shun Harlem

Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. began laying the groundwork yesterday for what might become his own political organization. At the same time he publicly challenged two top Tammany leaders to stay out of Harlem.

In a talk to 800 supporters in the basement auditorium of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, 132 West 138th Street, the Representative warned Hulan E. Jack, Borough President of Manhattan, and Carmine G. De Sapio, leader of Tammany Hall, to avoid "walking up and down the streets of Harlem."

"We wonder what the Communists did to Vice President and Mrs. [Richard M.] Nixon in South America," he said, "but we will make it mighty uncomfortable." On Saturday, Mr. Jack was booed at a Harlem rally.

Mr. Powell's remarks were made after Tammany leaders in the Sixteenth Congressional District had voted last Thursday to read him out of the Democratic Party on the gorund that he was not a Democrat and had supported President Eisenhower in 1956.

Just prior to yesterday's rally Mr. Powell had preached a 10 A. M. communion sermon in the upstairs church sanctuary on the sanctity of the family. He has been pastor of the church for many years. With an estimated membership of 12,000, it is regarded as the largest Protestant congregation in the world.

The Harlem Representative, who is under indictment on a charge of evading Federal income taxes, announced after his sermon that he would meet briefly with registered voters of the district in the basement auditorium.

He also announced that for three evenings beginning at 8 o'clock tonight a "political school" would be held in the church.

The representative said the "school" would have one purpose: to train workers in the complexities of preparing and gathering valid petitions to enter his name in the Aug. 12 primaries.

To run in the Democratic primary Mr. Powell will need at least 750 valid signatures. The problem, however, will lie in the careful, legal compilation of the names to avoid disqualification of any on technical ground.

If the courts should cancel his party enrollment, barring him from the Democratic primary, he would have to obtain 3,000 valid signatures to appear on the November ballot as an independent candidate.

The representative also spoke to about 800 persons after the noon service and outlined the same plans. Worshippers at the two church services totaled 6,000.

"When the people booed and jeered Hulan Jack," Mr. Powell told his political supporters, "that marked the beginning of the end of boss control. I am going to ask all registered voters not to sign anything that doesn't have my name on it. We've got to teach the Negro voter how to stop lynching himself."

Talks to Puerto Ricans

The Representative told the voters that the petitions would make "nice bundles for Tammany." He sarcastically added that "various people would receive gifts of thirty pieces of silver."

Mr. Powell disclosed that on Saturday he had talked to about thirty Puerto Rican leaders who had pledged him support.

"This might just mushroom into something that will be the end of Tammany Hall," he observed.

The Representative said later that he was sending open letters to State Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz and United States Attorney General William P. Rogers "charging Tammany Hall with trying legal tricks through Tammany-appointed judges to keep me from running for re-election and I am asking their help in getting my petition recognized."

Mayor Is Aloof

Meanwhile, Mayor Wagner washed his hands of the Powell-Tammany controversy. Speaking on the "Mayor's Press Conference" over WABC-TV, he said that his practice was "not to interfere in local primary contests."

Support for Mr. Powell came from another sector yesterday morning when the Rev. Dr. Gardner C. Taylor of the Concord Baptist Church in Brooklyn told his congregation that he had sent a telegram to Mr. Powell "expressing the hope that he will be vindicated and re-elected."

Dr. Taylor, a Negro, is president of the Protestant Council of the City of New York.

Editor's Challenge Answered

Won't Quit Powell Case, U.S. Attorney Declares

NEW YORK —(AP)— U.S. Attorney Paul W. Williams says he has no intention of disqualifying himself from the Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. tax evasion case.

It was Williams' reply to a challenge by William F. Buckley Jr., editor of the National Review, that he withdraw from the case against the Negro Democratic congressman.

Buckley said Williams should disqualify himself "as there are no grounds, given the record, for public confidence in his management of the case."

Buckley appeared before a grand jury Tuesday under subpoena. The government is seeking to determine whether the decision of another grand jury to indict Powell was influenced by Buckley.

The editor repeated that he sent copies of an article in his conservative magazine to members of the indicting grand jury. The article was critical of the Justice Department's handling of the case.

In a statement to newsmen, Buckley accused Williams of negligence in the performance of his duties.

Presentation of the case before the indicting grand jury had started before the 1956 election in which Powell supported President Eisenhower because of the desegregation issue.

Shortly after the election, a delay developed in tax investigation against Powell. The indictment was reported Thursday.

At no time," Williams said, "has the Department of Justice, directly or indirectly, instructed me that the investigation was to be killed or closed."

"In fact," he added, "my specific instructions were not to discharge the grand jury pending evaluation of the case."

Powell told newsmen in Washington that his indictment was "persecution."

Rep. Powell Is Dumped By Tammany

NEW YORK (AP)—Tammany Hall Thursday dumped Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D-NY) as a Democratic candidate for re-election. There was no immediate designation of the party's choice as his opponent.

In anticipation of Tammany's action, Powell has said he will head a full ticket of his own this fall in the Harlem congressional district which he has represented since 1945.

Powell on May 8 was indicted on charges of evading $3,063 in income taxes. He is due to plead to the indictment Friday and the outcome of the case could well affect his battle for re-election.

Tammany's dumping of Powell was in reprisal for his 1956 support of the Eisenhower Republican administration. Powell said he backed Eisenhower because of the racial segregation issue but at the same time ran himself as an organization Democrat.

"The indictment was not a factor," Tammany leader Carmine G. DeSapio said in announcing Tammany's decision to drop Powell. He said 11 of 13 Harlem district leaders favored dumping Powell.

If convicted, Powell is liable to a maximum 15 years in prison and $30,000 in fines.

Powell Sets All-Out War On Tammany

(Chicago Tribune Press Service)

NEW YORK, May 16 — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, disowned by 11 of his 14 Tammany district leaders, today made his break with the city Democratic organization complete. Calling Tammany leader Carmine G. De Sapio a liar, Powell announced a city-wide primary campaign to defeat Democratic candidates.

Appearing at federal court for his arraignment on income tax violation charges, Powell told reporters:

"With the cooperation of the clergy of every denomination in the five boroughs, which is evidenced by many ministers being here today, we are entering a ticket in the Democratic primary wherever there is a community of Negroes and Puerto Ricans, and where we can find qualified people in all the five boroughs."

The projected campaign appears unlikely to cause a general political upheaval, but politicians said it could, if followed through vigorously, endanger Democratic legislative seats in several districts which have experienced a large influx of Negro and Puerto Rican voters in the past few years.

Powell Pledges To Fight For House Seat

Congressman Cheered At Harlem Rally

NEW YORK (AP) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY), indicted on income tax charges and spurned by Tammany Hall, told a cheering Harlem rally Saturday he would "stay in the Democratic party and fight it out" with anyone Tammany endorses for his seat.

The Negro congressman, who also is the pastor of the city's largest Negro church, used a non-partisan antisegregation rally as a forum to explain his political position.

Powell, who supported President Eisenhower in 1956, said he would "stay a Democrat," quashing plans of Republican leaders in two assembly districts in his Harlem area to get Powell the Republican nomination for Congress.

NAMES THREE

Naming Gov. Averell Harriman, Mayor Robert Wagner and Tammany leader Carmine De Sapio as the Democratic leaders who had denied him the party's support, Powell accused them of subscribing to the philosophy that white is right.

De Sapio announced after a meeting of Harlem Democratic leaders Thursday that they had voted 11-1 to read Powell out of the party and deny him support for re-election. De Sapio reportedly is seeking a Negro candidate for the party's endorsement in Powell's district.

The rally, which drew about 2,000 people, was sponsored by the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. Speakers in addition to Powell included Manhattan Borough President Hulan Jack, a Negro, who has sided with Tammany against Powell.

When Jack rose to speak, the crowd booed and jeered so loudly that he was forced to sit down. The crowd chanted "throw him out" and "we want Powell."

The borough president finally gave up and sat down, visibly upset. Questioned by reporters, he replied: "Please, I have no comment to make."

When Powell spoke, the applause was as loud as the boos for Jack had been.

PROMISES TO FIGHT

Powell promised to fight for the nomination and wage a write-in campaign if he is denied it. He said he also would seek Liberal party support.

Powell attributed the attacks on Vice President Nixon in Latin America to segregation in the United States.

"Wherever Vice President Nixon went in South America," Powell said, "he was met with cries of 'Little Rock, Little Rock.' The United States is in danger of becoming a second class power because we have second class citizens," he said, adding:

"This a white man's country of dedicated hypocrisy and of organized and frequently legalized contempt for minorities. The executive and legislative branches of our government now are and have been locally and nationally dedicated to the philosophy 'white is right.'"

Tammany Ditches Troubled Powell

Won't Support Him, Cites '56 Bolt To 'Ike'

NEW YORK, May 15 — (UP) —Tammany Hall added to the woes of Negro Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. Thursday. The Democratic machine decided not to support the Harlem clergyman-politician for re-election because he bolted the party to support President Eisenhower in 1956.

Tammany leader Carmine de Sapio said the decision to dump Powell had nothing to do with his having been indicted on a Federal income tax evasion charge.

Since Powell's indictment by a Federal grand jury last week, it has been disclosed his pianist wife, Hazel Scott, has left him and is seeking custody of their son.

De Sapio announced after a closed meeting of Tammany leaders that the vote was 11 to 1 against Powell with one member of the leadership abstaining.

Powell has been elected to Congress from New York's 16th District seven times.

NEGROES HONOR DARBY, POWELL

CLARKSDALE, Miss. (Special) A Prentiss Negro minister who filed Mississippi's first civil rights lawsuit and a Jackson Negro whose American Legion post was dropped from State legion rolls will receive the Regional Council of Negro Leadership's "Men of the Year" awards.

Officials of the organization said the awards will be made to Rev. H. D. Darby and Albert Powell at the group's annual meeting April 25.

Negro Lawmaker Faces Tax Charge

Federal Grand Jury Indicts Adam Clayton Powell

NEW YORK, May 8.—(AP)—A Federal grand jury Thursday indicted Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D., N.Y.) on income tax evasion charges.

The three-count indictment carries a maximum penalty on conviction of 15 years in prison and $30,000 in fines.

Powell, 49, has been in Congress as a Democrat since 1945.

In the last presidential election in 1956, Powell supported President Eisenhower and the Republican national ticket because he said he was displeased with his own party's national stand on racial segregation.

Powell Voted Support Of Harlem Church

NEW YORK, May 12 (AP).—Representative Powell, Democrat of New York, under indictment on charges of Federal income tax evasion, has the support of leaders of his Harlem congregation.

Mr. Powell, pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church for 20 years, did not appear yesterday to deliver two scheduled sermons.

His followers jammed the Harlem church. At the end of the noon service the ministers, board of deacons, board of trustees, Women's Committee, Men's Committee and the staff of the church adopted a resolution affirming their full support of the Negro minister.

Later, a New York spokesman issued a statement to the press quoting Mr. Powell, and said it was telephoned from Washington by Mr. Powell. It dealt only with his hiring of Edward Bennett Williams, noted Washington criminal lawyer, to defend him in the tax case.

The statement said Mr. Powell "approached Mr. Williams without his solicitation, presented my problem and he agreed to take the case, pending a longer conference this week with him concerning details." He said he was issuing the statement "to clear up some misunderstanding."

Powell still in good shape despite tax rap say D.C. observers

By CARLISLE BARGERON

Despite his recent indictment for income tax evasion, the status of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell as a member of Congress will not be affected, it is felt in official circles here.

Powell, it is believed, will continue to exercise all his congressional prerogatives and receive full pay. Moreover, his colleagues are expected to ignore the indictment and treat him the same as before. The assumption is based on past experience with committee members similarly disposed.

Bloodshed If Necessary Promised By Negro

JACKSON, May 19 (U.P.)—Albert Powell, president of the Jackson Progressive Voters League, told fellow Negroes Friday night that the race will shed blood if that's what it takes to have integration.

"The old people shed tears," Powell told an NAACP rally. "The young people will shed blood if it is necessary."

Powell said the Negro is demanding freedom. "In Mississippi they say we can't have it but we are going to have it."

Chicago Negro Attorney Richard R. Debow told the rally that "complete and total integration" for the nation is certain. But he said new freedoms call for new responsibilities.

"Many doors will be opened and we must be prepared," Debow said. "We must not compete as Negroes, we must compete as men and be the best."

He told the Negroes they should pay their poll taxes, register and vote. Otherwise, he said, "You are losing your rights by default."

LUCKY NEGRO Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, of Harlem! Not living in Alabama he's a free Democrat. After supporting Eisenhower and being disillusioned (with other colored voters) he remains in good standing with his Democratic Democratic Party and has announced for Soapy Williams for President.

Yes, that's the Soapy our slave oath people would swear us to.

Reason totters when a slave oath card with the Democratic rooster under a "White Supremacy" legend begs Alabamians to "protect your rooster!" Protection by swearing for whatever integrationist the convention may nominate is too deep for me.

JAVITS 'INCLINED' TO FAVOR POWELL

Senator Hints He Will Back Congress Candidate Unless Tax Charges Stand Up

By DOUGLAS DALES

Senator Jacob K. Javits said yesterday that his "normal inclination" was to support Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. for re-election from Harlem's Sixteenth Congressional District.

Mr. Powell, a Democrat, faces a primary contest with Councilman Earl Brown for the Democratic nomination, but has been assured of the Republican nomination.

Mr. Javits indicated that he would back Mr. Powell unless an investigation of the latter's income tax difficulties showed some "moral reason" for withholding support. Mr. Powell has pleaded not guilty to Federal indictments charging tax evasion.

Asked on the WCBS broadcast, "Let's Find Out," whether he would support Mr. Powell, Mr. Javits replied:

"I know Dr. Powell very well. I served with him in the House. I might say, too, that he supported me personally when I was running for the Senate—made a considerable point of it.

"He is a great champion of civil rights. Therefore it seems to me that the normal sympathy which I would have and my normal inclination would certainly be to say, yes, I will support him."

Mr. Javits added, however, that this was subject to a review of the tax charges. "because I am not going to support blindly anyone whom the Republican party endorses."

Others Voice Objections

Objections to Mr. Powell's selection as a candidate last week by Republican committee members in Harlem were voiced by two other Republicans, although one of them offered a defense for the Harlem leaders' action.

Daniel J. Riesner, secretary of of the New York County Republican committee, said he was among Republican Advisory Committee members who advised against an endorsement of Mr. Powell.

But in defense of the Harlem leaders, he said they felt that Northern and Southern Democrats had conspired to deny Mr. Powell renomination in an effort to block him from the chairmanship of the House Labor and Education Committee.

TAX CASE ILLEGAL, POWELL CHARGES

He Asks That Indictment Be Dismissed on Ground of Jury Tampering

Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. charged yesterday that the income tax evasion indictment returned against him had been procured in flagrant violation of the law.

He asserted further that former Assistant United States Attorney Thomas A. Bolan had illegally revealed to the weekly publication, The National Review, what had taken place before the indicting grand jury.

The Harlem Representative's allegations were in papers filed in Federal Court by his attorney, Edward Bennett Williams. Mr. Williams asked for dismissal of the indictment and inspection of grand jury minutes and copies of income tax returns involved in the indictment.

The motions will be argued next Monday, at which time a date for trial will be set if the dismissal motion is denied.

False Return Charged

Mr. Powell was indicted May 8 on charges that he prepared a false 1951 income tax return for his wife, Hazel Scott, the jazz pianist, and that he evaded $3,000 in a joint return for 1952.

The Powell tax investigation began in 1956. After hearing evidence for a number of weeks the grand jury was not called back into session for fourteen months. During this period The National Review published articles demanding to know what had happened to the inquiry.

Mr. Williams said that William F. Buckley Jr. had improperly communicated with members of the grand jury before it returned the indictment and had published an article calling for the panel to indict Mr. Powell.

In a supporting affidavit, Mr. Powell asserted that Mr. Bolan had given the magazine the names and addresses of the grand jurors, descriptions and analyses of evidence presented to the grand jury and declarations that evidence sufficient to return an indictment had been presented to the grand jury. He said also that Mr. Bolan had reported his superiors had prevented him from continuing the grand jury investigation.

Powell Reveals Political Plans

WASHINGTON (INS) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.) said Tuesday that if the Democrats run a candidate against him in the 1958 primary, he will counter with a full slate of Negroes and Puerto Ricans to oppose other Democratic candidates.

Powell told a news conference that the slate is "ready to go" against Democrats in all New York City districts where Negroes or Puerto Ricans make up part of the population.

NOT OPPOSED

However, Powell noted that Tammany Boss Carmine De Sapio has not yet named anyone to run against him. If he does opposes him, he said, he will run as the regular Democratic candidate supporting the entire ticket.

Powell also declared that his indictment on income tax charges was "obvious persecution," and said "the white man can leave the plantation but the Negro cannot."

DIXIECRATS

He referred to the campaigning of Dixiecrats against Presidential nominees Harry S. Truman and Adlai Stevenson, and pointed out that the Southerners retained full seniority on congressional committees. Powell, however, lost his committee seniority because he supported President Eisenhower in 1956.

The Harlem Congressman said that he favored Mr. Eisenhower two years ago because the President made a promise on civil rights, and "has carried out that promise" by securing the first civil rights law in the U. S. for more than a half century.

HAZEL SCOTT

Meanwhile, in Paris, jazz pianist Hazel Scott denied a New York newspaper report that she plans to divorce Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., the Harlem Congressman under indictment for tax evasion.

Mrs. Powell called the report a "deliberate lie."

A New York newspaper said Powell and his wife had reached an out-of-court agreement under which she would take over their home in Westchester County and would obtain custody of their 11-year-old son, Adam Clayton Powell, III.

"I've made no plans to divorce the congressman," Miss Scott declared. "Therefore, there has been no discussion of custody of our son."

As for the report that she had bought a $35,000 villa in France, the pianist said, "the first I heard of it was when I was contacted by the press."

NEW YORK (AP)—Tammany Hall Thursday dumped Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr. (D-NY) as a Democratic candidate for re-election. There was no immediate designation of the party's choice as its opponent.

Powell Denies Tax Guilt; Lays Ouster to Race Bias

By RICHARD AMPER

A defiant Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. of Harlem pleaded not guilty yesterday to charges of evading Federal income taxes and then set up a political forum at the courthouse to denounce Tammany Hall.

He spoke after a clerk had read a Federal grand jury's indictment charging him with three counts of falsifying income tax returns.

Judge Edward Weinfeld released him without bail in his own custody and set June 16 for the filing of motions and setting a trial date.

Mr. Powell then converted his appearance at the United States Court House in Foley Square into a political rally and assailed Tammany leaders in the Sixteenth Congressional District who voted on Thursday to read him out of the Democratic party on the ground that he was not a Democrat and had supported President Eisenhower in 1956.

Raising Racial Issue

"I am being purged because obviously I am a Negro and a Negro should stay on the plantation," he said to reporters in the courthouse press room.

Asked about the statement by Carmine G. De Sapio, the leader of Tammany Hall, that party leaders in Harlem voted 11 to 1 to drop him because he was not a Democrat, he replied:

"De Sapio is a liar."

Calling Mr. De Sapio "a Mississippi boss," he added: "The Negroes left Mississippi to get away from the white bosses, but they found them in Harlem."

He vowed to rally "the clergy" and to enter his own ticket in the Democratic primary in August in a bid for re-election to Congress, where he has served since 1944. He repeated his attack on Tammany before 300 sympathizers outside the courthouse.

His appearance in court lasted scarcely ten minutes. About 150 persons were present, perhaps fifty of them fellow clergymen of Mr. Powell, who is pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem.

The indictment, returned May 8, accused him of preparing a false tax return for his wife, Hazel Scott, the jazz pianist, in 1951, listing her income as $34,000 when, the Government charges, it should have been $9,181. He was charged with listing their joint income in 1952 as $5,252 instead of $8,952 as the Government contends.

The sympathizers outside the courthouse cheered the Representative. Several ministers lifted him on the shoulders, and he waved at newscamermen snapped pictures and television cameras hummed.

Earlier two of his followers interrupted his news interview to hand him a check totaling $275 for his campaign. One for $200 was from a Harlem urologist, Dr. C. V. Mickinley Wiles of 228 West 135th Street. It was presented by Col. Hubert F. Julian, so-called "Black Eagle" soldier of fortune who flew in the Ethiopian war against Italy.

"Thank God, thank God that I'm rid of them," Mr. Powell said of the Tammany leaders who had voted against him.

"And I think it's time the city got rid of them. I plan, with the cooperation of the clergy, whom you saw here this morning, who represent every single denomination, to run—with their cooperation—a ticket in the Democratic primary wherever there is a concentration of Negroes and Puerto Ricans and where we can find qualified persons. We also will enlist the support of non-colored people to help in any way."

Mr. Powell explained that he considered running in the Democratic primary vital to maintain his committee seniority in Congress if he should be re-elected.

Fear of Interference

But he indicated fears that he faced every possible legal encumbrance that the regular party organization could throw in his way. He said he intended to write to the Department of Justice to see thta he got "a fair shake in the primary."

He predicted that Tammany Hall "would use its influence in the courts of New York to destry my petitions when they are filed."

Commenting later on Mr. Powell's attack, Mr. De Sapio said:

"I have no wish to engage in a personal controversy with Mr. Powell. The action taken by the Democratic organization was the will of the leaders who know him best in Mr. Powell's own legal district. I would prefer that they answer him in their own way and at their own time."

He said that the Harlem Democratic leaders, scheduled to meet next week to designate a candidate for Mr. Powell's seat might consider invoking a section of the Election Law authorizing a court procedure to cancel Mr. Powell's party enrollment and thus invalidate his candidacy in the primary.

Mayor Wagner said that if Mr. Powell was charging discrimination against Negroes, "as far as New York City is concerned, we're doing more than any other city in the country to do away with discrimination in housing and in schools."

Powell Turns 'Big Gun' On His Critics

Hulan Jack, DeSapio top targets

IN A NUTSHELL

- Congressman Powell wins 30 day postponement in tax evasion indictment.
- Harlem legislator opens second front by challenging Tammany Hall.
- Supporters shower embattled solon with checks for war chest; pledge moral support.
- Tammany Hall seeks strong candidate to oppose Powell in August 12 primary.

NEW YORK — After winning a 30-day postponement in his tax indictment fight, Cong. A. Clayton Powell Jr. on Friday launched a frontal assault on Tammany Hall.

The fiery Harlem legislator opened a second front by challenging the city Democratic machine "in every district where there are colored voters."

He called on "non-colored insurgents" to become his allies "in this move to break the Mississippi bossism of De Sapio and Hulan Jack."

The challenge was made in the press room of the U.S. Court House in Foley Square, amidst cheers of Powell supporters.

THE PRESS room was jammed with newsmen and politicians. Powell took his seat at the table between his lawyers and began to give Tammany Hall the verbal whipping of its turbulent life.

"DE SAPIO is a ----," Powell said. "He is a ---- when he said I am not a Democrat.

"I now announce that we have already set up a city-wide organization to challenge Tammany Hall in every district where there are colored and Puerto Rican voters.

"I also asked non-colored insurgents to join in this move to break the Mississippi bossism of De Sapio and Hulan Jack, his number one -------.

"I now know," Powell continued "that last December De Sapio came to Washington and made a deal with the Dixiecrats. He promised then he would dump me and thus make it impossible for me to retain my seniority even if I won as an independent."

"BUT I have news for them. Bob Wagner (New York City mayor) and governor Harriman have never lifted their fingers to purge such men as Eatland from the party.

"Now they are after me. I'll see to it that they both are defeated at the poll. They are all dedicated to white domination and are after me because I am colored."

AT THIS point the press conference broke into bedlam as Powell supporters began to shower him with checks to establish his campaign fund. While newsmen scrambled to get live shots the supporters poured in from the back of the room. Powell then turned his attention to the judicial system of New York. He said:

"The only way they can keep me off the ballot is that De Sapio uses his power with the corrupt judicial system here to have my petitions thrown out. I have asked the United States Justice Department to intervene in this matter and see to it that, whereas this is a Federal election, that there is not any tampering with my petitions."

Following the press conference Powell moved out into the streets where hundreds more of well wishers had gathered. With shouts of "amen" and "praise God" they sanctioned Powell as he repeated the charges over television he had made in the press room.

With admirers, men and women colored and white, following at his heels, Powell made his way to his car and drove out into the mid-day fog.

MEANWHILE Tammany officials were trying to come up with a candidate to take Powell's seat.

At Friday's six-hour meeting, Tammany leaders were unable to agree. Four leaders refrained from voting while the majority of those voting indicated that they desired assembly woman Bessie Buchannan. Dr. Ralph Bunche and the NAACP's Thurgood Marshall were also mentioned. However, neither is willing to accept the assignment.

POWELL'S current political troubles began in 1956 when he bolted the Democrats to support President Eisenhower for re-election:

This incurred the wrath of Tammany Hall, which finally decided to dump Powell as the Democratic candidate in the 17th Congressional District.

Carmine De Sapio, head of the democratic organization, revealed that Powell would not be supported, but did not name the candidate selected to oppose the Harlem Congressman.

Powell, meeting the issue head on, has made plans to run a full slate of independent colored and Puerto Rican candidates.

IN REPLY to Tammany action to unseat him, the fiery legislator said last week:

"I am a damn sight better Democrat than the Dixiecrats who have left their party en masse and deserted the party platform.

"At least I stuck to the platform . . ."

He made the statement in reply to a charge by Manhattan Borough President Hulan Jack that he (Powell) was being dropped because he is not a good Democrat.

THE POWELL income tax probe and the side skirmishes it has touched off have mushroomed into a number one headache for the Eisenhower administration.

At present a federal grand jury is investigating possible outside influences in the indictment of Powell.

Targets of the probe are William Buckley, editor of the National Review, a pro-segregation magazine, and Thomas A. Bolan, a former U. S. attorney.

Buckley appeared before the grand jury last week to tell of his conduct in regard to the Powell case.

The young editor admits contacting jurors on matters pending before them.

"We're not reluctant to take credit for stirring the grand jury up," he said.

The editor allegedly sent copies of his magazine, carrying the Powell article, to members of the grand jury probing Powell's tax problems.

BOLAN, WHO prepared the case against Powell in 1956, has charged that he was ordered by Washington to drop the case.

Paul W. Williams, U.S. attorney, has denied this.

Powell Pleads Innocent To Income Tax Evasion

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN

NEW YORK — (INS) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., (D.), N. Y., pleaded innocent Friday to an indictment charging income tax evasion for himself and his wife, Pianist Hazel Scott.

Federal Judge Edward Weinfeld set June 16 as the date for a hearing and released Powell in his own recognition without bail. The defendant will be allowed to travel anywhere necessary in connection with his congressional duties.

Powell, who bolted the Democratic party in 1956 to support President Eisenhower, characterizes the indictment as "obviously persecution."

In the three-count indictment, he is accused of aiding in the preparation of a false income tax return for his wife, underpaying taxes and filing a false joint tax return

About 300 supporters of Powell were in the courtroom when he was arraigned. According to Powell, many of them are clergymen—members of the Baptist Ministers Conference. Powell is a minister of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem.

After the arraignment, Powell went to the press room in the federal building and talked with reporters. He told them his wife, Hazel, is now in Europe on a concert tour and will remain abroad eighteen months more to take advantage of the income tax laws.

SEPARATION "FALSE"

He characterized as "false" a report that there is a legal separation between him and his wife. He declared "there is no such agreement, written or oral."

Powell said his son, Adam Clayton Powell III, eleven years old, known as "Skippy," will go abroad to stay with his mother and will not return for a year.

The New York Congressman in his talk with newsmen branded Tammany leader Carmine G. Desapio "a liar" for declaring he no longer is a Democrat. Thursday Powell was read out of the party by Tammany district leaders in Harlem. They gave as their reason his support of Mr. Eisenhower in 1956.

BECAUSE I AM A NEGRO

"I was purged by Desapio because I am a Negro and Negroes live on plantations," Powell said. "Thank God, I am rid of Tammany. I will run for re-election as an Independent Democrat."

Desapio, informed that Powell plans to run as an Independent, said "the regular organization will beat any opposition."

Is Rep. Powell Being Dumped By Democrats?

NEW YORK (AP)—The New York Daily News said Wednesday that Rep. Adam Clayton Powell is "being dumped by the Democrats, liberals and labor organizations in his bid for an eighth term in Congress."

The newspaper said Democratic organization (Tammany) leaders have compiled a list of possible candidates to oppose Powell.

LIKED IKE

Powell, pastor of Harlem's Abyssinian Baptist Church, currently is under investigation by a federal grand jury. The probe involves alleged income tax violations.

The News said Powell has been slated for the political skids by six of the seven leaders in his 16th Congressional District.

HOW DUMPED

Several meetings have been held, the News said, to consider the manner in which Powell is to be thrown into the political discard, as well as to pick his successor.

It added that these meetings were held with the knowledge of Tammany leader Carmine DeSapio and that a formal get-together is scheduled for Thursday.

Rep. Adam Powell Indicted For Evading $3,063 in Taxes

New York, N. Y. — Representative Adam Clayton Powell, jr., 49, one of the most controversial political leaders of present-day history was indicted on three counts of income tax evasion after grand jury investigations were renewed last week.

Powell who has been in Congress since 1945 is accused of evading $3,063 in income taxes of his wife's pianist Hazel Scott and his own income in 1951 and 1952.

Shortly after the 1956 national election when Powell supported President Eisenhower and the Republican national ticket because, he said, he disagreed with the Democrat's stand on racial segregation a grand jury began investigation of Powell's income tax affairs. But the probe was suspended until last April 17 when it was renewed amid rumors that the jury had been pressurizing federal authorities.

Severan months ago, following reports the Democratic party was seeking to dump him, Powell said the Democrats dare not drop me" because "if they buck me for reelection, then there will not be a Democratic governor in Albany next year."

Powell is also pastor of Abyssinian Baptist church in New York, the largest Negro church of its denomination in the world.

REP. POWELL

Powell Indictment

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

CONGRESSMAN Adam Clayton Powell's indictment for income tax evasion is not conviction. He will now have his day in court and an opportunity to defend himself before the jury concerning charges that he falsified his and his wife's returns. There is already one gain from the indictment. It scotches the story that the Department of Justice would not prosecute the Harlem lawmaker after he put his influence behind President Eisenhower in the 1956 election.

The alleged offenses do go back pretty far and the delay of 14 months is not a display of rigorous activity. But now the case against Congressman Powell has been presented to a grand jury and the grand jury has found enough basis to justify an indictment. Now Adam Clayton Powell is just like any other citizen who must answer in court.

Powell Calls Tax Count Persecution

WASHINGTON (AP)—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY) told a news conference Tuesday that his indictment in New York for income tax evasion is persecution.

The Negro congressman made a point of the fact that the National Review, a conservative weekly, had sent the grand jury members copies of an issue reviewing his tax case. The article criticized government delay in pressing the case.

Powell was interviewed after he addressed a closed meeting of Negro leaders.

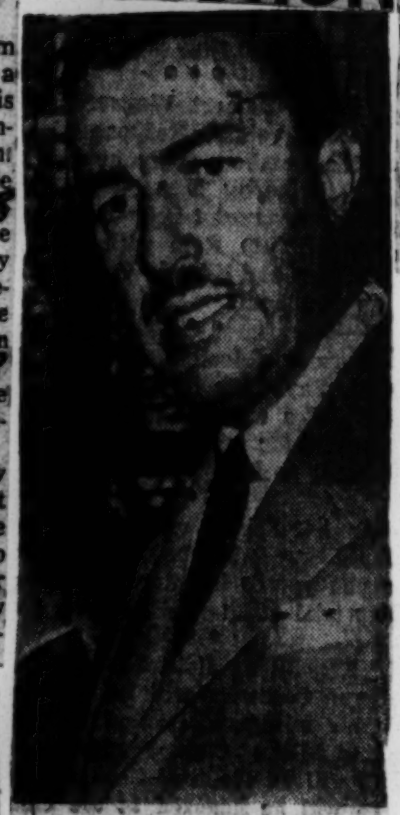
Powell said he did not know how he will plead to the indictment Friday. Asked whether the charges are true, he said: "I do not know until I talk to my lawyer tomorrow." Washington attorney Edward Bennett Williams is representing Powell.

The legislator said it is ridiculous to say that his support of President Eisenhower in the 1956 election was to help his tax situation. He said the election was Nov. 7 and 30 days later the grand jury was called to investigate him.

Powell called himself a better Democrat than the Dixiecrats who "leave the party in a national campaign and desert the party platform and anything that is liberal. I stick to the party platform and they don't."

Powell said he definitely is a candidate for re-election. If Tammany Hall names a Democratic candidate against him, he said, he has an independent slate of Negroes and Puerto Ricans ready to run in New York County.

"I will run in the Aug. 12 primary with or without the support of Tammany Hall," he said.



ADAM POWELL

Solon Misses Church

NEW YORK — (INS) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., under indictment for income tax evasion, failed to appear Sunday at the mid-morning service at his Abyssinian Baptist Church.

A spokesman for the Harlem congressman had said he probably would preach at both the 10 a.m. and the noon service. His church is too small to seat the entire congregation at once.

However, he failed to appear before an overflow congregation which was expecting to hear his reaction to his indictment and reports that he is being dumped by Harlem Democratic bosses.

Powell so far has refused to comment on the indictment, handed up by a federal grand jury Thursday. The jury charged him with three counts of tax evasion. If convicted, he would face a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine on each count.

Meanwhile, the storm over the 14-month delay in the probe of Powell's case brought a demand from House Judiciary Committee chairman Emanuel Celler (D) N. Y., that the White House investigate the matter.

Two persons involved in the Powell investigation have charged that Powell obtained at least a temporary immunity from the probe in exchange for his support in the Eisenhower 1956 election campaign.

Meanwhile, unconfirmed reports indicated that Powell and his jazz pianist wife, Hazel Scott, had reached a separation agreement. Under the terms of the reported agreement, their 11-year-old son, Adam Clayton Powell, 3rd, will go to Paris to live with his mother.

Celler said he was not so much interested in Powell's guilt or innocence as the charge there was a "bargain" between Powell and the administration.

"I'm quite sure the President would repudiate this is he had the facts," Celler added.

Celler said that if the White House didn't act, he would ask his judiciary committee to do so.

Powell's attorney in the tax case, top Washington defense Atty. Edward Bennett Williams, will arrange with federal authorities for Powell's arraignment this week.

Powell Jury Will Get Plea Not to Run Away

Williams to Address It Monday, Confirms Powell Was 'Invited'

By Milton Lewis

Herald Tribune Special

United States Attorney Paul W. Williams is expected to plead Monday with an "unhappy" Federal grand jury not to "run away" from the government in the panel's long-stalled investigation into the tax returns of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., D., N. Y., the New York Herald Tribune learned yesterday.

According to veteran observers at the United States Court House at Foley Square, a Federal grand jury has never "run away"—that is, taken matters into its own hands and obtained a special prosecutor.

Yesterday Mr. Williams denied reports that the grand jury plans to "leave the reservation." He said:

"I deny flatly that it is a run-away jury, since my office has been in continuous communication with its foreman, Clarence J. Myers, president of a life insurance company."

At the same time, Mr. Williams corroborated yesterday's Herald Tribune account that Mr. Powell will be "invited" to appear before the grand jury. However, he said, "it is certainly not in the cards for him to be here (to testify) next Monday." The Harlem Congressman is en route from Trinidad and is expected in New York by tomorrow.

Two of Mr. Powell's Congressional aids have already been convicted for income-tax evasion.

The grand jury is known to feel sympathetic to Mr. Williams, but antagonistic to his superiors in the Attorney General's office in Washington, from where Mr. Williams gets his orders.

The panel lays the blame on that Washington office for not being called into session for fourteen months. The grand jury reopened the Powell inquiry on April 17, reassembling on its own initiative and indicating strongly it would like to have former Assistant United States attorney Thomas A. Bolan as special prosecutor.

Mr. Bolan resigned that post for private practice in September after he won tax convictions against the two Powell aids. He has charged that on orders from Washington he was directed to drop the Powell inquiry. Mr. Powell, to the annoyance of many fellow Democrats, came out for the re-election of President Eisenhower in 1956.

The grand jury had heard evidence regarding Mr. Powell from when it was first impaneled in December, 1956, until February, 1957. It was in March, 1957, according to Mr. Bolan, that he was told to "lay off."

So from February, 1957, until April 17, 1958, the jury never sat. It is to expire on June 4, eighteen months after having been sworn in. Its life cannot be extended.

After denying yesterday that the jury plans to "run away," Mr. Williams said:

"I strongly deny that it is true that the jurors have indicated to me, publicly, or otherwise, that they intend to employ Thomas A. Bolan as their legal adviser."

As for Mr. Bolan, he repeated yesterday that he was standing by—ready to finish the job he started.

Mr. Williams said of the jury:

"We were aware of its desire to reconvene earlier this month and that coincided with the Justice Department's desire to reconvene it and continue the government's presentation of evidence before the jury."

Then Mr. Williams was asked about the fourteen-months of inaction by the grand jury. He said:

"They were idle because the government was using that time in order to make an evaluation of the case. . . . They (the jurors) had notified me that they wanted to reconvene and recommended April 17. At that time, I said, 'O. K., come ahead,' because the day before, the Department of Justice had given me its evaluation of the case."

Mr. Williams was asked if the panel could take on its own counsel. He said:

"That could be accomplished only with the consent of the court, before which the jury would have to state the facts."

This is the way close observers see it:

After Mr. Williams makes his pitch before the grand jury on Monday to let his office direct the investigation, the jurors will ask him to leave the room and then vote, in his absence.

NEW YORK REP. ADAM CLAYOTN POWELL

Jury to Get House Files In Powell Tax Probe

Washington, D.C.

The House voted yesterday to make available to a Federal grand jury in New York certain official records regarding Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat of New York.

Def. 430-58 34c(1)

One of Mr. Powell's aides was convicted of income tax evasion in 1956. The trial produced sworn testimony about kickbacks.

The House action in opening its records was taken in response to a Federal Court subpoena served on House Clerk Ralph Roberts directing him to make the files available to the Federal Court for the southern district of New York.

Before any House records or House employes may be made subject to a court order, the House must approve.

Job Data Released

By voice vote, the House agreed to make available to the court the official record of Mr. Powell's House attendance, and his employment of office workers and their canceled pay vouchers for the years 1951-55.

The Justice Department's investigation of Mr. Powell's tax affairs had begun before the election. In 1957 the United States attorney's office halted presentation of evidence in the case before the grand jury.

Recent printed reports have said the probe was shelved under pressure from Washington, allegedly applied as a result of Mr. Powell's support of Mr. Eisenhower.

No Pressure

United States Attorney Paul W. Williams has denied that the probe ever was dropped. He said the reason for the inactivity in the case was a desire by the Justice Department to evaluate the evidence. Mr. Williams said there was no pressure to drop the case.

Displeased that the Government had not pressed the case for 14 months, the grand jury had threatened to dismiss the Government counsel and continue on its own.

But after a three-hour session with Mr. Williams Monday, the jurors abandoned plans to "run away" with the investigation.

Powell says U.S. helps kill Cubans

Pro-American
Baltimore, Md.
Sat. 3-29-58

WASHINGTON, D.C. (NNPA) —Rep. Adam C. Powell, (D., N.Y.) charged on the House floor Thursday that the U.S. is an accomplice of President Batista of Cuba in the killing of nearly 4,000 Cubans.

Not only is this country supplying arms to Cuba, but it has a military mission in Cuba assisting the Cuban army, Mr. Powell said in a speech. The New Yorker called for a stop to the sending of arms and ammunition from this country to Cuba and for a withdrawal of the American mission.

Reports from Cuba say that President Batista, who first came to power in 1933 during the revolution that overthrew President Machado, is determined not to fall as other Latin American dictators. He has said he will fight to the finish.

THE AMERICAN embassy and the State Department are blamed by many Cubans for the daily death toll of a dozen or more Cubans recorded throughout the island.

Although Batista has invoked a severe censorship, the Cuban public opinion is outspoken against the U.S. The people, civic, religious, professional, and social leaders have demanded that Batista resign and accuse the U.S. of pursuing a policy in support of a dictator.

Cubans, more than 90 per cent of whom are trying to oust Batista, insist that he is being kept in office by the U.S.

The policy of the State Department is one of non-intervention in the internal affairs of Cuba. Cubans say they do not want this country to intervene, but that a really neutral attitude by the State Department and the American embassy in Havana can avoid an almost certain blood bath and destruction of Cuban and American policy that will result when the rebels launch their final try to drive to oust Batista.

NEW YORK — The National Review, pro - segregationist magazine that claims credit for re-opening the grand jury probe of Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, his tax returns, may find itself in difficulty with the Justice Department.

This was the latest development as the complicated tax investigation became more involved.

Phila. Amer.
Sat. 5-10-58

In other recent development:

1. Powell, who offered to testify in December, 1956, said he had no intention of volunteering to testify again.

2. Powell's ex-aide, Acy Lennon, a witness in the investigation, charged that he had been threatened by an assistant U.S. district attorney.

3. Congress, in an unprecedented action, voted, in Powell's absence, to let the grand jury have his Congressional pay records and his attendance record in the House. The jury had requested these items.

Baltimore, Md.

THE NATIONAL Review editorially admitted that its publishers sent copies of an article on the Powell case to members of the grand jury.

After boasting that its expose caused the jury to resume its investigation of the Powell matter, the magazine said:

"Two weeks ago National Review sent another copy of its expose of last December to every member of the grand jury, and, at last, action resulted."

THE AFRO ASKED Assistant District Attorney Arthur H. Christy, now in charge of the Powell case, this question:

"The National Review admits it contacted the individual members of the Powell grand jury. Is this proper and legal?"

A. "I cannot answer that question because of my relationship with the case."

Q. Who can answer?

A. Call any lawyer and ask him to give you the reading of Title 18 of the United States Code. There you will find your answer."

Segregationist magazine may be in trouble

The AFRO then searched out Title 18, and the following passage appears at Chapter 73 Section 1504:

Phila. Amer.

"Whoever attempts to influence the action or decision of any grand or petite juror of any court of the U.S. upon any issue or matter pending before the jury of which he is a member, or pertaining to his duties, by writing or sending to him any written communication in relation to such issue or matter shall be fined not more than one thousand dollars or imprisoned not more than six months or both."

Baltimore

ASKED IF any action was contemplated against the National Review for sending copies of anti-Powell articles to members of the grand jury, Mr. Christy said:

"I cannot answer that at this time."

He went on to say that his answer was not to be taken as saying action would not be initiated against the magazine, but rather that the decision if and when to proceed would have to be made by his superiors.

34c(1)

CONGRESSMAN POWELL said he would not volunteer to testify before the grand jury investigating his tax returns.

"I volunteered in December, 1956, when the matter was under active consideration to testify before the grand jury. Bolan, who was then in charge, never called me. I see no reason to volunteer again."

The Harlem Democrat was referring to former Assistant U.S. Attorney Thomas A. Bolan, who resigned his government post last September. Mr. Bolan has charged that the Justice Department ordered him to abandon the Powell investigation early in 1957.

OF THE investigation itself, Powell said:

"It's really getting to be a stinking mess."

Powell's former Congressional secretary, 300-pound Acy Lennon, filed a petition in Federal court alleging that Assistant U.S. Attorney Christy threatened him.

Lennon, now serving a year and a day in Federal prison for income tax evasion, quoted Christy as saying he would make the remainder of the term "the most miserable days of your life."

Lennon said the threat was made after he appeared before the Powell grand jury but failed to give "answers that pleased the jury."

Christy told the AFRO:

"The charges are absolutely false, but since Lennon has put the issue before the courts, I'll have no more to say on the matter."

Another significant development was disclosure that Congress, in Powell's absence, had voted to send the grand jury his payroll record and his attendance record in the House.

The matter of Powell's attendance has been a brewing political issue for some time.

Mr. Powell said:

"I cannot understand why the grand jury would be interested in that. My attendance record has nothing to do with my guilt or innocence on the tax and payroll padding issues."

The consensus in New York is that Powell's attendance record is being entered into the grand jury record for use in the coming elections during which the Congressman is certain to be accused of flagrant absenteeism.

POWERFUL POLITICAL forces have been at work against Powell for nearly two years. The outspoken Harlem legislator incurred the wrath of Tammany Hall when, in 1956, he supported the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket.

Later, he declared his freedom of "downtown dictation."

This won him wide support has been spearheaded by a from community and religious combination of Tammany Hall leaders.

The move to purge Powell loyalists, Southern Dixiecrats and disgruntled Republicans.

Rep. Powell Indicted As Income Tax Evader

NEW YORK (AP)—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., New York Negro Democrat who bolted his party's ranks in 1956 to support President Eisenhower, was indicted by a federal grand jury Thursday on charges of income tax evasion.

Powell also was accused of aiding and abetting in preparing false tax returns for his wife, pianist Hazel Scott.

The jury of 14 men and 5 women handed up a three-count indictment to Judge Irving Kaufman. If convicted Powell could be sentenced to five years in jail and be fined $10,000 on each count.

The first count of the indictment charged that Powell had advised in the preparation and presentation to the Internal Revenue Bureau of a fraudulent tax return for his wife for the year 1951. It said that her income was listed as $3,815 for the year, when actually it had been $9,181.

The second count charged that Powell and his wife in 1952, "wilfully and knowingly attempted to evade" a large part of the income taxes owed by them. It said they filed a false joint income tax return which listed their net income as $5,252, which was not taxable actually. The indictment said, their joint income was $8,952 and they owed taxes of $1,663.

The third count was contingent on the first. It charged that Powell failed to pay taxes of $990 in allegedly helping his wife to prepare a fraudulent return.

Ask Probe Of Reputed Tax Deal

NEW YORK — (INS) — House Judiciary Committee Chairman Emanuel Celler (D) N. Y., demanded Sunday a White House investigation of charges that a tax case against Rep. Adam Clayton Powell was dropped in exchange for his political support of President Eisenhower.

Celler's demand was based on an accusation by former Assistant U. S. Attorney Thomas A. Bolan that a grand jury probe of the Powell case was set aside on orders from William P. Rogers, then deputy attorney general and now Attorney General of the U. S.

Powell, a New York Democrat and Harlem churchman, supported Mr. Eisenhower for reelection in 1956 and was credited with swinging many Negro votes to the Republican ticket.

Celler said Powell's indictment by a federal grand jury Thursday "Is not guilt and he is entitled to a fair trial." He added:

"What interests me more is the charge that there was a bargain for Powell's backing of President Eisenhower in the 1956 campaign.

"I'm quite sure the President would repudiate this if he had the facts. Thus, it is now incumbent on the White House to check on the suspicion that a bargain was made."

If the White House fails to take action, Celler said, he will ask his House Committee to do so.

Meanwhile, Powell was expected to give his side of the story about his indictment in a sermon Sunday at his Abyssinian Baptist church, the largest in Harlem.

So far, he has refused to comment on the three-count indictment, which calls for a maximum penalty of five years in jail and a $10,000 fine on each count.

A spokesman for him said that Powell was in seclusion Saturday, apparently plans to reside for a considerable time.

NEW YORK. — (INS) — The arraignment of Powell on tax evasion charges appeared Monday to be in for delay, as the congressman scheduled three speaking dates for this week.

Federal authorities previously indicated Powell would be "contacted" for arraignment this week. However, a Powell attorney, Harrison Jackson, would only speculate the arraignment "might" take place this week.

"He usually spends Saturdays in meditation in preparation for his Sunday sermon," the spokesman said. "He is meditating today."

Powell was expected to preach his sermon twice Sunday, at 10 a.m. (EDT) and again at noon. His church is too small to seat the entire congregation at once.

Powell has hired one of Washington's top laywers to defend him against the income tax evasion charges. Edward Bennett Williams confirmed that he has agreed to serve Powell.

Williams' clients have included the late Sen. Joseph McCarthy, teamster union boss James Hoffa and underworld kingpin Frank Costello.

Powell, in the meantime, is planning a fight to keep his congressional seat. He met with his political advisors.

The Democratic party is believed almost certain to knock his name off the party ticket for the fall election. But Powell is making plans to run as an independent candidate without the help of Tammany Hall. Powell defied Tammany Hall in 1958 and supported President Eisenhower.

Overshadowing Powell's predicament is the growing controversy over the big delay in the jury probe leading to the indictment. Two men involved in the investigation charged the delay was due to White House influence.

U. S. Attorney Paul W. Williams responded to these charges by subpoenaing William F. Buckley, Jr., editor of the conservative magazine, "Nation Review."

Last week the magazine said it had mailed to the jury marked copies of a story it printed on Powell. The story said that the grand jury probe has been called off by the Eisenhower administration as a "probable act of political gratitude."

Williams also announced he was investigating the "conduct" of former assistant U. S. Attorney Thomas A. Bolan. Bolan said he and the jury were called off the Powell inquiry two months after it started in 1956 because it was "too hot to handle."

Predicts Divorce In Fall

New York Paper Say Couple Are Separated Now

PARIS. — (INS) — Jazz pianist Hazel Scott refused Tuesday to confirm or deny a New York newspaper report claiming that she planned to divorce Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., who was indicted for income tax evasion.

'How can any newspaper write a story from two words 'no comment'? she asked. "And that remains my only answer to the press —no comment."

The New York report had said that Powell, a Harlem minister and congressman, had reached an out-of-court separation agreement with his wife whereby she obtained their home in Westchester county and custody of their 11-year-old son, Adam Clayton Powell III. The story added that a divorce was planned this fall.

Powell's wife, who has spent considerable time in France, also declined to say whether she had bought a villa or whether she planned to settle in France.

Her friends in Paris doubted that she had purchased any property in France although they said she might do so later.

She presently is living in a rented apartment in Paris where she

The Powell Amendment

(An Editorial)

As Congress reconvened, there was weeping and wailing on both sides of the aisle following the announcement of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (Dem. N.Y.) that he would attach anti-discrimination riders to all measures aimed at the improvement of the nation's educational system.

Mr. Powell will be branded as an obstructionist and other less complimentary names from traitor to spy because of his efforts to insure fair play in the distribution of Federal funds to states as grants and to individuals in the form of scholarships.

This is old stuff to the New York solon. They tried to make him the goat in the defeat of the Federal-aid-to-education bill during the last session. This came even from those who welcomed his amendment as an excuse to keep from voting for the bill which they did not want in the first place.

Fat will be added to the fire this time by the hue and cry that the scholarships are necessary to develop more scientists to step up our national defense.

Mr. Powell knows, as all intelligent people know, that the mere spending of billions of dollars will not solve our defense emergency. He also knows that the greater the emergency the greater willingness should be to see that fair play and justice should prevail. Any precautions necessary to attain this end should meet with hearty approval because nobody knows from what source or from what race the real geniuses will come.

Mr. Powell also knows that the evil of discrimination is just as rampant today as it was prior to World War II when colored citizens had to fight for jobs in defense plants to help produce the weapons necessary to our national survival.

That was an emergency of the greatest urgency, but old man Jim Crow carried on business as usual.

The current missile race is also an emergency, but that would not prevent certain elements from trying to bar colored students from sharing the scholarships, matters not how promising or brilliant they might be.

Those who believe that Mr. Powell's amendments are unnecessary or more grandstanding need only to look at the Southland today. Nearly four years have passed since the Supreme Court handed down its historic decision barring segregation in public schools but so far we have only made a dent in the solid phalanx to keep colored pupils out of the schools.

If, after that decision had come down, the South had tossed in the sponge and said, "We put up a hard fight, but we lost," and flung open its doors and gotten on with the work of democratizing America, Mr. Powell's amendments would be unnecessary.

The South can silence Adam Clayton Powell today if it so desires and improve the nation's schools in the bargain. But they don't want it that way. So long as they persist in defying the courts, flouting the Federal government and jeopardizing our national defense the blame for our plight rests squarely on their shoulders. Mr. Powell is not the robber; he is merely the cop

Bypass Powell For Southerner

By ETHEL L. PAYNE

WASHINGTON — The House Education and Labor committee denied a sub-committee chairmanship to Adam Clayton Powell who is second in seniority on the committee.

Instead, the chairmanship of the sub-committee on labor standards, went to Rep. Philip Landrum (D. Ga.) The vacancy had occurred last year when Rep. Augustine B. Kelley (D. Pa.) died.

To soothe Powell and to make some pretense of equity after breaking the seniority rules, the House Interior committee, of which Powell is fifth ranking member, was said to be offering him a sub-committee chairmanship on territories taking in the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

Under this arrangement, the snubbed congressman would be authorized to hold investigations over U. S. handling of these possessions.

Powell was visiting Puerto Rico on committee business and could not be reached for comment on whether he would accept this arrangement as satisfactory in lieu of the other bypassing.

Newsman Reminds Ike Of Date With Adam Powell

By ETHEL PAYNE

WASHINGTON — Last week at his first press conference in two months, the President was asked this question by Frank Van Der Linden of the Richmond Times.

"Sir you agreed last fall, I believe to have a meeting with Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York.

"That meeting never could be fitted into your schedule. We were wondering whether that delay had anything to do with the fact that the Justice Department was still investigating Mr. Powell's income tax case. Is there any connection between these two?"

The President answered: "I will have to look this one up. I haven't heard one word of this since. I do remember that there was some attempt made and I think a tentative agreement was made to meet him. I can't be sure, but this is the first time, I have heard of the whole thing since then."

This is te text of the telegram sert by The President to Adam Powell on Sept. 18 in reply to his request of the day before.

"Your telegram requesting a meeting with me has had my thoughtful consideration. I was gratifield to not your statement voicing approval of the civil rights bill recently approved by me which, among other things, protects the right of every citizen to vote without intimidation or coercion.

"This legislation marks one more step forward in assuring security to every individual in the exercise and enjoyment of his constitutional rights.

"Since my signature was affixed to the civil rights bill and indeed, since the very beginning of its consideration. I have conferred long and earnestly with leaders in and out of government including some of the people whose lives are directly and personally affected by this new law and its enforcement.

"It is my conviction now, as it always has been, that progress must steadily be made in assuring to all citizens equality under our constitution and under the laws.

"Moreoever, I have repeatedly stated my conviction that it is not in laws alone that rapid achievement of this purpose will be found, but rather than citizens will more readily respond to the dictates of fair and just laws if explanation, understanding and moderation as well as firmness of purpose are used by officials of government at every level.

"I believe that my feelings in these matters are sufficiently well known so that I hardly need to reassure any citizen of my earnest devotion to these convictions.

"Nevertheless, I shall arrange a meeting with you and have directed my staff in Washington to confer with you for this purpose. Dwight D. Eisenhower.

The Justice Department referred all inquiries about the Powell tax case to its New York office and there officials refused to comment.

Claims Deal By Democrats, GOP

By ETHEL PAYNE

WASHINGTON — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, jr., charged last Thursday that there is a bi-partisan agreement to block all forms of civil rights advances in 1958 and possibly longer.

Powell made his remarks before the Capital Press Club. He cited some events which he said documented his claims in a conversation between Rep. Charles Diggs and a "mid-western liberal Democratic senator."

The Michigan solon was informed, Powell said, that the Democratic leadership in the Senate had no plans at all to carry the civil rights ball because it had been told by Vice President Richard Nixon and Sen. William Knowland that unless the Republicans were given the ball there would be no civil rights legislation.

Powell said he had talked with one of the liberal Republican Senators from the East who stated emphatically that all civil rights efforts should be stopped and that there should be a cooling off period and that the NAACP was doing more than good by pressing now for more advances.

The New York representative applauded the appointment of Clifton Wharton as minister to Roumania, but he said it "was almost a case of too little too late."

The New Yorker disagreed with President Eisenhower's press conference remark that he hoped the issue of "color of skin" would not enter into the science education legislation.

He said this could not be avoided in light of the determination of bigoted-minded individuals to exclude Negroes and other minorities from equal opportunities.

The New Yorker said he intended to introduce anti-bias amendments to all legislative proposals coming out of the Department of Health Education and Welfare, defense and appropriation measures.

Powell scored Vice President Nixon for failing to keep a seven months old promise to take the Government Contracts Committee to the South and President Eisenhower for reneging on a promise made four months ago to meet with Negro leaders.

He said a spokesman from the White House had told him last week "these items are not under immediate consideration."

Powell said he had been told the White House was reluctant to make the selections of Negro leaders for fear of repercussions. He said he had been asked to make some recommendations, but had declined. However, he said he had indirectly suggested the names of Rev. Martin Luther King, jr., Roy Wilkins and A. Philip Randolph.

Powell said the attorney general had this week promised that the department would issue a "strong endorsement of the bill to restore Section III to the Civil Rights Law."

In other developments, he said Rep. Emanuel Celler had informed him that he was setting up a sub-committee of the House Judiciary Committee to begin hearings on all civil rights proposals, and that Sens. Hubert Humphrey and Paul Douglas have said they will introduce new civil rights proposals with the week.

Powell made it clear that he still considers himself a Democrat. The question was raised as to what his real politics were since he had supported President Eisenhower in 1956.

Adam Powell Dares Demos To Drop Him From Party

NEW YORK — (ANP) — Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr., the controversial Negro congressman from New York's teeming Harlem district, last week challenged the Democratic party to battle and dared the party to dump him in the comingcongressional elections.

He hurled the charge in an address at the Abyssinian Baptist church, where he is pastor, and again at a mass meeting in Brooklyn.

Commenting on the probability the Demos may be planning to dump him because of his support of President Eisenhower in the 1956 election, Powell said the Democrats dare not drop him. "I dare them," he said. "If they buck me for re-election, then there will not be a Democratic governor in Albany (New York state capitol) next year. I promise that."

Powell also took a pot shot at New York city Negro political leaders. "There's no real free Negro leadership in this whole city," he charged. "They (Negro leaders) are all slaves to the white folks who control them." He bragged: "Well, I am one man they can't control."

Powell Links It to Survival as Great Power—Calls for Negro Self-Determination

Mon. 3-3-58

The Rev. Dr. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. said yesterday that integration had become a question of the United States' survival as a great world power.

In a sermon at the Abyssinian Baptist Church, 132 West 138th Street, he called for concerted action to expedite the nation's integration program. Otherwise, he predicted, "we will wake up one day and find that the whole world has built a wall around us and reduced us to a second-class power."

More than 3,000 persons attended the 10 A. M. service, which opened a year-long observance of the church's 150th anniversary. Thurgood Marshall, chief counsel to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, spoke at a second service at 11.

Dr. Powell, who is a Democratic Representative from Harlem as well as minister of the church, warned Negroes against being lulled into "the ivory tower of the North" by improved living conditions. "Where you came from," he said, "is getting better than where you are."

He said that the world had reached a "crossroads" in history, adding: "The old order has changed, whether we like it or not; whether we accept it or not; whether we understand it or not."

Dr. Powell noted that "a startling new world is being thrust upon us" by historical events. He said:

"We are totally unprepared for this, and most of the leaders of the Western world are unwilling to accept this."

Noting that "Western culture as a monopoly of international diplomacy is finished," he maintained that "the principle of self-determination is an accomplished fact."

This is true, he added, for Harlem as well as for Algeria.

Dr. Powell called for "heavenly vision" to form "a new force of unity for all people, adding:

"In the midst of a dissolving yesterday, we need to know the permanence and wisdom of God who is the same every day."

The test of modern times, he remarked, demands "a rebirth of daring and courage" in the nation, in the community and in the church.

Powell Declares Integration Key Issue For Nation

Daily World

W 3-5-58

NEW YORK — (ENS) — Integration has become a question of the United States' survival as a great world power, the Rev. Dr. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. told his Abyssinian Baptist Church audience Sunday morning.

The Democrat congressman-pastor urged for concerted action to expedite the nation's integration program, predicting that otherwise "we will wake up one day and find that the whole world has built a wall around us and reduced us to a second-class power."

Powell warned his people against being lulled into "the ivory tower of the North," stating that "where you came from is getting better than where you are."

Powell Delays Amending 'Impact' School Measure

Post Herald Washington D.C.

Rep. Adm Clayton Powell (D-N.Y.) said yesterday he would wait until legislaion providing school aid to Federally-impacted areas reaches the House floor before offering an anti-segregation amendment.

Thurs 3-6-58

His decision not to ask the House Education and Labor Committee to adopt the amendment cleared one major roadblock to final Committee action, possibly today.

The lawmaker, who favors the impact bill, said such an amendment now might bottle it up in the Rules Committee. But he insisted his proposal to bar payments to segregated school systems would not block House accepance of he aid measure, since subsidized Southern states would not want to lose money they get.

The bill provides assistance to communities such as Washington suburbs which must provide schools for children of Federal workers.

Powell May Be Punished

Daily News P 8

Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., told his Abyssinian Baptist Church congregation in Harlem the other day there had been reports that Democrats may dump him because of his 1956 support of President Eisenhower.

Thurs 3-6-58

"I dare them," the Rev. Rep. Powell said. "If they buck me for reelection, then there will not be a Democratic governor in Albany next year."

That statement prompted the Montgomery Advertiser to quip as follows:

"If his colleagues are out to unhorse him for desertion, it's a bad reason. But it will do in a pinch."

The Rev. Rep. Powell's accomplishment — whether he travels under the color of a Republican or Democrat — has been a total of minus something or the other.

Hedgeman, Buchanon eye seat

P. 9

By LOUIS E. LOMAX

NEW YORK—On the first day of spring the Harlem political battle flared into the open.

For the first time, regular Democrats admitted that Veteran Ann Hedgeman, assistant to Mayor Robert Wagner, and Assemblywoman Bessie Buchanan are locked in a struggle for the bid to oppose Adam Clayton Powell in the coming congressional elections.

In the meantime, Dunbar McCaurin, former city council rebel, and now president of the Harlem Voters League had announced an active campaign to draft UN Undersecretary Ralph J. Bunche as a Liberal Party candidate for the Senate.

His name was proposed several days ago, but the powerful UN figure and winner of the Nobel Peace Prize refused to comment on the effort to have him run against incumbent Irving Ives. However the "draft Bunche" campaign is gathering momentum.

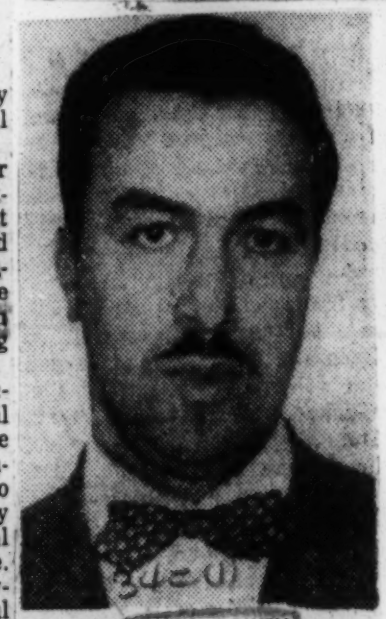
In Mrs. Buchanan and Mrs. Hedgeman the Democrats have two of the most powerful and influential colored women in America eager to challenge the veteran Powell.

An AFRO exclusive with a Tammany official indicated that Mrs. Hedgeman has the inside track as of now.

Supporters of Mrs. Buchanan are reportedly backing away because of threats they have received from the Powell machine.

Many of them are assemblymen who must seek re-election from strong Powell areas and have been warned, allegedly, that Powell will wage an all out fight against them should they support Mrs. Buchanan against him this fall.



34c(1)

ADAM C. POWELL

HOWEVER, Mrs. Hedgeman's support is largely from within Tammany Hall, and thus is not vulnerable to the Powell machine.

The Democratic regulars have been hinting for sometime that they would not support Powell in the 1958 race.

They have not forgiven him for bolting the party and supporting Eisenhower in 1956. Recently the debate between Powell and local Democrats has become acrimonious.

The Democrats threw down the gauntlet by refusing to place a Powell picture in the annual Democratic Yearbook that lists all important party figures and office holders.

DESPITE THE opposition Powell has said he will seek re-election. However, Powell created much concern a week ago when, during a celebration at his church, he introduced NAACP Attorney Thurgood Marshall with the words:

"If I don't run, this is the man I want to see in the U.S. Congress."

Should either Mrs. Hedgeman or Mrs. Buchanan win the seat she will become the first colored woman to sit in the halls of Congress.

Powell Attacks U.S. Policy

Washington, D. C. (NNPA) — Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat, of New York, charged on the House floor recently that the United States is an accomplice of President Batista in the killing of nearly 4,000 Cubans.

Not only in this country supplying arms to Cuba but it has a military mission in Cuba assisting the Cuban army, Powell said in a speech.

The New Yorker called for a stop to the sending of arms and ammunition from this country to Cuba and for a withdrawal of the American mission.

Reports from Cuba say that President Batista, who first came to power in 1933 during the revolution that overthrew President Machado, is determined not to end all as other Latin American dictators, such as Juan Peron of Argentina. He has said he will finish to the finish.

American Blame

The American embassy and the State Department are blamed by many Cubans for the daily toll of a dozen or more Cubans recorded throughout the island.

Although Batista has invoked a severe censorship, Cuban public opinion is outspoken against the United States. The people—from the leaders of the civic religious, professional, and social institutions who have demanded that Batista resign, to the students— accuse the United States of pursuing a policy in support of a dictator.

Powell hits Dulles, State Department

Express Dissatisfaction With Handling Of Case

MIDDLEBURY, Vt. — Rep. A. Clayton Powell (Dem., N.Y.) Friday was highly critical of the State Department and Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. He called the State Department "the weakest spot in our democratic offensive."

The Harlem Congressman, addressing the 15th annual Middlebury College conference on Foreign Policy, pointed out:

"A great mistake in the conduct of foreign affairs is the steadfast refusal" of the State Department, under Democratic and Republican administrations to employ colored Americans in embassy positions.

POWELL SAID he got hold of a confidential analysis of colored personnel in the foreign service from the State Department files.

He said that this report, of which he is releasing portions of it for the first time, stated "considerable progress' had been made "after diligent work by the Office of Personnel."

THE REPORT, he added, admitted, however, that there is much to be done before it can be said that the Department of State has hired non-whites fully and fairly and has utilized them to the best effect.

It was further stated in the report, according to Mr. Powell, that of 8,231 persons employed abroad in foreign service, only 55 were colored. And of the 6,700 Departmental employees Grade 7 and higher, only 15 were colored.

NEW YORK — (NNPA) — A Federal grand jury has been reconvened, at its own demand, to find out why the Federal grand jury investigation into income tax returns and charges of salary kickbacks and payroll paddings against Representative Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat, of Harlem, was dropped by the Government more than a year ago.

United States Attorney Paul Williams said the jury had been reconvened to resume its investigation into the charges against Mr Powell and "will remain in session until the matter is concluded." It met April 17 and again April 21 and 22.

The grand jury, which had not met in more than a year, has indicated that it is dissatisfied with the manner in which the Justice Department has handled the case.

It was learned Wednesday that the jury called as its first witness former Assistant United States Attorney Thomas A. Boland, who was in charge of the presentation of the case before he left the United States Attorney's office last September. Mr. Boland is now associated in law practice with Roy M. Cohn, chief counsel for the Senate Internal Security subcommittee while the late Senator Joseph R. McCarthy, Republican, of Wisconsin, was its chairman.

Mr. Boland was in charge of the case until he resigned last Sept. 10.

The life of the grand jury expires in early June. It was convened in December, 1956, and in a three-month period heard a large number of witnesses.

RECEIVED INSTRUCTIONS

The grand jury asked Mr. Boland about the circumstances under which the grand jury investigation was dropped in February, 1957. He said he was instructed by his superiors in the Attorney General's office in Washington that the investigation be turned over to the Treasury Department.

Later, Mr. Boland said, he was asked to write a letter to the Attorney General saying he felt the case would be better handled by the Treasury Department but declined to do so.

More than 100 witnesses have been heard by several grand juries in the Powell matter. Both Mr. Powell and his wife, Hazel, a pianist, have testified.

The investigation was begun before the 1956 Presidential campaign, in which Mr. Powell announced his support at the White House for President Eisenhower and campaigned for his reelection.

"DEAL" CLAIMED

Some high Democratic sources charged that Mr. Powell's swing over to the President's support was the result of a "deal," but both the White House and the Justice Department denied any knowledge of any deal. However, United States Attorney Williams announced that the investigation would continue and be broadened to include evidence of possible salary kickbacks.

The present grand jury did not meet between Feb. 11, 1957, and April 17, last. It had sat continuously through December, 1956, and January and part of February, 1957. In January, 1957, Mr. Powell complianed to the Justice Department that he was being persecuted by the grand jury and newspapers.

On March 18, 1957, Mr. Boland was informed by his superiors in the United States Attorney's office on orders from Washington the New York office was dropping the investigation and turning the matter over to the Treasury Department.

CASE AIRED IN "REVIEW"

In the December, 1957 issue of The National Review, a reactionary weekly journal, the Powell case was aired in detail. The article was brought to the attention of the idle grand jury. Later, several letters were written by the grand jury to the United States Attorney inquiring about the status of the investigation and why it was not continuing.

In the grand jury's latest letter, the Government was informed that if it did not convene the grand jury the jurors would meet on their own in the Federal Court House here. The Government asked the grand jury to meet on April 17.

The grand jury wanted to know who told Mr. Boland to stop the inquiry and who in Washington had given the orders.

Mr. Williams said the jury was proceeding on a normal course. He added that the Government had called the jury into session and that it would remain in session until the matter was settled.

The Justice Department, it was indicated, had not called off its investigation. It supposedly has been evaluating the evidence thus far presented to all the grand juries. In this matter the Justice Department has made the decision for Mr. Williams.

Mr. Boland said that while he was handling the case he had full cooperation of Mr. Williams as well as the Treasury Department. He explained that at times as many as five agents were assigned to him.

During active investigation of the case, indictments were returned against three of Mr. Powell's congressional secretaries. Mr. Boland prosecuted two—Mrs. Hattie Dodson Freeman and Acy Lennon. Both were convicted. The third secretary, William Hampton, was also convicted.

Powell Ousted by Democrats; Coudert Declines to Run Again

By LEO EGAN

Tammany district leaders in Harlem voted 11-to-1 yesterday to read Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. out of the Democratic party. They said their reason was his support of President Eisenhower in 1956.

Other political developments yesterday included:

The voluntary withdrawal by Representative Frederic R. Coudert Jr. as a candidate for Republican redesignation in Manhattan's "Silk Stocking" Seventeenth Congressional District.

Formal declarations by Nelson A. Rockefeller and Leonard W. Hall, the two leading but undeclared candidates for the Republican nomination for Governor, that neither was interested in becoming a candidate for United States Senator.

Four candidates to replace Mr. Powell were considered at the meeting that voted to drop him. But the session adjourned without reaching any decision. Another meeting will be held next week at which these four and possibly others will be considered.

Those considered yesterday were Assemblyman Bessie Buchanan, who received the votes of four of the district leaders concerned; Thurgood Marshall, counsel for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, who received three votes; City Councilman Earl Brown and State Senator James L. Watson, each of whom received one vote. All are Negroes, as is Mr. Powell.

Four district leaders said they were not ready to express a preference.

Carmine G. De Sapio, leader of Tammany, presided at the meeting, held at Tammany headquarters, 331 Madison Avenue. He did not vote on any of the questions raised at the meeting but later acted as spokesman for the group.

Thirteen of the fourteen leaders and co-leaders whose territory is within the Sixteenth Congressional District attended. Mrs. Mollie L. Benvenga was the only absentee. William Fitts Ryan idd not vote on the question of dropping Mr. Powell. Lloyd Everett Dickens was the only leader to favor renaming Mr. Powell.

"He will not be the candidate of the party," Mr. De Sapio declared in announcing tse vote. "The leaders indicated that they could not, in good conscience, support Adam Powell because he is not a Democrat."

Mr. Powell's recent indictment as an income-tax evader had nothing to do with the decision, Mr. De Sapio added.

The New York Times

VOTE TO DROP POWELL: At Democratic district leaders' meeting at Tammany headquarters are, from left, Mrs. Elizabeth Morris, Manhattan Borough President Hulan E. Jack, Mrs. Edrie F. Archibald. Mrs. Marie L. Kine, Mrs. Ruby Telesford, Carmine G. De Sapio, Lloyd Everett Dickens, Mrs. Lillian Thompson, Elijah Crump, Antonio T. Rasmus and William Fitts Ryan. They voted to read Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. out of party.

The Harlem Representative is expected to contest the leaders' decision either in the Democratic primary on Aug. 12 or as an independent candidate in the fall election. He was not available for comment last night.

Some in G. O. P. Favor Powell

While the Tammany leaders were meeting, Republican leaders of the Sixteenth Congressional District also were in session. They, too, adjourned without reaching a decision, but it was reported that several of those involved favored offering Mr. Powell the Republican designation. The whole group will meet again next week with Thomas J. Curran, New York County Republican leader.

The Tammany decision appeared based on a conclusion that possible Democratic defections in Harlem caused by the Powell situation would not endanger the chances of victory for the Democratic state ticket this fall. This risk had been a major concern of state party leaders earlier in the year. Mr. Powell is generally credited with a strong personal following in his district.

Mr. Coudert's voluntary withdrawal was made on the eve of a meeting of the Republican leaders of his district. Although the district has been traditionally Republican, his margin in the last two elections has been extremely thin. In a formal statement he said he intended to return to the practice of law.

Mr. Curran said last night that he expected a Republican decision on a candidate to be made today. Those under consideration include Elliot Goodwin, president of the Ninth Assembly District Republican Club; Walter J. Mack, industrialist and former Republican county treasurer; Harold Riegelman, the Republican candidate for Mayor in 1953, and state Senator MacNeil Mitchell.

Primary Fight Ahead

Whoever is picked at today's meeting in Republican County headquarters, 54 West Fortieth Street, faces a primary fight for the nomination from John V. Lindsay. A former president of the New York Young Republican Club and one-time executive assistant to former Attorney General Herbert Brownell Jr., Mr. Lindsay announced his candidacy several weeks ago.

Mr. Lindsay contended last night that his announcement had forced Mr. Coudert to make a decision earlier than he had intended.

Many Republican leaders were hoping last night that Mr. Hall's and Mrs. Rockefeller's disclaimer of interest in the Senatorial nomination to replace Senator Irving M. Ives, who is retiring, was not final.

INCOME TAXES:

The Congressman's Case

Handsome, urbane Democratic Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. of New York has never tried to conceal his love of the good life. As Harlem's most vocal proponent of foreign sports cars (as well as civil rights), Powell has evinced a true appreciation of such creature comforts as fine Bordeaux wine, faultlessly tailored flannels (his wardrobe averages twenty suits) and trips abroad.

Grandson of a slave, the mustached Powell (who often is mistaken for a white) owns a cooperative apartment in Harlem and a house in Washington. His wife, jazz pianist Hazel Scott, owns a ten-room, four-bath house in Westchester County, N.Y. Together, they are frequent Broadway first-nighters and habitués of the fanciest night spots.

But these are merely the external trappings of Powell's power in Harlem. As pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, Powell is the spiritual leader of the 15,000 members of the nation's largest Protestant congregation. At election time, they form a bloc of devoted campaign workers. Powell is a Democrat, but his following has made him independent of the Democratic leadership. He can defy even Tammany boss Carmine DeSapio with impunity.

In 1956, he did. He came out for the re-election of President Eisenhower.

Last week, his action still was raising turmoil in political circles in New York.

The reason was this:

In 1955 and 1956, three of Powell's aides were indicted on charges of income-tax evasion and later a fourth on charges of embezzlement. At the trial of one aide, Mrs. Hattie Dodson, a witness testified that he understood she had kicked back part of her salary to her boss.

Action and Reaction: In October 1956, Powell was asked to appear in court for questioning. Powell sent back a wire saying that he would "immediately after my conference with the President of the United States."

It was after calling at the White House, on Oct. 11, 1956, that he announced his support of the President.

Naturally, the political wiseacres in New York at once started jumping to International

Powell: First nights and turmoil

conclusions, but, they soon had second thoughts. A month after election day, a Federal grand jury was impaneled in New York and U.S. Attorney Paul Williams announced that a full investigation had been launched into Powell's income-tax status.

Thomas A. Bolan, a diligent, young Assistant U.S. Attorney, was placed in charge, and for three months the grand jury pursued its inquiry. Then, Congressman Powell dictated a letter to the Attorney General charging he was being persecuted and his reputation ruined.

On March 18, 1957, Bolan was informed that the case was being turned over to the Treasury Department, on orders from Washington. But, according to Bolan, Treasury investigators in New York politely refused to take the case. Net result: The investigation halted.

Subsequently, William P. Rogers, then Deputy Attorney General, in a letter to Williams, noted rumors that the investigation had been stopped, and took careful pains to deny it. Nevertheless, the grand jury's inquiry languished, and Bolan resigned to enter private practice.

At Last, Results: Last week, fed up, the grand jury decided to take matters into its own hands; if the government wasn't interested in the investigation, the jurors said, they would proceed on their own.

Faced with this, Williams called the jurors back into session. He denied that the investigation had ever been called off. His explanation of the thirteen-month delay: A "re-evaluation of the evidence" was necessary.

Regardless of the outcome, one thing seemed certain: Just who delayed the investigation would never be known. Nobody was naïve enough to suppose that President Eisenhower had promised Powell immunity for his support. But aside from that obvious fact, the matter remained a mystery.

'Being purged because I'm colored,' says Rev. Powell

Branding Tammany leader Carmine G. De Sapio a "liar," Powell announced a city-wide primary campaign to defeat Democratic organization candidates.

Appearing at Federal District Court here for his arraignment on income tax violations, Powell declared:

"WITH THE cooperation of the clergy of every denomination in the five boroughs, which is evidenced by many ministers being here today, we are entering a ticket in the Democratic primary wherever there is a community of colored and Puerto Ricans and where we can find qualified people in all the five boroughs."

The projected campaign appeared to threaten Democratic success in the election of a United States Senator and a Governor if Powell carries through his fight to the November election where he promises to run as an independent, if he is beaten in the Democratic primary.

His campaign also endangers Democratic legislative seats in several districts which have experienced a large influx of colored and Puerto Rican voters in the last few years.

POWELL ISSUED his declaration of war at a news conference in the press room of the Federal building after his arraignment on a three count indictment charging him with preparing a false income tax return for his wife, Hazel Scott, in 1951.

He is also charged with submitting a phony joint return with her in 1952. The Government claims Powell owes $1,663 in taxes on his 1952 income.

Accompanied by his lawyer, Edward Bennett Williams of Washington, D.C., Powell pleaded not guilty to the charges and was released on his own recognizance until June 16. On that date, Williams is expected to file motions seeking dismissal of the indictment.

ABOUT 200 people, including a number of members of the Baptist Ministerial Conference of which Powell, who is pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, is a member, attended the arraignment.

Outside the courthouse the Congressman was cheered.

After the arraignment was over, Powell went directly to the pressroom where he announced that Sunday he was kicking off his drive at a "monster outdoor rally" in Harlem, sponsored by the NAACP.

POWELL PUT his income tax difficulties and the action of Tammany in denying him renomination on the same place as evidences of the conflict between white and colored people.

He brushed off De Sapio's statement that he was denied renomination because he bolted the Democratic Party in 1956 to support President Eisenhower.

Jailed Aid Of Powell Complains

Lays Threat To U.S. Attorneys

The former secretary to Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, jr., D., N.Y., charged yesterday that government attorneys threatened him because they felt he was not co-operating in their investigation of the Congressman's income tax returns.

The charge was made in an affidavit presented to Judge Gregory F. Noonan in United States District Court by the attorney for Acy Lennon, fifty-four, who is now serving a year and a day sentence for income tax evasion.

Judge Noonan immediately signed an order calling upon the government to show cause May 5 why another tax indictment pending against Lennon should not be dismissed.

Queried by Christy

Lenan was questioned Thursday in the office of Arthur H. Christy, chief assistant United States attorney, as the result of the reconvening on April 17 of a grand jury investigating Mr. Powell's tax returns.

Lennon said that during the questioning he told investigators that with good behavior he would be eligible for discharge from the Federal Prison in Danbury, Conn., in about ninety days. The affidavit said:

"I was told that because I had not co-operated I 'would spend the most miserable ninety days that any man ever spent'."

He also said that Mr. Christy told him that he knew "I had a pending indictment against me and that if I co-operated with him . . . any pending indictment might be disposed of and my release from prison hastened."

Attorney's Charge

Lennon's attorney, Leonard Feldman, said that Lennon was questioned despite his repeated demands that Mr. Feldman be present.

Later, Mr.Christy said:

"I have read the Lennon papers and the allegations are sheer nonsense. The matter is before the court and I do not feel that I should make further comment until it is heard by the court."

The indictment against Lennon, returned in 1956, charges him with operating an income tax service in which he allegedly told clients to file false returns.

Jury Meets

The grand jury investigating Mr. Powell's returns met for three hours yesterday, and made plans to work through tomorrow.

It was learned that Ralph W. Roberts, clerk of the House of Representatives, will appear before the jury today or tomorrow. The House has voted to allow Mr. Roberts to give the jury "material and relevant" matter from its files.

Editor called before jury in Powell case

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK—The clash between a federal prosecutor and a magazine editor over income tax evasion charges against Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. led to a Grand Jury room today.

William F. Buckley Jr., editor of The National Review, a conservative weekly, was subpoenaed to appear before the Grand Jury.

The jury is investigating the possibility of outside influence in the case which led to the indictment of Powell, Harlem Negro Democratic congressman and clergyman.

Buckley, accusing U. S. Atty. Paul W. Williams of trying to intimidate The National Review, has said he plans to complain to the American Society of Newspaper Editors.

Last December, the magazine printed a review of the Powell case, then lying dormant so far as Grand Jury proceedings were concerned.

Buckley said he sent copies of his magazine containing the Powell article to members of the Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury investigating Powell's federal income tax affairs reconvened last April 17 after the case had been inactive for 14 months. The Grand Jury indicted Powell on tax evasion charges last Thursday.

POWELL INDICTED IN U.S. TAX INQUIRY; TAMMANY TO ACT

Evasion, Fraud Charged to Harlem Representative— De Sapio Calls Chiefs

By EDWARD RANZAL

Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. was indicted yesterday by a Federal grand jury on charges of income tax evasion.

The Harlem Congressman, who is also a minister, was named in three counts. One accused him of evading $3,700 in a joint return for 1952. The others charged that he aided and counseled in the preparation of a fraudulent return for his wife, Hazel Scott, the pianist, for 1951.

The three counts are punishable, upon conviction, by sentences up to five years and fines of $10,000 each.

The indictment is expected to bolster the position of six of seven Harlem district leaders who are said to favor dropping Mr. Powell from the Democratic ticket this year.

Carmine G. De Sapio, Tammany leader, has tentatively set next Thursday for a meeting with the leaders to discuss a new candidate to represent the Sixteenth Congressional District.

Powell Still a Democrat

Mr. Powell has remained a Democrat despite his support of President Eisenhower two years ago, ostensibly because of the segregation issue.

The true bill brought to a climax a stormy battle by one faction in the grand jury to force the Department of Justice to complete its case before the panel. The jury had threatened to take matters into its own hands if the Justice Department failed to cooperate.

The first and second counts of the indictment were based on the same allegations.

The first accused Mr. Powell of advising in the fraudulent preparation of Mrs. Powell's 1951 return and the presentation of it to the Director of Internal Revenue in the Upper Manhattan District.

Mrs. Powell said that her net income for 1951 was $3,815. The Government charged that her income was $9,101. In 1951 Mrs. Powell made a concert tour in Europe.

The second count accused Mr. Powell of violating a section of the Federal criminal code in assertedly aiding and abetting in the preparation of a fraudulent return for another person. Neither count charges tax evasion.

The third count charged tax evasion in a joint return for 1952. The Powells reported a net income of $5,252. The Government charged that the true net was $8,952 and that they owed taxes of $1,663.

In 1952 Mr. Powell's Congressional salary was $12,500 plus $2,500 non-taxable expenses. He also received about $6,000 as minister of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, which has one of the largest congregations in the city. His wife's earnings during this period are not known. The couple were said to have taken large deductions.

Mr. Powell became a target for a tax investigation after a Congressional committee had questioned him about official traveling expenses. The matter was put before a Federal grand jury here.

Thereafter four of Mr. Powell's Congressional secretaries were indicted. Two were convicted of income tax evasion and a third pleaded guilty to taking funds from a Federal savings organization in Mr. Powell's church. The fourth is awaiting trial.

The grand jury that returned the indictment against Mr. Powell was impaneled sixteen months ago. It sat for two months. The Justice Department then notified Thomas A. Bolan, former Assistant United States Attorney, that it was turning the investigation over to the Treasury Department.

The jury then was dormant for fourteen months. In some quarters it was suggested that the Justice Department had pigeon-holed the inquiry because of Mr. Powell's support of President Eisenhower.

Recently the members of the grand jury sent a series of letters to United States Attorney Paul W. Williams, the last threatening that the panel would convene on its own if not called by the Government. They were called back on April 17.

Since April 21 the jury has met daily. Yesterday it deliberated more than six hours. After the true bill had been returned members of the grand jury were seen congratulating Chief Assistant United States Attorney Arthur H. Christy, who had taken over the case.

After the indictment had been returned, Federal Judge Irving R. Kaufman told the jurors:

"I hope this represents your honest and unbiased convictions and that you have acted in the best tradition of our grand jury system."

U.S. CALLS EDITOR IN POWELL CASE

Prosecutor Orders Buckley to Explain Sending Copies of Magazine to Jurors

By EDWARD RANZAL

The Federal income tax evasion indictment against Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. developed ramifications yesterday.

United States Attorney Paul W. Williams said that a grand jury subpoena had been issued to William F. Buckley Jr., editor of The National Review, a weekly periodical. The prosecutor explained that he would make an investigation "of the entire matter of any effort by the editor of the magazine to communicate with members of the Powell grand jury."

Mr. Williams also said that the investigation would delve into the conduct of Thomas A. Bolan, former assistant United States Attorney. Until he resigned last September, Mr. Bolan was in charge of the Powell case. He has not been subpoenaed.

At his law office, Mr. Bolan said:

"If Mr. Williams wants to take any action to reveal to the public the facts of this case I will welcome it."

Magazine Charged Politics

The National Review, a right-wing publication, took credit for reviving the investigation of Mr. Powell after the case had lain dormant for fourteen months. In an issue last December the magazine said the investigation had been called off by the Eisenhower Administration as a "probable act of political gratitude." Mr. Powell a Democrat, supported President Eisenhower two years ago.

Last week the magazine said in an editorial that it had mailed issues containing the Powell story to members of the grand jury. The grand jury forced the Government to reconvene the panel on April 17.

Some members of the grand jury had asked Mr. Bolan to make himself available as counsel to the panel if the investigation bogged down. The jury never called on Mr. Bolan to serve in that capacity, however.

Criminal Code Quoted

Section 1504, Title 18, of the Federal criminal code says:

"Whoever attempts to influence the actions or decisions of any grand or petty jury of any court of the United States upon any issue or matter pending before such jury, or before the jury of which he is a member, or pertaining to his duties, by writing or sending to him any written communitcation, in relation to such issue or matter shall be fined not more than $1,000 or imprisoned for not more than six months."

The Buckley subpoena is returnable Tuesday. Mr. Williams said he was conducting the investigation for two reasons:

"Firstly, because I want to make sure that the court is fully apprised of the circumstances surrounding the re-convening of the Powell grand jury and the return of the indictment.

"And, second, I am anxious that the Government be able to establish that outside considerations did not intrude themselves into consideration of the evidence by members of the Powell grand jury. I will have a full statement to make in court at the time of Powell's arraignment."

Chief Assistant United States Attorney Arthur H. Christy said that no date had been fixed for Mr. Powell's arraignment. He explained that he was waiting to hear from the Representative's lawyer, Boris Berkovich. The indictment of Mr. Powell was returned Thursday.

In it, Mr. Powell, who is also a clergyman in Harlem, was accused of aiding and counseling in preparing a fraudulent 1951 tax return for his wife, Hazel Scott, the pianist, and of evading taxes on $3,700 in a joint return for 1952.

Probe Urged Into Powell, GOP 'Deal'

NEW YORK, May 10 (INS)—House Judiciary Committee Chairman Celler (D-NY) demanded today a White House investigation of charges that a tax case against Rep. Adam Clayton Powell was dropped in exchange for his political support of President Eisenhower.

Celler's demand was based on an accusation by former Assistant U.S. Atty. Thomas W. Bolan that a grand jury probe of the Powell case was set aside on orders from William P. Rogers, then deputy attorney general and now attorney general of the United States.

Powell, a New York Democrat and Harlem churchman, supported Eisenhower for re-election in 1956 and was credited with swinging many Negro votes to the Republican ticket.

Celler said Powell's indictment by a federal grand jury Thursday "is not guilt and he is entitled to a fair trial." He added, "What interests me more is the charge that there was a bargain for Powell's backing of President Eisenhower in the 1956 campaign.

"I'm quite sure the President would repudiate this if he had the facts. Thus, it is now incumbent on the White House to check on the suspicion that a bargain was made."

If the White House fails to take action, Celler said, he will ask his House committee to do so.

Meanwhile, Powell is expected to give his side of the story about his indictment in a sermon Sunday at his Abyssinian Baptist Church, the largest in Harlem.

TAX DODGE LAID TO LAWMAKER

Powell (D-N.Y.) Indicted by US Grand Jury

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal grand jury Thursday indicted Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D-N.Y.) on income tax evasion charges.

The Negro congressman from Harlem was accused of misrepresenting the income of his wife, pianist Hazel Scott, and himself in the early 1950s.

The three-count indictment carries a maximum penalty of conviction of 15 years in prison and $30,000 in fines.

Powell, 49, has been in Congress as a Democrat since 1945.

PROBE REVIVED

In the last presidential election in 1956, Powell supported President Eisenhower and the Republican national ticket because he

Shortly after Eisenhower's re-election, a grand jury probe of Powell's income tax affairs was allowed to grow dormant. Powell then denied that this represented any deal with the GOP administration.

April 17 the grand jury probe was suddenly revived amid reports that the jurymen had exerted pressure on federal authorities.

The indictment charged that in 1951 Miss Scott's net income was $9,181 and the tax due on it $1,990. It charged that the tax return listed net income of only $3,810, with only $590 due in taxes.

Another count of the indictment charged that Powell had stated the net income in 1952 for his wife and himself was $5,252 and that there was no tax due. The grand jury said net income actually was $8,952 and the tax due $1,663.

There was no immediat comment from Powell. He was reported in the Washington area.

Powell has been widely reported as the target of a dumping movement by Tammany Hall leaders in the upcoming election. They are believed ready to lend their support to another Democrat in reprisal for Powell's 1956 support of the GOP.

The indictment was expected to lend impetus to the move. However, Powell has said he's in the race for re-election to the finish.

The congressman took over from his late father as pastor of Harlem's largest church, the 9,200 member Abyssinian Baptist Church. He has held that post 20 years.

Prosecutors 'Warned Off,' Powell Tax Records Shifted

By JACK LOTTO
International News Service Writer

NEW YORK, May 12.—Two more Government prosecutors were disclosed Monday to have been ordered to "do nothing" and "sit tight" in the income tax investigation of Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D-N.Y.).

Two months after that order was given on October 18, 1957, it was learned, all the Powell files in the New York office of United States Atty. Paul Williams were bundled into nearly a dozen heavy cartons and stamped "top secret."

They were then transferred guardedly from a storage room, where they reportedly had lain untouched for a year, to the attorney general's office in Washington.

These new details on the role played by Justice Department officials who allegedly stalled the grand jury case 14 months were obtained as demands were heard for a congressional probe:

Investigators were told to do nothing and stay away from potential witnesses until an OK was obtained from Washington because the case was a "hot potato."

Long Time On Transcripts

The prosecutor in charge was instructed not to talk to his predecessor about the matter.

Transcripts of grand jury minutes were not completed until 10 months after witnesses were heard.

A New York Federal grand jury, disturbed by long inactivity of the Government, forced resumption of hearings in April. The jury returned a three count indictment against Powell which could send him to prison for a maximum of 15 years if convicted.

On Friday, former Assistant United States Attorney Thomas Bolan charged Atty. Gen. William Rogers—a member of the Eisenhower Cabinet—ordered the Powell probe dropped in 1957 because it was "too hot to handle."

Powell, a Democrat, had bolted the party in October, 1956, to support President Eisenhower for re-election.

Asked To Be Relieved

Monday, it was learned, those who were stopped from pushing the Powell case, in addition to Bolan, were Daniel F. McMahon, current head of the Criminal Division, and former United States assistant attorney Fiorvante G. Perrotta.

Perrotta, who took over from Bolan when he resigned last September, was instructed not to talk with his predecessor.

Perrotta, it was learned, asked to be relieved after three months of inactivity because he was unhappy with the limitations placed around him.

The T-man told to keep away from the possible witness was Morris Emanuel. He could not be reached for comment.

Complaints Start to Come In as 5 Centers Are Set Up to Receive Them

By CHARLES GRUTZNER

Manhattan Borough President Hulan E. Jack declared yesterday that the mistakes of some earlier projects" would be avoided in relocating tenants from the site of the $205,000,000 Lincoln Square redevelopment. Mr. Jack held his first meeting with the Citizens Watchdog committee he appointed last week to see that the twelve-block slum clearance was effected with a minimum of inconvenience to tenants. The meeting was in his office.

Several hardship cases already have been reported to the committee. Most of them involve rooming-house residents who are not primary tenants of the redevelopers to whom the city sold the properties on March 3-19-58

Henry Rogers, committee chairman, said the redevelopers or their agents had in general shown a willingness to correct conditions reported to them. The cases so far have involved repairs and service in the tenement buildings and charges of premature notice to tenants to vacate.

The major problem—that of finding new homes for about 7,000 families—will be put to the test as the time for start-of demolition approaches.

The date has not yet been set because the legality of the redevelopment is being determined in state and Federal courts. The redevelopers are Fordham University, Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, the Red Cross and Webb & Knapp, Inc.

Complaint Offices Listed

It aws announced that five centers would be open from 7:30 to 9:30 o'clock on different nights to receive tenant complaints and advise on problems. The centers are:

Mondays—Presbyterian Church of the Good Shepherd, 152 West Sixty-sixth Street.

Thursdays—Public School 191, at 210 West Sixty-first Street.

Leonard X. Farbman, the committee's executive director, said of its task:

"We are now working together so that Lincoln Square, in spite of all the bitterness that has gone before, will be a model of relocation. There can not be progress without some inconvenience, but we intend to do all we can as a citizen group with the Borough President's support to see that every family forced to move will be relocated in decent, sanitary housing at least as good as its present home."

Mr. Jack announced the appointment to the committee of Cyril G. Heath, bringing its membership to twenty-four. Mr. Heath has lived for forty-two years in the same apartment at 243 West Sixty-third Street and has been active in many community affairs.

Fifteen years ago Lloyd Peterson was running a trolley car in Brooklyn. Yesterday he was sworn in as the $10,000-a-year secretary of the Transit Authority—the first Negro to get official rank in the agency.

Borough President Hulan E. Jack of Manhattan, a sponsor, and 200 friends, family and co-workers saw Charles L. Patterson, chairman of the Authority, administer the oath. Mr. Jack observed that "one more roadblock to progress" had been removed.

Mr. Patterson commented: "There are no roadblocks to the progress of anyone at the Transit Authority."

Mr. Peterson, a veteran of World War II, has ben a bus driver, railroad clerk, subway motorman, surface line dispatcher, senior dispatcher and special assistant to Thomas J. McLernon, general manager of the Authority. He succeeds William Jerome Daly.

The new secretary, who has a degree from New York Law School, lives at 1410 Crotona Park East, the Bronx. His wife, the former Marjorie Mullett, is a city school teacher. They have two children, Lynne, 13, and Lloyd Vaughan, 11.

JURY INSISTS U. S. PUSH POWELL CASE

Inactive Panel Threatens Own Move in Tax Inquiry —Seeks Bolan as Counsel

By EDWARD RANZAL

An angered Federal grand jury investigating the tax returns of Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. has threatened to become a "runaway."

The grand jury, which has not met in more than a year, has indicated that it is dissatisfied with the manner in which the Justice Department has handled the case.

Members of the panel discussed yesterday with Thomas A. Bolan, former assistant United States Attorney, the possibility of his serving as private counsel to the jurors if there was dissatisfaction with further presentation of evidence by the Government. Mr. Bolan had been in charge of the case until he resigned last Sept. 19.

The life of the grand jury expires in early June. It was convened in December, 1956, and in a three-month period heard a large number of witnesses. During that period Mr. Bolan was in charge of the investigation.

An autonomous body, the grand jury does not have to ask permission to vote an indictment or hand up a presentment. The United States Attorney's office acts only in the capacity of a legal adviser.

In order to appoint Mr. Bolan as its counsel the grand jury would have to ask permission from a Federal judge.

100 Have Testified

More than 100 witnesses have appeared before several grand juries in the Powell matter. Representative Powell, a Democrat from Harlem, and his wife, Hazel Scott, a pianist, have testified.

The New York Times

MAY AID GRAND JURY: Thomas A. Bolan, a former U. S. Attorney, who discussed tax inquiry on Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. with members of a Federal panel yesterday.

The investigation predates the 1956 Presidential election during which Mr. Powell came out for President Eisenhower. This was interpreted in some quarters as a bid by Mr. Powell to call off the investigation. However, United States Attorney Paul W. Williams announced that the investigation would proceed and be broadened to include evidence of possible salary kickbacks and payroll padding.

The present grand jury did not meet between Feb. 11, 1957, and last Thursday. It had sat continuously through December, 1956, and January and part of February last year. In January, 1957, Mr. Powell complained to the Justice Department that he was being persecuted by the grand jury and the newspapers.

On March 18, 1957, Mr. Bolan was informed by his superiors in the United States Attorney's office that on orders from Washington the New York office was abandoning the investigation and turning the matter over to the Treasury Department.

Bolan Spurns Proposal

Thereafter Mr. Bolan was asked to write a letter to the Attorney General saying he felt the case would be better handled by the Treasury Department. He declined.

In the December, 1957, issue of The National Review, a weekly journal, the Powell case was discussed in detail. The article was brought to the attention of the dormant grand jury. Thereafter several letters were written by the grand jury to the office of the United States Attorney inquiring as to the status of the investigation and why it was not continuing.

In the panel's latest letter the Government was informed that if it did not convene the grand jury the jurors would meet on their own in the United States Court House on Foley Suqare. The Government asked the grand jury to meet last Thursday.

The panel also met Monday and again yesterday. Mr. Bolan, who had been invited to appear at both sessions, testified under oath.

The grand jury had wanted to know who told Mr. Bolan to stop the inquiry and who, in Washington, had given the orders.

In explanation of the hiatus, Mr. Williams said that the jury was proceeding on a normal course. He added that the Government had called the panel into session and that it would remain in session until the matter was settled.

Inquiry Denial Made

The Justice Department, it was indicated, had not called off its investigation. It supposedly has been in the throes of evaluating the evidence thus far presented to all the grand juries. In this matter the Justice Department has made the decision for Mr. Williams.

Mr. Bolan said that while he was presenting evidence he had the full coopeartion of Mr. Williams as well as the Treasury Department. He explained that at times as many as five agents were assigned to him.

During the active investigation income tax evasion indictments were returned against three of Mr. Powell's congressional secretaries. Mr. Bolan prosecuted two — Mrs. Hattie Dodson Freeman and Acy Lennon. Both were convicted. The third secretary, William Hampton, was also convicted.

Mr. Powell is pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem, which has one of the largest congregations in the city. He is up for re-election to the House of Representatives this year.

Mr. Bolan is now an associate of Roy M. Cohn, chief counsel to the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations when the late Senator Joseph R. McCarthy was chairman.

While he was a member of the United States Attorney's staff Mr. Bolan was in charge of subversion cases.

United States Attorney Paul Williams said in New York he also would subpoena Mr. Bolan. Mr. Williams has denied there was any effort to drop the Powell case.

Charges Order to Drop Case

Recently, Thomas A. Bolan, who, as an assistant United States attorney in New York, helped present evidence before the grand jury, declared he had been ordered through the Justice Department to drop the prosecution.

Herbert Brownell, Jr., was Attorney General at the time. Mr. Rogers was his deputy.

Mr. Bolan subsequently resigned his post and entered private law practice. It was he who was reported to have been considered by the grand jury to help in the investigation, in a private capacity.

After Mr. Bolan resigned, Floravante G. Perrota, another assistant United States attorney, was assigned to the case. He, too, resigned. It was reported he had been instructed by higher ups to delay calling an important witness until the move was okayed by the Justice Department.

In 1956 Mr. Powell, although a Democrat, supported President Eisenhower's candidacy.

Jury Members Got Magazine

This led to charges by a conservative magazine, The National Review, that the grand jury investigation was being toned down as a gesture of gratitude. Copies of the magazine were sent to members of the grand jury.

As a result, William F. Buckley jr., editor of the magazine, Powell Jr." The article, referring to the long adjournment of the Powell jury, charged the investigation had been called off by the Eisenhower administration as a "probable act of political gratitude."

Powell, a Democrat, supported Eisenhower in 1956. He has been expected to seek an eighth term this fall, despite lack of support from Harlem Democratic leaders.

Williams said he was investigating the "entire matter of any effort by the editor of the magazine to communicate with any members of the Powell grand jury."

"FIRSTLY," he said, "I want to make sure that the court is fully apprised of the circumstances surrounding the reconvening of the Powell grand jury and the return of the indictment.

"And, second, I am anxoius that the government be able to establish that outside considerations did not intrude themselves into consideration of the evidence by members of the Powell grand jury."

Under federal law, anyone attempting to influence the action of a federal juror is liable to six months in prison and a fine of $1,000.

In an open letter to Williams, to appear in the magazine's May 17 issue, Buckley said that "Just as you finally succumbed to the pressure National Review was instrumental in generating, and reconvened the grand jury, you may now succumb to pressure to take action against National Review."

He said the magazine never urged the jury to indict Powell but "merely asked that it investigate the abrupt suspension of the investigation you launched, and Washington arbitrarily froze."

U.S. to Seek 'Influences' in Powell Jury

NEW YORK, May 10 (AP)—The government was investigating Saturday whether "outside sources" influenced the federal grand jury which indicted Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY) for income tax evasion.

U.S. Dist. Atty. Paul W. Williams announced Friday that a grand jury subpoena has been issued to William F. Buckley Jr., editor of the National Review, a weekly magazine, which took credit for reviving the investigation after the Powell case had lain dormant for 14 months.

Williams said Buckley had been summoned to appear before the grand jury Tuesday. At that time, Williams indicated, Buckley will be asked about mailing of the magazine's December issue to members of the jury which indicted the Negro congressman from Harlem's 16th District Thursday.

THE ISSUE contained an article entitled, "The Wheels of Justice Stop for Adam Clayton

Powell Jury Probe Opens

NEW YORK (AP) — The government Friday launched a probe of possible outside influences in the indictment of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY) on charges of income tax evasion. The indicting grand jury reportedly was prodded into action.

U.S. Atty. Paul W. Williams named as targets of his inquiry William Buckley, editor of the Weekly National Review, and Thomas A. Bolan, a former assistant U.S. attorney in Williams' office.

Buckley was subpoenaed for federal grand jury questioning next Tuesday. Bolan was not immediately summoned.

Williams has been smarting under reports that the Powell grand jury was stirred into action when the Justice Department was reluctant to go after the Negro congressman from Harlem. Williams has denied the jury ran away on him.

The probe of Powell's affairs had lain dormant 14 months before it suddenly was reopened last April 17. Yesterday, the jury indicted Powell on three counts of evading $3,063 in 1951-52 taxes on his own income and that of his wife, pianist Hazel Scott. That jury then was dismissed.

Had the grand jury held off until next September, the statute of limitations would have taken effect — which means that Powell could not be prosecuted since the time in which an alleged crime may be punished would have elapsed.

Last December, Buckley's National Review carried an article critical of the lengthy shelving of the Powell case. Copies were mailed to each of the 23 grand jurors on the Powell case.

JURY HEARS EX-AIDE

Powell Case Balk Is Laid to Rogers

(Copyright 1958 by International News Service)

NEW YORK, May 9—A former assistant U.S. attorney charged today that Attorney General William Rogers ordered the income tax investigation of U.S. Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY) dropped in 1957 because it was "too hot to handle."

An angered federal grand jury here—spurred on by its foreman, a nationally prominent insurance executive—indicted Powell yesterday on tax evasion charges carrying penalties of up to 15 years imprisonment if he is convicted.

The jury acted after former Assistant U.S. Atty. Thomas A. Bolan testified before it on his part and the role played by high Justice Department officials, who allegedly stalled the case for 14 months.

Bolan, 33, one-time head of the subversive division of the U.S. attonrey's office, urged a "no-holds-barred congressional investigation into why the Powell case was stoppped and why nothing was done for 14 months."

Bolan, who was in charge of the Powell case, said he was informed by his superiors in the U.S. attorney's office in New York on March 18, 1957, that "Washington had decided to drop the case."

"There is no doubt in my mind," said Bolan, "that the order emanated from Mr. Rogers (at that time deputy attorney general), who had issued instructions concerning this case from time to time."

Rogers refused comment, but U.S. Atty. Paul Williams started an inquiry into "possible outside influences" brought to bear on the grand jury to obtain indictment in the Powell case. He issued a subpoena for William Buckley, editor of the Weekly National Review, which carried an article criticizing the shelving of the Powell case. Copies were mailed to each grand juror.

Williams said Bolan also will be summoned for questioning.

Buckley admitted violating a law against contacting jurors on matters pending before them, but said, "We're not reluctant to take credit for stirring the grand jury up."

Had the grand jury held off indicting Powell until September, the statute of limitations would have taken effect and he could not have been prosecuted for the crimes now alleged. Powell, who bolted the Democratic party in 1956 to support President Eisenhower's candidacy for re-election, is expected to be arraigned next week.

The three-count indictment carries a maximum penalty on conviction of 15 years in prison and $30,000 in fines. 5-8-58

Powell, 49, has been in Congress as a Democrat since 1945.

In the last presidential election in 1956, Powell supported President Eisenhower and the Republican national ticket because he said he was displeased with his own party's national stand on racial matters. Charleston S.C.

Shortly after Eisenhower's re-election, a grand jury probe of Powell's income tax affairs was allowed to grow dormant. Powell then denied that this represented any deal with the GOP administration.

April 17 the grand jury probe was suddenly revived amid reports that the jurymen had exerted pressure on federal authorities.

The indictment charged that in 1951 Miss Scott's net income was $9,181 and the tax due on it $1,990. It charged that the tax return listed net income of only $3,815, with only $590 due in taxes.

Another count of the indictment charged that Powell had stated the net income in 1952 for his wife and himself was $5,252 and that there was no tax due. The grand jury said net income actually was $8,952 and the tax due $1,663.

Powell has been widely reported as the target of a dumping movement by Tammany Hall leaders in the upcoming election. They are believed ready to lend their support to another Democrat in reprisal for Powell's 1956 support of the GOP.

The indictment was expected to lend impetus to the move. However, Powell has said he's in the race for re-election to the finish.

REP. ADAM C. POWELL
Faces Tax Case Charges

Last month two former aides of Powell, convicted on tax charges, underwent intensive questioning by Arthur H. Christy, chief assistant to Dist. Atty. Paul W. Williams.

The pair, who served as secretaries to Powell, are Mrs. Hattie Freeman Dodson, 48, convicted in May, 1956, of evading $5,000 in taxes and illegally collecting $2,000 in refunds, and Acy Lennon, 54, convicted in October, 1956 of evading $1,792 in taxes.

Powell Indictment

St. Louis Post-Dispatch

CONGRESSMAN Adam Clayton Powell's indictment for income tax evasion is not conviction. He will now have his day in court and an opportunity to defend himself before the law concerning charges that he falsified his and his wife's returns. There is already one gain from the indictment. It scotches the story that the Department of Justice would not prosecute the Harlem lawmaker after he put his influence behind President Eisenhower in the 1956 election. Montgomery Ala

The alleged offenses do go back pretty far and the delay of 14 months is not a display of rigorous activity. But now the case against Congressman Powell has been presented to a grand jury and the grand jury has found enough basis to justify an indictment. Now Adam Clayton Powell is just like any other citizen who must answer in court.

Everybody Out Of Step But Powell

Add'l Citizen P. 4A

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell is having his troubles these days; he is eminently deserving of all of them.

Tammany district leaders in Harlem have voted 11 to 1 to read him out of the Democratic Party because of his 1956 support of President Eisenhower. And then there's the little matter of his indictment for evasion of federal income taxes. Dec 3 1958

Naturally it's a plot and among the plotters named by Powell in a speech the other day are Eisenhower, Nixon, Gov. Harriman, the leading Democratic liberals in the Senate, and just about everybody else. All have abandoned the civil rights fight, he charged. In Congress now the philosophy is "white is right." Not only that, but New York Democrats are white supremacists: Montgomery Ala

"How dare the Young Democrats of New York, an all-white organization with not more than three non-white members, sit in judgment downtown and tell us, the 400,000 people of Harlem, who our congressman should be," he roared to a Negro audience.

Broadening the attack, the indicted the whole nation:

"This is a white man's country of dedicated hypocrisy and of organized and frequently legalized contempt for minorities."

Sounds as though Powell may be about to expatriate himself. It will be the nation's gain.

Powell Indicted On 3 Charges Of Evasion Of Taxes

Tammany Hall Indicated Desire To Dump Pastor

By PAUL BURTON

NEW YORK — (INS) — Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., controversial Democratic Negro Congressman from New York, was indicted by a Federal Grand Jury Thursday on three counts of income tax evasion.

Powell, who bolted party ranks in 1956 to support President Eisenhower, was accused of falsifying his net income figures in his 1952 return.

He was also charged with filing a fraudulent income tax return on behalf of his wife in 1951. Counts one and two dealt with his wife's 1952 return.

Mrs. Powell is the famous Negro pianist, Hazel Scott. They were wed in August, 1945, and have one son, Adam Clayton Powell, III.

The third count said the couple filed a joint return in 1952 reporting net income of $5,252 whereas the actual net income was $8,-[illegible]. The indictment said the Powells paid no tax for that year when they actually owed $1,663.

New York's Democratic political machine, Tammany Hall, led by Carmine Desapio, has indicated a desire to dump Powell from the Harlem seat.

However, the handsome minister-congressman is a fabulous vote getter in his district, garnering more than 57,000 of the 72,000 total votes cast two years ago.

FIVE YEARS A COUNT

If convicted, Powell could be sentenced to five years imprisonment and fined $10,000 on each of three counts.

U. S. Attorney Paul Williams said he would get in touch with the Harlem congressman and ask him to come to New York from Washington next week for arraignment.

The 49-year-old Powell has been a political power in Harlem for nearly two decades. He was first elected to Congress in 1945 as a representative of New York's 16th Congressional District.

In addition to his political activities, he also is a minister. He has been pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church since 1937. He succeeded his father as pastor of that church which has the largest congregation in Harlem.

FIRST NEGRO ELECTED

He was the first Negro elected to the New York City Council, that was in 1941.

The first count in the indictment said Powell filed a false individual tax income for his wife, Hazel Scott Powell, in 1951, when she reported a net income of $3,-[illegible]15. The government said the income was actually $9,181.

The second count charged Powell with aiding and abetting his wife in reporting that the tax due that same year —1951— was $590, when in reality it was $1,990.

Powell's income tax affairs had been under Grand Jury scrutiny for some time. The first investigation was held prior to 1956 when he switched to Eisenhower.

No indictment was returned then. But the Grand Jury went back into action this year and today's indictment was the result.

Two of Powell's secretaries, Mrs. Hattie Freeman Dodson and Acy Lennon, were convicted of income tax evasion in 1956. Mrs. Dodson served three months of a seven-month sentence and Lennon was sentenced to a year and a day.

Thursday's indictment was expected to lend impetus to the Tammany move to dump Powell.

Powell Case Prosecutor to Stay in Job

NEW YORK, May 14 (AP).— United States Attorney Paul W Williams says he has no intenfrom the Representative Adam fro mthe Representative Adam Clayton Powell, jr., tax evasion case.

Mr. Williams said this at a news conference yesterday in reply to a challenge by William F. Buckley, jr., editor of the National Review, that he withdraw from the case against the Negro Democratic Congressman.

Mr. Buckley said Mr. Williams should disqualify himself "as there are no grounds, given the record, for public confidence in his management of the case."

Mr. Buckley appeared before a grand jury yesterday under subpoena. The Government is seeking to determine whether the decision of another grand jury to indict Mr. Powell was influenced by Mr. Buckley.

Critical of Handling

The editor repeated that he sent copies of an article in his conservative magazine to members of the indicting grand jury. The article was critical of the Justice Department's handling of the case.

In a statement to newsmen, Mr. Buckley accused Mr. Williams of negligence in the performance of his duties.

Presentation of the case before the indicting grand jury had started before the 1956 election in which Mr. Powell supported President Eisenhower because of the desegregation issue.

Delay Developed

Shortly after the election, a delay developed in tax investigation against Mr. Powell. The indictment was returned last Thursday.

"At no time," Mr. Williams said yesterday, "has the Department of Justice, directly or indirectly, instructed me that the investigation was to be killed or closed."

"In fact," he added, "my specific instructions were not to discharge the grand jury pending evaluation of the case."

Mr. Powell told a news conference in Washington that his indictment was "persecution."

He said he did not know how he would plead to the indictment Friday.

Asked whether the tax evasion charges were true, he said: "I don't know until I talk to my lawyer tomorrow."

Edward Bennett Williams of Washington is representing him.

Powell Tax Jury Won't 'Run Away'

Williams Before Panel 3 Hours

The Federal Grand Jury has abandoned — at least temporarily—its plan to "run away" in its investigation of the tax returns of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell jr., D., N. Y., it was learned yesterday.

After an almost three-hour session with the panel, which will sit again today, United States Attorney Paul W. Williams reported at a brief press conference:

"You can gather things are going ahead properly and normally."

The grand jury hopes to question the Harlem Congressman before the panel's life expires on June 4. It is also looking into sworn testimony that Mr. Powell accepted kickbacks from one of his Congressional aids, who was convicted in 1956 of income-tax evasion.

The grand jury did not sit from March 1957, until April 17, 1958. And then, it reconvened only after it had advised Mr. Williams that it demanded to do so.

Jury Wants Powell Case Prosecuted

Seeking Bolan To Press Tax Probe

By Milton Lewis

Herald Tribune Special

An "unhappy" inactive Federal grand jury plans to ask a Federal judge next week to appoint a special prosecutor to help it investigate the income-tax returns of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell jr., D., N. Y., the New York Herald Tribune learned yesterday.

The Herald Tribune also learned that the panel—which is eager to "run away" from the Justice Department—wants to question Mr. Powell under oath and that it wants the special prosecutor to be Thomas A. Bolan, who resigned last September as an Assistant United States Attorney.

Three of Mr. Powell's Congressional aids have already been convicted or pleaded guilty to income-tax evasion and a fourth is under indictment on the same charge. Mr. Bolan successfully prosecuted two of them and was also investigating the Harlem Congressman's returns as well a allegations of kickbacks to him.

"Told to Drop It"

Mr. Bolan said yesterday of his investigation of Mr. Powell, who came out for the re-election of President Eisenhower in October, 1956, two months before the grand jury was impaneled:

"I was told to drop it. Why, I have no way of knowing. I don't want to speculate. Anybody can put the facts together and speculate for himself."

Mr. Bolan indicated strongly that the Attorney General's office in Washington was responsible for the alleged "drop it" order—not his former superior in New York, United States Attorney Paul W. Williams.

On that score, Mr. Williams said yesterday:

"I deny categorically that we have ever been asked to drop this case by Washington. We intend to go ahead with this investigation in the normal course and carry through to a completion."

The grand jury was impaneled by Federal Judge Sylvester J. Ryan in December 1956. Its tenure is due to expire in June. From December, 1956, to February of 1957 it held sessions regarding Mr. Powell. Then nothing happened—not until last Thursday, when, at the grand jury's request, it was called back into session after a fourteen-month lapse.

Would Serve on Case

And then it was reconvened only after the jury wrote a series of letters and made several telephone calls to the United States Attorney's office at Foley Square, threatening to meet on its own to continue its investigation of Mr. Powell.

Last Monday and Tuesday the grand jury also met in the United States Court House at Foley Square and it invited Mr. Bolan to attend—which he did. He waived immunity and explained the entire situation to the panel.

He was asked yesterday if he told the jury he would serve as special prosecutor in the Powell case. He said:

"Yes, I made that perfectly clear. If they want me, I'd be glad to render any service they want. I think it's my duty as a citizen."

After Mr. Bolan had won a conviction against one of Mr. Powell's Congressional aids in 1956, there was talk that the investigation of the Congressman would be dropped. Mr. Bolan said then to this reporter:

"That will be over my dead body."

Yesterday Mr. Bolan said:

"In March of 1957 I received a directive regarding the Powell case. Then I knew that things were at a dead end."

He was asked yesterday what he told the grand jury on Monday and Tuesday. He said:

"I presented the facts to them. They were not happy about the Powell case being dropped."

Mr. Powell was in Trinidad yesterday and could not be reached, and a spokesman in Washington for the Attorney General's office refused to make any comment "on a matter which is before a grand jury."

"Weighing Evidence"

United States Attorney Williams conceded that the grand jury was reconvened after a fourteen-month lapse at its own request. Asked why so much time had gone by and why the government had not called the panel in sooner, Mr. Williams said:

"There was a suspension to permit the weighing of evidence by the Treasury Department and my office. It was never our intention to dismiss this grand jury. There is no problem here of a statute of limitations. There is no difference in the conduct of this case from any other case. There was a long delay so there could be an evaluation of matters. That delay was necessary."

Mr. Williams added:

"My concern is we should be fair to this man (Powell) as to any other man under investigation."

On Oct. 15, 1956, when Rep. Powell testified at the tax trial of one of his secretaries—who subsequently was convicted—Mr. Williams was asked about the status of Mr. Powell. Mr. Williams said:

"There is no case of any kind against Mr. Powell."

However, the long-dormant grand jury plans to ask Judge Ryan on Monday or Tuesday to appoint a special prosecutor, one not connected in any way with the Attorney General's office.

Mr. Bolan is now associated with the law firm of Curran, Mahoney, Cohn & Stim, of which Roy M. Cohn is a partner. Mr. Cohn was chief counsel to the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations when it was headed by the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, R., Wis.

Hoffa's Attorney Hired by Powell

E. B. Williams Takes Tax Case, Confers Tomorrow on Arraignment

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell jr., has retained Edward Bennett Williams, whose legal clients have included Frank Costello, James R. Hoffa, Dave Beck and the late Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, to defend him against Federal income-tax evasion charges.

Mr. Williams, a Washington attorney who has become at the age of thirty-seven on of the country's leading criminal trial lawyers, said yesterday that he hadn't read the three-count indictment returned against Mr. Powell Thursday and so couldn't comment intelligently on the case.

"All I know about it is what I read in the press," he said.

Conferred Friday

Mr. Williams, who was reached by telephone at his Washington office, said that Mr. Powell—whom he had never seen before—came to his office Friday and conferred with him for forty-five minutes. Mr. Williams said he plans to talk further with Mr. Powell, forty-nine-year-old Democratic Congressman who also is the pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church in Harlem.

Monday Mr. Williams plans to arrange by telephone with Chief Assistant United States Attorney Arthur H. Christy a date for Mr. Powell's arraignment at the United States Court in Foley Square. Wednesday Mr. Williams will be in New York to speak at the dinner of the New York County Criminal Bar Association.

The indictment accused Mr. Powell of preparing a false income tax return for his wife, Hazel Scott, the jazz pianist, in 1951. It also charged him with evading taxes on a joint return with Miss Scott in 1952. The government claimed that in all Mr. Powell had cheated it out of $3,000. Miss Scott was not named in the indictment.

Powell Battles For Post

NEW YORK — (INS) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., (D.) N. Y., continuing his battle with the New York Democratic party, Wednesday had challenged Manhattan Borough President Hulan Jack to run against him for Congress.

TUESDAY'S STATEMENT

In a statement issued Tuesday night, Powell said that "despite the fact that he (Jack) could run and still not risk losing the borough president's job, I say . . . Jack hasn't got the courage to face the people."

16TH DISTRICT

Powell, who represents New York 16th Congressional (Harlem), last week was rejected by the Democrats as a candidate for re-election. The Congressman charged he was read out of the party because he is a Negro and called Jack (also a Negro) a "tool" of white politicians.

PREACHER OF HATE

The challenge apparently was a reply to Jack's Monday press conference in which he referred to Powell as a preacher of hate whose statements "can lead to very serious trouble."

Powell has been attacking Tammy leader Carmine De Sapio and Harlem Democratic chiefs since they dumped him as a candidate for re-election because of his support of President Eisenhower. The leaders denied that their refusal to accept Powell stemmed from his recent indictment on charges of income tax evasion.

Adam has faith, will wait

Afro American

WASHINGTON (NNPA) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (Dem., N.Y.) Wednesday proposed that the Eisenhower Administration education program be adminstered without racial or religious discrimination.

Supporting a bill sponsored by two southern Democrats, Rep. Carl Elliott and Sen. Lister Hill, both of Alabama, Mr. Powell told the House Education subcommittee that it was now academic to talk about the Powell amendment."

"I am sure that we have now come to the place in our thinking where we realize that we cannot be the equal of, much less surpass, Soviet Russia with a lily white society," he said.

THE HOUSE Education and Labor Committee Tuesday rejected an amendment to the bill to extend the laws providing Federal funds for construction and maintenance of schools in areas heavily burdened by the influx of children due to Federal activities.

The amendment, offered by Rep. James Roosevelt (Dem., Calif.), would have denied Federal funds to school districts which are not complying with the Supreme Court decision against segregated public schools.

In offering the amendment, Mr. Roosevelt reversed his stand of last year when he opposed on the House floor the Powell amendment to the bill providing Federal aid for school construction.

The Roosevelt amendment was defeated by a vote of 17 to 5, with two members abstaining.

THE DECISIVE vote was taken as an indication that any amendment to a school bill this year would have a rougher time on the House floor than during the last session when it was adopted overwhelmingly.

Mr. Roosevelt said some of the liberals will maintain this year that civil rights and Federal aid to schools are separate issues and should be handled separately.

But he saw a great deal of support for an antisegregation amendment to a school bill. Both he and Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (Dem., N.Y.), plan to offer such amendments on the floor.

Former motorman gets $10,000 post

Afro American P. 19

BROOKLYN, N.Y. — Lloyd Peterson, who was hired as a motorman on the Church Ave. trolley line 15 years ago, Thursday was sworn in as secretary of the NYC Transit Authority at a salary of $10,000 a year.

Oct. 4-19-58

The 39-year-old veteran of World War 2 has been active in employee organizations among transit employees with the Authority.

He is a charter member and chairman of the board of directors of the Associated Transit Guild and chairman of the constitution committee of the Negro Civil Service Organizations Inc.

AFTER OPERATING street cars and buses, Peterson was inducted into the army in Dec. 1942. He rose to the rank of master sergeant before being discharged in 1945. While in the service, he was disabled in an accident while testing a "duck" in a Maryland swamp.

Unable to resume his job as a bus operator upon discharge, the new secretary became a railroad clerk. As his health improved, he became a subway motorman, a surface line dispatcher and then senior dispatcher.

Recently he has been serving as a special assistant to general manager Thomas J. McLernon.

He took up law at the New York Law School and received his L. L. B. degree there in 1952.

Last summer, he spent his vacation studying human relations at the University of Michigan on a scholarship from the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

He is married to the former Miss Marjorie Mullett, now a New York City school teacher. They have two children, Lynne 13, and Lloyd Vaughan, 11, and reside at 1410 Crotona Park East, Bronx.

GOOD APPOINTMENT

Perhaps the time may come (soon we hope) when there will be no occasion to remark on the appointment of a first Negro to this or that position. But since that time is unfortunately not yet here, we are happy to take note of the selection of Lloyd Peterson as secretary of the Transit Authority and to congratulate him and the authority. Even if Mr. Peterson were not a Negro his achievement would be exceptional. Fifteen years ago he was a trolley car operator in Brooklyn. Then, after Army service, he was a bus driver, railroad clerk, subway motorman, dispatcher and special assistant to the authority's general manager. And all the while he was studying, raising a family and working toward a goal. Now at 39 he has succeeded. This is a good time for Mr. Peterson and a good time for all of us. It would be even better if such stories became commonplace.

Justice Paige is promoted after 22 years

He was sworn into his new post by the Mayor at City Hall. His salary will continue to be $19,500 a year.

The president of Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity and World War I veteran, Justice Paige replaced Clarence Wilson on the Domestic Relations Court bench. He lives with his wife and two children at 1294 Carroll St. Brooklyn.

The late Mayor LaGuardia named Justice Paige a magistrate in 1936. Mr. LaGuardia elevated him to the Speical Sessions Court in 1940 and Mayor William O'Dwyer reappointed him in 1950.

Housing Bias Hit By Urban League

NEW YORK, N. Y. — The New York City Housing Authority has chosen a special consultant on race relations. He is Madison S. Jones, who will assume the new $15,000 a year post.

Jones has been special assistant on housing for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for the past four years.

The New York City Housing Authority is the first local public housing group in the nation to have a full time specialist on race relations. Among the many problems Jones will work on is that of how to achieve better integration and racial balance in public housing developments in the city.

Jones is expected to devise new techniques for site selection, tenant selection and tenant relocation. One issue that will need to be resolved is whether to use a quota system.

He will also develop community relations and train public housing authority personnel in race relations. The authority plans a training course for all of its employes.

There are now more than 100,000 families living in public housing here. It is estimated that 44 per cent of them are white, other than Puerto Rican; 39.5 per cent are Negro; 16.1 per cent are Puerto Rican and 0.4 per cent are Chinese and other. Some of the projects are almost all-white, while others are solidly Puerto Rican or Negro.

Jones was youth work secretary of the NAACP for two years from 1940 to 1943 and then served for two years in the New York Regional office of the Federal Fair Employment Practices Commission.

He rejoined the NAACP in 1945 as administrative assistant to the late Walter White, who was executive secretary. From 1951 to 1954 he was a race relations officer in the New York Regional office of the Federal Housing Administration.

Harriman Names Aide To State Parole Board

Associated Press

Herbert B. Evans

ALBANY, Sept. 23 (AP)—Governor Harriman today appointed his assistant counsel, Herbert B. Evans of New York City, to fill a vacancy on the State Parole Board.

Mr. Evans, who is 47 years old, is the first Negro to serve on the five-member board. Its members are paid $17,500 a year.

The Governor designated him to succeed Lee B. Mailler of Cornwall, a Republican who resigned because of ill health. He had been succeeded as chairman by Russell B. Oswald of Schenectady.

Presumably, if Mr. Harriman is re-elected, he will send Mr. Evans' name to the Senate next January for confirmation in the unexpired portion of Mailler's term, which runs to June 18, 1960.

Man of Many Firsts

Harold Arnoldus Stevens

BEING constantly cited as the first Negro to do this or that may become distasteful to some and inspire false pride in others. But neither has been true of Harold Arnuldus Stevens, who yesterday became the first of his race to be named an associate justice of the Appellate Division of the State Supreme Court.

Man in the News

"I haven't had much reaction," Justice Stevens said yesterday, "unless it is a feeling of great gratitude—not for something of which to be proud, but for having been blessed a great deal by the Lord."

Justice Stevens, who now is theh ighest ranking member of his race in the state judiciary, has had a succession of such firsts. He was, he believes, the first Negro to have been graduated from Boston College Law School. Certainly he was the first Negro named to the General Sessions and Supreme Court benches.

Being the first of his race in formerly all-white precincts hasn't caused any particular difficulties, either, Justice Stevens says. "Some people may have wondered how it would work out," he said yesterday, "but certainly no one was hostile."

The only really difficult time his friends recall that he has had on the bench involved a white attorney who had served with Justice Stevens years before in the State Assembly. He was suspected of trying to take advantage of the fact.

On that occasion—one of the few times Justice Stevens has been known to become visibly angry on the bench—he cited the attorney for contempt after describing his behavior as "loud, disorderly, snide, sarcastic, contemptuous, ranting and belligerent."

Greatest Influences

The greatest influences in his life Justice Stevens regards as his mother, Mrs. Lilla Johnson Stevens, and her father, James H. Johnson, a minister turned business man who schooled him in the love of poetry, music, history and biography.

Justice Stevens was born fifty years ago on a 1,000 acre farm owned by his father on Johns Island, S. C., across the bay from Charleston. When he was 3 his father died, and the farm was lost. He, his mother, and his three older brothers moved to Columbia, S. C.

The incident that made him decide to become a lawyer came while he was a student at the Benedict (S. C.) College. A Negro woman and her two brothers accused of the murder of a sheriff were dragged from the county jail at Aiken, towed through town behind an automobiel, shot down and mutilated.

The New York Times

"No one was hostile"

The son of the attorney who had represented the three lynch victims was a fellow student of Justice Stevens, and told him about the case in detail. "There was no voice of protest raised," Justice Stevens recalls. "Then I was inspired to study law—because it was our best bet to eliminate things like this."

After World War II, Justice Stevens ran for the Assembly from the then predominantly white Thirteenth Assembly District, and won over three rivals. Five years later, in 1950, he resigned from politics to begin his judicial career as a General Sessions judge.

In 1938, two years after his graduation from law school and his decision to move to New York, Justice Stevens was married to the former Ella Myers, whom he had known since grade school days. Today they live at 295 Convent Avenue.

A converted Roman Catholic, as is his close friend Hulan Jack, Manhattan's Borough President, Justice Stevens has long been active in the lay work of his church. Both Boston College and Fordham have honored him with honorary doctorates of law for his interracial activities, and Pope Pius XII has given him the "Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice" award.

FIRST NEGRO JOINS APPELLATE BENCH

Justice Stevens Is Inducted at Governor's Home — 6 Others Take Posts

Supreme Court Justice Harold A. Stevens was formally inducted yesterday as an associate justice of the Appellate Division, First Department. He is the first Negro in the state to hold such a high judicial office.

The induction ceremony took place in Governor Harriman's home at 16 East Eighty-first Street. The Governor presented a certificate of designation to Justice Stevens in the presence of the justice's wife, Mrs. Ella M. Stevens.

Justice Stevens' designation as an associate justice of the Appellate Division was one of seven appointments to Appellate Divisions made officially by the Governor yesterday.

Justice Bernard Botein, who has been serving as an associate justice of the First Department, was appointed Presiding Justice. He replaces Justice David W. Peck whose term expired at midnight and who was not a candidate for re-election to the bench this year.

The Appellate Divisions are the second highest courts in the state, ranking just below the Court of Appeals. They hear and decide appeals from the Supreme Court, Surrogates Courts, County Courts, City Courts and other lesser tribunals. Some of their decisions can be appealed, others can not.

Term of Appointment

The vacancy to which Justice Stevens was appointed was created by the promotion of Justice Botein to Presiding Justice. Justice Stevens designation was for a five-year term. Justice Botein's is until the expiration of his Supreme Court term in 1970.

Justice Botein's promotion carries with it a $1,000 increase in salary, raising his pay to $38,000 a year. Justice Stevens' designation involves a $5,000 increase in compensation, raising his salary from $32,000 a year to $37,000.

The Appellate Division on which Justices Botein and Stevens will serve meets in Manhattan. It serves Manhattan and the Bronx.

Of the other Appellate Division designations announced yesterday, two are reappointments in the Second Department, which meets in Brooklyn. Those reappointed were Justices Henry G. Wenzel Jr. of Richmond Hill, Queens, and George J. Beldock of Brooklyn.

The remaining three were in the Fourth Department, which meets in Buffalo and serves all of western New York. Justice Philip Halpern of Buffalo, who has been serving in the Third Department, with headquarters in Albany, was appointed to the Fourth Department.

Justice Harry D. Goldman of Rochester was appointed to the Fourth Department to replace Justice Raymond C. Vaughan of Buffalo, whose term expired. Justice Henry J. Kimball of Watertown was reappointed to the Fourth Department for the balance of his Supreme Court term, which runs out in 1959.

The upstate designations involve $2,000 a year in compensation in addition to the $26,000 a year salary the designees receive as Supreme Court Justices.

Watson Seeks Negro On Parole Board

Gov. Averell Harriman was called upon this week to name a Negro to the $17,400-a-year vacancy on the State Division of Parole by State Senator James L. Watson.

In a letter to Harriman, Watson charged that although New York state has never had a Negro on the five-man Parole Board, other states including Connecticut, California, Massachusetts, Ohio, Michigan, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and the U.S. Parole Board," have had Negro members.

The Harlem legislator noted that approximately 50 per cent of the inmates of the state prisons are Negro and Puerto Rican and the appointment of a Negro to the five-member board "would be a timely move."

10 Per Cent

"Since Negroes as a group represent approximately 10 per cent of the population, the Negro community is concerned by this disproportionately large percentage of Negroes who have been convicted of serious crimes and are released to the community for rehabilitation.

"In addition to the problem common to all offenders, Negro offenders have many other sociological problems peculiar to their minority group status.

"For this reason it would appear that not only the interests of Negroes but the entire community would be served by the appointment of a Negro to the Board who because of his experience is close to the problems these parolees face in making constructive social adjustments," Watson wrote.

The vacancy exists in the position of Alfred Loos, whose term expired on June 18. He is a Republican appointee.

Jackie Goes To Bat For Powell

New York, N.Y.

Sat. 2-3-58

Robinson made his declaration before a cheering capacity crowd in the Abyssinian Baptist Church at a meeting which featured Congressman Powell as principal speaker and which saw the church give its annual achievement award to a number of prominent Harlem citizens.

Robinson said he doesn't engage in partisan politics and he told his audience that he is a friend of Earl Brown's as well as a friend of Adam Powell, but he said this is a time for Negroes to stand up and be counted.

"And I think I should tell you how I feel about this," Jackie said.

Men of Century

Jackie was the recipient of one of ten "Men of the Century" awards given by the church under the auspices of the Rev. O. D. Dempsey and a Voluntary Citizens Committee as the Church celebrated its eighth annual "Citizens Achievement Day."

In addition to the ten "Men of the Century" awards the church also honored 44 other Harlem citizens for outstanding achievement in 1957 and 1958.

Congressman Powell in a ringing address closing the meeting called for the total liberation of all Negroes in America.

He said Harlem has now taken Little Rock's place as a "battleground" for the emancipation and he made it plain that he was referring to the emancipation of Negroes from "boss rule."

Brown Sends Telegram

In an obvious slap at those who had labelled him "racist" for his earlier speeches, Powell had a good word for whites of the South who have aligned themselves with Negroes and their fight.

"We cannot fully appreciate, nor are we even adequately informed of the struggle carried on by white individuals and elements of the south for human freedom," Powell said, adding:

"Our fighting is not against whites but against the phony liberals of both races."

Councilman Brown who had been invited to also address the meeting, sent a telegram from Detroit stating that a prior engagement prevented him from being present. He joined Mr. Powell in a denunciation of the Little Rock reversal. Mr. Powell read a portion of Mr. Brown's telegram to the audience.

The meeting was preceded by a parade which formed at 150th Street and Eighth Avenue and marched to the church

Mrs. Estelle B. Isaac and Mrs. Mathilda Shepherd were co-chairmen of the program. Rev. Dempsey presented the awards. Thirteen-year-old Vallie Ferbee served as Achievement Queen. Miss Evelyn Freeman read the invocation and Melba Patillo of Little Rock fame made remarks along with Jackie Robinson, Sugar Ray Robinson, Herbert T. Miller, James L. Hicks and others.

HOUSE FILE TO GO TO POWELL JURY

Time P.26

New York N.Y.

Congressional records of Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. will be turned over to the Federal grand jury investigating his income tax returns. The records cover his attendance, his employment of office workers and their canceled pay vouchers from 1951 through 1955.

The House of Representatives agreed by voice vote yesterday to give the records to the grand jury. The House acted in response to a Federal Court subpoena directing the House Clerk to make the files available.

Before any House records or employes may be made subject to a court order, the House must approve.

Before the vote, Representative Emanuel Celler, Democrat of Brooklyn, elicited agreement from the Democratic leader, John W. McCormack of Massachusetts, that the House action was not of itself prejudicial to Mr. Powell.

Meanwhile, the grand jury met again yesterday for three hours. Chief Assistant United States Attorney Arthur H. Christy said the panel "plans to sit all week."

Mr. Christy said that certain formal procedures would have to be followed before the records could be agthered and released in Washington. He did not know, he said, when they might be expected to be delivered in New York.

Two of Mr. Powell's former Congressional secretaries have been convicted of income tax evasion. They are Mrs. Hattie Dodson, who has completed serving a seven-month sentence, and Acy Lennon, now serving a term of a year and a day.

DREW PEARSON Says:

Why Did Federal Grand Jury Decide To Investigate Congressman Powell?

WASHINGTON—Justice Department officials have been jittery over the federal grand jury in New York, which now appears ready to hold its own independent investigation of the income taxes of Representative Adam Clayton Powell, the congressman from Harlem.

In the summer of 1956, this column reported that Powell, a Democrat, had discovered he was under tax investigation and that three of his secretaries were being indicted under circumstances that involved giving salary kickbacks to the congressman.

Powell, in the past a strong Eisenhower critic, then got in touch with Vice-President Richard M. Nixon and became a strong Eisenhower booster. As a Democrat, he urged Negroes to vote Republican. A special press conference was arranged for him, first in New York by Max Rabb, the White House aide, and John Roosevelt, the G.O.P. member of the F.D.R. family. Later, another press conference was arranged right inside the White House by James Hagerty himself.

On November 24, 1956, this column reported: "The U.S. attorney's office in New York wants to press the case against the congressman. However, there are indications that the Justice Department planned to drop the case in return for Powell's campaigning for the Republicans.

Sec. 4-29-58

'That Is Correct'

Last week, 18 months later, full confirmation of this came from Thomas A. Bolan, the assistant U.S. attorney in charge of the Powell grand jury. Asked whether it was true that on March 18, 1957, he was informed by his superiors that on orders from Washington the U.S. attorney's office in New York was abandoning the investigation and turning it over to the Treasury Department, Bolan replied:

"That is correct."

"Is it correct that you were asked to write a letter to the Attorney General advising that the case should be handled by the Treasury and that you declined?"

"That is correct," Bolan replied.

Bolan did not say so, but it was clear that he did not go along with any political fix in the Powell case.

Meanwhile, here are some of the facts in the files of the U.S. attorney's office which have prompted the jury to take the Powell case into its own hands.

2 Convicted

In 1954, Powell's campaign manager, Joseph Ford, broke with Powell and thereafter some of the congressman's financial records reached the Justice Department. Subsequently, two of Powell's secretaries, Acy Lennon and Hattie Dodson, were convicted; a third, William Hampton, was indicted, while John Henry Harmon, treasurer of the Federal Credit Union of the Abyssinian Baptist Church, pleaded guilty to embezzlement. Powell is pastor of the church, one of the biggest in the world, and has been president of its Federal Credit Union. His secretary, Hattie Dodson, was treasurer. Both resigned when the tax investigation started, and Harmon, succeeding Mrs. Dodson, pleaded guilty. Lennon and Hampton, two of Powell's secretaries, received salaries of $8,000 a year from the Dorie Miller Houses in addition to their Government salaries.

Part of the deal arranged in the election campaign of 1956 was that the congressman's secretary, Hattie Dodson, should be released as soon as possible from the Women's Federal Penitentiary at Alderson, W. Va. She became eligible for parole on September 25, got a hearing that same day, and was granted parole effective October 17.

backs, and in each case they, not their secretaries, were prosecuted. In the case of Powell, however, the secretaries were prosecuted while he campaigned for Eisenhower.

House Votes To Give Jury Income-Tax Data on Powell

Washington, April 29 (AP)—The House voted today to make available to a Federal grand jury in New York certain official records regarding Representative Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.).

One of Powell's aides was convicted of income tax evasion in 1956. The trial produced sworn testimony about kickbacks.

The House action in opening its records was taken in response to a Federal Court subpoena served on House clerk Ralph Roberts directing him to make the files available to the Federal Court for the Southern District of New York.

Records for 1951 to 1955

Before any House records or House employees may be made subject to a court order, the House must approve.

By voice vote, the House agreed to make available to the court the official record of Powell's House attendance, and his employment of office workers and their canceled pay vouchers for the years 1951-55.

Before voting, Representative Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) elicited agreement from Democratic Leader John McCormack (Mass.) that the House action was not of itself prejudicial to Powell.

McCormack also noted that the fact that a member is not recorded by name on roll calls does not mean he is not present.

POWELL JURY GETS PLEDGE OF U. S. AID

Panel Agrees Not to Exclude Federal Attorneys From Its Tax Investigation

By EDWARD RANZAL

United States Attorney Paul W. Williams convinced yesterday a Federal grand jury that the Government should not be excluded from its investigation of the tax returns of Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr.

Displeased because the Justice Department in Washington had pigeon-holed the case for fourteen months, a group within the grand jury had threatened to throw the Government out of the investigation and continue on its own.

It was understood that certain jurors were prepared yesterday to ask the entire panel of twenty-three to form a committee to ask Mr. Williams to appoint Thomas A. Bolan as a special assistant United States attorney to handle the matter. However, this matter apparently never arose.

Mr. Bolan was in charge of the case when he was an assistant United States attorney. He resigned last September to reenter the private practice of law.

Before yesterday's meeting it had been reported that some of the jurors had wanted Mr. Bolan appointed the panel's special counsel. However, the Federal rules of criminal procedure prevent such appointments although the jury may exclude Government attorneys from its session.

Sec. 4-29-58

Jury Gets Assurance

It was believed that Mr. Williams assured the grand jury that the Government would pursue the investigation diligently until all the evidence was in.

The panel met from 10 A. M. until 12:30 P. M. Besides Mr. Williams the Government was represented by Chief Assistant United States Attorney Arthur H. Christy and Assistant United States Attorney Charles Miller.

Neither Mr. Williams nor Clarence J. Myers, foreman of the grand jury, would comment on what has occurred behind the closed doors. There were no witnesses yesterday, but Government attorneys were seen pushing into the grand jury room a shopping cart filled with documents.

Mr. Myers, president of the New York Life Insurance Company, said:

"I absolutely refuse to comment on anything before us."

However, he did say that more than sixteen members of the panel, a quorum, were present yesterday. He said that the grand jury would meet again today.

After the panel session Mr. Williams happily told reporters:

"We met, continued to present evidence, and will sit tomorrow [Tuesday] and continue on a normal course. You can gather that things are going ahead properly and normally."

If the grand jury is willing, the Government intends to ask that it sit daily until the Powell matter is finished. This is expected to take two or three weeks.

The grand jury is an autonomous body that meets in secrecy. Government lawyers assist by instructing the jurors on the law as it applies to evidence. They also assist in the drawing up of an indictment.

Accuser Being Investigated

Charge Powell Issue Dropped As "Too Hot"

By JACK LOTTO

NEW YORK — (INS) — A former assistant U. S. Attorney charged Friday that Attorney General William Rogers ordered the income tax investigation of New York Congressman Adam Clayton Powell dropped in 1957 because it was "too hot to handle."

An angered N. Y. Federal Grand Jury—Spurred on by its foreman, a nationally prominent insurance executive—indicted Powell Thursday on tax evasion charges carrying penalties of up to 15 years imprisonment if he is convicted.

The jury acted after former Assistant U. S. Attorney Thomas A. Bolan testified before it on his part and the role played by high justice department officials, who allegedly stalled the case for 14 months.

Bolan, 33, one-time head of the Subversive Division of the U. S. Attorney's office, urged a "no holds barred congressional investigation into why the Powell case was stopped and why nothing was done for 14 months."

Bolan, who was in charge of the Powell case, said he was informed by his superiors in the U. S. Attorney's office in New York on March 18, 1957 that "Washington has decided to drop the case."

ORDERS FROM ROGERS?

"There is no doubt in my mind," said Bolan, "that the order emanated from Mr. Rogers (at that time Deputy Attorney General) who had issued instructions concerning this case from time to time."

Rogers declined comment on the matter. U. S. Attorney Paul Williams said his office is investigating "Bolan's conduct" and promised a fuller statement later.

Supporting Bolan's statements to International News Service about the decision to spike the investigation were purported copies of Justice Department Inter-office Correspondence concerning the case.

The attorney said he was "dumbfounded and amazed" when without warning he was summoned by Arthur Christy, then head of the Criminal Division, and told to abandon the Powell case.

The order, followed by a short period a three-page letter from Powell to then Attorney-General Herbert Brownell complaining that he was the victim of a "design" to "destroy my public and private reputation." It brought to a complete standstill the jury probe which had summoned some 75 witnesses in a busy 90 days of hearings.

The sudden reluctance of the Justice Department to push the probe of Powell, who bolted the Democratic party and endorsed President Eisenhower for reelection in October, 1956, has never been publicly explained.

Attorney General Rogers, reached in New York where he was making a speech, said:

"I am not going to say anything at all about the Powell case. Any comment should come from Paul Williams, U. S. attorney who handled the matter."

WILLIAMS STATEMENT

Williams issued the following statement:

"It seems to me that there are two things involved here. The first is Powell's indictment. The second is Mr. Bolan's conduct.

"I have no comment as to Bolan's conduct except to say that this is a matter that is under investigation by my office.

"Turning to Powell's indictment, we should be careful that Bolan's conduct should not distort the true administration of justice both in Powell's interest and in protecting against a disruption of the judicial process by intruding elements that can conceivably cause the invalidation of the indictment.

"This position will be fully stated to the court at the time of the arraignment."

POWELL'S LETTER

In his letter to Attorney General Brownell, dated Jan. 29, 1957, Powell complained about a questionnaire sent by the U. S. Attorney's office to various sources in an effort to determine his income, and said in part of the jury probe begun the month before:

"The language and the form of the questionnaire, mailed on a mass and indiscriminate scale, similarly carry an implication of wrong-doing by me which is unjustified, and which inevitably reflects seriously upon my reputation. . . .

"It has been my understanding that the function of a grand jury is to receive evidence presented by the government and to pass upon its sufficiency as a basis for indictment. In this case it appears that function has been distorted, and that the grand jury is being used by the prosecutor as an inquisitorial forum of unbounded scope . . . when Williams told Bolan he wanted the Internal Revenue to take over the investigation which had been under way for many months, he explained the office was "undermanned."

"My high regard for the present senior officials of the Department of Justice, and more particularly for yourself, leads me to believe that the manner in which the inquiry concerning me has been conducted cannot have your full knowledge or approval . . ."

Brownell resigned Oct. 23, 1957, and was replaced by Rogers.

The Justice Department inter-office correspondence reveals that Williams told Bolan he wanted the Internal Revenue to take over the investigation which had been under way for many months. He explained the office was "undermanned."

HAZEL SCOTT

In Paris pianist Hazel Scott, wife of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell, said "that's news to me" when informed Friday the congressman has been indicted for alleged income tax evasion.

She refused further comment.

Powell Hits Eisenhower On Rights Lag

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (AP) — Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-NY) complained to President Eisenhower yesterday against "the present seeming indifference, if not procrastination, by the Administration" in the civil rights field.

In a telegram to the President, the Negro House member who supported Eisenhower in the 1956 election said the Administration may "find itself branded by its friends as being anti-civil rights."

Powell complained that the government contract compliance committee has failed to hold any meetings south of the Potomac River, that the President has declined to call a conference with Negro leaders to discuss integration problems, and that the Administration has refused to press for additional civil rights legislation.

"Regardless of how laudable the past record" of the Administration may be in the civil rights field, Powell said, "it is not sufficient for the immediate pressing challenges of today and tomorrow."

High Post Given Judge Stevens

NEW YORK—The highest judicial post ever held by a Negro was made a reality for Supreme Court Justice Harold A. Stevens, Wednesday when he was formally inducted as associate justice of the Appellate Division, First Department by Gov. Averell Harriman.

The induction ceremony took place at the executives home in the presence of the justices wife, Mrs. Ella M. Stevens.

The Appellate Divisions are the second highest courts in New York State. They hear and decide appeals from the Supreme Court, Surrogates Courts and other lesser tribunals.

The vacancy which judge Stevens was appointed to created by the promotion of Justice Bernard Botein to Presiding Justice. Judge Stevens designation was for a five year term.

The Appellate Division on which Judge Stevens will serve meets in Manhattan. It serves Manhattan and the Bronx.

First Negro, Convert, Takes Over Post On State High Court

It marked another "first" in the already impressive list accumulated by the 50-year-old jurist. Graduated from Boston College law school, and he is the first negro named to the General Sessions and State Supreme Court benches.

THE INCIDENT that turned him to the study of law occurred when he was a student at the Benedict (S.C.) College. A Negeo woman and her two brothers accused of the murder of a sheriff were dragged from the country jail at Aiken, towed through town behind an automobile, shot down ond mutilated.

"There was no voice of protest raised' 'Justice Stevens recalled. "Then I was inspired to study law—because it was our best bet to eliminate things like this."

Trying to eliminate such things has been a part of his life ever since.

Since his conversion, Justice Stevens has been active in the lay work of his Church. Both Fordham University and Boston College have honored him with honorary doctorates of law for his interracial activities, and His Holiness Pope Pius XII has presented him with the "Pro Ecclesia et Pontifice" medal.

New York Negro Appellate Court Judge Is Man Of Many Firsts

NEW YORK, Jan. 6.—(Special) —Being constantly cited as the first Negro to do this or that may become distasteful to some and in spire false pride in others. But neither has been true of Harold Arnuldus Stevens, who yesterday became the first of his race to be named an associate justice of the Appellate Division of the State Supreme Court. "There really isn't much reaction," Justice Stevens said yesterday, "unless it is a feeling of great gratitude—not for something of which to be proud, but for having been blessed a great deal by the Lord."

Justice Stevens, who now is the highest ranking member of his race in the state judiciary, has had a succession of such firsts. He was, he believes, the first Negro to have been graduated from the expiration of his Supreme Court term in 1970.

Justice Botein's promotion carries with it a $1,000 increase in salary, raising his pay to $38,000 a year. Justice Stevens' designation involves a $5,000 increase in compensation, raising his salary from $32,000 a year to $37,000.

The Appellate Division on which Justices Botein and Stevens will serve meets in Manhattan. It serves Manhattan and the Bronx.

POWELL FLAYS PUPIL OUSTERS

Blasts Wagner, Charges 'Form of Naziism'

NEW YORK, Feb. 9 (AP)—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D.-N.Y.) denounced Sunday the ouster of trouble-making students from the city's schools as "a form of Naziism forced upon the people of New York city" by Mayor Robert Wagner and top school authorities.

Powell, also pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist church, told his Harlem congregation the "current outbreak of crime and violence in the New York city public school system" derived in "the stupidity and indifference of Wagner, Silver and Jansen."

He referred to Charles H. Silver, president of the board of education, and William Jansen, superintendent of schools, whose conferences with Wagner last week led to the board's crackdown on juvenile delinquency in the schools.

Rapes and Knifings

At least 644 pupils considered chronic trouble-makers were suspended from the city's schools Friday. The mass suspensions followed a series of rapes, knifings and other disorders involving white and Negro students on or near school property this year.

The board's suspension policy immediately ignited a round of protests from parents' associations and groups concerned with public education.

Powell, a Negro, said the suspensions of children "not convicted but merely charged" with being disturbed or incorrigible was "no way to meet the problem."

Terming the board's action "illegal," he added: "kicking them out into the streets, not only from three o'clock on, but the entire day will only help to make them into full time criminals."

Asks Suspensions' End

The Negro congressmen declared his opposition to "hooliganism" and "coddling criminals," but said the suspensions should be removed immediately and a conference called at city hall with leaders of groups and agencies involved in youth work.

He proposed the immediate establishment of smaller classes for disturbed children and said incompetent or incorrigible students should be sent to one of the schools established for problem children.

Meanwhile, city officials sought a solution to the problem of what to do with the suspended pupils.

State education commissioner James E. Allen has announced a team of education officials will come to the city early this week to assay "what the state can do to assist in expediting a constructive solution to the suspended pupil problem."

To Confer On Placement

Wagner said Saturday he was conferring with city officials about providing what he called temporary facilities for the ousted pupils.

State law requies full time education up to the age of 17, but also contains provisions for suspension of problem pupils. Court action is required to make a suspension permanent, but to do so, the school board must get a court order committing the student to an institution of some kind.

A form letter was sent to parents of the suspended pupils, but gave no indication of the tenure of the suspensions. "You will be informed of the time and place of the hearing when you will be given an opportunity to discuss this matter," it said.

Powell Says Ike, Nixon Fail To Keep Pledge to Negro Leaders

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D., N. Y.) today criticized President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard M. Nixon for alleged failure to keep promises to Negro leaders.

In a telegram to the President he complained that:

● Gen. Eisenhower has held no conference with Negro leaders to discuss integration problems although he "readily agreed" to do so when Mr. Powell proposed the meeting Sept. 17.

● Mr. Nixon has not made good on a promise given seven months ago to hold a meeting of the government contract compliance committee in the South. The committee, which Mr. Nixon heads, seeks to end racial discrimination in the employment of workers for jobs covered by government contracts.

Mr. Powell also told the President that the administration's decision not to ask Congress for any new civil rights legislation this year is "harmful" and "could be disastrous."

"When September rolls around again this year and federal courts order school districts to integrate, there just might be another Little Rock or Clinton, Tenn.," Mr. Powell said. "Legislation is needed now."

He said controversial Section 3 of the administration's civil rights bill "needs to be restored promptly." Congress removed this section when it passed the bill last year. It would authorize the government to seek federal court junctions to head off thre ened violations of civil righ

Mr. Powell told the Pre dent that if he thought a cc ference with Negro leaders no longer necessary, "the you are the recipient of sam very bad briefing and advi by your aids."

"Little Rock has not quiete down; dynamite scares conti ue," he said. "Negro churche of God have been destroye and the perpetrators hav gone free. Two murders hav taken place within 30 days b law enforcement officers."

He did not elaborate on th latter point.

N.Y. solons act to curb 'hate ads

NEW YORK — An advertisement in last Monday's New York Herald Tribune, "derogatory" toward colored persons, prompted two legislators here into action Tuesday.

State Sen. James L. Watson and Assemblywoman Bessie Buchanan immediately introduced a proposal to the State Legislature that would:

"Condemn the content and reject the purpose of newspaper advertisement sponsored by the Joint Legislative Committee of the Louisiana Legislature, the group which placed the ad.

THE WATSON - BUCHANAN measure called the ad "derogatory and inflammatory, encouraging disrespect of our colored citizens."

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, termed the ad "an open invitation to the North to defy the nation's highest court."

He said it was "an appeal for Northerners to join the South in defying the Supreme Court ruling outlawing segregation in public schools."

MRS. ANNE HEDGEMANN, assistant to Mayor Wagner said, "The hate advertisement in the New York Herald Tribune serves as an alert to all citizens who believe in democracy."

Leroy Carter, Ex-Atlantan, Gets N. Y. Post

NEW YORK—Leroy Carter, native Atlantan and graduate of Clark College will take over duties as director of the New York State Division of Employment Practices. He was appointed by Governor Harriman.

Carter had served as assistant field secretary for the National Association of the Advancement of Colored People for six years, and a field organizer for the Congress of Racial Equality, a federation of local interracial groups.

As director of the employment practices division Carter will handle all complaints or discrimination in employment in New York. He will work in a liaison capacity with State Industrial Commissioner Isadore Lubin.

The new director was sponsored by his local Democratic leader, Sidney Leviss of Flushing and recommended to Albany by Borough President Crisona in his capacity as county leader. The post pays $7,000 a year.

Carter now resides in Elmhurst, New York with his wife and two children.

Dr. Coleman quits school board post

BROOKLYN — Ill health recently forced the first colored person appointed to the Brooklyn Board of Education to hand in his resignation, despite pleas from friends urging him to do otherwise.

The Rev. Dr. John M. Coleman, pastor of St. Philips Protestant Episcopal Church, submitted his resignation to Mayor Robert F. Wagner with the assertion:

"IT SEEMS only equitable that I give up my membership on the board. I was out sick three months last year and I am still not well."

Dr. Coleman said the resignation had not been acted upon when interviewed. Deputy Mayor John J. Theobald said he received the resignation and had asked Dr. Coleman to "think it over and call me."

For Cong. Powell The Order Of The Red Star

THE successful launching of our first moon does not mean, it has been repeatedly emphasized in the last few days, that the Soviet challenge has been fended off.

Dr. Von Braun points out that his Jupiter C which put the satellite in orbit developed an initial thrust of only 75,000 pounds compared with an estimated 250,000 plus necessary to put Sputnik II up. The first Russian moon weighed six times as much as ours; the second, 37 times (1,120 pounds compared to Explorer's 30.8 pounds).

Nor was the feat, comforting as it was after months of American mortification, any evidence that we have suddenly remedied the basic weaknesses in American scientific education. After all, it was only a technological achievement. Dr. J. W. Buchta of the University of Minnesota commented the other day:

"Newton could have calculated the energy needed to launch it and he could have determined the magnitude and direction of the velocity it must be given to be placed in orbit."

ALTHOUGH the launching was a major engineering accomplishment, it represented no astounding breakthrough in basic science. The remedial education problem remains. The President has sent to Congress an emergency education program which he said places "principle emphasis on national security requirements." Among the items in the $1 billion proposal are the following:

¶ $605,000,000 in aid to the states to strengthen science and mathematics teaching.

¶ $90,000,000 for testing and guidance of superior high school students and $97,000,000 for 10,000 college scholarships (chiefly in science).

¶ $35,000,000 for institutes to give supplementary training to 32,000 science and mathematic teachers.

¶ $74,000,000 in grants and fellowships for graduate schools.

¶ $21,000,000 for National Science Foundation fellowships.

DEMOCRATS have criticized the budget as inadequate; others have advanced different objections. These are valid points of debate, even though there is general agreement in the country that it is imperative that we take some major steps—now—toward meeting Russian scientific competition.

However, the President's proposal is not likely to be destroyed by these debates, it might be expanded, the present excitement of Congress being what it is. But there is a saboteur already fusing his bombs who can, almost singlehandedly, destroy any federal effort to spur scientific education in the interest of national security.

That is the Rev. Congressman Adam Clayton Powell, Democrat of New York, who has already served notice that he will add a rider barring aid to segregated schools.

LAST year Powell successfully wrecked the Administration's school construction program with such a rider and there is little reason to suspect that he's bluffing this time. He has the power to cripple our race to catch up and he will probably use it.

To Powell the national security and the survival of civilization are as nothing.

Much has been said about the lasting impact of McCarthyism on American scientific research and on our foreign policy. There may be something to the allegations; it is impossible to prove or disprove them. But whatever the effects were and are, they might well prove infinitesimal by comparison to the disastrous consequences of Powell's demagoguary.

Unfortunately, liberals who were panicked by McCarthy's ravings cannot be moved to more than a mild tut-tut over Powell's sabotage, though there is no comparison between the damage done by McCarthy and that which Powell has announced he will do.

The difference, of course, is that Powell is a demagogue of the left and McCarthy was a demagogue of the right. Our "liberals" have been notoriously speechless in condemning leftist demagogues.

Powell Hurls Criticism at Ike

Administration's Civil Rights Plan Failing, He Says

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower's administration is in danger of being branded as "anti-civil rights," Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.) warned here.

In a wire to the President, Mr. Powell asserted that a rising tide of criticism from enemies and friends, Democrats and Republicans, is being directed against the administration for its "seeming indifference." Mr. Powell termed the trend "extremely regrettable."

The fiery New York representative cited in a telegram three specific examples of why the President and his Administration are making enemies among Democrats as well as Republicans.

Listed among Powell's criticisms were:

(1) Vice President Nixon has failed to keep the promise made to the Rev. Martin Luther King in Ghana in my presence to bring Government Contracts Committee south for hearings.

(2) In September, I wrote you that you had seen all the enemies of integration and that it was now time for you to see some of the lovers of democracy. You agreed to a conference, but you have so far, after four months, set no time and place.

(3) The new Attorney General, Mr. William P. Rogers, has said that there would be no civil rights legislation in this session of Congress, but rather a "cooling off" period.

Powell concluded the telegram by saying the message was being sent, "not only as a Negro and a member of Congress, but more than that as an American who has applauded what you have done in the field of civil rights, but assures you that regardless of how laudable the past record may be, it is not sufficient for the immediate pressing challenges of today and tomorrow."

HARLEM MEETING WARNS HARRIMAN

Powell Threatens Governor With Defeat in Fall if He Backs Housing Project

Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. yesterday threatened Governor Harriman with defeat this fall if he provides state funds for Alexander Hamilton Houses, projected for his Harlem Congressional district by the City Housing Authority.

"If he dares give one cent to this project," the irregular Democrat told a cheering audience of 500 in the Abyssinian Baptist Church, of which he is pastor, "we'll beat him in November at the polls."

Mr. Powell also proposed, if all other moves failed to thwart the project, a "Gandhi-like movement" of present tenants of the site to resist eviction. "There aren't enough police in thhe city" to carry through eviction in the face of such opposition, he said.

The low-income project calls for construction of housing for 1,200 families in the heart of Harlem from 141st to 144th Streets between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, where many times that number now live.

It was first approved by the Board of Estimate two years ago. According to its critics, the city has acquired title to less than one-third of the site. They estimated the cost of the project at $25,000,000.

Yesterday's meeting was organized by the United Committee Against Alexander Hamilton Houses. John Young 3d, coordinator of the committee, presided.

Mr. Powell charged that the project was "designed to destroy Negro residents in Harlem." He said present tenants numbered 8,000, and that actual residents were "closer to 15,000."

"If the ghetto of Harlem is already overcrowded, where shall we go?" he asked.

He demanded that no new public housing be built in Harlem until a central relocation agency in the City Housing Authority could guarantee accommodations for the evicted.

Referring sarcastically to the Borough President as "one of us—at one time," Mr. Powell said the people of Harlem only asked that Mr. Jack do as much for Harlem as he was doing for white persons on the site of the Lincoln Square redevelopment project.

Russell P. Crawford, president of the New York chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, emphasized that organization's opposition to housing projects in solidly Negro areas.

Jury Grills Powell Aide

NEW YORK (AP)—After a futile effort to avoid the session, the former secretary of Rep. Adam Clayton Power (D-NY) Monday spent three hours before a grand jury investigation of Powell's income tax returns.

Acy Lennon, the congressman's one-time secretary, had sought to block the questioning, claiming that the probe itself was invalid.

His attorney, Leonard J. Feldman, asked Federal Dist. Judge Irving R. Kaufman to stop Lennon's appearance, but the judge ruled that the jury was qualified to proceed.

The lawyer also lost a move to get a tax indictment against Lennon dismissed.

Lennon has 90 days more to serve of a year's prison sentence for tax evasion at the federal prison at Danbury, Conn.

Powell Says Ike, Nixon Failed In Rights Promise

Washington, (ANP) — Controversial Congressman Adam Clayton Powell of New York last week charged President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon with failing to keep civil rights promises to Negroes.

The fiery lawmaker, an on-again-off-again supporter of the President, sent a telegram to the President complaining about the following:

1) That Mr. Eisenhower failed to keep a promise made last September 17, during the height of the Little Rock crisis to hold a conference with Negro leaders to discuss integration.

2) That Vice President Nixon promise of seven months ago to failed to go through with a hold a meeting of the President's Committee on Government Contract south of the Mason-Dixon line. The committee seeks to end racial discrimination in the employment of workers for jobs covered by government contracts. Nixon is the chairman.

Powell also criticized the administration for not requesting new civil rights laws in the cur-

Judge Stevens' Invitation

Harold A. Stevens couldn't attend law school in Charleston, South Carolina. He was born 50 years ago on John's Island, just across the bay from South Carolina's largest city.

So he became the first colored graduate of the Boston College of law.

The son of a farmer, Mr. Stevens dreamed at an early age of being a judge. There are no colored judges in his native South Carolina.

So Mr. Stevens bid South Carolina goodbye and became the first colored judge named to the General Sessions and Supreme benches in New York state.

LAST WEEK, he took the oath of office as the first person of color to be designated an associate justice of the Supreme Court's Appellate Division, the highest court in the nation's richest state at a salary of $37,000 a year.

The simple moral is that in the past 50 years there must have been hundreds of graduates from South Carolina schools, who have been compelled to leave that state if they wished to achieve their highest potential.

THIS HAS been a tremendous waste of human resources in one of the most backward states in the Union.

Uncle Sam is frantically sending goodwill ambassadors and spending billions of dollars trying to win friends in the underdeveloped countries of Africa and Asia.

Congressman Powell Hits Nation's Jim Crow Pattern

WASHINGTON — (NNPA) — As long as the United States engages in a satellite and missile race with Soviet Russia on a racially segregated pattern, it will be a second-class power, Representative Adam Powell, Democratic, of New York, declared last week.

In announcing that he intends to offer an anti-segregation amendment to the Eisenhower Administration's school program, Mr. Powell said:

"We can throw more satellites into the orbit than Russia; we can train more scientists than Russia, but as long as we do all this on the basis of a lily-white segregated pattern, we are finished as a first-class power.

"My constant trips through Asia, Africa, and the Caribbean force me to the conclusion that America must become a second-class power as long as she tolerates the concept of a second-class citizenship."

SHOULD DENY FUNDS

The amendment Mr. Powell said he will offer would deny Federal funds for education to states which maintain segregated educational facilities.

The Harlem Congressman said this country is facing three evils -- sputnik, science, and segregation.

"We cannot attempt to solve the problem of sputnik without the tragedy of our losing the American know-how in science and technical training if we ignore the third 'S' of the three 'S's' of our national problem -- segregation," he said.

Powell said a prediction he made three years ago has "become all too tragically true." His prediction was that within three years the United States will be a second-class technological power and Russia will have more scientists and engineers than this country.

In addition to the anti-segregation amendment to school legislation, Mr. Powell said he plans to introduce a bill to prohibit the Governor of a state from using the State National Guard without notifying the chairman of the National Guard Bureau in the Pentagon and also prohibit Governors from using the National Guard to support citizens who are opposing Federal or state law.

POWELL BILL PROPOSALS

At the opening session of the House Tuesday, Mr. Powell introduced bills to:

1. Make lynching and mob violence a Federal offense.
2. Protect the right of the blind to self-expression through organizations of the blind.
3. Provide for election of the Governor and Lieutenant Governor of the Virgin Islands.
4. Prohibit race or religious discrimination in employment.
5. Eliminate discrimination and segregation in the National Guard, and prohibit the use of the National Guard and the Air National Guard to aid or abet the violation of Federal law.
6. Prohibit the charging of a fee to view television in private homes.
7. Outlaw the poll tax as a condition for voting in Federal elections.

LITTLE ROCK INFLUENCE

Mr. Powell also said he will press for legislation to give the Attorney General the power that he does not have to move in area of mob violence, such as Little Rock.

"Our nation has suffered very drastically in not only black Africa and brown Asia," Powell said, "but in white Europe as a result of Little Rock.

"We cannot let this happen again.

"It might happen again this fall while Congress is not in session. Hence, the Attorney General, whether he asks for it or not, must have the power to move in areas of mob violence.

"Other wise, a new Clinton, Tenn., or another Little Rock will be totally the responsibility of the executive arm of Government and another disastrous blow to American prestige."

Cong. Nix Sworn In!

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON (ANP)—A mixed delegation of some 300 people from the Philadelphia area witnessed the swearing in of their new Congressman, Robert N. C. Nix, in the House of Representatives, Wednesday.

Soon after taking the oath of office, the Philadelphia Representative expressed great happiness at having the opportunity of serving his people in the great legislative body.

His election, he said, proves the fact that the "Democratic party in Philadelphia under the leadership of Congressman (William) Green is a liberal party.

It is certainly a party seeking the best interest of all the people.

"As for me," he added, "I can say that the Philadelphia Congressional delegation has established over the years an outstanding liberal record and I certainly intend to follow the line already taken."

HE MADE no comment on specific legislation he hopes to support. He implied, however, that he would carefully study every piece of legislation coming before the body and use his best judgment on how to vote.

• Nix's swearing-in made him the fourth Negro to presently be serving in the House of Representatives and the first from Pennsylvania. Each of the four Negroes is a member of the Democratic party.

He did his undergraduate work at Lincoln (Pa.) University and graduated from the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He began his law practice in Pennsylvania in 1925 and entered the political arena in 1928.

NIX IS MARRIED and the father of one son, Robert Nix Jr., who is presently working as his law partner. He is also the grandfather of two boys—Robert III, age 3, and Michael, 16 months.

Nix's first vote cast on Arms

WASHINGTON, D.C. (NNPA) — The first vote cast by Rep. Robert N. C. Nix (Demo., Pa.), who took his seat Wednesday, was against the plan of President Eisenhower to cut the Army by 30,000 men next year.

The vote Thursday occurred on the amendment of Rep. Robert L. F. Sikes (Dem., Fla.) to add $99,000,000 to the Defense Department appropriation bill to keep the Army at 900,000 personnel.

The House Appropriations Committee had approved the reduction in strength from 900,000 to 870,000.

THE VOTE for the Sikes amendment was 224 to 158.

A few minutes later on the second roll - call vote, Mr. Nix voted for House passage of the Defense Department appropriation bill, carrying $38,409,561,000, or about 4½ billions more than was voted last year and $212,614,000 more than was requested by the Administration this year.

Rep. William L. Dawson (Dem., Ill.) also voted for the Sikes amendment and passage of the bill.

Reps. Adam Clayton Powell of New York, and Charles C. Diggs, of Michigan, both Democrats, did not vote on either roll call.

4th Negro Congressman Is Sworn In

His election, he said, proves that the Democratic party in Philadelphia, under the leadership of Rep. (William) Green, is a liberal party. It is certainly a party seeking the best interest of all the people. Every vote cast in the recent primary is convincing proof that the people of Philadelphia have more than placed their stamp of approval on the leadership of the Democratic party.

"As for me," he added, "I can say that the Philadelphia congressional delegation has established over the years an outstanding liberal record and I certainly intend to follow the line already taken."

He made no comment on specific legislation he hopes to support because, said he, legislation is something in the future and he would prefer not to predict the future. He implied, however, that he would carefully study every piece of legislation coming before the body and use his best judgement in deciding how to vote.

Nix's swearing in makes him the fourth Negro presently serving in the House of Representatives and the first from Pennsylvania. Each of the four Negroes is a member of the Democratic party.

VOTES CAUTIOUSLY:

Charles Lucas Sworn In for Transit Board

Charles P. Lucas last Thursday was formally sworn in as a member of the City Transit Board. Robert Mooney, CTS Legal Counsel, administered the oath.

Lucas family and several friends witnessed the ceremony which, for the first time, seated a Negro on the powerful body which governs one of the nation's largest transit systems.

Seating of the tall, clean-cut gentleman, completely knocked the wind from the highly inflated instruments of smear, McCarthyism, mock sympathy and political skullduggery that tried vainly to stymie the appointment made several weeks ago by Mayor Anthony J. Celebrezze.

Immediately after the swearing in ceremony, Board Chairman Michael Lucak called the meeting to order and Charles P. Lucas sat down to learn everything he could about the biggest job he has had in his years as a school administrator, NAACP branch head and State Board of Education member.

During his first meeting with the Transit Board Lucas gave affirmative votes on the issues he understood and reserved his vote on those that were unfamiliar. He constantly took notes and asked questions on several points.

SOME OF the business discussed in the meeting included the advertising for bids on passenger shelters; the elimination of "Owl" service on Central, Woodland and Fulton lines; the bus pickpocket problem; and employees' retirement pensions.

CTS has set a goal of 800 passengers shelters to be placed throughout the city. As soon as bids are returned, the Board will authorize the purchase of about 75 to augment those already in use. Lucas voted "yes" on this issue.

Cutbacks in "Owl" service on three lines, No. 33, No. 12 and No. 24 were advised by CTS General Manager Donald C. Hyde due to limited use by passengers and because of parallel service on other lines. Service on the Central line will be discontinued on Feb. 2. Dates will be announced relative to service on the other lines.

Howard G. Cumler, transportation superintendent, discussed the pick pocket situation and reported that only two theft complaints were lodged in December as compared to 42 such reports ni November. He attributed the decline to the general knowledge that plain-clothesmen were riding CTS to gather evidence on the pocket picking racket.

LUCAS reserved his vote on a discussion of employees' pensions. He asked for more time to study the retirement system.

Victor Cohen, whom Lucas replaced on the board, sat in on the meeting and later read a prepared "fareweel speech." He recalled his many years of public service; thanked the radio, television and newspaper men for "the facts and information" they had given the riding public; and wished "every success" to Lucas.

Toledo lawyer Afro-American named streets division head

TOLEDO, O. (ANP) — Armand Hocker, 34-year-old lawyer-engineer, last week was named head of the city street division, which gives him supervision over 470 employees.

In taking over the $8,545-a-year job, Mr. Hocker, a veteran of nine years in municipal employment, became the first of his race to hold a high ranking supervisory post in the Toledo City government.

About nine years ago, J. Slater Gibson, then first assistant law director, resigned after he was bypassed for another member in the department to fill the law directorship.

AT PRESENT, the only other white collar colored employee above the stenographic or clerical level is Robert V. Franklin Jr., a police court prosecutor.

Before assuming his new job, Mr. Hocker was an assistant division engineer in the engineering and construction division.

He obtained his engineering degree in 1949 from the University of Toledo and his law degree in 1956. A lifelong Toledoan, he is married and has a son. His appointment, according to City Manager Russell W. Rink, was made on his capabilities.

Mr. Rink said he did an excellent job in all capacities he has worked as a city employee and there was no reason to believe that he would not acquit himself well in the new position.

House to Have 4 Negro Solons

Washington (ANP) — The United States Congress will get its fourth Negro member within a few weeks. This newest member is Robert N. C. Nix, a Democrat and attorney who was elected in a Philadelphia special election Tuesday.

Nix will fill the seat vacated by Cong. Earl Chudoff, who resigned to accept a judgeship in his area. Nix was chosen as a Democratic candidate by a local committee to oppose Cecil B. Moore, a Negro Democrat running on the Republican ticket. The Democrat won by 13,472 votes over the Republican's 7505.

The Democratic chose Nix as the first Negro to represent Pennsylvania after Raymond Pace Alexander had expressed disinterest in the post. Alexander, a prominent Philadelphia lawyer and a politician of long standing is said to have his ey

Bomb Scare

The home of Representative elect Robert N. C. Nix was under police guard recently after a bomb scare.

Capt. Frederick Dohrman, of the Germantown ave. and Haines Street police station, said a man called the Nix home at 6840 Lincoln Drive, at 8 a.m., and said a bomb had been hidden in the home.

Mrs. Nix, who received the call, and her son Robert N. C. Nix, Jr., an attorney, left the building while police searched from th cellar to the roof. Nix was not home at the time.

Scare Laid To Crank

Dehrman said there was no bomb and laid the call to a crank. Nevertheless, a police car was stationed in the neighborhood for the remainder of the day.

While the scare was on, all police radios in the section were silenced as a precautionary measure. Scores gathered in the streets behind police lines while a picked squad led by Dehrman and Lt. Albert Ulrich searched the house.

Nix scored a double victory in the recent election. He won both the unexpired term of Earl Chudoc in the 4th congressional district and the nomination for the regular term in the general election. Chudoc, now a Common Pleas Court judge, resigned to take the seat on the bench.

Fourth Negro Takes Seat In Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Robert C. Nix of Philadelphia, a Negro, was sworn into office Wednesday. This raised to four the number of Negroes in the House — the largest number since post-Civil War Reconstruction days.

Southerners joined in hearty applause which honored Nix after the oath was administered by Acting Speaker John W. McCormack (D-Mass).

Nix is a Democrat, as are the other Negro house members — Reps. William L. Dawson (Ill), Charles C. Diggs Jr. (Mich) and Adam C. Powell Jr. (N.Y.). There are no Negro senators.

Nix won a special election to fill the unexpired term of former Rep. Earl Chudoff (D-Pa), who resigned in January to become a Philadelphia judge.

With his seating, the House line-up is 233 Democrats and 198 Republicans. There are four vacancies.

Hears Bill Against Federal Troops

Fourth Negro Congressman Sworn In; Hears Bias Try

Atlanta Daily World Atlanta, Ga. P. 1

WASHINGTON, D. C. — (NNPA) — Two hours after he took the oath of office as a member of Congress, Representative Robert N. C. Nix, Democrat, of Philadelphia, was answering his first roll call.

It was a quorum call demanded by Representative Robert F. L. Sikes, Democrat, of Florida, just before the House began reading the Defense Department appropriation bill for amendments.

In making the point of no quorum, Mr. Sikes told the House that the bill was an important measure and he wanted all members on the floor.

DIXIE EFFORT

Actually, Mr. Sikes was making an effort to get southern members on the floor to vote for an amendment he was to offer. The proposed Sikes amendment would prohibit use of any of the money appropriated for the Army to send and maintain Federal troops or federalized National Guardsmen from being sent to any community to enforce Federal court orders requiring desegregation of public schools.

While the bill was in committee, Mr. Sikes offered his amendment in both the Department of Defense appropriations subcommittee and the full Appropriations Committee and it was rejected.

Mr. Nix walked through the street from his office, Room 104, in the Old House Office Building to the Capitol. Capitol police directed him to an elevator reserved for Congressmen during roll calls.

SAM RAYBURN

Shortly before noon, Mr. Nix was ushered into the office of the Speaker Sam Rayburn in the Capitol. He was escorted by Representative William J. Green, chairman of the Philadelphia City Democratic organization, and Francis E. Walter, also of Pennsylvania, chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

He was introduced to Representative John W. McCormack, of Massachusetts, who was acting Speaker of the House in the absence of Mr. Rayburn. The group posed for photographs.

At noon they walked across the corridor into the House chamber. After prayer and the receipt of a message from the Senate, Mr. Walter presented Mr. Nix for swearing in.

Mr. Walter told Acting Speaker McCormack that Mr. Nix's certificate of election from the Secretary of State of Pennsylvania had not yet arrived, but there was no question about the validity of his election.

Without objection, the oath of office was administered to Mr. Nix. Immediately afterwards, several members gathered around him and shook his hand.

FOURTH NEGRO

Mr. Nix became the fourth colored member of the 85th Congress. The other three are Representatives William L. Dawson, of Illinois; Adam C. Powell of New York and Charles C. Diggs, of Michigan all Democrats.

Mr. Dawson is the dean and most powerful of the group. By virtue of his seniority, he is chairman of the powerful House Government Operations Committee. He has been a member of the Congress since 1943.

Mr. Powell is the second ranking Democratic member of the House Education and Labor Committee. He has been a member of Congress since 1945. Mr. Diggs has been a member since 1955.

Mr. Nix is the first colored person ever elected to Congress from Pennsylvania. He is serving out the unexpired term of Earl Chudoff. Mr. Chudoff, now a Common Pleas Judge in Philadelphia, resigned to take the seat on the bench.

Mr. Nix scored a double victory in the balloting on May 20. He defeated Cecil Moore, the Republican candidate, for the unexpired term of Mr. Chudoff and won the Democratic nomination for the regular term. He will again face Moore in the general election.

Mr. Nix defeated Harvey N. Schmidt for the Democratic nomination in the fourth Congressional district of Pennsylvania, although Mr. Schmidt was backed by United States Senator Joseph S. Clark, Mayor Richardson Dilworth of Philadelphia, John B. Kelly, former Democratic chairman and some CIO officials.

Born in Orangeburg, S. C., he was graduated from Townsend Harris High School, New York City; Lincoln University and the University of Pennsylvania Law School.

Tell Story Of New Lawmaker

Defender P. 9

With the swearing in of Congressman Robert N. C. Nix, Democrat of Pennsylvania, it brought the number of Negro Congressmen to four, the largest since twice that number served on the Reconstruction 44th Congress (1875-77) according to an article in the current issue of Ebony Magazine.

At the swearing in, the House responded with a standing ovation for Nix, and the South Carolina delegation rose in a body to greet the new Congressman, a native of Orangeburg, S. C.

Congressman Nix, a prominent Philadelphia trial lawyer who has his son as a partner, began his private law practice in 1924.

Formerly deputy state's attorney-general, Nix came to Washington, says Ebony, with a liberal but cautious attitude.

ROUMANIA
U.S. MINISTER*

Wharton Gets OK for Roumania

WASHINGTON — (ANP) — The U. S. Senate last week confirmed the appointment of Clifton R. Wharton to serve as U. S. Minister to Roumania, it was reported here.

Wharton's appointment a week earlier by President Eisenhower marked the first time a Negro was headed a U. S. diplomatic post in a non-Negro foreign country.

The 58-year-old lawyer is classed as senior career officer among Negroes at the Department of State. He has spent 32 years in the foreign service, his most recent post being that of U. S. consul general in Marseilles, France. During his lo- service with the department he has served at Monrovia, Liberia; Las Palmas, Conary Island; Tannarive, Madagascar; Ponta Delgarda, Azores, and Lisbon, Portugal.

Although Wharton is not too well known in the United States because of his long career in overseas positions, he has been hailed by top State Department officials as being extremely capable as a diplomat.

A native of Baltimore, and a graduate of English High school in Boston, he received his LL.B and masters in law from Boston University. He praticed law in Boston for four years before joining the foreign service in 1925.

NEGRO APPOINTMENT SHAKES COMMUNISTS

Romania Can't Decide How To Accept Diplomat

The Commercial Appeal-Chicago Daily News Foreign Service, Copyright 1958

BUCHAREST, Romania, April 7. — Romanian Communists are still trying to decide how to react to the appointment of Clifton Wharton, a Negro, as United States minister to Bucharest.

Wharton, a 58-year-old intellectual with a long and excellent record in the American Foreign Service, arrived here to take up his post on Feb. 27.

Since then he has been making courtesy calls on government officials and fellow members of the diplomatic corps and getting his bearings.

He has made no mistakes and he is not likely to make any. This is indicated by his refusal to receive Betsy Blair, a left-wing American moving picture star who is now being feted in Bucharest. Wharton's usual response to embarrassing situations is to exhibit a pleasant smile, full of good white ivory.

The first reaction of the Romanian Communist government, which likes to criticize Americans for racial prejudice, was reportedly one of indignation at the fact that Romania had been chosen as the post of our first American Negro minister in Europe.

Their second reaction was to draw in their horns. Romanian newspapers have suddenly stopped harping on the American racial issue. Now they are waiting to see how he operates.

Many professional diplomats think he will do well, not because of his race but because he is an experienced pro himself.

Wharton bolstering U.S. prestige abroad

BUCHAREST, Romania (ANP) — The United States is credited with scoring a major decision over the Communist regime here by the recent appointment of Clifton Wharton as U.S. Ambassador to Romania.

Wharton is the first colored stationed in a European country.

The move, political experts say, sharply counteracts Communist exploitation of the American race issue. And the first reaction of the Romanian Communist government, it is said, was one of indignation that Romania should be chosen as the country for the first American colored minister in Europe.

The move has also quieted down Communist drumbeating on the American racial issue.

THOSE WHO know of Wharton's work in the United States Foreign Service, said the U.S. could not have picked a more resourceful and experienced man for the test.

Highly trained, Wharton began working for the U.S. State Department when there were only two or three colored persons in the field.

He served in various capacities, finally rising to consular rank. In those days, the only places a Negro could serve was Liberia, the Canary Islands, the Azores Islands, and one or two places in South America.

WHARTON reached the higher echelon in the foreign service when he was named Consul - General in Lisbon, Portugal, a post which he held until his appointment to the embassy in Romania early this year.

From a diplomatic standpoint, Wharton with his vast experience in difficult assignments, is well fitted for his new role. William H. Stoneman, Chicago Daily News foreign correspondent, in analyzing Wharton, called him a "pro" who won't make mistakes.

Stoneman also feels Wharton will do better than his predecessor, Robert Thayer, whom he said, was not tactful enough.

Still it is felt that Wharton faces a difficult job in having to grapple with the Communists in enunciating U.S. foreign policy. Some observers even believe he has been put on the spot unfairly. Wharton himself, however, is said to feel no qualms about his new assignment, as he goes about making courtesy calls on government officials and getting the feel of things.

Negro Becomes U.S. Minister To Romania

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8 (AP)—Clifton R. Wharton was sworn in yesterday as U. S. minister to Romanja. He is the first Negro career Foreign Service officer to head a U. S. diplomatic mission.

Secretary of State Dulles witnessed the oath-taking ceremony, at which Wharton was described by Deputy Undersecretary Loy Henderson as "a credit to the Foreign Service in the last 32 years."

Wharton, 58, had been consul general at Marseilles, France. In Bucharest he will succeed Robert H. Thayer, who has been reassigned to the State Department.

Richard Lee Jones, also a Negro, is ambassador to Liberia. He is not a career diplomat.

34c(1) 1958 STATE DEPARTMENT (GOODWILL TOURS)

Dr. Kittrell reports on U. S. 'good will' tour of Africa

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON (ANP) — Dr. Flemmie Kittrell, who has just returned from Africa on a good will tour for the State department, reported on her visits to five African countries at a tea sponsored at the Davis House by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom.

The purpose of her tour, said Dr. Kittrell, was to see what American women can do to strengthen our ties with the women of Africa.

OF ALL THE countries she visited Dr. Kittrell describes Kenya as the most depressing. The women of Uganda, she said, are a little ahead of women in other African countries. The Sudan was called the most conservative country which she visited. Ghana was in good economic condition, and Liberia was a little disappointment.

There is a great unrest among the Africans in Kenya, observed the educator. While the Mau Mau is thought to be about conquered, actually they are seething like a smothering volcano.

The more alert women of that country who have studied in England are watched by the Government. As a matter of fact, most of them are given government employment so that their activities can be more closely watched.

They must carry passes to be able to attend night meetings and cannot stay later than 8:00 p.m. There is a general unrest due to the lack of employment, and the country is heavily policed.

Indians compose the wealthy class of East Africa. When there were schools they were highly segregated. Indians had their schools, the Europeans theirs and the Africans had theirs. But now there are no schools for Africans.

THE GOVERMENT hopes to work out a plan whereby schools can be opened for the African students, but English will be taught instead of their native language to cut off communication with the Mau Mau.

Uganda is working for its independence in 1964. It is a wealthy country but the people have not been able to use their resources very well. This country has good schools and one of the best YWCA's that she has seen anywhere in the world. It is operated on an interracial and international basis.

Dr. Kittrell called the Sudan a conservative country because no women are found on the streets after sundown. She noted also that this country has the lowest percent of women in schools than any country which she visited. The people are very poor because so much of the land is not tillable.

WOMEN ARE making progress in Nigeria, noted Dr. Kittrell. They are the traders and handle the money. Nigeria has beautiful hospitals and child care centers. This country is looking forward for a great independence celebration in 1960.

She described Ghana as a most beautiful country, adding that it is also in good economic conditions. The women are not as progressive business-wise and leadership-wise as in Nigeria but they are making progress.

She praised this country for gettings its independence through peace and non-violence. She was also high in her praise for the leadership which the Prime Minister is exhibiting, adding that the kind of criticism which he is receiving is not deserved.

THE GOOD-WILL ambassador had little to say about the progress of Liberia since she last visited it several years ago, only to say this country has apparently been "CAUGHT IN AN ECONOMIC WEB."

She added, however, that more progress has been made under President Tubman than under almost any other executive. When questioned about the exploitation which is said to exist in Liberia Dr. Kittrell said, she would not say it was nonexistant but she would say she saw nothing in Liberia which she did not see in this country.

Dr. Kittrell is head of the Home Economics Department at Howard University. Several years ago she visited India establishing the first home economics school in Delhi.

Four years later she returned to the Indian city to attend the first graduation of the school she founded. Before her Indian visit she toured Liberia fostering a health and nutrition program.

U.S. Uses Negro Women to Promote 'Goodwill' on South American Tour

NEW YORK—Two of America's most distinguished women fresh from a month's "people-to-people discussion" tour of South America, pointed up once again the glaring need for more Negroes in this nation's foreign embassies.

Mrs. Dorothy Height and Mrs. Edith Sampson were members of a group of 30 representatives of national American organizations who held Inter-American seminars and town meetings with 400 South American leaders in eight cities in seven countries.

Leader of the group was George V. Denny Jr., president of International Seminars and Town Meetings. International House of New Orleans was co-sponsor of the project.

MRS. HEIGHT represented the National Council of Negro Women, of which she is president, and Mrs. Sampson, a lawyer, and former UN delegate, represented the Mayor of Chicago.

The trip was designed to promote inter-American understanding through frank discussion among private citizens of economic, social and cultural problems and potentialities among American nations.

The group spent 3 to 5 days in each of the following cities: Caracas, Venezuela; Bogota, Colombia; Lima, Peru; Santiago, Chile; Buenos Aires, Argentina, Montevideo, Uruguay; Sao Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

In New York at National YWCA headquarters, where she is an executive, Mrs. Height said that she and Mrs. Sampson were more sought for questioning and discussion than many others in the group.

• "They had an intense interest in our race problem and they were well-aware of every flagrant resistance to the Supreme Court. I explained to many of them that the Negro in the United States has to be seen as part of a whole. They think of us as a caste."

Mrs. Height said that the Latin Americans with whom she and Mrs. Sampson same into contact, "exhibited a great deal of confidence in what we had to say about our country and problems."

ALTHOUGH NO FORMAL report or conclusions have been drafted by the group, Mrs. Height said that in her personal report she would recommend the employment of more American Negroes in the Latin American embassies.

"The American Negro lends hope, courage and inspiration to the dark people in South America. The presence of the American Negro in that area helps to destroy the image that the American Negro is inferior."

Busy in B. A.—American delegates to the Inter-American Seminar, just ended in South America, pause for the photographer in Buenos Aires, Argentina, at the Plaza Hotel. Left to right: Mrs. James C. The panel will eye a pistol registration law, and Mayor Cutrer said the group will probably look at the police setup, to see if any changes are advisable. Also included among other prominent community- minded citizens are John T. Jones, Marvin Zindler, W. A. Smith, Rabbi Hyman J. Schachtel, Rev R. J. Diefenbach, Arthur Laro, James Delmar, Herrmann Brown and others.

On African Tour

U. S. Progress, Her Point

By Sarah Booth Conroy

What American working mothers do about baby sitters, how frozen foods shorten their working time—and what progress the American Negro is making are the things African women will learn from Dr. Elemmie P. Kittrell, Howard University home economics head.

Dr. Kittrell will leave Washington Aug. 2, immediately after the current International Home Economics Conference at the University of Maryland. She is a member of the local committee for the event.

After a day at the Brussels Fair, she will go on to Nairobi, Kenya, Aug. 4-5; Kampala, Uganda, Aug. 16-25; Lagos, Nigeria, Aug. 26-Sept. 8; Accra, Ghana, Sept. 9-20; and Monrovia, Liberia, Sept. 21-27.

DR. ELEMMIE P. KITTRELL
. . . she'll take America

HAVING BEEN to West Africa before (East Africa will be new this trip), Dr. Kittrell is expecting questions about the status of the American Negro.

"When they ask questions, I'll tell them the truth," said the soft-spoken educator. "I tell them whatever our difficulties are, that at least we have a Constitution and a way of working things out.

"These people, many of whom have visited our country or been educated in England, will understand what I tell them. Unlike many countries, and some African ones, we do not need violent methods, because a democracy has room for progress."

ON ANOTHER trip to Africa, 10 years ago, Dr. Kittrell conducted a survey on nutrition in Liberia. She will see this time if they followed her suggestions, which included using fish to substitute for their lack of protein from cattle.

This time she will speak to women leaders of church, school and volunteer groups such as the YWCA. "This is a cultural program, sponsored by the American Specialists Branch of the U. S. Department International Educational Exchange Service," she explained.

"So I will tell them such things as how American women organized nursery programs for working mothers, and how club groups can spread information about nutrition."

Dr. Kittrell said she had one reply to questions about the Middle East—"I'm a specialist in family living not political or military matters."

In Nigeria, Dr. Kittrell will see the Premier's wife, a Howard University graduate who studied with her. In Nairobi, she will visit the family of another of her students.

They Served "All"

The 5 Colored Citizens Who Were "City Fathers"

By JOHNNIE A. MOORE

PORTSMOUTH — At least five colored persons have served as "city fathers" during various periods in Portsmouth's history following the Civil War between the years of [illegible] and 1895.

Portsmouth is one of seven Virginia cities where colored councilmen were elected to office during Reconstruction. Representation on the local governmental body, then called common council, was based on wards.

In Minority

These colored councilmen would present needs of the entire city, as well as those of their respective wards. Though in the minority, occasionally white members of the council would vote favorably on their proposals.

PORTSMOUTH CITIZENS holding office on the Council during this era were the Rev. John M. Armistead, Nelson Proctor, John T. Judkins, Sam Fisher, Jr., and John [illegible].

How Elected

The Reconstruction acts of Congress, adopted in 1867, permitted practically every adult male colored person the right to vote, while some whites were denied the ballot. This permitted colored citizens to become office holders, in many instances.

Perhaps one of the most respected and well educated persons to sit on the Portsmouth Common Council was the Rev. John M. Armistead.

REV. JOHN M. ARMISTEAD
He Was Portsmouth Councilman

THE MINISTER and civic leader was born in Lynchburg, Va., March 1, 1852, and was educated at Richmond Institute and Roger Williams theological seminary from which he was graduated in 1875.

He came to Portsmouth during February of 1882 to accept the pastorate of Zion Baptist church which he held until his death in 1929. Rev. Mr. Armistead was editor-in-chief of "The Baptist Companion", published in Knoxville, Tenn., and in Portsmouth, Va. from 1878 to 1881.

"As a pulpit orator, he was powerful and persuasive: he had much originality, was apt in illustration, logical and systematic, with a voice of such range and power that without apparent effort his discourse might be frequently heard and followed a block's distance from his place of preaching," states an account on Rev. Mr. Armistead.

Civil War Vet

A native of Elizabeth City, N. C. Nelson Proctor worked as a clerk in the Naval Yard in Portsmouth and was a Civil War veteran.

He was a leading layman at Emanuel AME church (then called North Street AME church) where he served as a trustee.

ACCORDING TO accounts, the colored councilman was a captivating speaker and is remembered for his generosity to children.

Never married, Mr. Proctor lived alone in a modest home on Queen street where he died in 1910.

John T. Judkins and Samuel Fisher Jr., served on the Portsmouth Council in 1888 from the old Third Ward.

ALSO ACTIVE in Emanuel AME church, Mr. Judkins was a drayman.

Herbert L. Brown, jr., the new County Board Member, was appointed to the Recreation Council, succeeding David L. Krupsaw.

Many Votes Unanimous

In line with the qualified pledges of co-operation expressed by the opposing board factions at the organization meeting last Wednesday, many of the appointees drew unanimous votes.

The minority conservative members—Mrs. Leone Buchholz and Dr L. H. Blevins—were given representation on the committees. These two members, in turn, supported some of the nominees of the liberal majority members—Chairman Ralph Kaul, David L. Krupsaw and Mr. Brown.

Also, the bitter in-fighting which has marked board sessions during the past two years was at a minimum during yesterday's meeting.

For Demo chief—

Engelhardt wins Patterson's nod

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 17—Gov.-Elect John Patterson today came out strongly for State Highway Director-Designate Sam Engelhardt for chairman of the incoming State Democratic Executive Committee.

In declaring his support of Engelhardt for committee chairman, Patterson said "Mr. Engelhardt and I both firmly agree that the loyalty oath should be repealed."

In going to bat for Engelhardt, as had been predicted earlier, Patterson pointed to the former state senator's forthright stand for States Rights and segregation, and added that Engelhardt would serve capably and effectively in this post.

PATTERSON'S ACTION bolstered earlier indications that Engelhardt would easily win chairmanship of the 72-member state party governing body over Montgomery Atty. Frank Mizell Jr.

"I wish to announce that I am supporting Hon. Sam Engelhardt of Macon County for the position of chairman of the new State Democratic Executive Committee," Patterson said in a prepared statement.

"I would like to take this opportunity to urge all members of the new committee to support Mr. Engelhardt and vote for him at the organizational meeting (Jan. 19) for this position. I have given this matter careful thought and believe that my recommendation is in the best interest of the people of Alabama and the State Democratic Party."

"It is customary and traditional in Alabama that the people look to the governor as the head of the party during his administration, and, as such, the citizens of the state expect the governor to have a voice in the affairs of the party, including the election of the chairman.

"IN FACT, it has become traditional that the members of the committee elect a person supported by the governor. This custom has arisen due to the governor's being in the best position of anyone in Alabama, by virtue of his office, to work with the party leaders and public officials of other states in the interest of all of the people of Alabama and the party."

MIZELL RECENTLY declared he was banking on a promise made by Engelhardt in the Montgomery caucus of anti-loyalist committee members to assure Mizell's election as committee chairman.

Engelhardt termed this "just politics."

The anti-loyalists hold a 39-33 majority on the incoming committee. And the 39 anti-loyalists reportedly agreed to support Mizell at the caucus when Alston Keith of Selma also was being talked for the chairmanship.

THE GOVERNOR-ELECT pointed out that "Mr. Engelhardt has worked with him constantly in the fight to help maintain segregation and prevent encroachment of states rights, adding "he aided me in our fight to put the NAACP out of business in Alabama."

"He (Engelhardt) is nationally known and respected for his forthright stand for states rights and segregation," Patterson said.

"In having a strong voice in party affairs in our state," emphasized Patterson, "it will enable me as governor to better carry out the mandate of the people in these matters.

"It is especially important at this time, when we are under attack by the federal government and from radical elements within the National Democratic Party, that the governor have a strong voice in the affairs of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

"During my term of office as attorney general and since election as governor, I have been working with governors, attorneys general, and other public and party officials of many of the Southern states in an effort to form a unified front to defend ourselves against the encroachment of the federal government and preserve our customs and traditions."

COMMENTING FURTHER about Engelhardt, Macon County business man-farmer and former member of both the Alabama Senate and House, Patterson added:

"I have known Mr. Engelhardt for many years and we are close personal friends. He was a personal friend of my father and he will be closely associated with me during my administration. I know him to be an honest, fearless, and capable public leader and he is dedicated to the preservation of constitutional government and segregation in the races.

"Mr. Engelhardt and I both firmly agree that the loyalty oath should be repealed. I would consider it an honor and a privilege to work with Mr. Engelhardt as chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee during the next four years to carry out the mandate of the people in reference to the repeal of the loyalty oath and with the party leaders and public officials of other Southern states to defend our laws, customs and traditions."

PATTERSON, outgoing attorney general, added that:

"In these perilous times, when we are battling the enemies of the South daily on all fronts, I would be neglecting my duty to the people of this state if I failed as governor to take an active part in the election of a Democratic Executive Committee chairman and in other Democratic Party matters."

Mizell cites promise—

Anti-loyalty Demos fight for top job

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 6—The fight among anti-loyalists for chairmanship of the State Democratic Executive Committee Saturday became more intense, with increasing strength reportedly lined up for former State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr. for the key party post.

But Montgomery Atty. Frank Mizell Jr. told this reporter he was banking on a promise from Engelhardt to assure Mizell's election as chairman of the party governing body.

Said Mizell:

"WHEN THE MONTGOMERY caucus of 39 members of the newly-elected State Democratic executive committee, by a duly and unanimously adopted motion, agreed to support Mr. Coleman Long of Uniontown as vice chairman, Mr. R. H. Monk of Anniston as secretary, and myself as chairman of the committee at its January session, I then appointed a committee to draft a proper resolution to eliminate the obnoxious loyalty oath and appointed Mr. Sam Engelhardt a member of that committee.

"Immediately after the meeting adjourned, Sam came to me, shook my hand and assured me he would support the persons unanimously agreed upon for the committee officers.

"KNOWING THAT Sam Engelhardt believes in states rights, segregation and white supremacy, as I do, and knowing Sam and his background as I do, and considering our always pleasant relations, I am sure Sam Engelhardt will do what he promised me and our anti-loyalist committee group."

Mizell backers, who earlier had accused Engelhardt of breaking his word to support Mizell for chairman, sought to picture the tussle as one between loyalists and anti-loyalists factions.

But Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, present chairman and loyalist leader, who was reelected to the committee, emphasized that this was not the case.

"THE FIGHT started among the anti-loyalists," said Judge Mayhall. "Naturally, I prefer to elect a party loyalist as chairman. But if the committee is going to elect an anti-loyalist, then I'd support Sam Engelhardt because I favor a man I think will stay in the Democratic Party and not walk out."

Anti-loyalists have a 39 to 33 majority on the incoming committee.

Engelhardt, who has been chosen by Gov.-Elect John Patterson for state highway director, is in a powerful position in state political maneuvering.

A movement was started several days ago by some Patterson leaders aimed at getting Engelhardt elected chairman. And they are hopeful of winning the active support of the governor-elect, whose backing would be necessary if Engelhardt is to muster enough strength to defeat Mizell.

MIZELL, A VETERAN committee member, has been considered a favorite to be chosen chairman.

Engelhardt, a veteran member of the House and Senate, is a newcomer to the party governing body.

Engelhardt said Saturday he has not changed his mind about repealing the loyality oath, declaring "if the motion to repeal the loyalty oath gets only one vote, it will be mine."

Mrs. Lewis tells women of Tuskegee to do more

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. — Mrs. Charlotte R. Lewis, Washington attorney, was guest speaker at the 58th weekly mass meeting of the Tuskegee Civic Association last week and hit women members in a vulnerable spot the SA Association reported.

She spoke on the woman's place in the fight for freedom, saying that her work has just begun. She commended the women on the excellent work they have done so far but said it is necessary to do more.

Mrs. Lewis worked for some time with the national headquarters of the League of Women Voters in Washington and explained some of its methods to get women interested in civic affairs.

The Association reported that some women prominent in the organization objected to Mrs. Lewis' observations. Frank J. Tolan, TCA vice president, attempted to smooth the ruffled feathers after her speech, it said.

Mrs. Lewis has been very active in civic affairs of the Tuskegee community for the past year while living here with her husband, Maj. Burton W. Lewis, who is a Tuskegee Institute professor of military science.

'Outsider' Upsets 'Skegee Crusaders

TUSKEGEE INST., Ala.—The 58th weekly mass meeting of the Tuskegee Civic Association was put in an uproar last Tuesday night. Comments of the women who attended the meeting indicated that the suggestions of an "outsider," on what they should do, were not desired.

The "outsider," Mrs. Charlotte R. Lewis, an attorney from Washington, D. C., spoke at the regular meeting of the TCA which was held in Greenwood Missionary Baptist Church, Tuskegee. Her subject, "Women's Work Has Just Begun in the Crusade for Freedom," apparently struck a vulnerable spot with many of the women who made up the majority of the audience.

The excellent work already accomplished was commented on, but Mrs. Lewis pointed out that to maintain the high level of interest in the TCA meetings, it would be necessary to do much more.

Many of the women prominent in the TCA movement gathered in small groups after the meeting and comments ranged from "How long has she been here"? and "Let us see her do some of these things" to "She is right, women are the power behind this movement and we must do some new things."

Frank J. Tolan, vice president of TCA, presided, and in his closing remarks attempted to smooth the ruffled feathers. Charles C. Gomillion, president of TCA, was observed sitting in the audience with a quietly bemused expression at the new spark that provided additional fire to the enthusiasm that prevails every Tuesday night in the Crusade for Freedom.

TCA shows figures to investiagtors

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — "At the present rate it would require 103 years to register the approximately 15,000 unregistered colored persons now 21 years old and older, not taking into account that the colored population is increasing each year.

"The Macon County boards of registars habe historically endeavored to deprive colored persons of the right to vote.

"They have employed different kinds of delaying and evasive techniques in order to slow down the process of application for registration."

This was the crux of a report handed to the Civil Rights Commission here last week by the Tuskegee Civic Association's Voter Franchise Committee.

The Civil Rights Commission was in Montgomery conducting a hearing into alleged vote denials.

BUT THE CIVIL rights unit got absolutely nowhere with Alabama vote officials, all of whom refused to testify before records as requested.

Federal District Judge Frank M. Johnson, who ordered balky officials to give up the records or go to jail, has since suspended his order and granted the defendants a hearing.

Observers here, with an eye toward the outcome of the hearing, feel that the action of Judge Johnson could mean the start of a long, drawn - out legal manipulation.

THE REPORT OF the TCA vote body, released Monday, was entitled "An Eight Year Summary of Registration Efforts of Negroes in Macon County." The survey was made public at the same time the TCA's annual report was released.

The report says that increasing demands by colored persons to exercise their constitutional guarantees as American citizens have been met with an accelerated determination to deny colored persons directly or indirectly the opportunity to vote.

"Macon County has been without a publicly functioning board of registrars on numerous occasions," the study shows. It adds:

"The 1950 census showed 27,384 of the 30,561 people in Macon County were colored persons."

The report goes on to say that of the estimated 3,177 white residents in the county, current voter list shows that 3,016 are registered.

In the last eight years, 1,585 colored persons have made application to vote, but only 510 were registered, the statement says.

"HUNDREDS OF colored persons have appeared before the board to register but were not permitted to do so.

"This was because of the board's policy of registering colored persons in a very small room and permitting only two to make application at the same time," the report continued.

The TCA report listed the following reasons for complaint to the commission:

1. The board's refusal to register colored persons in larger quarters.

2. The board's failure to use the room assigned for colored persons to its fullest extent.

3. The requirement that only two colored persons can make application at the same time.

4. Use of separate rooms for white and colored applicants.

5. The rule that colored persons must read and copy long articles of the U.S. Constitution.

6. Failure of the board to issue certificates of registration to colored persons immediately upon proper completion of the application form.

MEANWHILE, JUDGE Johnson's action in suspending his order directing defiant Alabama vote officials to produce records until after a hearing, has brought about the question:

"If the judge rules against the officials and orders them to produce the records after hearing their story, can they appeal the ruling and perhaps touch off a long court battle?"

"Yes," says George Johnson of the Civil Rights Commission in Washington.

"They can appeal if the ruling is an appealable decision. Whether or not it is an appealable decision is a matter of law.

"If they are given an adverse decision, and it is appealable, they'll probably take the case to the U.S. Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals.

"If a ruling against them was not appealable the officials would be required to surrender records and testimony to the civil rights unit or be in contempt of court.

"As it stands, with an unfavorable ruling that is appealable, the defendants can take the matter into another court.

"Otherwise, they must surrender the desired material or go back before Judge Johnson in contempt of his court," Mr. Johnson stated. He added:

Sets Goal At 2,000 Members

TUSKEGEE — The annual membership campaign of the Tuskegee Civic association was launched during the annual business meeting of the TCA. The chairman, Mrs. Mamie H. Love, with George C. Busby serving as co - chairman of the committee, has announced a goal of 2,000 members, with a slogan of "2,000 Today For TCA."

One hundred solicitors are out to get a minimum of 20 members each. The committee felt that because of the tremendous job that the Tuskegee Civic Association is doing in civic education in Macon County, a goal of 2,000 could be attained.

This year, for the first time, life membership in the Association is offered. It was stipulated that a person may be a member for life upon the payment of $25. It was further brought out that this membership fee may be paid in five equal installments of $5 each. It is the goal of the life list a minimum of 100 members during 1959.

The membership campaign that began Sunday, Dec. 14, will conclude Sunday, Jan. 11, 1959. Persons purchasing a life membership will be presented an appropriate citation and a life membership pin.

Officers who served last year were re-elected for 1959, with the exception of I. V. Billes, vice president of Green's Fork community, who was rplaced by George C. Busby.

Inability to function with any degree of regularity was Billes' reason for declining to serve the Association during 1959.

C. G. Gomillion was continued in office as president despite the fact that he is on one year's leave from Tuskegee while studying at Ohio State university.

It is expected that the executive cabinet of the TCA will request the Rev. K. L. Buford to continue to serve as acting president, as he has done since September.

Frank J. Toland was re-elected to the position of first vice president. Toland, also is on a one year leave of absence and is attending the University of Minnesota.

Further emphasis was placed on the current membership drive by Rev. Buford and the chairmen, who announced that there would be a weekly News-Letter going to solicitors during the four - week campaign.

WASHINGTON

Americans for Democratic Action interprets the November elections as a demand "for responsible action by the Government to mobilize" for a new "new deal," it was reported Wednesday.

The organization's legislative body directed Congress to get on with tasks adequate to meet the urgent economic and social needs that have been so long neglected."

Det. 3-13-58

IN A MEMO to the 86th Congress, Robert R. Nathan, ADA national chairman, called on legislators to initiate programs of substance and effectiveness, not driblets and postponements.

He emphasized that the electorate in 1960 will judge candidates and parties by their actions in response to the mandates of 1958.

THE GOALS of the new "new deal," ADA said, should be to end poverty in America, eliminate slums and provide a decent home for "every" American family, offer first-class education to "every" American child;

"Bring the miracles of modern medical science to "every" American, secure equal rights and opportunities and civil liberties for "every" American, and to help underdeveloped countries on the way to self-sustaining economic growth.

34d 1958 COMMUNIST

Reds Schemed Negro Uprising

Saw 'Black Nation' Emerging In South

Daily News
Jackson, Miss. 34d

GREENSBORO, N. C. (UP)—A Negro minister testified in federal court here Friday that Communist Party workers were taught that Negroes in a wide area of the South were a "nation within a nation."

Dec. 2-16-58

Obadiah Jones of St. Louis testified as a government witness as the Smith Act trial of Junius I. Scales, former Carolinas communist leader, ended its second week in U. S. district court.

Scales is on trial for the second time on a charge of violating the Smith Act's "membership" clause which forbids knowingly belonging to an organization which advocates the violent overthrow of the federal government.

Jones said that at a communist school he attended at St. Louis in 1947 comrades were taught that the Communist Party "should lead Negroes to self-determination" and to their "rightful place as a nation."

AFRAID OF ARMS

He said the school taught that Negroes had been kept landless and powerless by U.S. "reactionaries" and that during World War II "capitalists" in the U.S. were afraid to put guns in the hands of Negroes drafted in the Army.

An earlier government witness, Mrs. Barbara Hartle of Evans, Wash., had testified that the party taught that Negroes in an area stretching from Maryland to Mississippi had the "right of secession" from the United States.

Another witness, former FBI undercover agent Otis Reavis of Winston-Salem, N.C., said he joined the party while working for the FBI and met Scales, grand-nephew of a former North Carolina governor, in 1949. He said Scales encouraged him to get a job at the Western Electric plant in Winston-Salem and said Scales told him the party needed members in defense industries.

Federal Judge Albert V. Bryan of Alexandria, Va., ruled Friday that the defense may have access to grand jury testimony by former FBI undercover agent Ralph Clontz of Charlotte on condition that the government may delete "irrelevant" parts of the testimony subject to examination and approval of the court.

Clontz has been a principal government witness in the trial. A second trial for Scales was ordered by the U.S. Supreme Court on grounds that in his 1955 trial the defense was refused access to FBI files.

FBI Chief's New Book Gives Clear Picture Of Communism

Courier-J.
Louis. 3-1958

NEW YORK (AP) — FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover says the Communist party still is a vast reservoir of potential spies, a "tremendous and present danger" to U.S. security.

The director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation issues his warning — and an appeal to Americans for alertness to the danger — in a new book "Master of Deceit" published by Henry Holt & Co.

Montgomery Ala.

Subtitled "The Story of Communism in America and How to Fight It," Hoover's book is a calm, reasoned and abundantly documented study of the Communist movement. Its message can be applied to any non-Communist country. It is a searing indictment of the traitors who lead the movement.

HAVING TROUBLE

Communism is having much trouble now, dating from boss Nikita Khrushchev's 1956 denunciation of Stalin and its sequel, the Hungarian revolution.

"No event in party life has been so conducive to raising doubts among members as the Khrushchev report and its sequel," Hoover writes.

These events stirred a slow and painful awakening among many party members, widening fissures of doubt, raising resentment against the party's intellectual tyranny and its claim on the individual's whole existence. But, warns Hoover, the present danger remains acute. The party still is the major menace of our time because it is ruled by a "dedi-conspiratorial group" with al goal except dreams of al power through a world-wide triumph of Sovietism.

"Today the party, with its thousands of members, represents a vast reservoir of potential espionage agents," Hoover says. "Moreover, its vast propaganda and ideological program is daily saturating their hearts, minds and souls with sympathetic acceptance of communism."

This, he cautions, does not mean being a party member automatically means being a spy. But he adds that each member is potential spy material, and therein lies the danger.

"The United States is strategic spy target number one for the Soviets," Hoover says. "Every effort is being made to penetrate our defenses. The Soviets are interested in literally everything."

Primarily, the Russians seek information on American scientific research, military matters, intelligence operations, international relations and internal weaknesses, but they collect masses of data on all sorts of subjects, both openly through use of published materials, and illegally, through employment of spies.

NOT YET READY

The twin of espionage, sabotage, also will become a real danger should Moscow give the signal to the Communist party, says Hoover adding that apparently Moscow is not ready for that yet, and still attempts to separate spy activities from those of the party.

"This does not mean, however, that the party is not playing an important role in Soviet espionage," he says ". . . The party is doing much to prepare the way for Soviet espionage, and, when the need arises, will unhesitatingly supply vital assistance."

'Work For Peace' Ended U.S.-Bound Turncoat Says

HONG KONG — (INS) — State-side-bound GI turncoat Sgt. Larance Sullivan told newsmen in Hong Kong yesterday he had always planned to come back to the U. S. when "conditions were ripe."

Sullivan, who was reluctant to talk to reporters and said he was tired from his journey out of Red China, apparently felt the right time had come.

Asked why he came back after choosing to go to Red China in the 1953 repaitriation of Korean War prisoners, Sullivan remarked that he "felt I had completed what I wanted to do — work for peace."

DRESSED WESTERN

Earlier yesterday Sullivan crossed over into the British colony, dressed in a western-style suit and a light grey topcoat.

His decision to return was surprising since he was a bitter critic of America and its treatment of the Negro.

He was one of three Negroes in the group of 21 Americans who chose to go to China during the Sullivan, said his home town repaitriation exchange.

Sullivan, who said his home town was Sausalito, Calif., briefly commented on the years he spent behind the Bamboo Curtain saying he had studied the "international situation" at the Peoples University at Peiping and later operated a lathe at an automobile factory.

ADEQUATE PAY

His salary, Sullivan said, was more than adequate with the subsidies granted him.

He said the factory was the same one where turncoat Samuel Hawkins was employed before he came back to the U. S.

Sullivan's own appraisal of the international situation was that "it's really in a state of ardent stirring for peace."

New Lightfoot Trial Set May 5

The second trial for Claude M. Lightfoot yesterday was set for May 5 by Judge Phillip Sullivan of U.S. District Court.

Lightfoot who is charged with violating the Smith Act by advocating the overthrow of the government, was convicted during his first trial and sentenced to five years.

However, the U. S. Supreme Court reversed his conviction because the government did not make available to Lightfoot, the statements of informers who accused him of saying "there might by some blood spilling during the revolution" as he allegedly instructed a class in Communist theory.

Judge Sullivan continued the second trial yesterday in order to give lawyers for both sides an opportunity to agree on a short trial.

Atty. John Abt, counsel for Lightfoot, said he would waive a jury for the second trial if the government would present the same evidence it did at the original trial.

However, U. S. Assistant Atty. James Parsons said he would not stipulate to that.

Committee will probe influence of Reds in South

ATLANTA, July 26—(AP)—A subcommittee of the House committe on Un-American activities will hold a three day probe into Communist influences in the South next week.

The group has subpoena powers and is expected to call 15 or more witnesses from various states. Names of prospective witnesses have not been disclosed.

At least three—one described as friendly, two as hostile—witnesses are expected to be called from Georgia. One of these may be Don West, former minister and professor who now farms near Douglasville.

West in recent years has denied any Communist leanings or ties although in 1953 he told a U. S. Senate subcommittee he was a Communist in the 1930s.

Last October he was called before a Senate internal security subcommittee in Memphis. He took the fifth amendment on 20 questions, including one on whether he had been in charge of the Communist Party in Atlanta.

The subcommittee meeting here Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday is composed of Reps. Edwin E. Willis (D., La.), chairman, William M. Tuck (D., Va.) and Donald L. Jackson (R., Calif.)

Reds in Interracial Flare-Ups

FBI Chief Hoover Tells Congress Communists Exploit Negro Issue

Secret testimony, just made public, reveals that the Communists are intensively engaged in an effort to exploit interracial difficulties in the United States.

A few days ago this correspondent raised the question whether the bombings of Negro schools and Jewish synagogues in the South were part of a Communist plot to inflame public opinion and cause intense friction among the people of this country. The Louisville bombing in which Communists were implicated was cited as a case in point.

In this connection the words of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, uttered in executive session before a subcommittee of the House Appropriations Committee in January but just released, take on special significance. He said:

"The Negro situation is also being exploited fully and continuously by Communists on a national scale. Current programs include intensified attempts to infiltrate Negro mass organizations. The Communist Party's objectives are not to aid the Negroes—but are designed to take advantage of all controversial issues on the racial question so as to create unrest, dissension and confusion in the minds of the American people.

Many persons have been lulled into the belief that the Communist menace in America is either nonexistent or insignificant. This impression has been fostered in part by the vicious attacks that have been made on the Government's efforts to ferret out security risks and to uncover Communist espionage.

The FBI uses undercover agents, who become members of the Communist cells and report on what actually is going on. When FBI Director Hoover speaks, he is talking from a knowledge of what the undercover agents report. He said to the House committee:

"We now have approximately 150 known, or suspected, Communist-front and Communist-infiltrated organizations under investigation. . . .

"Our investigations have clearly shown that the Communist Party, U.S.A., is a hard core of conspiratorial Reds unaffected by party differences and controlled by the heavy hand of Moscow. . . .

"Efforts of the bona fide party membership have been complemented by an intensified program of infiltrating mass organizations. To disguise its programs as the offerings of legitimate organizations and to divorce its activities from the stigma of open identification with communism, the party has established many 'front' groups and continuously strives to infiltrate unsuspecting, well-respected organizations. Since front groups are used to dupe loyal citizens in supporting and promoting campaigns which are designed to help the Communist Party attain its goals, they constitute one of the most important phases of Communist activity in the United States."

Many observers think that because the Communist Party membership is small, it isn't dangerous. To this the FBI director answers:

"I cannot emphasize too strongly that the numerical strength of the Communist Party means nothing. . . .

"The influence of the Communist conspiracy reaches into almost every walk of life. To gage its effect, we need only to note the widespread clamor which is raised whenever our Government attempts to deal firmly in self-defense against the subversive threat."

One of the cleverest pieces of propaganda effort is the artificially stimulated rumor about "fallout" and "nuclear tests." The FBI has not made any comment on it. Some of those active in making protests are sincere and loyal. Some are apparently duped by clever propagandists.

It so happens that last Sunday on the CBS program, "Face the Nation," Lewis Strauss, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, did make a comment on the propaganda about nuclear tests. He said that "at the bottom of the disturbance there is a kernel of very intelligent, deliberate propaganda," and that "a great deal of money is being spent on it" such as, for instance, in Nation-wide mailings of anti-test "news releases."

Dr. Robert Newell, professor emeritus of radiology at Stanford University, now a consultant in the Navy's radiology laboratory in San Francisco, said a few days ago that it would take the explosion of a thousand bombs to double the present world level of "Carbon 14" in the atmosphere and in the oceans "and it would still not be detectable in a hereditary way."

But the critics of the tests had already gotten considerable publicity with a variety of statements, couched in the technical phrases of science, predicting dire results to the human race from nuclear materials. Such efforts to prevent America from continuing needed tests of nuclear materials are gaining ground because the public cannot tell who are the loyal, sincerely convinced scientists and who are the phony ones trying to help the Communist cause. It's just the setting for the kind of activity FBI Director Hoover has analyzed in his testimony to Congress.

COMMUNIST

Commies And Integration—

Senators See South As Target Of Reds

This is the last of five articles, reprinted from The Standard-Times of New Bedford, Mass., and telling of the part played by the Communists in bringing about racial strife in the South.

WASHINGTON — What lies ahead for race relations in the South and, indirectly, for the nation? If the pattern of the three years is followed in the future, the outlook is not favorable. Some may want to ignore the record, but they cannot hide it. Racial disturbances since the Supreme Court decision of 1954, culminating in the use of armed force at Little Rock, have made two areas of opinion where there were three.

The middle-ground on Southern civil rights issues, the ground on which progress had been made if slow, is virtually deserted. Sides have been chosen, of necessity.

Without this conciliatory middle area, there are two extremist camps.

One is headed by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. The Communist Party officially has planted its standard in this camp, its purpose to promote racial tension behind the NAACP program.

The other camp includes various white citizen organizations, established authorities of many Southern municipalities and states and, as time passes, more and more of the "moderates."

The no man's land between these two camps is widened in this election year, like the presidential and with the 1960 presidential campaign drawing closer. Neither major political party, nor apparently, the Federal Government, wishes to intervene.

The handsoff attitude in Washington was evident during Senate Judiciary Committee examination of incoming U. S. Attorney General William P. Rogers. The prospective head of the Federal agency that sent troops to Little Rock was not asked about his views on civil rights not even by Southern Democrats.

Absence of leadership from Washington has increased the importance of the role played by the NAACP. Its leaders apparently plan no change in policy.

Reviewing events through Little Rock, Dr. Channing Tobias, board chairman of the NAACP, declared.

"But this record of advance is only a beginning. Unjust practices are still commonplace in many parts of the nation. The people have a continuing responsibility to take the lead, to assure the winning of equality in all communities, large and small, North and South.

"The pattern is set; it's up to us to fill in the details of the picture. Only then will we have achieved our goal of a democratic America living up to its ideals."

These words from an influential Negro leader describe an objective which the majority of Americans would be happy to work toward.

But there it little reason to suppose that the good intentions of the NAACP will not capitulate, as they have before, to the driving, inflammatory race-tension strategy of the Communist Party.

After the 1954 court decision, the leadership of the NAACP promised moderation, a "quiet" "talking over" of issues among all segments.

Instead what transpired was a series of "big, sharp struggles" in civil disobedience and violence, exactly as forecast by Benjamin J. Davis, chairman of the Negro Commission of the Communist Party.

Today, Davis and his co-worker, James E. Jackson, Communist chief for Southern affairs, are using phraseology much like Dr. Tobias' in predicting the future.

"The people must take the lead," says Davis. "Negro liberation is now the property of the whole American people."

Jackson's view: "The response to Little Rock has signalized that ours is the time ripe with opportunity to secure major victories in the cause of Negro freedom."

These words have a ring like Dr. Tobias', but an utterly different intent.

"You are aware, of course," FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover commented for The Standard-Times, "the Communists have no sincere interest in promoting racial harmony, but are ever alert to exploit any issue to further their nefarious aims."

This observation may be obvious to many Americans.

But is it obvious to Dr. Tobias, who has been associated with 40 Communist fronts, board chairman of NAACP, or to W. E. B. DuBois, "honorary chairman" of NAACP, who has been identified with 82 Communist fronts, more than any other American citizen?

Apparently it is not.

As recently as March 1958, the NAACP leadership brought a court action in Florida seeking to halt an investigation by the Florida Legislature of Communist activity in that state.

Besides the NAACP, leadership in the integrationist camp will come from the Rev. Martin Luther King, leader of the Montgomery, Ala. bus boycott. Mr. King also seems hazy in distinguishing between the Communist way and the American way.

At its 1957 national convention, the U. S. Communist Party selected a man identified by the Communist Daily Worker as Mr. King's "secreary," Bayard Rustin, to be an official "observer." Rustin praised the "democratic" proceedings of the convention in a report later denounced by FBI Director Hoover.

Mr. King was quoted as telling a Chicago assembly last year, "it (the Montgomery boycott, in which there was much violence) is a part of something that is happening all over the world. The oppressed people are rising up. They are revolting against colonialism and imperialism and all other systems of oppression."

This explanation is exactly that of the Communist Party, the depiction of the American Negro as a kicked-around colonial, oppressed by Imperialists.

Yet the same Rev. Martin Luther King was one of four Negro "leaders" who called on President Eisenhower in June 1958 to try and set the pattern for racial progress.

A former Negro Communist official, who later worked for the U. S. Department of Justice, sees the future in these words:

"In my opinion, the Negro leadership should realize that they have responsibility," a Louisiana legislative committee was told by Manning Johnson, "a responsiblity to guide and spirit their people along the right paths, help to pull themselves up by their own bootstraps, and to work together as a group for co-operation, mutual co-operation between races, to the end result that they can keep what they have, strengthen their economic and political position and move on to higher things.

"Men of King's type will not give that kind of leadership. The only thing they know is the threat and a sword.

"I know the NAACP can't do that. They have called the leaders of Southern life every conceivable type of name. They have labeled them everything they can, and there is no basis for them to negotiate with them because they have already built up a wall that cannot be gotten over, gotten under, or gone around."

Former Communist Johnson's judgment may be harsh. But the future will make him an accurate prophet unless there is wider understanding of the Communist background to "immediate" integration, to be accomplished by "force" if necessary.

In a little-publicized report of last November, the U. S. Senate Internal Security Subcommittee declared: "There is a present-day pattern of Communist activity in the mid-South area. The Communist participants . . . make up the basic framework of a Communist operation that is directed against all generations of people in the South."

To that could be added, "and in the nation."

Question Before Probers:

Are Reds 'Using' Segregation Foes?

Herald p. 3A Sat 2-8-58

By JOHN McDERMOTT
Herald Political Writer

Is the Communist Party using pro-integrationists to create turmoil in Florida and other states?

That is what a legislative committee headed by Sen. Charley Johns of Starke will attempt to prove in hearings at Tallahassee and Miami.

Approximately 40 persons have been subpenaed for the hearings which begin Monday in the capital and on Feb. 26 in Miami.

Johns said the hearings will be aimed at deterring Communist activities in the field of racial conflict.

An added touch of importance was given the hearings when it was announced that the chief witness at the Tallahassee session will be J. B. Matthews, a New York and Washington investigator.

Matthews directed several major congressional investigations of subversive Communist activity. He also served as an adviser to the late Red-hunting Sen. Joseph McCarthy of Wisconsin.

State Rep. Cliff Herrell of Miami, a member of the joint Senate-House investigating committee said he has no advance knowledge of the nature of the hearings. Furthermore, he said, committee regulations require that all announcements come from the committee chairman.

Among those called for either the Tallahassee or Miami probes are members of the National Association for Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), the Florida Council of Human Relations, Florida A. & M. University and in addition, persons known to have been Communist sympathizers.

Johns said in a prepared statement that the hearings would be aimed at determining to what extent Communist activity fired up racial conflict.

Johns said the committee has "information regarding Communistic activities in several vital phases of life in Florida and other states."

The Johns statement, released through Committee Attorney Mark Hawes, said the committee would attempt to show "who these Communists are, what their aims are and what their activities are and have been."

Besides Matthews, one of the star witnesses subpenaed for the Tallahassee hearing is Mrs. William C. White of Jacksonville, secretary of the Florida Council for Human Relations.

Her Miami counterpart, Mrs. A. Waldie Holroyd, 7710 NW Second Ave., is among approximately 35 subpenaed for the Miami hearing.

Mrs. Holroyd's comment, when contacted by The Herald, was typical of those receiving subpenas:

"I don't know why I have been subpenaed. I assume that it is because I am active in the Council for Human Relations. We have favored the school integration because we think integration will come eventually and we would like to see it done peacefully. We have been trying to allay fears."

Another witness subpoenaed for the Tallahassee hearing was Edwin E. Waller of Naples, advertising manager of the Collier County News. Waller has testified before a Congressional committee that he once was a member of the Red party.

A former Miamian, he was a

Reds Accused In Racial Issue

Star p. A-5 Washington D.C.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Feb. 11 (AP).—A former McCarthy committee aide testified yesterday that Communists and Communist influence have been involved directly in every major race incident that has occurred since the United States Supreme Court outlawed school segregation four years ago.

J. B. Matthews of New York, who served as research director for the Dies Un-American Activities Committee and later as executive director of the McCarthy Committee, told a Florida legislative committee that infiltration of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People had been a prime target of American Communists for the last 30 years.

"The record will show conclusively that the Communist apparatus has registered a degree of success in penetrating the NAACP which is not paralleled in the case of any other non-Communist organization of comparable size," Mr. Matthews testified.

The Florida Legislative Committee is concerned primarily with learning what role Communists may have played in efforts to break down segregation barriers in the State.

In a report to the 1957 Legislature, the committee said the NAACP actively was stirring up lawsuits designed to force integation of the races in the public schools.

Mr. Matthews' testimony was general in nature and dealt chiefly with the motives and tactics of the Communist Party.

"It is a basic item in Communist strategy to accentuate and exploit every situation of social tension and turbulence," Mr. Matthews said. "Where such situations do not exist, the Communists exert every possible effort toward manufacturing them."

"If the South should suddenly wipe out all forms of segregation, say tomorrow, the Communists would lose all interest in the question of integration," he said.

Ministers Hit Communism Probe In S. C.

Negro Freedom Is Threatened, Alliance Says

P. 12D

COLUMBIA, Feb. 15 — A group of Negro ministers from this area say the creation of a proposed Communist investigation committee by the South Carolina General Assembly "poses a threat to negro academic freedom."

The interdenominational Ministerial Alliance released a statement saying the bill would set up a "Fascist Gestapo." It further argued that the committee investigations would not be fairly conducted.

The measure, introduced in both the House and Senate, would set up a six-man committee, composed of three senators and three representatives to probe Communist activities in South Carolina.

Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr. urged creation of such a committee. "The communist danger in this state is real," he said.

The governor has charged that two Negro church - supported institutions in Columbia — Allen University and Benedict College — have Communists on the faculty.

In their statement, the Negro ministers maintained that there is no serious threat of communism and that such an investigation is unnecessary.

"If such a law is passed," the statement read, "The legality of the law will be tested in the higher courts of the federal government."

The ministers said, "We wish to make it crystal clear that we make no defense for communists," but oppose the legislation "because it is not necessary."

Negro Nation Plan Told At Scales Trial

GREENSBORO, N.C., Feb. 10 (AP) — A convicted Communist testified here today that a Communist "re-education school" taught that Southern Negroes had the right to form an independent Negro nation.

Testifying in the federal trial of Junius Irving Scales, Mrs. Barbara Hartle of Evans, Wash., said instructor Jacob (Pop) Mendel said Negroes were a majority of the population of 12 American countries stretching from Southern Maryland to Mississippi.

Mrs. Hartle said Mendel insisted the Negroes had the right of secession from the union and self determination.

The Washington woman, who described herself as a former Communist leader in the Northwest, served 20 months on a Smith Act conviction.

She was the government's second witness in its attempt to prove in U.S. District Court that (1) the Communist Party advocates violent overthrow of the government; (2) Scales was a party member fron 1947 to 1954; (3) Scales knew the party's aims.

South Carolina Setting Up Group to Probe Communism

Commission to Have Authority To Subpoena and Hold Hearings

By S. L. LATIMER JR.
Editor, The Columbia State
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

COLUMBIA, S.C., Feb. 22—South Carolina's legislative wheels have been set into motion to pass a law setting up an anticommunism commission whose purpose will be to watch out for subversive activities in South Carolina, and to take needed action.

Gov. Timmerman recently called for the creation of such a group to be invested with strong powers. Following through, the influential ways and means committee of the House of Representatives offered this week a bill carrying out the chief executive's recommendations. And in the first floor test the House the next day passed the bill on second reading without a protest, which presaged quick final action in sending the measure along to the Senate.

Sen. Gressette, chairman of the Senate judiciary committee, has approved the establishment of such a committee. The proposal seems certain of favorable action in the upper house.

In essence, the bill provides that the commission, or any of its sub-commissions, would have the power to hold hearings and require, by subpoena or otherwise, the attendance of such witnesses and the production of such records as it deems necessary to effect the functions of the commission.

Any person subpoenaed to appear in person will be put under oath and required to answer "any and all questions that the committee deems relevant, and may propound to him, and upon the failure or refusal of such person to obey such summons or notice or to answer such question or questions, such person shall be deemed in contempt of the committee and may be imprisioned upon the order of the committee in the common jail of any county, and held there until he complies with such order."

In the preamble to the proposed bill the author, the ways and means committee, has set forth that a commission to investigate communism is needed and that it is a sense of the House that "the communist menace in this state is very real, and it is believed that the investigations conducted and the advice given by the committee will lead to the exposure and elimination of communist activities."

Under the terms the commission would consist of six persons, three to come from the Senate and three from the House. Reports would be made to the General Assembly at each session and advice would be offered as to needed legislation.

The Governor's recommendation followed public charges by him that there were on the faculties of two Negro denominational colleges certain persons with connections with allegedly subversive organizations.

Accused on Job

Last year the State Board of Education, of which the Governor is ex-officio chairman, notified Allen University that its teaching diploma would no longer be recognized for employment in the schools of South Carolina. It developed that this action resulted from the presence on the Allen faculty of two teachers with alleged connections with groups listed as un-American. The accused are still on the job and the Allen diploma issued to graduates next June will not be officially accredited for teaching in this state unless there is some action to the contrary in the meantime.

Recently the Governor issued a statement involving certain personnel at Benedict College, Columbia, but the State School Board has taken no action against this school.

As an aftermath, a group of students from both Allen and Benedict have applied to the University of South Carolina for admission. In each instance the applicant was told that under the law his or her application could not be received. That these students will go to court has been indicated, but no action has been taken as yet.

SOUTH CAROLINA

Negro Minister Tells Of Communist Goal For Southern Negroes

Greensboro, Feb. 17—A Negro minister testified in federal court here Friday that Communist Party workers were taught that Negroes in a wide area of the South were a Nation within a nation."

Obadiah Jones of St. Louis testified as a government witness at the Smith Act trial of Junius I. Scales, former Carolina's Communist leader, ended its second week in U. S. district court.

Scales is on trial for the second time on a charge of violating the Smith Act's "membership" clause which forbids knowingly belonging to an organization which advocates the violent overthrow of the federal government.

Jones said that at a Communist school he attended at St. Louis in 1947 comrades were taught that the Comunist Party "should lead Negroes to self-determination" and to their "rightful place as a nation."

He said the school taught that Negroes had been kept landless and powerless by U. S. "reactionaries" and that during World War II "capitalists" in the U. S. were afraid to put guns in the hands of Negroes drafted in the Army.

An earlier government witness, Mrs. Barbara Hartle of Evans, Wash., had testified that the party taught that Negroes in an area stretching from Maryland to Mississippi had the "right of secession" from the United States.

Another witness, former FBI undercover agent Otis Reavis of Winston-Salem, N. C., said he joined the party while working for the FBI and met Scales, grand nephew of a former North Carolina governor, in 1949. He said Scales encouraged him to get a job at the Western Electric plant in Winston-Salem and said Scales told him the party needed members in defense industries.

Federal Judge Albert V. Bryan of Alexandria, Va., ruled Friday that the defense may have access to grand jury testimony by former FBI undercover agent Ralph Clontz of Charlotte on condition that the government may delete "irrelevant" parts of the testimony subject to examination and approval of the court.

Clontz has been a principal government witness in the trial. A second trial for Scales was ordered by the U. S. Supreme Court on grounds that in his 1955 trial the defense was refused access to FBI files.

CHURCH FIGHTS GERMAN REDS OVER CHILDREN

BERLIN, Feb. 25 [Reuters]—Churches in East Germany are engaged in a struggle against state authorities to prevent Christian children from attending communist sponsored initiation ceremonies on leaving school.

Spokesmen of the Evangelical and Catholic churches have said that any child attending Jugendweihe [youth dedication] cannot be confirmed.

Claims One in Four

The central state committee for the Jugendweihe says one eligible child in four is attending the courses preparatory to initiation.

Officials of the Evangelical church say they have no figures for the number of children attending confirmation classes. But they do know that, of those who registered for confirmation last year, 8 per cent left to go to the Jugendweihe instead.

About 250,000 children went to Jugendweihe last year.

Pre-dates War

The Jugendweihe is not communist in origin and is not a post-war innovation. Long before World War II, socialist organizations in Germany held similar ceremonies, intended to bring home to boys and girls the significance of leaving school. Then the youngsters dressed up in their best clothes to go hear some prominent person speak on the responsibilities which they were about to assume.

In present day East Germany the Jugendweihe has become a "recognition of the workers' and farmers' state and of the cause of socialism," says the central committee.

Charge Violation

Church leaders say the state is trying to force children to take the Jugendweihe and is thus violating the right to freedom of religious beliefs, which is guaranteed under the constitution. They say it is wrong to expose children's minds to atheistic communist beliefs, as is liable to happen in the classes preparing children for initiation.

Some of East Germany's best known writers and artists are giving Jugendweihe instruction. They include Kurt Bartel, perhaps the country's most famous writer and commentator, and Hans Rodenburg, head of the East German Film and Television academy's drama department.

A West Berlin source says the East German authorities have been offering, as an added inducement, a special payment of up to $9 toward the cost of new clothes for a child to wear at the ceremony.

Commie Authored Books Were Listed For Supreme Court's 1954 As Basis

Integration Order

WASHINGTON — The success of Communist efforts to exploit the Southern Negro under the guise of "democratization" became fully evident in 1954 and the three subsequent years. The Supreme Court's historic 1954 ruling on school segregation was in judgment on four cases brought before it by the National Association of Advancement for Colored People, which for years had been a priority objective of Communist infiltration.

The NAACP charged that Negro children in Delaware, Kansas, South Carolina and Virginia were being denied their rights under the 14th Amendment.

The court did not rule on this aspect. Instead, Chief Justice Earl Warren, in the wriitten opinion, declared that the court found for the NAACP because segregated schools induced a feeling of inferiority among Negro children.

Third of five articles on Little Rock, written by Edward B. Simmons, staff writer of The Standard-Times, New Bedford, Mass., and reprinted by the Daily News by special permission.

SIX BOOKS CITED

This sociological view, the justice stated, is "amply supported by modern authority." He cited six books by such "modern authority."

Two of the six authorities were Theodore Brameld and E. Franklin Frazier. Between them, they have been members of or identified with 28 organizations listed as Communist, Communist-fronts or Communist-dominated.

A third "authority" was K. B. Clark. While arguments were being heard by the court on the four cases, Clark was on the pay roll of the NAACP as a "social science expert."

A fourth authority cited by Justice Warren was the book, "An American Dilemma," edited by Gunnar Myrdal, a Swedish Socialist. The chief justice emphasized the importance of this book in the court's deliberations by saying it was depended on "generally," that is from cover to cover.

Sixteen of the contributors to Myrdal's book have long records of pro-Communist affiliation and activity. One, W. E. B. Dubois, identified by the Communist Party as the "honorary chairman" of the NAACP, had a hand in 82 parts of the book. Dubois has been identified with 80 Communist fronts, reportedly more than any other American citizen.

Dubois intervened in behalf of executed Communist spies Julius and Ethel Rosenberg and sent the Kremlin a message of condolence on the death of Stalin.

Myrdal, himself, has written that the U. S. Constitution is "impractical and unsuited to modern conditions." Its adoption was "nearly a plot against the common people," said this foreign authority on American Negro problems.

The court's decision gave new influence to the NAACP. Its officers hailed the decision but indicated that it would not change the organization's plan for calm and orderly progress in race relations.

"We accept the decision quietly, unless there is deliberately-fomented trouble," said the late Walter White, then executive secretary of NAACP.

WANTED STRUGGLES

Thurgood Marshall, chief, NAACP counsel, who had argued the school cases before the court, said, "The people will get together and work this thing out."

The Communist Party, however, wanted no part of moderation. It wanted the "big sharp struggles" its leaders had forecast, and racial unrest. Communist publications and officials shrilled for "immediate implementation of the Supreme Court decision, immediate abolition of segregation and discrimination from every facet of American life, immediate enforcement"... etc.

The record from the Supreme Court decision until the climax at Little Rock makes it plain which philosophy was the dominant one. Moderation was forgotten.

The next three years brought unprecedented civil disobedience and violence in the South's racial affairs. There were all-out "incidents" of long duration in Tuskegee, Ala., Charleston, S. C., Tallahassee, Fla., Montgomery, Ala., Americus, Ga., and Clinton, Tenn., to name only the major ones.

COMMUNISTS BLAMED

The NAACP played a prominent role in each, but the atmosphere was not the moderate one ostensibly espoused by the NAACP.

"In my opinion, every major racial disturbance in the South since 1954 has been incited and directed by the Communist Party," Mrs. Paul Crouch, widow of a former Communist leader, told The Standard--Times. Her husband was a top Communist functionary in the South for 13 years, and she was his aid throughout the period.

Communist exploitation of the Negro through the NAACP is attested by the proceedings of the 1957 national convention of the Communist Party. That convention adopted as its main resolution, "the question of Negro freedom. . .the crucial domestic issue of the day, requiring support of the program of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

Communist penetration of the NAACP in these important years is conceded by the NAACP itself.

ALL CHAPTERS WARNED

On Feb. 14, 1956, Leroy Wilkins, who succeeded White as NAACP executive secretary, warned all chapters to guard against the "intensive efforts" of Communists to infiltrate.

At that very time, however, the NAACP's official publication, "The Crisis," was recommending as MUST background reading for Negroes, books by Claude Lightfoot, chairman of the Illinois Communist Party, and Doxey E. Wilkerson, member of the party's National Committee. Both have written extensively in behalf of racial unrest.

Communist dominance of Negro civil rights developments after the Supreme Court decision is illustrated, also, in the activities of the Highlander School, influential "sociological" workshop in the South. Highlander, according to testimony before a congressional committee, was founded by a Communist and by a man who refused to state his beliefs.

Since 1954, Highlander has held a series of "workshops to develop plans for an orderly transition from segregated to integrated schools." At the last workshop held over the Labor Day weekend just before the trouble at Little Rock, the leaders of every important racial strife incident in the South since 1954 were present.

How sincere is the Highlander program for "orderly transition" in desegregation?

The actual curriculum at Highlander, its pamphlet statement in behalf of "orderly transition" not withstanding, preached that "desegregation is more effectively accomplished in a single step than in a series of steps with delays in between."

This is fellow-traveler vernacular for the straight-out Communist program of "immediate desegregation."

Among those attending the important Highlander workshop was the Rev. Martin Luther King, leader of the Montgomery, Ala., bus boycott. King was to be at Little Rock, and, in 1958, at the White House, protesting integration delay.

By the time Central High School in Little Rock was to open for its 1957-58 school year, the Communist Party was marching step by step with the NAACP, whether the good element in the NAACP liked it or not.

World Poll

Majority Fear Soviet Aid Is a Threat to Freedom

By Elmo C. Wilson
Director, World Poll

©1958, N.Y. Herald Tribune Inc

With the United States and the U. S. S. R. locked in what has been termed the "battle of giveaways," the question arises as to the political ramifications of this competition as seen through the eyes of other nations.

With this in mind, a World-Poll survey of nine countries shows a clear majority fearful of the consequences of accepting economic aid from the U. S. S. R.

Still small by comparison with the four billion dollar annual foreign aid program of the United States, the Kremlin's aid activities are nonetheless expanding swiftly and reflect a massively developing Soviet economy.

Russian Threat

Large numbers—majorities in seven nations—feel that economic aid from Russia threatens the independence of the recipient states. And percentages ranging from a low of three persons in ten to a high of almost five in ten express similar reservations about aid from the United States.

The questions posed by World-Poll in nine countries of Europe, Latin America and the Far East were:

"Do you feel that acceptance of economic aid from Russia carries with it any threat to the independence of those countries which accept the aid, or not?"

"Do you feel that acceptance of economic aid from the United States carries with it any threat to the independence of those countries which accept the aid, or not?"

	AID FROM RUSSIA
	Is a threat	Is NOT a threat	Don't know
Denmark	83%	6%	11%
Netherlands	78	9	13
Sweden	75	15	10
Britain	72	17	11
Germany	66	10	24
Mexico*	62	15	23
Venezuela*	55	31	14
Italy	47	25	28
Japan	43	17	40

*Mexico City in Mexico; Caracas in Venezuela.

Italy, with a Communist party which captured a fourth of the vote in the recent elections, comes up with a high proportion who apparently feel that assistance from Russia will not threaten their independence.

More suprising, however, is the relative lack of suspicion of Russian motives among the Venezuelans. Almost a third of the citizens of Caracas are willing to bet that their independence would not be threatened by acceptance of Soviet aid.

The Japanese, as on so many of the questions involving the East-West conflict, range high on the side of "Don't know" on this issue.

Although regarded as less of a risk than Russian aid, United States aid is also clearly causing worry among important segments of the population of these nine nations.

The Britons, Danes and Mexicans are most suspicious of the implications of assistance, but in every country at least three in ten see it as a threat to their political integrity.

Educated Pro-U. S.

Class differences, as they may be reflected in education status, reveal a pattern of more fear of Soviet aid among the better educated in every country but Denmark. An overwhelming majority of Danes, less educated as well as better educated, however, tend to be suspicious of Russian economic assistance.

The picture is different for the educational breakdown of opinions toward United States aid. Only in Britain, Japan, and Mexico are the better educated (those with secondary or superior schooling) more prone to see aid from America as a definite threat to their independence. In the other six countries the better educated the respondent, the more likely is he to deny that United States aid involves any threat to the independence of the recipient nation.

Anti-Communists report new powerful Soviet secret police

BY VICTOR RIESEL

MUNICH, Aug. 6—There are men here who will not walk some streets at night even under bodyguard. Nor will they talk aloud or place much trust in a stranger no matter what credentials he carries. They are the leaders of the virtually unknown anti-Communist underground whose agents have penetrated the Soviet Union.

These men have been threatened, blackmailed, dosed with special poisons and shot at. They know that Soviet agents come equipped with fountain-pen guns and cigarette cases powered by tiny electric gadgets which can spew two or three bullets 15 yards. And no one knows that a shot was fired, for these tiny arms carry ingenious silencers.

Life here for the leaders of special anti-Communist groups of escapees from over the nearby Soviet border has its own brand of Russian roulette. Just trust one wrong 'friend' and you've lost to an agent of the 'new' and tougher Soviet Secret Police, the KGB. This is the successor of the MGB, the MVD and the NKVD right on back to the first Cheka.

RIESEL

The foreign anti-Communists here won't really talk because they don't think the world will believe their tales of terror in the night.

SOMETIMES they will meet a stranger like myself and merely will say watch the new Soviet secret police chief, Ivan Alexandrovich Serov. He is so powerful now in Russia that he is second only to Nikita Khrushchev, who has made Serov a full member of the Soviet Communist Party's Central Committee. The anti-Communist specialists concentrated here warn that Serov, more successfully than other Rusian espionage and security chiefs, will infiltrate America's strategic unions and vital industries.

Swiftly, to ward off disbelief, they point out that some eight months ago the Soviet secret police infiltrated the U. S. State Department Mission in Berlin. A Red agent became the assistant to one of our important officials. I will not mention the officials' name. He is a decent, hard-working executive of our mission who almost tore himself in half when our security agents there told him that his aid was selling secrets to a division of Serov's KGB.

The assistant was in a position to know the inner workings of the Berlin mission. But more important, that assistant knew and mixed socially with men who were our most effective political observers, intelligence agents and counter-espionage operatives. Just to be able to identify them and their duties made the agent worth his weight in purest refined uranium to the KGB.

OU RFRIENDS HERE then mutter grimly that if the KGB can penetrate the carefully screened, omipotent U. S. Mission in Berlin, staffed by some of the brightest minds in our government service, then who can stop the Soviet secret service in Munich, or Bern, Switzerland, or even Paris and the USA?

The anti-Communists here reveal that one of their men knows the details, for example, of special KGB installations for the development of poisons and tiny secret weapons. This man broke with the Russian secret police. He has reported both to the exiled groups here and to the U. S. security forces that he knew of the existence of "Laboratory 12" in Russia. This unit is assigned to the "preparation of poison compounds" for use against "enemies" of the Soviets.

Another section has been assigned the development of "silent, secret weapons." These units are coordinated. Sometimes the poison has been put on the bullets.

Apparently my eyebrows did a John Lewis over my dark glasses. The shy anti-Communists, talking through their translator, gave me a we-told-you-so spiel. Then they reported that their man had delivered several of these weapons to our government.

They have been analyzed by our own laboratories. The weapons and the tiny ammunition work. So the evidence of the deadliness of these laboratories is in our own federal files, I was told.

Furthermore, these units must be highly important operations of the Soviet government, our friends say. The labs, at one time, were under the authority of Aleksandr Semenovich Panyushkin. This boy is none other than the same Comrade P. who was ambassador to the U. S. for four years until he was assigned to Peiping.

Just who operates the labs now we don't know. But to the daring anti-Communists here, it makes little difference. They stay out of dark corners—which is good. We can use such friends. They're growing fewer across the world.

Reds Goad NAACP To End Moderation

This is the third of five articles on the part played by Communists in bringing about racial trouble in the South. It is reprinted from The Standard-Times of New Bedford, Mass.

WASHINGTON—The success of Communist efforts to exploit the Southern Negro under the guise of "democratization" became fully evident in 1954 and the three subsequent years. Hunter O'Dell, Montgomery Insurance Man Rips Probe

By EDDIE WILLIAMS

A 34-year-old American insurance executive and ex-marine, who has been cited by "responsible people" as a top communist in Louisiana, riled members of a House subcommittee probing Red activities in Dixie Wednesday when he persistently demanded that the group delve into un-American activities shrouding the suppression of Negroes in the South.

He was Hunter O'Dell, who said he is agency director for the Protective Insurance Co., in Montgomery, Ala., and who invoked the First and Fifth Amendments of the U. S. Constitution when querried about communist activities.

O'Dell, former student at Xavier University in Louisiana and former U.S. merchant marine, was one of eight persons appearing before the subcommittee for questioning in connection with the communist infiltration into the South. The investigating group learned little more than it already knew about the witnesses, several of whom used the Constitution to avoid answering questions about any connections they may have had with the Communist Party.

NOT A COMMUNIST

One witness, 22-year-old William Matthews of Brooklyn, N. Y., testified that he was not a member of the Communist Party and that he was not under party discipline. However, he refused on Constitutional grounds to answer questions concerning his last employment. Matthews said he is presently employed at a Brooklyn, N. Y., manufacturing company.

The subcommittee, which is seeking information concerning communist operations in the South with an eye to suggest to Congress fore effective legislation for the purpose of halting "the communist conspiracy."

OUTSPOKEN WITNESS

The most outspoken witness of the second day hearing was O'Dell, the Montgomery insuranceman, who has been identified by an agent of the New Orleans, La., Antisubersive Squad as the top communist since 1950. House staff director Richard Arens said the Louisiana agent found on O'Dell premises in Louisiana a copy of a document on "Proposals On Southern Party Organization, 1955-56," relating plans and specifications for the infiltration of communists in the South.

O'Dell, appearing with his attorney, Orzell Billingsly, r., of Birmingham, said, "I don't recall ever seeing this document." The subcommittee said it had information that O'Dell had been connected with a number of other communist organizations and individuals.

CONSTANTLY CUT OFF

The group came to grips with the witness over his insistence that it be concerned with the plight of the Southern Negro. O'Dell presistently tried to introduce a document he had but was constantly cut off by members of the subcommittee who said he was not persuing the regular channels.

Director Arens accused O'Dell of throwing "a facade" around himself by thrusting up the racial question.

Others, cited as communist organizers and colonizers in the South, who appeared before the probing group were: Carl Braden, of Louisville, Ky.; Frank Wilkinson, of Los Angeles, Calif.; William J. Robertson III of Chicago, Ill.; Karl R. Korstad of Greensboro, N. C.; Jerome Van Camp, of Philadelphia, Pa.; and Mrs. Madge Spurney Cole of Greensboro.

All refused on Constitutional grounds to give answers to questions about communist activities Braden, former copy editor for the Louisville Courier-Journal in Kentucky, accused the committee of probing into his personal beliefs and associations. He stated he was in Atlanta last December along with his wife, Mrs. Ann Braden, Aubrey W. Williams and James A. Dombrowski.

REFUSED TO TESTIFY

Braden, however, refused to testify on whether or not they were here for a meeting at the Atlanta Chapter of the American Red Cross. He and his wife, who has not appeared before the committee, are field secretaries for the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., an organization which says it is seeking "the elimination of all forms of racial segregation in the Southern and border states." Williams is president and Dombrowski is executive director of the organization.

Wilkinson, former Los Angeles housing director, was accused by Arens of being a hard core communist" who has worked in a number of Red organizations and who was dispatched to Atlanta to agitate about the subcommittee's hearings.

In refusing to answer the director's questions, Wilkinson said, "This committee stands in direct violation of the First Amendment of the U. S. Constitution."

WORKED AS WAITRESS

Mrs. Cole, holder of a Master's degree in Science Education, testified she held jobs as a waitress in New York and as a spinner in a Durham, N. C., textile factory because they paid "good money." Arens indicated she was the type person FBI-man Amando Pena referred to Tuesday when he said the infiltrating communists are a hard core of well-trained men and women.

Arens said Mrs. Cole has been identified as a communist colonizer in the South.

Robertson, a Chicago science writer, fell somewhat in the same category. He said he held degrees from the University of North Carolina and that he had worked in North Carolina textile mills in which Agent Pena said a communist groups operates.

Asked if he were now a communist, Robertson said, "I am a loyal American," and later invoked the First and Fifth Amendments on the question.

Greensboro, N. C., businessman Karl R. Korstad, holder of the Master's degree and former teacher at Syracuse University was charged with being a member of a "Conference For Peace" which convened in Chicago in 1951 to urge the withdrawal of American troops from Korea. He denied this but said "I may have loaned my name and prestige' 'to a labor group which was behind this move.

Van Camp, 25-year-old former University of North Carolina student, was given a chance to receive immunity from criminal prosecution for any information he might give about communist activities in and about the state of North Carolina and the university he attended. The opportunity was promptly withdrawn when he indicated he would not cooperate with the investigators.

The House Un-American subcommittee goes into third and final day today with at least three witnesses remaining to be called to testify.

TO TAKE OFF—Marking the end of a 7-year-struggle, Paul Robeson pocketed his passport in Washington last week and told reporters he would leave in about two weeks for London and a series of stage, television, and radio engagements.

Robeson has been denied the right to travel abroad by the State Department since 1951, allegedly for having told a European audience that the American Negro would not fight Russia. Later, the State Department said Robeson refused to give "satisfactory" answers to the question of membership in the Communist party.

The ban was lifted on June 16 when the Supreme Court ruled that passports could not be withheld because of a citizen's "belief or associations."

No domestic problem is more important to the people of this country than relations between white and Negro Americans.

An issue in which the extremist views are so widely separated is a natural for exploitation by the Communist Party.

Protest Meeting Of Activities Committee

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON, —(ANP)— Negroes of the South have called upon the House of Representatives to use its influence to keep the House Committee on Un-American Activities out of the South and its fact-finding attacks upon those who are striving to carry out the orders of the United States Supreme Court.

The request came soon after Cong. Francis Walter, chairman of the Un-American Activities Committee had announced hearings to be held in Atlanta, Ga., on July 29-31.

WANT "FACTUAL INFORMATION"

Purpose of these hearings said Walter is to develop "factual information on current techniques of the Communist Party operations."

Countering these charges, the Negro leaders of the South claimed that the committee, following the pattern of the Eastland Committee, is trying to label the integration movement as "communistic." The theme of this investigation was started, they say, by a member of the Louisiana Legislature who publicly stated that "integration is the Southern expression of Communism."

Walter claimed that it is the task of his committee "to pursue Communist trails wherever they may lead in order that we constantly devise legislative weapons to cope with the conspiracy."

This is a development in which Negroes of the South are much concerned. They are thoroughly familiar with the shocking amount of un-American activity now going on in southern states. This includes the bombings of homes, schools and houses of worship of both Negroes and Jews.

They are still smarting from the terrorism carried on against Negroes in Dawson, Ga. They are unhappy about the way boards of registrars in southern communities refuse to allow Negroes to register and vote. They are aware of the activities of White Citizens Councils to openly defy the Supreme Court order.

Still there's nothing in the record of the House Committee on Un-American Activities to indicate that, if it comes South, it will investigate these things. On the contrary, the committee is much more interested in harrassing and labeling as "subversive" any citizen who is inclined to be liberal or an independent thinker, the letter stated.

The petitioners reminded the House of Representatives of a recent conference between four Negro leaders and President Eisenhower in which they pointed out that the great need of the South is to build lines of communication between Negro and white southerners. But when white people of the south seek to do this they are labeled subversive by congressional committees.

Integrationists Try To Stop Hearings

ATLANTA (AP) — Charges that the House un - American Activities subcommittee hearing starting here Tuesday is aimed at integrationists were denied Monday by two sources.

A spokesman for the full committee in Washington said certain Southern liberals are spreading false reports that the subcommittee would look for Communists in the integration movement.

Rep. Edwin Willis (D-La), chairman of the subcommittee, said at his home in St. Martinville, La.. that the hearings will not be concerned with segregation and integration.

The subcommittee, opening a three-day hearing on Communist influences in the South, has subpoenaed 15 witnesses.

Carl Braden of Louisville, Ky., whose conviction under the Kentucky sedition law was set aside by the U.S. Supreme Court, is among the witnesses summoned. He charged the hearings "are apparently designed to harass white people working to bring about peaceful integration in the Southern states."

Braden is a field secretary for the Southern Conference Educational Fund Inc. of New Orleans. A letter signed by individuals from all Southern states and reportedly "coordinated" by the educational fund, was cited by the committee spokesman in Washington.

The letter asked that the committee be kept out of Georgia. It charged the subcommittee is coming South to follow up work started by Sen. James Eastland (D-Miss). Eastland sought to prove that the integration movement is infiltrated by Communists.

Braden, a former copy editor for the Louisville Courier-Journal, said he would appear and challenge "the committee's right to harass not only us but other white Southerners working to uphold the law of the land."

Express Views In Open Letter

NEW ORLEANS — One hundred and fifty Negro leaders from all of the Southern and border states, and the District of Columbia, have signed an open-letter to the United States House of Representatives concerning the hearings announced by the House Un-American Activities Committee for Atlanta, July 29.

Congressmen were urged to use their influence to see that the House Committee stays out of the South — unless it can be persuaded to help defend us against those subversives who oppose our Supreme court, our federal policy of civil rights for all, and our American ideals of equality and brotherhood."

"We are acutely aware," said the open-letter, "of a shocking amount of un - American activity in our Southern states. To cite only a few examples, there are the bombings of the homes, schools and houses of worship of not only Negroes but als of the Jewish citizens.

"The terror against Negroes in Dawson, Ga.; the continued refusal of boards of registrars in many Southern communities to allow Negroes to register and vote, and the activities of White Citizens Councils encouraging open defiance of the United States Supreme court.

"There is nothing in the record of the House Committee," the letter continued, to indicate that it will investigate these things. On he contrary, all of its activities suggest that it is much more interested in harassing and labeling as 'subversive' any citizen who is inclined to be liberal or an independent thinker.

"For this reason, we are alarmed at the prospect of this committee coming South to follow the lead of Sen. Eastland, as well as several state investigating committees, in trying to attach the 'subversive' label to any liberal white Southerner who dares to raise his voice in support of our democratic ideals."

Among those who signed the letter were:

Dr. Herman H. Long, Tenn.; Bishop Edgar A. Love, Md.; Mrs. Andrew W. Simkins, S. C.; the Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, Ala.; E. D. Nixon, Ala.; the Rev. S. P. Spottswood, Ark.; Father John LaBeauve, Miss.; Atty. Martin A. Martin, Va.; L. C. Bates, Editor, State Press, Ark.

2 Balky Witnesses Accused Here Of Trying To Prevent Red Probe

The House Un-American Activities subcommittee charged two of its balky witnesses Wednesday with perpetrating Communist-inspired plans to head off its current hearings in Atlanta.

The witnesses—Frank Wilkinson of New York and Carl Braden of Louisville, Ky.—invoked their constitutional rights in refusing to tell the subcommittee whether they are members of the Communist Party.

Both witnesses lashed out bitterly at the motives of the congressional probe and interrupted questioning with attempts to speak on integration.

Richard Arens, director of the subcommittee, told Wilkinson he had been identified as a "hard-core Communist" who was sent here at the direction of the Communist Party "to create a hostile attitude toward the committee."

By JACK NELSON

"You were not subpoenaed to appear until it was learned you were here for that purpose," Arens declared.

Wilkinson, who began his short stint in the witness chair by saying he would not answer any questions, refused to identify a copy of a local hotel registration card, which showed he checked into the room on July 23. The first hearing of the subcommittee was held Tuesday.

The registration card showed that Wilkinson shared the room with James A. Dombrowski of New Orleans, director of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc. Arens said the fund is the successor to a Communist front organization, the old Southern Conference for Human Welfare.

Arens showed Carl Braden a copy of a letter sent to Congress urging that the subcommittee's Atlanta hearings be called off. He asked the witness if he wrote the letter.

Braden, who is field secretary of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, refused to answer. But he said the letter was signed by 200 Negro leaders.

Rep. Donald L. Jackson (R-Cal) said he noticed that a number of the names on the letter had been "associated with the Communist Party." He said there was a "strong possibility" the letter was prepared by Communists.

Braden accused the committee of investigating integrationists and declared that all of the witnesses subpoenaed were integrationists. Jackson asked if the witnesses were also Communists, but Braden evaded the question.

Arens questioned Braden about a meeting in Atlanta in December, 1957, in the Atlanta Red Cross Building. Braden was asked to identify pictures of several persons entering the building.

He said the persons were he, his wife, Dombrowski and Aubrey Williams, Montgomery, Ala., president of the educational fund and publisher of a farm magazine.

Braden said the pictures were taken from a building across the street from the Red Cross Building by "spies" using a "common technique for harassing liberals in the South."

Braden refused to answer further questions about the meeting of the educational fund group.

Rep. Edwin Willis (D-La.), subcommittee chairman, directed Braden to answer questions concerning any communist activities he may have engaged in. Braden refused.

CALLED MASQUERADER

Arens told Braden: "It is our understanding you are a Communist Party member. You have been identified by reputable witnesses as a communist. You have been propagating the Communistic line in the South as masquerading as a humanitarian and your activities are designed to further the Communist cause in the United States."

The subcommittee has questioned a number of witnesses about a Communist plot to infiltrate the textile industry in the South. Armando Penha, former undercover man for the FBI, testified at the opening session Tuesday that the Communist apparatus in the South includes a plan to "colonize" the textile mills.

Penha identified a number of the witnesses as Communist "colonizers" sent to the South under the textile mill program. But the refusal of the witnesses to answer questions stymied the subcommittee in its efforts to develop further information at the hearings.

Penha testified that the "colonizers" often were well-educated Communists who took menial jobs in textile mills to carry out the party plan.

A woman textile worker from Greensboro, N. C., with two college degrees, refused to say whether she was a "colonizer" or a Communist.

The woman, Mrs. Marge Spurny Cole, was described by Rep. Jackson as a good example of Communist infiltration into industry.

Penha identified the woman as a colonizer Tuesday and again in a face-to-face meeting at the hearing Wednesday. He said he knew her while living his dual role of FBI agent-Communist.

Mrs. Cole, who has a master's degree from Syracuse University, refused to say whether she knew Penha. Rep. Willis cautioned her that she was "jumping right into contempt" in refusing to answer.

DIDN'T BARE DEGREE

Arens asked her if she told the Cone Mills at Greensboro that she had a master's degree when she applied for a job there. She said she did not.

The only witness who answered questions as to membership in the Communist Party was 22-year-old William Matthews, Brooklyn, N.Y., camera manufacturing company worker. "No, sir," he replied when asked if he was a party member.

During later questioning, after he refused to answer questions about other individuals and about his past employment, Matthews declared: "I told you I'm not a commie! I have never been a commie! I never intend to be a commie!"

Another young witness, Jerome VanCamp, 25, of Philadelphia, Pa., rejected Arens' suggestion that he might be given immunity from any criminal prosecution if he would "break completely" with the Communist Party and give information to the subcommittee on Communist activities.

VanCamp, who had been identified by Penha as a Communist, said he was qualified to work as a weaver and had worked in a textile mill at Durham, N.C. He refused to say whether he became involved in communist activities while studying for two years at the University of North Carolina.

OTHER WITNESSES

Other witnesses who testified Wednesday were:

1. William Joseph Robertson III, Chicago writer, who said he wanted to invoke "my privilege not to be a witness against myself" when asked if he was a Communist. He was identified as a Communist by Penha. Robertson insisted he was a "loyal American," but he refused to answer Penha's charges under oath.

2. Karl R. Korstad, 43, of Greensboro, N.C., a soft-spoken man who took the Fifth Amendment, when asked if he was a Communist and if he knew Penha. He said he "may have" let his name be used in a movement designed to get public support for the removal of U.S. troops from Korea in July, 1950.

He said he also "may have" written an article for the Communist Daily Worker urging that 11 convicted Communists be freed. Korstead, who had been identified by Penha as a Communist colonizer, was thanked at the end of his testimony by Rep. Jackson for being a "courteous witness." Jackson said this was "quite unusual," and suggested that upon "sober reflection" Korstad might want to cooperate fully with the subcommittee.

SPEECHES ATTEMPTED

3. Hunter Pitts O'Dell, Montgomery, Ala., Negro who identified himself as an insurance executive and who repeatedly interrupted Arens' questions with attempts to speak on integration. Arens described O'Dell as a "dedicated zealot" of the Communist Party and said that a document containing plans for the party's Southern program for 1955 and 1956 was seized at his place of residence in New Orleans in 1957. O'Dell pleaded poor memory to many questions and invoked his constitutional rights on others, including whether he was a Communist. He insisted on making a speech at the end, but Rep. Willis cut him off abruptly with a five-minute recess.

The final session of the subcommittee here will begin at 10 a.m. Thursday.

MRS. ANNA MOSS

SHADES OF MCCARTHY

Re-booking due in case of Anna Moss

WASHINGTON.

The case of Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, the former Pentagon clerk worker once accused of being a member of the Communist Party, faced the prospect of being reopened this week, but not to the general public.

It will be recalled that Mrs. Moss fought a year-long battle in 1954 against charges of being subversive.

She was linked with Communism on the testimony of Miss Mary S. Markward, former FBI undercover agent. Subsequently she was cleared of the charges.

Mrs. Markward never was able to identify Mrs. Moss as subversive.

However, Mrs. Moss did not see any records proving her to be a dues-paying member of the party.

* * *

THE McCARTHY era was recalled, this week, as efforts for new questions and records were brought forth by Government attorneys in the case.

The secret FBI records on Mrs. Moss, pending transfer to attorneys for the Communist Party, are being brought forth to substantiate Mrs. Markward's testimony against the Communist Party, it is contended.

"We feel that by presenting all of this, we will once and for all show that Mrs. Markward's testimony is accurate," Troy B. Conner Jr., a Government attorney declared.

He had reference to the action of Government attorneys in producing "every document that Mrs. Markward ever gave the FBI concerning Mrs. Moss."

YET, U.S. attorneys indicated that this move was not an effort to bring any new action against Mrs. Moss.

In her fight against Mrs. Markward's testimony, in 1954 Mrs. Moss testified under oath that she must have been mistaken for someone else when labelled subversive and ousted from her job.

Justice Department attorneys say the records produced show Mrs. Moss to be "Anna Lee Moss" in numerous instances. She spells her first name "Annie."

AFTER Mrs. Moss was cleared in her fight, former Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson offered her a job as a typist in an office away from the Pentagon. She currently holds the position.

With the rehashing of the case, Government attorneys plan to bare the secret files on Mrs. Moss to attorneys for the Communist Party.

NAGY'S EXECUTION SHOCKS NEW DELHI

Reaction of Press Is Bitter

Colombo Is Revolted

SEATO Warns Asia

Special to The New York Times.

NEW DELHI, India, June 18—The execution of former Hungarian Premier Imre Nagy and three of his associates has shocked influential Indians in this capital and has brought bitter editorials against the Soviet Union.

Generally, Indian newspapers are cautious in their criticism of Moscow's policies, but in recent months they have published some strong words against the Kremlin.

An official said that the manner in which the Soviet Union whom? The free man? Of what The free mind?"

The Madras Hindu in a long editorial asserted it would not be too far fetched to presume that the Nagy execution had been "intended to serve notice to other Soviet bloc countries that Yugoslavia's example is dangerous."

The editorial continued: "the execution is really a political demonstration of Russian power and the intention of Moscow to maintain its hegemony over Eastern Europe."

Horror and Disgust in Ceylon

Special to The New York Times.

COLOMBO, Ceylon, June 18—The press and public in Ceylon has reacted to the executions with horror and disgust.

Newspapers declared that the executions were a lesson not only for the peoples of Communist countries but also for those of smaller Asian nations.

The Ceylon Observer, referring in an editorial to "the brutish murder of these Hungarian had been dealing with Yugoslavia in the current ideological dispute added to the latest news from Moscow about the executions was bound to harm. Soviet prestige in India and other Asian countries.

Calls It Murder

The Hindustan Standard, published simultaneously in Delhi and Calcutta, termed the execution of Mr. Nagy "murder."

"Let us call things by their proper names," the paper said in an editorial, adding:

"The contempt with which world opinion has been treated by the Kremlin in this particular instance may not be missed by even those who viewed the sad events in Hungary in October, 1956, with less than the accusatory cocksureness of Western capitals."

The editorial ended with this observation: "Why should communism at the height of its power in two continents be afraid of anything and anybody? Yet it apparently is. Of nationalists," said there were political leaders in South Asia who believed that they too would be able to adapt communism to South Asia. The executions must show such Asian leaders that theirs is a forlorn hope, the paper said.

SEATO Chief in Warning

Special to The New York Times.

BANGKOK, Thailand, June 18—Nai Pote, Secretary General of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization, issued an unusual statement condemning the secret trial and executions as "a warning against commu nism to the peoples of all smal nations that if once they com under Communist rule there i no chance of the revival o freedom and independence."

"Any attempt to escape from Communist rule will suffer the same consequence as befell the people of Hungary who tried to bring democracy and freedon to their nation," the statemen said.

Hungarians Storm Soviet U.N. Offices

350 Refugees Trample Several Policemen, Break Windows

NEW YORK, June 22 (AP)—Some 350 screaming Hungarian refugees trampled several policemen today while smashing windows of the Park Avenue headquarters of the Soviet delegation to the United Nations.

Nine demonstrators were arrested after seven policemen, including a deputy chief inspector, were injured. Three demonstrators were arrested yesterday after a less violent outbreak at the Soviet building.

The demonstrators, including hysterically sobbing women carrying anti-Communist placards, were protesting the Red execution of Hungarian revolution leaders.

Sudden Explosion

Orderly picket lines had been marching in front of the Soviet headquarters when the demonstrators suddenly exploded big firecrackers, smashed one window with a rock and the other with a placard pole. More than 100 policemen were rushed to the scene.

As the demonstrators dispersed, they sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

Police believed the pickets' outburst came on a prearranged signal.

But Dr. Bela Fabian, chairman of the federation of former Hungarian political prisoners, said it started when two women pickets were struck by objects thrown from a second-floor window of the Soviet building.

Dr. Fabian said one of the women struck was Mrs. Leslie Toth, whose husband was executed in Hungary in 1952 after having been tried with Josef Cardinal Mindzenty, the Catholic prelate who was imprisoned.

Policeman Hit

Dep. Chief Inspector Anthony O'Connell was struck on the right side of the face by a rock he said was thrown by a woman. He refused medical aid. Other policemen were kicked and slugged.

The trouble started at 4 p.m. The pickets left voluntarily 25 minutes later. The demonstration had been scheduled to last until 5 p.m.

The firecrackers—large, round "cherry bombs"—were tossed in front of terrified horses of the mounted police.

One policeman said his assailant apologized immediately after striking him with a placard pole. He arrested the assailant anyway.

Three windows of the building were smashed, two downstairs and one on an upper floor.

Before the demonstration, Dr. Fabian said his organization had received reports of more Hungarian executions and secret trials.

Ghost Of Nagy

Russian Mob Attacks 2nd Embassy

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A Russian mob attacked the West German Embassy in Moscow Monday in the latest flareup in recriminations over the execution of Imre Nagy and his associates in the Hungarian revolt crushed by the Soviets.

The Moscow demonstration took two hours. A crowd growing to 1,500 smashed embassy windows with sticks and stones and spattered ink against the walls.

It was the second similar demonstration in Moscow last Friday the Danish Embassy was attacked.

The demonstrations followed attacks upon the Soviet embassies in West Germany and Denmark. These attacks took place last week in protest against the death of Nagy, former Hungarian premier, and four colleagues.

Hungarian refugees demonstrated Sunday in New York before the headquarters of the Soviet delegation to the United Nations. Seven policemen were injured.

About 300 Hungarian refugees marched upon the Soviet Embassy in Canada Sunday night and hurled bottles of red ink at the building.

APPROACHES TO U.S.

Russian Subs Held Charting Sea Floor

WASHINGTON, June 22 (AP) — The Russians were reported today to be mapping the ocean floor off North America in a massive operation intended to enable Soviet nuclear submarines to sneak up to U. S. shores without surfacing.

U. S. News and World Report, in a copyrighted article out of London, quoted Western intelligence officials as giving that explanation for the recent increase in sightings of unidentified submarines near American waters and for six Soviet trawlers anchored for months off the Canadian coast. The magazine did not identify the officials.

The article said:

"The purpose of this operation, as the officials see it, is to enable Soviet nuclear submarines, several of which are being built, to travel submerged from Russia to action stations off the U. S. coast.

"There, still submerged and undetected, such submarines could launch missiles with H-bomb warheads to anywhere in the United States.

"A submarine in unknown waters normally navigates by surfacing from time to time to take sights on the sun or stars, but this cannot be done while traveling under the surface for thousands of miles.

"Underwater 'action stations' for firing 1,500-mile missiles also must be located with great accuracy, to establish a known location for firing the missiles. This is part of the ocean-floor mapping job."

Annie Moss Case Pops Up Again

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — The Army said over the week end it is taking no action against a woman employe on the basis of new airing of charges that she was a member of the Communist party in the mid-1940s.

The [illegible] Mrs. Annie Lee Moss, was twice suspended from Army employment as a security risk.

But in January, 1955, she was reinstated by Defense Secretary Charles E. Wilson in a non-sensitive post in the accounting division of the army's office of finance.

Mrs. Moss had denied under oath that she had been a Communist. She said she was the victim of a case of mistaken identity.

The new accusations against her were carried in a report issued recently by a subversive activities control board (SCAB) member.

SHOULD REGISTER

The board member former Gov. Francis A. Cherry of Arkansas, recommended that the SCAB reaffirm an earlier order that the Communist party should register as a Communist action organization.

The case went back to the board for reconsideration, among other things of testimony given by Mrs. Mary Stalcup Markward, a former FBI undercover agent.

Communist party lawyers before the SCAB had accused Mrs. Markward of committing perjury by describing Mrs. Moss as a communist. They demanded her reports to the FBI on Mrs. Moss. The government produced Mrs. Markward's FBI reports and the party's own records listing Mrs. Moss of 72 R st. Southwest, Washington, D. C., as a member.

Party attorneys did not cross examine Mrs. Markward.

AFFIRMS CASE

Cherry charged that authentic party records substantiated the case against Mrs. Moss. His report said:

"The party's own records, copies of which are now in evidence and the authenticity of which it does not dispute, show an Annie Lee Moss, 72 R st. Southwest, Washington, D. C., was a party member in the mid-1940's.

"Yet, respondent (the Communist Party) on several occasions charged before the Court of Appeals and the board that witness Markward committed perjury in testifying before the Defense Department to what the party's own records showed . . .

The party declined to cross examine witness Markward on the Moss question after copies of the party's own records were produced to it."

The Cherry recommendations are now before the full five-man board. A final decision is not expected for several weeks.

NO ACTION

The Army meanwhile said no new action has been started against Mrs. Moss because of the Cherry report.

Asked about the report, Mrs. Moss told a reporter: "I don't know anything about it and I don't care to discuss it."

George E. C. Hayes, who was her attorney in the fight for reinstatement, said that he no longer had association with the case. However, he added that his dealings with Mrs. Moss while handling her defense "made me believe then and makes me believe now that she has no connection with the Communist party."

Mrs. Moss said she present lives at 1244 Evarts st., N. E.

Russian Nobel winner poses Soviet dilemma

BY THOMAS P. WHITNEY
AP foreign news analyst

The Nobel award to Russian Boris Pasternak poses a dilemma for the Soviet government.

Nikita Khrushchev faces the difficult question of what if anything to do about a man on his payroll whose spirit is then [illegible] propaganda [illegible] Soviet regime and yet who has won the Western world's top literary award for a notably anti-Communist novel.

INVOLVED HERE is the troublesome relationship between the Kremlin and Soviet creative artists. The party dictatorship has always insisted that art be subordinated to the political aims of the Soviet system. In its extreme form, this attitude demands that authors be reduced to writing advertising copy for the government's "engineers of human souls" as Stalin called them.

Some Soviet creative artists have knuckled under. But many others have sought the broadest possible freedom for artistic expression—and consequently freedom from party dictation as to what and how they should write.

This defiance has been dealt with in various ways in various periods. Joseph Stalin liquidated those who defied the demands that they write what the party wanted. His terror was also self-defeating, for it destroyed much creative and artistic talent, and inhibited those who weren't killed.

Since Stalin's death the Communist Party leadership has been seeking some balance between its need to control literary output and what it now recognizes as the need of writers for a broader degree of freedom.

So far as is known, the Kremlin leadership since Stalin's death has carefully refrained from using the more extreme sanctions — prison or death — against writers who disagree with it. But Soviet writers, familiar with the attitudes of the party leadership, have generally been cautious about using their freedom.

THE BREADTH of freedom has widened and narrowed since Stalin's death as the political situation has changed. Since the Hungarian revolt of late 1956 the Kremlin has been wary of Russian writers. In recent months particularly, the party has been tightening the literary reins as part of a general crackdown.

The Nobel Prize puts Pasternak in a precariously spotlighted position. His greatest work, the novel "Doctor Zhivago," is a best seller outside the Soviet Union but to date has been suppressed at home because it is a clarion call for human freedom.

The very thought that honor can come to any Soviet writer who does not have Kremlin blessing is outlandish to Russian Communist Party leaders. They may feel they have to take some sort of action.

Any retaliation they take, however, would certainly make Pasternak a martyr to Soviet writers themselves and a glaring demonstration to the rest of the world of the limitations on creative freedom in Russia.

SO FAR THE Soviet government's only public action toward Pasternak has been futile attempts to prevent the publication abroad of "Doctor Zhivago."

Thus no one could claim the author himself was being persecuted. Perhaps Khrushchev will decide this is still the wisest policy, particularly since Pasternak has been so signally honored by the West.

Russian's Novel Criticizing Reds Wins Nobel Prize

Poet's Book, Banned In His Homeland, Was Printed Abroad Over Soviet Objections

From Wire Dispatches

Stockholm, Oct. 23.—The Nobel Prize for Literature was awarded Thursday to Boris Pasternak, a Soviet writer whose "Doctor Zhivago" criticizes communism.

This book is banned in Russia. It was printed abroad over Soviet objection. It is the 68-year-old Russian poet's first novel.

The 18 members of the Royal Swedish Academy made the Nobel award, worth $41,420.

The academy notified both Pasternak and Nikolai Voinov, Soviet charge d'affaires in Stockholm, of the award.

Censor Delays Interview

There was speculation that Soviet authorities may take reprisals against Pasternak or at least prevent him from receiving his prize. Nobel Prize winners generally come here to receive their awards and to discourse on their field.

(An Associated Press correspondent in Moscow interviewed Pasternak Thursday, but transmission of the story was still delayed by Soviet censorship Thursday night.)

A Swedish literary critic who saw Pasternak recently reported that he "appears to have reached an inner mental peace which renders him completely uninterested in any reprisals that might be taken against him."

Russians Say 'It's Bad'

The critic, Dr. Nils Ake Nilsson, said Pasternak told him the Soviet authorities explained they were not publishing his novel in Russian because it "is bad and might damage my reputation as a poet. That is, of course, only pretext."

Pasternak worked quietly on the novel for 10 years. He had been noted for verses and stories with a revolutionary theme up to 1933. Some called him Russia's greatest poet.

But except for a few verses, his chief work into the early 1950's was translations of poems and dramas from English, German, Georgian and Hungarian into Russian. His translation of a Schiller classic is now running in a Moscow theater.

Had More Freedom

In 1956, when writers had a little more freedom under the de-Stalinization program Pasternak completed "Doctor Zhivago."

A pro-Communist editor in Italy who received the manuscript—smuggled out of Russia—insisted on printing the 700-page novel last year despite Soviet pressure to squelch its publication.

Its hero is Yuri Andreyevic Zhivago, a wealthy doctor and writer. The central figure tells of what he considers the loss of personal and mass freedom and the tragedy of Russia under communism and collectivization.

The novel's characters talk like this:

"It has often happened in history that a lofty ideal has degenerated into crude materialism. Thus Greece gave way to Rome and Russian enlightenment became the Russian Revolution. . . .

"The great majority of us are required to live a life of constant, systematic duplicity. Your health is bound to be affected if, day after day, you say the opposite of what you feel, if you grovel before what you dislike and rejoice at what brings you nothing but misfortune. . . ."

Says Freedom Will Return

In the concluding pages Zhivago says that freedom will return to the Russians.

Dr. Anders Oesterling, permanent secretary of the Swedish academy, said the novel rises "high above all political-party frontiers."

Other academy members saw it as a great philosophical novel.

Oesterling said the academy had discussed the question of what it would do if Pasternak refused to accept the prize—or was not allowed to take it—but would not take a stand until Pasternak replied to the cable sent to Russia announcing the award.

He's A Lone Wolf

"This is a literary award and we made no political considerations when we gave the prize to Pasternak," Oesterling said. "I hope he will accept it and come here to receive it."

The prize for literature was the first of this year's five Nobel prizes to be announced. The prizes for chemistry and physics will be announced Tuesday, and for medicine next Thursday. The fifth, the peace prize, will be awarded later by the Norwegian Parliament.

Pasternak, the son of famous painter Leonid Ospovic, a thoroughly integrated Russian Jew, has been a lone wolf in Russia's literary world, and has stoutly defended his personal integrity and the freedom of thought.

Once in the '30's, when many of his friends were deported, he defied the late dictator Joseph Stalin by refusing to sign a document approving the execution of Russian generals.

Was Fired as Security Risk

Photos of Secret Radar Sites Found On Man Shot to Death in Canada

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 8 (UPI) — Color photographs of secret radar sites and a box of Communist literature were found among the belongings of a man found shot to death in a hotel after he was fired from a Distant Early Warning (DEW) line job as a security risk, authorities disclosed today.

The belongings also included a letter signed "Mom," from someone en route to Russia.

The DEW line is a chain of radar installations across Northern Canada designed to alert the North American continent in case of a Russian attempt to launch a sneak air attack across the North Pole.

The dead man was identified only as O'Donnell. His body was found in a hotel room last Sunday. A board of inquiry decided yesterday his death was not suicide but ruled there was not enough evidence to determine whether it was accidental or murder.

A friend testified O'Donnell had been fired after working on the DEW line for a transportation company for six weeks because he had been trying to organize a Seafarers' International Union local.

Norman Cunningham, port agent for the union here, said O'Donnell was fired for misconduct as a security risk.

Evidence was given that O'Donnell checked into the hotel three days before he died. He stopped at the hotel desk Sunday to pick up $250 he had left in the hotel safe. Fifteen minutes later, a hotel agent found O'Donnell dead outside a washroom on the first floor of the hotel. A gun was nearby.

Tests showed the gun was about two inches from O'Donnell's chest when he was shot. The letter found in O'Donnell's possession apparently had been written on board a ship bound for London. "Mom" wrote she would fly from London to Prague and then go by train to the Black Sea for four weeks of vacation and rest.

Bulganin Branded Foe Of Communist Party

MOSCOW, Nov. 14 (AP).—Nikolai Bulganin today was publicly branded an enemy of the Communist Party after serving at its high command almost since the 1917 revolution.

The former Soviet Premier, already reduced to a minor provincial job was expected by observers here to be stripped soon of membership in the party's Central Committee—his last claim to importance.

The denunciation of Marshal Bulganin was contained almost casually in a report on the Soviet seven-year economic plan of Premier Nikita Khrushchev, once Marshal Bulganin's comrade in government. The report was issued after a meeting Wednesday of the Central Committee.

Moscow Radio said the report mentioned "the exposure and routing of the antiparty group of Malenkov, Kaganovich, Molotov, Bulganin and Shepilov who joined them, who slid down the road to faction-splitting activity."

This was the first time that the name of the ailing, 63-year-old Bulganin had been included as a member of "the antiparty group." The other four were ousted from party leadership in late June of 1957 on charges of collusion and intrigue.

The four were accused of trying to overthrow Mr. Khrushchev, then and now the party head. Reports accepted abroad said Marshal Bulganin originally sided with the four but changed sides when Mr. Khrushchev brought up additional central committee support. Mr. Khrushchev obviously never forgot although he kept Marshal Bulganin on until last March as an increasingly unimportant, figurehead premier.

4 Banished as Plotters

The four alleged plotters were banished on July 4, 1957. V. M. Molotov, former Premier and Foreign Minister, was named Ambassador to Outer Mongolia; Georgi Malenkov, Premier before Marshal Bulganin, was made a provincial power-station manager; Lazar Kaganovich, former Deputy Premier and industrial expert, became a provincial executive in the building materials industry, and Dmitri Shepilov, former Foreign Minister, headed a scientific institute in Soviet Central Asia.

Marshal Bulganin submitted his resignation as Premier last March 27. He became chairman of the state bank. On August 15 he was demoted to chairman of the council of the national economy in Stavropol in the northern Caucasus.

On September 6 Moscow radio said Marshal Bulganin had been removed from the presidium, the key group of the party central committee.

Mr. Khrushchev has said Marshal Bulganin had a serious operation last summer. The former Premier has been reported in failing health.

The central committee announced that Nikolai Belayev, first secretary of the Communist Party in Kazakhstan, had been relieved as secretary of the committee's ruling presidium.

Most observers regarded this as a move to let Mr. Belayev concentrate on Kazakh problems. Ther was no evidence the 55-year-old official was being sacked.

Soviet Role For Negro Told By Ex-Red At Scales Trial

GREENSBORO, N.C., Feb. 10 (U)—A convicted Communist, testifying today in the federal trial of Junius Irving Scales, outlined Communist-taught theories and analogies regarding the American Negro.

Mrs. Barbara Hartle of Evans, Wash., occupied the witness chair for the third straight day as Scales' trial on Smith Act charges entered its second week here.

Mrs. Hartle, who described herself as a former Communist leader in the Northwest and who served 20 months on a Smith Act conviction, described courses taught in a Communist Party "re-education school" she attended in 1946.

RIGHT OF SECESSION

She said the instructor, Jacob (Pop) Mendel, taught that 172 American counties, stretching from southern Maryland to Mississippi, had the right to form an independent Negro nation. Mendel, she said, held that Negroes constituted the majority of the population in those counties and had the right of secession from the Union and self determination.

In another class, Mrs. Hartle said, it was taught that the role of the American Negro in an attempt to seize power should be similar to that which the communists assigned to the peasantry in the Russian Revolution of 1917, an alliance with the proletariat.

Mrs. Hartle was the second witness as the government sought to prove in U.S. District Court that:

The Communist Party advocates violent overthrow of the government; that Scal was a member of the party between 1947 and 1954, and that Scales knew the nature of the party's aims.

Scales, 37-year-old University of North Carolina graduate, was convicted in 1955 of violating the Knowing Membership clause of the Smith Act. Appeals kept him from serving his six-year prison sentence.

Last October, before the Supreme Court could make a final ruling, the Justice Department conceded he was entitled to a new trial because the defense should have been allowed to inspect certain FBI files used in the prosecution.

NEGRO'S ILLUSIONS LEFT IN THE SOVIET

American Returns to U. S. After 26 Years—Fled Moscow in 1946

By AUSTIN C. WEHRWEIN

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, May 10—Twenty-six years ago Homer Smith, a young Negro from Minneapolis, upset by the depression and racial discrimination, began a new life in what appeared to be a promised land: the Soviet Union.

Today, Mr. Smith, now 48 years old, with fourteen Moscow winters and eleven Ethiopian summers and the ruins of his youthful illusions behind him, is back in his native land trying to re-establish his life.

His Russian wife, the former Marie Petrovna, and their two children are still in Addis Ababa. There the Smiths took refuge in 1946 after the Soviet rulers had turned sour on all foreigners, regardless of color.

Mrs. Smith has renounced her Soviet citizenship and hopes to come to this county.

Home a Strange Place

Mr. Smith is living with a sister, Mrs. Frank S. Brown, the widow of an Army major killed in Korea, and had to readjust to what was almost a strange society when he returned home last November.

He does not regret the "tremendous experience" of his long exile—an experience shared by few Americans.

But he has only disgust for the Soviet system and feels that the first-hand exposure to communism gave him a deeper appreciation of his native land than he could have otherwise obtained.

His dislike of racial discrimination was a prime reason for his departure. Since his return, he said, he has felt there has been much improvement. But he is disturbed to find that many Negroes are sympathetic to the Soviet.

The son of a warehouse worker, Mr. Smith was born in Minneapolis and studied journalism at the University of Minnesota. He left school after his junior year and wrote for Negro newspapers while working as a Post Office clerk.

"When you are young you are idealistic," he said.

"Certain things you see and don't like make an impression on you. People in bread lines. The race question, which was worse than it is now. I had been hearing about Russia and that it had no color line. There was an appeal to see a new society coming up."

Offered His Services

Mr. Smith wrote to Moscow, offering to work in the post office, hoping to become there the first Negro to correspond for Negro papers.

Although he was lionized as an individual because of his color, the Moscow post office provided an immediate insight into the Soviet system.

"I was trying to get them to handle the mail more efficiently as in America," he said. "To handle the mail—instead of sitting at a table handling papers."

Mr. Smith learned Russian, lived in an apartment house and, he feels, was much closer to the Russian people than most Americans in Moscow.

With the coming of the Stalin purge era in 1936, he lost his post office job and his honeymoon with the Soviet was about over.

"There was a tremendous suspicion against all foreigners, colored or white," Mr. Smith said.

But by then he had married (only to find his wife discriminated against) and was getting along as best he could as a journalist.

During the war, Mr. Smith was a correspondent on the German-Russian front and later worked in The Associated Press Bureau in Moscow.

"I got disgusted with the country after the war," Mr. Smith said. "They put the screws on the people again and I didn't see any hope. I wanted to get out and get some fresh air."

By his account he managed to get to Ethiopia, and later to get his wife out with the help of Lorenzo Taezaz, the Ethiopian Minister in Moscow.

He said his job in Addis Ababa was "senior editor in the press and information department."

Edited Newspaper

Among other things he edited a weekly newspaper published in English—the only English-language paper in the country. He said that he even ran a linotype machine.

Mr. Smith enjoyed the freedom he found in Ethiopia, but he regarded it as only a step toward home. Moreover, his wife yearned to come here and the Smiths wanted to rear the children in this country.

Mr. Smith said he was afraid that Americans do not take Soviet Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev seriously enough.

He said that the Soviet leader was "crude and rude" but that the Premier's jokes had serious meaning behind them.

Should the Soviet Union exceed the United States in the economic sphere, he said, the uncommitted nations would go to the Russian side.

Court Frees 6 Convicted Communists

NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (UPI)—The three-member U.S. Court of Appeals today unanimously reversed the convictions of six second-string Communist leaders accused of teaching and advocating violent overthrow of the government of the United States.

The court held in dismissing the indictments against the six that simply teaching such action was not sufficient for conviction under the Smith Act.

"It must be clear in some fashion," Judge John C. Pickett said "that the teaching and advocacy was directed to some sort of action, not merely a belief in some abstract doctrine. In the teaching, somebody must be urged to do something, not just believe in something."

The six were convicted in July, 1956, and sentenced to one to five years in prison the following September. All had been free under bond pending their appeal.

They are William Norman, 55, former executive secretary of the New York State Communist party; Fred M. Fine, 43, secretary of the party's national affairs; Sidney Stein, 42, assistant national labor secretary of the party; James E. Jackson Jr., 43, the party's Southern regional director; George Blake Charney, 53, acting chairman of the party in New York, and Alexander Trachtenberg, 73, a member of the party's national committee and head of the International Publisher Co., printers of Communist literature.

The committee he was the business manager of the Southern News Letter but took refuge in the First and Fifth Amendments, as did Feldman, on other questions.

Cartright said the publication has a circulation among southern white people and "we find that many young white persons do not go along with racism."

"We are obliged to publish in Chicago," he said, "because segregationists like the Georgia governor would bring pressure on us" if the sheet were published in the South.

ATTACKS COMMITTEE

Mrs. Mitchell Saba of Roanoke, Va., lit into the committee when asked to identify herself. She gave her name and said she was unemployed "thanks to this committee. After I received its subpoena I was fired." She claimed she was called before the committee for her strong stand in favor of integration.

"Your calling me here would infer that I am un-American and advocate force and violence and I resent that," she said.

She refused to answer when asked if she was a member of the Communist Party. Richard Arens, staff director for the House committee, said a man named Ralph B. Long had identified Mrs. Saba as a party member and repeated the query as to her membership.

Mrs. Saba again declined to answer but added "I want you to know Long has been convicted many times of drunkenness."

HELD SEVERAL JOBS

Arens questioned her at length on numerous jobs she had held. They included employment as a textile worker with the American Viscose Co., Roanoke in 1934-43; as organizer for what she called "food, tobacco and agriculture" in Winston-Salem; organizer in the Camel cigarette factory, as a clerk for the U.S. Army in New York City; as clerk for the OPA in Miami in 1945, then back to Roanoke where she worked for the American Bridge Co., then in Phoenix, Ariz., in 1955 as a stenographer for a construction firm.

Arens asked if she had been given special training on party penetration methods in the South. She refused to answer.

Sealed Lips Balk Probe Of Reds In South

Communists Sent To South Carolina, Ex-FBI Man Says

By PERRY MULLEN

ATLANTA (AP) — Efforts of a congressional committee to uncover Communist Party connections in the South were balked repeatedly Tuesday by witnesses who refused to answer questions.

A former undercover agent for the FBI told the House subcommittee on Un-American Activities that the party sent colonizers and organizers into the area. But half a dozen witnesses heard by the committee flatly refused to say whether they were party members or identify others despite warnings that they might be in contempt of Congress.

A former FBI agent, Armand Penha, one-time New Bedford Mass., millworker, told the committee that Communist activity in the United States is greater now than ever before. He drew a picture of college trained agents who hid their educational background and took menial jobs to infiltrate the textile industry.

N. Y. HEADQUARTERS

Penha told the investigators the party set up the National Textile Commission with headquarters in New York to carry out the Southern drive. He listed Robert Hand man as director and said Hand man and other officers were spoken of only by code names.

The party program, he said included raising political and economic issues of Negroes, spreading propaganda to cultivate workers, and promoting strikes and slow downs.

Penha said he served as an offi[illegible] of the commission with the code names of [illegible]. He was in charge of [illegible] party meetings in the South to outline policies. He came to the area in 1955, covering North Carolina and part of South Carolina.

At Durham, N.C., meetings were held in homes, autos and two were staged at Duke University in Durham. One of the latter was a group of three or four members who met in the Duke University chapel which is open to the public for prayer and meditation.

TOP ORGANIZER

The witness named Fanny L. Litch of New York as the top organizer of the party in the South and Junius Scales as North Carolina district organizer.

In Durham he said he met with Bill Evans, William Robertson, a colonizer and his wife from Virginia, Jerome Vancamp, a former colonizer, Oscar Berland, sent down from New York, Marge Spurney, who originally came from New Jersey, and Ella Matthews of New York. The meetings were to coordinate organizational work.

From Durham he went to Winston-Salem where he had several meetings with Warren Williams to review organizational weakness in the area. He told the committee he went into a small town in South Carolina for a meeting with key Communists but a discrepancy in the agenda resulted in only one South Carolina man showing up. He identified him only by the code name "Pete" and said he could not recall the name of the town.

DECLINES TO ANSWER

Eugene Feldman, of Chicago, followed Penha. Feldman said he was a teacher. Penha previously had mentioned Feldman as a former colonizer sent to Alabama and later to Winston-Salem. Feldman refused to answer some 4[illegible] questions, including whether he was editor of the Southern News Letter, and names of his associates on the publication.

ATLANTA, — (UPI) — A letter mailed to Congress bearing the names of 200 Negroes and asking that a probe of communist infiltration in the South be called off was communist-inspired, congressional investigators charged today.

Wed. 7-30-58

The charge was made in a biting dispute between Carl Braden of Louisville, Ky., and members of the sub-committee of the house un-American activities committee which is investigating the infiltration of communists "nests" in the South.

Braden has been convicted of sedition in Kentucky and was sentenced to 15 years imprisonment but won his freedom when the supreme court overturned the lower court's decision.

P-1

He identified himself as a former employe of the Louisville Courier-Journal, the Louisville Post, the Cincinnati Enquirer, and the Harland, Ky., Enterprise.

Then Braden ducked behind the first amendment to the constitution in refusing to answer 14 times questions put to him by Reps. Edwin Willis, (D-La.) Donald Jackson, (R-Calif.) and William Tuck (D-Va.). Braden was asked if he had ever been a member of the communist party, but he refused to answer. Then committee investigator William Arends asked Braden if he wrote a letter sent to Congress last week by 200 Negroes, some of them prominent in public and legal life in the south, asking that the hearing now being conducted here be halted.

READS LETTER

Before making any response, Braden insisted on reading into the record the controversial letter. It expressed alarm that the committee was coming South and its present mission and stated that witnesses who had been subpeaned were "all involved in seeking equal rights for our people."

The letter said there was an "urgent need to keep the committee out of the South," unless it would also investigate racial bombings and other disturbances and such agencies as the white citizens councils.

But Braden refused several times to say whether he had written or had directed the writing of the letter.

Jackson leaned forward on the bench in a federal courtroom and said, "here is a communication with the strong possibility of having been prepared by a Communist."

The California Republican said this was an example of how "well-meaning people are not sufficiently advised when they lend their names to such communications.

"There is a strong likelihood that this letter was prepared under Communist direction and that it was prepared by the Communist party."

"I'm sure the people who signed this letter will appreciate your asperasions," Braden told Jackson.

"They should pay a little more attention to what they are doing," Jackson said.

Committee Rules Race Charge Out

ATLANTA (AP) — A Montgomery, Ala, Negro insurance man attempted Wednesday to inject a discussion of mistreatment of Negroes in the South into a congressional committee hearing on un-American activities He was ruled out of order.

The witness, Hunter Pitts O'Dell was described by committee staff director, Richard Arens, as a "dedicated zealot of the Communist movement."

O'Dell, who said he was an insurance executive and a native of Detroit, tried repeatedly to read a statement outlining what he said was un-American activity against Negroes.

A committee rule was read providing that such statements must be submitted 24 hours in advance of such hearings.

O'Dell and 10 others subpoenaed for the hearing declined to answer the question of whether they were members of the Communist Party.

The committee, on the second day of a three-day hearing, also questioned Carl Braden, Louisville, Ky., proponent of racial integration; Frank Wilkinson, connected with the Civil Liberties Union; a Greensboro, N.C., woman textile mill worker; a Chicago writer; a Greensboro, N.C., operator of a landscaping business and a Philadelphia textile mill weaver.

Braden, field secretary for the Southern Conference Educational Fund, headquartered in New Orleans, flatly told the committee his business and associations were none of its business. He was freed of a sedition conviction in Kentucky as a result of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in a parallel case involving Steve Nelson in Pennsylvania.

The Louisville man, former copy editor for the Courier Journal, told the committee it should be inquiring into violence against Negroes and Jews in this section.

To a query whether he was a Communist, Braden said the question had no pertinency and that he stood on "Supreme Court decisions protecting his rights to his own beliefs."

Wilkinson refused any information about himself other than his name and said he did so in cooperation with the Civil Liberties Committee to make a "legal test of the constitutionality of the mandate" of the Un-American Activities Committee.

Marge Spurny Cole of Greensboro, told the committee she took jobs as a waitress in Boston and New York in 1946 after earning two college degrees, later worked in the Erwin Textile Mills in Durham, N.C., and now is employed at the Cone Mills in Greensboro.

Arens brought from Mrs. Cole a statement that she did not mention her educational background to the Greensboro mill because she was not asked for it. He got a different reason from another witness who withheld his educational qualifications in applying for a job. William Robertson of Chicago, a writer, said he was graduated from the University of North Carolina in 1948 and attended Washington and Lee University for two years before entering the Army in 1945.

The committee staff director asked why, in applying for work at the Erwin Mills in Durham, he did not list his educational background.

"Well, cotton mill owners don't like their employes to be too well educated and naturally I wasn't going to make it more difficult to get a job." he answered.

Racial Trouble Is Goal Of Reds

J. Edgar Hoover Tells How They Operate

NEGRO SITUATION USED

By MORRIS CUNNINGHAM
From The Commercial Appeal Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, May 6.—FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover reported Tuesday that communists are attempting to stir up racial troubles in the United States.

"The Negro situation is being exploited fully and continuously by communists on a national scale," he declared.

"Current programs include intensified attempts to infiltrate Negro mass organizations.

Confusion Is Aim

"The party's objectives are not to aid the Negroes—but are designed to take advantage of all controversial issues in the racial question so as to create unrest, dissension, and confusion in the minds of the American people."

The FBI chief's statement was made in testimony to a House Appropriations Subcommittee, transcripts of which were released Monday.

The remainder of his testimony was devoted to the FBI's continuing struggle with the communist conspiracy and the FBI's various other activities.

"I cannot emphasize too strongly," he declared, "that the numerical strength of the Communist Party means nothing.

"We must never forget that those individuals who remain as members today are fanatically dedicated to the ultimate forcible destruction of our form of government.

"History tells us of the devastation which a handful of fanatics strategically placed can bring. To minimize the menace of communism as the activity of a small dissident group develops lethargy and can only lead to disaster.

Hard Core of Reds

"Our investigations have clearly shown that the Communist Party, United States of America, is a hard core of conspiratorial Reds unaffected by party differences and controlled by the heavy hand of Moscow.

"As long as this 'apparatus' exists it is a continuing aggressive force, constantly at work to subvert the American people and to destroy us.

"Soviet Communist Party leader, Nikita Khrushchev reiterated this goal in his much publicized television interview in June 1957, when he stated that your grandchildren would live under the heel of communist socialism."

Red Disengagement Plea Impresses World Opinion

By Elmo C. Wilson
Director, World Poll

©1958, N.Y. Herald Tribune Inc.

Russia's recent announcement of complete withdrawal "in the nearest future" of all Soviet troops in Rumania spotlights the disengagement tactics which Kremlin propagandists have been urging on the West.

Strong Appeal

Disengagement proposals exercise a strong appeal to world opinion, as revealed in a recent world-poll of nine nations. In every country except Japan a majority would favor acceptance of a step which they see as offering a possibility of reducing tension, and in traditionally neutral Sweden almost eight in ten go on record as supporting the proposal.

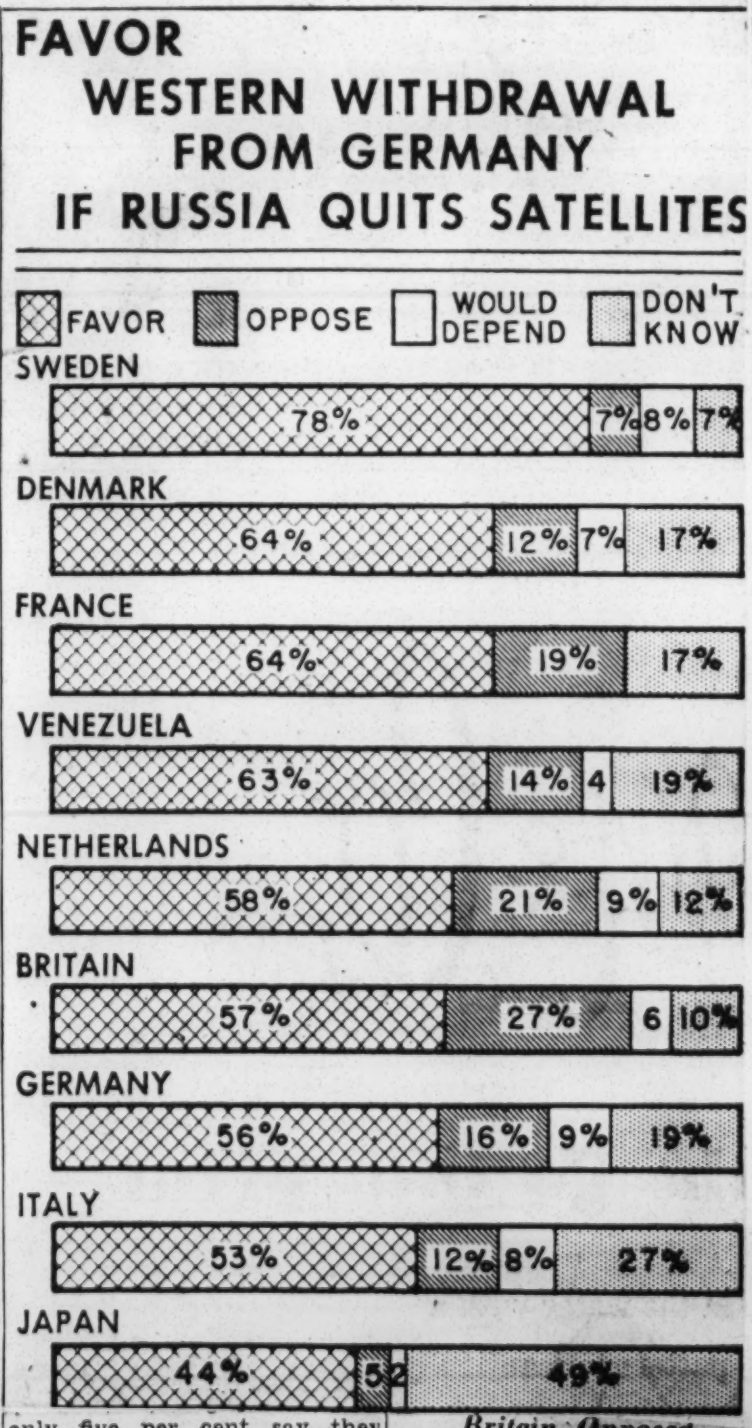
The question posed by World Poll was:

"If the Russians were to offer to take their forces out of Eastern European countries such as Poland, Czechoslovakia and East Germany on condition that the U. S., Britain and France withdraw their troops from Western Germany, would you be in favor of accepting the Russian offer, or would you be opposed to it?"

	Favor accepting %	Oppose %	Depends %	Don't know %
Sweden	78	7	8	7
Denmark ..	64	12	7	17
France	64	19	—	17
*Venezuela.	63	14	4	19
Netherlands.	58	21	9	12
Britain	57	27	6	10
Germany ..	56	16	9	19
Italy	53	12	8	27
Japan	44	5	2	49

*Caracas only.

In Japan, which is less involved than the European nations in this issue, the largest group votes "don't know" on the question, although even here only five per cent say they would oppose the plan.



Britain Opposed

Strongest opposition to this sort of disengagement occurs in Britain where just over a quarter of the population vote "no" on the proposition.

In Western Germany only 16 per cent oppose the idea to 56 per cent who favor it.

Numbers ranging up to nine per cent in the various nations gave qualified answers — they said it would "depend" on such things as whether inspection rights were guaranteed to see that the agreement was carried out. Contrasted with this "practical" qualification were a number of "wishful" answers which would accept the proposal "if Russia is sincere" about it.

German Comments

The comments of West Germans, who would be most vitally affected by any such move are illustrative of these expressions of qualified approval. The nine per cent of Germans who fall in this category say:

"If inspection rights are guaranteed."

"Depends on security rights and guarantees."

"Western Germany must be so armed that she can defend herself in case of need."

"Depends on certainty that the offer is serious."

"Depends on how far back the U. S. troops would have to be withdrawn."

Educational Backgrounds

Unlike many opinion questions which reveal sharp differences between groups of differing educational background, there were virtually no differences on this issue between the better educated and the less well educated respondents. Only in Britain were there appreciably more of those with superior education who favored the idea of such disengagement.

In short, the propaganda appeal of disengagement is strong—and strong even among the NATO allies of the West.

Red Techniques in South Laid Bare, Probers Say

By JACK NELSON

A House subcommittee on Unamerican Activities concluded a three-day hearing in Atlanta Thursday with a declaration that it had developed valuable information regarding Communist Party techniques in the South.

Rep. Edwin Willis (D-La.), subcommittee chairman, told a crowded federal courtroom audience that information developed should "stand as a warning to the South, namely, that as the textiles and other industries are developed in the South, there will be the ever present threat of Communist penetration."

The subcommittee sought by its questions to show that the Communist Party had been trying to cultivate workers for its cause in southern textile mills.

Armando Penha, former undercover man for the FBI, swore that such a Communist program had been going on for some time. He indicated the program had met with little, if any, success.

During the hearings Tuesday and Wednesday, a dozen witnesses, accused by the subcommittee of being Communists, took refuge behind the 1st and 5th amendments in refusing to say whether they were party members.

Rep. Willis declared that "by indirection" these witnesses "unwittingly, perhaps, gave the committee valuable information."

The final day of the hearings was devoted to two hours of testimony by a 29-year-old Hungarian freedom fighter of the Budapest revolution. The witness, who now lives somewhere in the South, was not identified because he still has relatives in Hungary.

The witness related details of

The Hungarian said that in his opinion, the witnesses who invoke their constitutional privileges instead of cooperating with the subcommittee "don't really know what they are supporting."

In his closing remarks, Rep. Willis also expressed appreciation to the Georgia Bureau of Investigation and to Georgia Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook for "contributing substantially to the success of our work."

eight years of horror as a slave laborer of the Russians in Siberia. He said Soviet secret police arrested him in 1945 because they thought he "might" oppose the Communist regime in Hungary.

When he was finally allowed to return to Budapest in 1955, he said, he got a job as a truck driver. He took part in the Budapest revolution in October, 1956, he said, and escaped from Hungary the following month by bribing Soviet guards with vodka and talking his way past a border guard.

Reds Invading 'Virgin' South

By Robert E. Baker
Staff Reporter

ATLANTA, July 29—A former undercover agent for the FBI testified today that the Communist Party considers the South "virgin territory" and has sent Northern "colonizers" into its textile industry.

The ex-agent, Armando Penha of New Bedford, Mass., told how he worked his way into the National Textile Commission of the Communist Party and was sent south to set up Party machinery.

Penha was one of seven witnesses to testify during the first day of hearings by a House Un-American Activities Subcommittee investigating Communist organization in Southern industrial areas.

One Witness Balks

The hearing was relatively calm as compared with previous sessions by Congressional committee in the South although one witness refused to answer 46 consecutive questions, another made several Jibes at Committee Chairman Francis E. Walter (D-Pa.) and a third witness, a Roanoke, Va. woman, said her Subcommittee appearance caused her to lose her job.

Penha, who testified recently for the committee's investigation of New England Communist activity, said he met with several "colonizers" of the Party in the chapel of Duke University in Durham, N. C., and in Winston-Salem, N. C., in 1955.

He identified many by name, including Eugene Feldman of Chicago, who appeared as a witness today. Others are expected to appear on Wednesday.

Feldman publishes "The Southern Newsletter," a pro-integration periodical. He refused to answer any questions other than his name and address, claiming the Fifth Amendment privilege against possible self-incrimination and that the questions violated his First Amendment right to free speech.

Wide Question Range

The 46 questions Feldman declined to answer were asked by Subcommittee Counsel Richard Arens and ranged from Feldman's birthplace to whether he is or was a member of the Communist Party.

At one point, Walter interjected: "The only thing Southern about the newsletter is it originates in South Chicago."

The circulation manager of the "Newsletter," Perry Cartwright of Chicago, testified he was a Socialist and not a Communist from 1946 to 1956. A native of South Carolina, Cartwright said the periodical was published in Chicago because of "pressures in the South."

Cartwright frequently referred to Gov. Marvin Griffin of Georgia, a hard-core segregationist, as Walter's "great friend" until the Chairman angrily retorted:

"Let's not be funny. I'm not among the Governor's friends; I just met him this morning."

Tells of Firing

Clara Saba of Roanoke, Va., told the subcommittee she was fired from her job as secretary-receptionist to two physicians after she received her subpoena to appear before the Committee. She refused to answer any questions as to whether she was or is a Communist after consulting with her attorney, Joseph Forer of Washington.

At one point, she said she felt she was subpoenaed because "of the strong position I have taken on integration in the South." Replied Walter: "That is not true, whether you believe it or not."

Mrs. Saba is a native of Pittsylvania County, Va., which is in the home district of Rep. William M. Tuck (D-Va.), a member of the subcommittee.

When she balked on questions, Tuck asked her how she learned so much about the Constitution with only a high school education. She replied: "I believe the Committee could learn much about the Constitution if the members would study it."

COMMUNISTS

MONTGOMERY NEGRO ON STAND

Investigators Fight Off Attempts To Sidetrack Probe Of Dixie Reds

ATLANTA (AP)—A Montgomery, Ala., Negro insurance man attempted Wednesday to inject a discussion of mistreatment of Negroes in the South into a congressional committee hearing on un-American activities. He was ordered to stop.

The witness, Hunter Pitts O'Dell, was described by committee staff director, Richard Arens, as a "dedicated zealot of the Communist movement."

O'Dell, who said he was an insurance executive and a native of Montgomery, twice repeatedly to read a statement outlining what he said was un-American activity against Negroes.

A committee rule was read providing that such statements must be submitted 24 hours in advance [illegible]

O'Dell countered that an examination of Communism by the committee staff director, Richard Arens, was not prepared in advance. Rep. Edwin Willis, (D-La.), committee chairman, responded the witness he had asked for a definition of Communism when Arens posed the question of whether O'Dell ever had any Communist party connections.

Arens told the witness the Communist movement began with Karl Marx 100 years ago and that it "intends to destroy this government, the last bastion of freedom in the world."

He then asked O'Dell if he were a member of the Communist party and the latter said he wanted to call attention to about 300 years of slavery" in this [illegible] "I am concerned with subversive activities that have kept my people segregated in this country," he added.

O'Dell and 10 others subpoenaed for the hearing declined to answer the question of whether they were members of the Communist party. Only one witness questioned so far, William Matthews, of Brooklyn, N.Y., a 22-year-old camera plant employe, denied any present or past connection with the party. The other witnesses declined to answer on the basis of what they termed their constitutional rights under the first and fifth amendments to the Constitution.

The committee, on the second day of a three-day hearing, also questioned Carl Braden, Louisville, Ky., proponent of racial integration; Frank Wilkinson, connected with the Civil Liberties Union; a Greensboro, N.C., woman textile mill worker; a Chicago writer; a Greensboro, N.C., operator of a landscaping business and a Philadelphia textile mill weaver.

Braden, field secretary for the Southern Conference Educational Fund, headquartered in New Orleans, flatly told the committee his business and associations were none of its business. He was freed of a sedition conviction in Kentucky as a result of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in a parallel case involving Steve Nelson in Pennsylvania.

The Louisville man, former copy editor for the Courier Journal told the committee it should be inquiring into violence against Negroes and Jews in this section.

To a query whether he was a Communist, Braden said the question had no pertinency and that he stood on "Supreme Court decisions protecting his rights to his own beliefs."

He refused to say whether he wrote a letter of protest against the Atlanta committee hearing; declined to answer questions about Atlanta meetings of the Southern Conference Educational Fund but did identify pictures of himself and others as having been taken at the meetings.

Arens displayed a letter he said was signed by Braden and his wife asking congressmen to oppose bills on security measures. The letter, Arens said, also dealt with the Kentucky conviction of Braden and urged recipients not to vote for weakening the U.S. Supreme Court.

Braden also declined to say if he was connected with the Southern News Letter, edited by Eugene Feldman. The latter earlier was identified by Armand Penha, former FBI undercover man, as a Communist party "colonizer" in the South.

Wilkinson refused any information about himself other than his name and said he did so in cooperation with the civil liberties committee to make a "legal test of the constitutionality of the mandate" of the un-American activities committee.

Integrationist clams up on Red hunters

ATLANTA, July 30—(AP)—Carl Braden, a racial integrationist from Louisville, Ky., clashed sharply today with the House committee on un-American activities and refused to say whether he is a member of the Communist Party.

Braden is field secretary for the Southern Conference Educational Fund which is supporting racial integration. He told the committee his associations and activities are none of the committee's business.

"You should be investigating violence against Negroes and Jews in the South," Braden told the investigators.

BRADEN, who was convicted of sedition in Kentucky but freed by the U. S. Supreme Court, read a letter sent to Congress on July 22 which told of bombings in the South, "terror against Negroes in Dawson, Ga." and other incidents.

"However, there is nothing to indicate the committee will investigate these, but the committee is interested in following other investigators who tried to attach the subversive label to those working for integration," Braden continued.

Richard Arens, staff director for the committee, asked if Braden prepared the letter he read. Braden, a former newspaper man, refused to answer.

Rep. D. L. Jackson (R., Calif.) commented there is strong indication the letter was prepared by Communists. Braden said, "I am sure the people who signed the letter will appreciate these aspersions."

ARENS QUESTIONED Braden about a meeting in Atlanta in December, 1957, in an Atlanta Red Cross building. He displayed photos showing Braden and others entering the building and asked Braden to identify the people in the pictures. The witness said they showed himself, James A. Dombrowski, executive director of the Southern Educational Conference Fund, and Aubrey Williams, Montgomery, Ala., farm magazine publisher.

Seventeen witnesses have been summoned.

EUGENE FELDMAN was identified by former FBI Agent Armand Penha as a former colonizer sent to Alabama and to Winston Salem, N. C. Feldman refused to answer about 40 questions, including whether he edited The Southern News Letter.

Six witnesses refused to answer questions on the opening day of the three-day hearing despite warnings that they might be in contempt of Congress.

Others heard by the committee yesterday included Jack Hester Jr., who identified himself as a resident of Chicago and a student. He declined to say if he was a party member.

Penha, a former FBI agent and one time millworker at New Bedford, Mass., testified that college educated agents concealed their background and took menial jobs to infiltrate the textile industry. He named Fanny L. Litch of New York as the party's top organizer in the South, and listed Junious Scales as North Carolina district organizer.

ANOTHER CHICAGOAN, Perry Cartwright, identified himself as business manager of the publication, which he said circulated among Southern white persons who "do not go along with racism." Both Cartwright and Feldman took refuge in the First and Fifth Amendments, and both had the Rev. C. Ewback Tucker of Louisville, a Negro minister, as their counsel. Tucker said he is a member of the Kentucky bar.

A New York customs official assigned to help control importation of Communist propaganda, Irving Fishman, testified that the flow of such publications into the United States is increasing steadily.

The probers also heard Mrs. Mitchell Saba of Roanoke, Va., say she was fired as a doctor's secretary because he objected to the publicity that would follow her appearance before the committee. She said she was called because of her strong stand for integration.

Both she and her husband Mitchell declined to say whether they were members of the Communist Party.

Questions put to the Feldman included whether he was editor and publisher of The Southern News Letter; whether he knew Penha as a party member; whether he knew Mr. and Mrs. Carl Braden of Louisville, who recently criticized the committee hearing as one to harass white people working for integration; whether the Bradens were his associates in the publication and whether Feldman authored a letter attacking the committee.

Richard Arens, staff director for the committee, asked Feldman if he would identify an application Feldman purportedly made for a post office box in Louisville, filed in March, 1957, for use by the publication.

OTHER QUESTIONS dealt with Feldman's birth place, whether he is a Communist, and whether he has always been known by the name Feldman.

After some 40 refusals to answer, the witness was asked by Rep. Donald Jackson (R., Calif.) if he was a Communist, then whether he was a member of the Ku Klux Klan. When Feldman made his stock reply, Jackson commented:

"Well you are consistent at least."

The committee earlier was given a report on Communist Party meetings in North Carolina, including one in the chapel at Duke University in Durham.

Penha, former New Bedford Mass., millworker, said he was an active member of the Communist Party from 1950 to 1958 at the behest of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

He said the party plan, broadly, was to infiltrate through the textile industry and to exploit the economic and political problems of the Negro in the South. College-educated agents usually were used, he said.

Penha said the apparatus of the Southern program is the National Textile Commission of the party with headquarters in New York under the direction of Robert Hardman, known by the code name "Fred."

Jackson interposed. "I don't care what you think. We want to know what you are doing for the Communist Party. The committee is not investigating integration."

Early in the hearing, Arens said,

"It is our understanding you are a Communist Party member. You have been identified by reputable witnesses as Communist. You have been propagating the communistic line in the South and masquerading as a humanitarian and your activities are designed to further the Communist cause in the United States".

HE THEN ASKED directly if Braden is a party member and Rep. Edwin Willis (D., La.), presiding, directed the witness to answer. Instead, Braden said his beliefs are none of the committee's business.

Braden's refusal to answer questions was a continuation of yesterday's opening session trend when witness after witness invoked the Fifth Amendment despite warnings that refusal to answer might make them liable to contempt of Congress action.

Atlanta hearings termed sad show

ATLANTA, Ga.—The House UN-American Activities Sub-Committee, which held a three-day probe into Communist infiltration of the South last week, claimed it secured much information for future congressional legislation to curb Red [illegible].

However, to most observers the sideshow featuring 14 witnesses who consistently stood on the First and Fifth Constitutional amendments in refusing to answer questions was a second-rate performance.

In fact, the committee, many persons felt, came out on the short end of answering witnesses' charges that it had been brought into Griffin-Talmadge-Davis-held Atlanta to ignore White Citizens Council and Ku Klux Klan attacks on colored citizens.

WHEN THE one colored witness attempted to read his statement of views on the committee and what its work might be in the solid South, he was not permitted to be heard.

Hunter O'Dell, an insurance executive of Montgomery, Ala. and former Merchant Mariner proved a stubborn witness for the committee, which claimed through Staff Director Richard Arens that he was a part of the Communist [illegible] during World War II and while a resident of New Orleans, La.

The former Xavier University student did not [illegible] activities and was engaged to promote Communism attributed to him by the committee.

He constantly consulted his attorney, Orzell Billingsley Jr. of Birmingham, Ala., one of the two colored lawyers figuring in the sensational hearings that packed a Federal courtroom.

The other colored attorney in the hearings was Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker of Louisville, Ky. and the AME Zion Church, who was counsel for three white witnesses. Wearing his large cross and clerical Garb, Bishop Tucker, a long-time civil rights fighter, proved one of the most colorful figures in the tensely brassling courtroom.

LECTURED to on the meaning of Communism and finally asked if he was a Red, Mr. O'Dell told Arens:

"I want to call your attention to about 300 years of slavery in this country. I'm concerned with subversive activities that have kept my people segregated in this country.

"You seem to know a lot about how Communism started in Europe years ago, but do you know as much about the slavery in which colored persons are living in this country?"

Arens said, "the committee simply wants to know whether or not you are a member of the Communist party."

"Since we are not talking about the colored persons of this country," Mr. O'Dell countered," I will have to take the First and Fifth Amendments. and refuse to answer."

THE FULL .. Committee Chairman, Rep. Walter (DPA.) and Sub-Committee Chairman Willis, (DLA.) started off the hearing with the testimony of FBI-Man Armand Penha, who claimed he had gathered his information on the accused "witnesses" during eight years of activity. Penha said the accused "Reds" had infiltrated the South and were serving as colonizers of its industry, political and social life.

Eugene Feldman was identified by Penha as a former colonizer sent to Alabama and Winston-Salem, N.C. Feldman refused to answer questions thrown at him as did Perry Cartwright, business manager of a Southern publication.

Mr. Cartwright said his publication was circulated among whites in the South "who do not go along with racism."

DURING THE first day of hot enchanges and counter-exchanges, witnesses called included John E. Hester Jr., formerly of Atlanta and now of Chicago; Mr. Feldman and Mr. Cartwright of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Saba, of they contended that the pro was intended to silence whi people who believed in integr Roanoke, Va.

All refused to answer wh ther they are or were former connected with Communist They frequently clashed wit the House committeemen whe tion. Cartright admitted bein business manager of the South ern Newsletter, which he sai was intended to counter such segregationists as Georgia's Gov. Marvin Griffin,

Mrs. Saba charged the committee with summoning her "because of my strong stand on integration." Rep. Donald L. Jackson of California, answered that the committee was not interested in the segregation-integration question, but merely probing Communism in the South.

CLASHING SHARPLY with the committee, Braden, field secretary of the Southern Conference Educational Fund which supports integration, flatly told the group;

"You should be investigating violence against colored persons and Jews in the South. My associations and activities are none of the committee's business."

Braden, a former newspaperman, was connected with the Wade house bombing case in Louisville a few years ago. His sedition conviction was voided when the U.S. Supreme Court ruled in another similar case.

The arrest and conviction of Mr. Braden grew out of the Bradens buying a house in a white Louisville neighborhood, then conveying it to a colored family.

* * *

"THERE IS nothing to indicate the committee will investigate the terror against colored persons in Dawson, Ga., but it it interested in following other investigators who have attached the subversive label to those working for integration," Braden snapped.

Committeeman Willis ordered Braden to answer questions asked him, but Braden firmly refused to comment. Both Braden and his wife had been subpenaed in the case.

In a prepared statement, the Bradens said, in part;

"These hearings are apparently designed to harass white people working to bring about peaceful integration in the Southern states.

"We have been active for many years in the southern integration movement and are presently employed as field secretaries for the Southern Conference Educational Fund, a southwide interracial agency working for integration."

Mr. Wilkinson and Braden did not invoke the protection of the First and Fifth Amendments in refusing to answer questions about alleged Communist connections. They thus, opened themselves to possible committee contempt citation and court tests.

ANOTHER subpenaed witness, Don West, former minister and professor who farms 200 acres of land near Douglasville, Ga., testified;

"I don't know anything about any members of the Communist party. I'm just trying to make a decent living on my farm. I don't advocate violence and believe only in the brotherhood of man." He added;

"But I certainly haven't bombed any colored homes on dynamited any Jewish synagogues."

REVEALING the pressure that was on the committee not to come South to hold its probe, Rep. Jackson stated that a letter signed by 150 colored leaders in the South and Washington "may have been prepared by a Communist."

The letter called for an investigation of bombings, school segregation and White Citizens Councils in the South. Jackson declared that signees would petition the subcommittee to have their names removed from the letter before it was admitted in the official record of the hearings.

Witnesses viewed this proposal as a veiled threat to many of the top leaders of the nation now engaged in the integration fight.

Members of the sub-committee refused to indicate whether or not the House UN-American Activities committee would ever be interested in a probe of bombings, economic squeezes and segregationist activities in the South.

* * *

EVER SINCE the group announced its intentions to hold hearings here, it has been charged that its sole purpose was to harass liberal white persons in favor of integration.

So far as could be learned the committee has not subpenaed any member of the Citizens Council or the Ku Klux Klan.

Chicagoan Refuses to Tell If He Worked Here as Red

By JACK NELSON

A young Chicago man who "peddled vegetables" in Atlanta in 1956 and 1957 refused Tuesday to tell a House Un-American Activities subcommittee whether he engaged in Communist activities in this area.

John (Jack) E. Hester Jr., 26-year-old student at a Chicago junior college, also refused to say whether he had been associated with Don West of near Douglasville, Ga., who often has been charged with links to the Communist party.

Hester did say that while working as a vegetable peddler in Atlanta, he lived on a farm near Douglasville. He refused to answer a question as to whether the farm is one which is operated by West.

REFUSE TO ANSWER

Like three other witnesses who testified earlier Tuesday before the subcommittee, Hester invoked the 1st and 5th constitutional amendments numerous times in refusing to answer questions by committee members and by Richard Arens, staff director.

Hester and the other witnesses, all of whom attacked the motives of the subcommittee, were represented by counsel. His attorney was a Negro bishop of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, the Rev. C. Eubank Tucker of Louisville, Ky.

Other witnesses who refused to answer questions about communist activities on the grounds that their answers might tend to incriminate them were Eugene Feldman of Chicago, who gave his occupation as "tutor," and Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell Saba of Roanoke, Va.

Feldman was represented by the Rev. Mr. Tucker; the Sabas and Don West were represented by Joseph Forer, Washington, D.C., attorney.

WIFE IN ACCIDENT

Rep. Francis E. Walter (D-Pa), chairman of the full committee, excused West from testifying after Forer told the subcommittee that West was under strain because of injuries received by his wife in an automobile accident earlier this month.

Walter commented that it probably was just as well that West didn't take the stand because Forer usually "advises all of his clients not to remember."

West, who attended the hearing under subpoena, sat on the front row of the federal district courtroom here during most of the hearing.

West showed little sign of emotion when Armand Penha, one-time undercover man with the FBI, testified that in 1955 he was told by Communists that West was an "effective organizer" for the party.

ACTIVE MEMBER

Penha said that as an active member of the Communist Party from 1950 until March 1958, he reported regularly to the FBI on a Red conspiracy to infiltrate the textile industry, particularly in the South.

Most of Penha's testimony on his cloak-and-dagger work was in generalities. While he said he considers the Communist threat in this country "greater" than ever, he indicated the party has had little, if any, success in its attempts to organize the South.

He said the South is "virgin territory" as far as the party is concerned.

The party plan, broadly, was to infiltrate the Southern textile industry and to exploit the economic and political problems of the Negro in the South, Penha testified.

He said that college-trained "colonizers" were usually assigned the job of organizing in the South. These Communist agents, he said, usually held a bachelor's, master's or doctor's degree.

Penha said that he served as a member of the National Textile Commission, an arm of the party, which had headquarters in New York City and controlled the Southern program. He is now a veterans service investigator for New Bedford, Mass.

Penha told of attending many meetings of the colonizers in Durham and Winston-Salem, N.C. The strategy of the colonizers, he said, were to get jobs at textile mills where they were to "spread propaganda in order to cultivate workers and undertake concealed activities of the party, including promotion of strikes and slowdowns."

Penha identified Eugene Feldman as one of the 32 "secret party members" with whom he said he met to plot strategy for the Southern program.

Don West, who at the time (1955) was editing The Southerner at Dalton, Ga., attended a meeting with Jeffrey White, a "colonizer" for the South, and two other Communists in New York, Penha testified.

CAME SOUTH

The meeting, Penha said, was to discuss the necessity of White coming South to "assist the nonwhites in the South in the labor movement." White subsequently came South for that purpose, the witness said.

Penha swore that it was "reported to me" that West was a party organizer.

Feldman, in taking refuge behind the First and Fifth Amendments some 40 times, gave the committee only his name, address and occupation.

Feldman refused to say whether he was editor of the Southern News Letter, a monthly pro-integration publication printed in Chicago. Committee director Arens identified Feldman as the editor.

The witness also refused to say whether he ever characterized himself as a Southerner and spoke at a Chicago rally on the subject, "A White Southerner Looks at Civil Rights." He also refused to say whether Don West contributes articles to the publication. Arens said West does.

BUSINESS MANAGER

Perry Cartwright of Chicago testified he is business manager of the Southern News Letter, which he said is sent mainly to Southern white people who "don't go along with Rep. Walter's good friend, Gov. Griffin, on segregation."

Gov. Griffin welcomed the subcommittee to Georgia earlier in the day and Rep. Walter commented that he admired the governor.

When Cartwright continued to attack the motives of the committee and speak sarcastically of "Rep. Walter's friend, Gov. Griffin," the committee chairman interrupted to tell him, "Let's not be funny."

Walter said, "I'm not fortunate enough to be among the governor's friends because I just met him this morning." He added, angrily, that the committee was interested in communism, not integration or segregation.

Cartwright told the committee, "You know perfectly well I'm not a Communist."

Mrs. Saba told the subcommittee that she lost her job as a receptionist to two Roanoke physicians after she received her subpoena to the Atlanta hearing. She got in a wrangle with committee members over whether the physicians fired her because she didn't intend to cooperate or whether she was fired just because she was subpoenaed. She maintained that the physicians fired her because they feared the publicity.

Mrs. Saba invoked the 1st and 5th amendments numerous times, refusing to answer such questions as whether she was a member of the Communist Party.

Her husband, Mitchell Saba, also refused to answer questions on grounds of possible self-incrimination.

OBJECT TO PHOTOGRAPHS

Mr. and Mrs. Saba both objected to being photographed, but Chairman Walter told them the presence of news photographers is sanctioned by the committee.

Irving Fishman, deputy U.S. clerk of customs at New York, testified that the flow of communist propaganda publications into this country is increasing steadily. He said a number of the publications come into the South.

A large volume of the publications is unsolicited, Fishman testified. He said some of the publications are sent to colleges, including those in Georgia.

The hearings will resume at 10 a.m. Wednesday and will continue through Thursday.

Witnesses In Dixie Red Probe Balk At Queries

ATLANTA (AP)—Efforts of a congressional committee to uncover Communist party connections in the South were balked repeatedly Tuesday by witnesses who refused to answer questions.

A former undercover agent for the FBI told the House Subcommittee on Un-American Activities that the party sent colonizers and organizers into the area. But half a dozen witnesses heard by the committee flatly refused to say whether they were party members or identify others despite warnings that they might be in contempt of Congress.

A former FBI agent Armand Penka, one-time New Bedford, Mass., mill-worker, told the committee that Communist activity in the United States is greater now than ever before. He drew a picture of college trained agents who hid their educational background and took menial jobs to infiltrate the textile industry.

Also heard by the committee were a woman from Roanoke, Va., who said she lost her job as secretary to a doctor because of the subpoena she received from the group, a Chicago man who refused to say whether he edited a publication called the Southern News Letter, and another Chicagoan who admitted he was the organ's business manager. The latter said the publication, printed in Chicago but mailed from Louisville, had a circulation among those who do not go along with racism.

HANDMAN NAMED

Penha told the investigators the party set up the National Textile Commission with headquarters in New York to carry out the Southern drive. He listed Robert Handman as director and said Handman and other officers were spoken of only by code names.

The witness named Fanny L. Litch of New York as the top organizer of the party in the South and Junious Scales as North Carolina district organizer.

Eugene Feldman, of Chicago, followed Penha. Feldman said he was a teacher. Penha previously had mentionad Feldman as a former colonizer sent to Alabama and later to Winston Salem. Feldman refused to answer some 40 questions, including whether he was editor of the Southern News Letter, and names of his associates on the publication.

AMENDMENT INVOKED

Perry Cartright, Chicago, told the committee he was the business manager of the Southern News Letter but took refuge in the First and Fifth Amendments, as did Feldman, on other questions.

Cartright said the publication has a circulation among southern white people and "we find that many young white persons do not go along with racism." "We are obliged to publish in Chicago," he said "because segregationists like the Georgia governor would bring pressure on us" if the sheet were published in the South.

Both Feldman and Cartright had as their counsel a Negro minister, the Rt. Rev. C. Eubank Tucker, of Louisville. Tucker identified himself as a member of the Kentucky bar.

Probers Deny Hunting Reds in Integration

ATLANTA, July 28 (AP) Charges that the House Un-American Activities Subcommittee hearing starting here Tuesday is aimed at integrationists were denied today by two sources.

A spokesman for the full committee in Washington said certain Southern liberals are spreading false reports that the Subcommittee would look for Communists in the integration movement.

Rep. Edwin Willis (D-La.), chairman of the Subcommittee, said the hearings will not be concerned with segregation and integration.

The Subcommittee, opening a 3-day hearing Tuesday on Communist influences in the South, has subpoenaed 15 witnesses.

Carl Braden of Louisville, Ky., whose conviction under the Kentucky Sedition Law was set aside by the United States Supreme Court, is among the witnesses summoned. He charged the hearings "are apparently designed to harass white people working to bring about peaceful integration in the Southern states."

Braden is a field secretary for the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc., of New Orleans. A letter signed by individuals from all Southern states and reportedly "coordinated" by the Educational Fund, was cited by the committee spokesman in Washington.

The letter asked that the committee be kept out of Georgia. It charged the Subcommittee is coming south to follow up work started by Sen. James Eastland (D-Miss.). Eastland sought to prove that the integration movement is infiltrated by Communists.

Loyalty oath assailed from three sides

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

A three-pronged attack was made Saturday on the loyalty oath for candidates in Alabama Democratic primary elections by two anti-loyalty pledge aspirants and by a South Alabama attorney.

Coleman Long of Uniontown, one of those who helped lead the 1948 States' Rights revolt, rapped State Democratic Chairman Roy Mayhall for his criticism of efforts to junk the oath. Long was one of those who helped prevent Alabama's 11 electoral votes from going to the national Democratic ticket of Truman and Barkley that year to give the votes to the Thurmond-Wright States' Rights ticket.

"I have observed Roy Mayhall's attack upon the character, motives and integrity of these loyal Democrats who do not believe in the gag rule of the so-called loyalty oath," said Long, candidate for the state committee from the Sixth District.

"Personally, I have never cared to base a political campaign on slander, mud-slinging or deception, nor shall I stoop to do so now. I shall simply state the issue.

It is: Shall the voters of Alabama have the right to vote freely and independently in our national elections? They are denied that right now.

James E. Simpson, Birmingham attorney and one of the anti-loyalty oath slate candidates for the state committee from the Ninth (Jefferson) District, said:

Where party will go

"THE PRIMARY OF MAY 6 will decide whether the Democratic Party of Alabama will be returned to the people of this state or remain under the control of a few professional politicians.

"If the loyalty oath, now required of all candidates in the Democratic primary, remains in effect, our electoral votes will be delivered on a silver platter to the Northern integrationist wing of the Democratic Party," Simpson added.

Simpson, who is making his first race for political office, said "these people, who now control the national party, care nothing for the South and our problems here. Why should they? They receive our support, regardless of what they say or do towards us."

He is the son of Birmingham Atty. James A. Simpson, former state senator.

"They can turn their full attention to wooing the votes of the large Eastern minorities by presenting platforms that appeal to those minorities, such as enforced integration of the South.

Whoever he may be

THE PRESENT loyalty oath requires that all our candidates support the nominee of the national party, whoever he may be. It is absurd that we should be put in a position to vote for candidates who are pledged to support candidates who are enemies of the South, and a platform which has enforced integration as one of its major planks.

"The supporters of the loyalty oath say our congressmen would lose their committee posts if the loyalty oath is repealed. Isn't it strange that no state has a loyalty oath that requires all candidates in the Democratic primary to support the national Democratic nominee, except Alabama and yet congressmen in other states retain their committee posts

"I know the people of Alabama will not be fooled by the nonsense put out by the pro-loyalty oath supporters. Vote for those candidates pledged to repeal the loyalty oath, such as Mike Bagwell Jr., Barron Bethea, John Golden, Lawrence McNeil, Earl T. Rogers, Victor H. Smith, Sidney W. Smyer Jr. and myself."

Assailed action

E. O. BALDWIN, Andalusia attorney, assailed action of the state committee in adopting the loyalty oath for candidates. He asserted that "the 'Black Monday' decision of the U. S. Supreme Court, sidestepping the constitutional doctrine of states rights, party catering to left-wing elements and the adoption by the committee of the nefarious, blind loyalty oath barring life-long Democrats from running for office in the Democratic primary, is knocking the people of Alabama groggy."

Baldwin also decried repeal of the two-thirds rule in Democratic National Conventions for nominating presidential candidates, saying "This knocked the South to the floor and its influence has grown less and less since."

He said "The Democrats from the North and West control the conventions and nominate candidates who please the party outside the South."

Baldwin pounded Democratic National Chairman Paul Butler, saying he "told a group of Negro students in the North before the last Democratic convention that the party has no doubt about the Southern Democrats voting the Democratic ticket."

Yet, he added, "the loyalists yell long and loud that the South receives greater benefits from the Democratic Party than any other party."

Yell 'Little Rock'

BALDWIN SAID "the loyalists yell 'Little Rock,' and certainly the sending of troops to Central High to enforce integration was tragic and by doing so Eisenhower disillusioned millions of people."

But he said "Stevenson did criticize Eisenhower severely in this matter, not for sending the troops, but for his delay in doing so."

The Andalusia lawyer said the state committee's adoption of the loyalty oath "reflects the feeling it is a captive of the national Democratic Party and fully subservient to the wishes of the Northern liberals."

Long, in his statement, said the issue in question in the upcoming election is "shall the voters of Alabama have the right to vote freely and independently in our national elections"

"They are now denied this right," Long said. "I think that if America is to remain free, the right to vote must not be denied

". . . Any policy is stupid that has driven 140,000 lifelong Democrats out of our party in Alabama and into the ranks of the Republican Party where they did not wish to go."

Saying he has been a delegate from Alabama to three national Democratic conventions, Long continued, "I have seen our influence at the national level stripped away from us and destroyed by this vicious and stupid oath.

Never have a voice

"ALABAMA is the only state in the union that has such an oath. We will never have a voice in national Democratic policy without the power to back up our ideas with our votes."

The statement said a Democratic victory in 1960 is indicated by sentiment, business conditions and all political signs.

"Alabama must have a voice in the national party platform and choice of our next president," he said.

The South is patriotic and conservative, Long added, and forms "the unshakable foundation" of the Democratic Party.

"I do not think it wise to have a two-party system in Alabama now when we are sorely beset by outside agitators. Segregation is an unshakable principle. It must be preserved.

"Affairs have reached an all time low in Alabama when . . . Mayhall can say to thousands of our best citizens—'get out, you are not qualified but to . . . Tiger Thompson, yas sur, come right in and govern us.

(He referred to ePrry L. Thompson, a Negro janitor in a Bessemer plant who filed to run for lieutenant governor but later withdrew).

"That is the issue. The solution is simple. Let the voters of Alabama rise up and throw out this present subservient, self-seeking committee (and) retain control of our presidential electors at the very grass roots in Alabama."

Long urged the election of men who are pledged to oppose the loyalty oath "and we may again have in Alabama a Democratic Party of which we can all be proud."

By BOB INGRAM

A crowded field of 21 candidates are running for the eight places on the State Democratic Executive Committee from the Second Congressional District.

And as is true in the First District, which like the Second is made up entirely of South Alabama counties, candidates strongly opposed to the Loyalty Oath are in a slight majority.

A poll of the 21 candidates by The Advertiser and the Associated Press showed that 11 men running favor the immediate repeal of the Loyalty Oath. Five feel that the oath should be retained.

The most outspoken opponent of the pledge is Frank J. Mizell Jr., Montgomery attorney and a candidate for reelection to the committee. Mizell was one of two men who voted against the readoption of the oath at the meeting of the committee here in January.

Since that time he has waged a running verbal exchange with Committee Chairman Roy Mayhall of Jasper.

At least two eight-men slates are entered in the race, with literature having been distributed in support of each group. But in addition, five other men not on either slate as such are also running. Four of these candidates oppose the oath, one favors it.

A number of the Second District candidates polled by The Advertiser expressed strong opinions on the issue, either for or against it.

L. D. (Lukie) Anderson of Atmore called the oath a "brass-collar gag rule" which "binds Alabama Democrats to the South haters in the National Democratic Party.

Mizell said it was "morally wrong and politically stupid" for Alabama to pledge its votes in advance for "unselected candidates and unknown platforms."

Montgomery Attorney Albert Roemer called the oath "basically wrong" and declared that it "violates a fundamental principle of American democracy, that is, the secret ballot."

Banks Mayor J. E. Brantley, in support of the oath, insisted a political party "must have some form of discipline."

He said the oath was a means of "separating the loyal Democrats from the disloyal ones."

S. T. (Tyre) Russell of Montgomery, although opposing repeal of the oath, said he personally would favor a "modified" oath.

Drayton Hamilton of Montgomery said in support of the oath it would insure "the maintenance of a strong Democratic Party" in Alabama which he said is essential.

One candidate, Howard Haygood of Greenville, refused to participate in The Advertiser poll, but he is identified in campaign literature as in support of the oath.

His only reply to The Advertiser was:

"I am not accountable to a Republican newspaper but to the good Democrats of the Second Congressional District."

Arthur S. Epperson of Foley warned that the oath would "ultimately destroy" the Southern way of life, and Solicitor Joe Kettler insisted he did not feel Alabama Democrats "should be penalized for opposing those Democratic national leaders who are doing everything they can to destroy our way of life."

Morris (Bubber) Dees of Mt. Meigs, a 21-year-old University student, defended the oath.

"The Loyalty Oath is an effort to keep our Democratic Party Democratic," Dees said. "Oath has a bad meaning, pledge would have caused less attention. Is a club pledge unusual?"

J. B. Nix of Evergreen also spoke out against the oath, as did Montgomery's Henry Heller who referred to it as the "oath of infamy."

Four of the candidates in the May 6 primary for committee membership from the Second District are currently members of the committee. They are Mayor Brantley, Rep. L. W. Brannan of Foley, Mac Hodgson of Bay Minette and Mizell.

All But One Candidate In Fifth District Favor Retaining Democratic Loyalty Oath

Editor's Note: This is the fifth in a series of articles on the candidates running for membership on the State Democratic Executive Committee in the May 6 primary. The purpose of the series is to inform readers of The Advertiser as to how the various candidates stand on the "Loyalty Oath."

By BOB INGRAM

Candidates loyal to the Democratic Party, the so-called Loyalists, are in full control of the race for the eight places on the State Democratic Executive Committee from the Fifth Congressional District.

There are 16 men running for these eight seats, and of the 15 who responded to a survey conducted by The Advertiser, all but one favor the retention of the "Loyalty Oath."

The lone exception was William I. Byrd of Alexander City, an attorney who was elected state-at-large delegate to the Democratic National Convention in 1956.

"Everyone knows I am a good Democrat, an active supporter of Stevenson in 1952 and 1956, but so help me, I am opposed to binding ourselves in advance to that left wing element which is now in command of the party and will be even more so in 1960," Byrd declared.

But Byrd is definitely in the minority with 14 other candidates declaring their firm support of the oath. The only candidate who did not reply to the questionnaire was Harold Kilpatrick of Altoona in Etowah County.

The race for the committee from the Fifth District is stacked with Etowah County (Gadsden) candidates, with seven of the 16 in the race from that county. Only two—Byrd and Jim Lovelace of Dadeville—are from the southern section of the district.

FIFTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

Voters residing in Cleburne, Chambers, Cherokee, DeKalb, Etowah, Marshall, Randolph and Tallapoosa counties must elect eight of the candidates listed below. We suggest that voters clip this table for use at the polls.

Lovelace is one of four members of the present committee seeking reelection, and all four are Loyalists. In addition to Lovelace the incumbent candidate are Y. G. Allen and Hobdy D. Rains of Gadsden and Cecil G. Brown of Roanoke.

Most of the candidates running cited the issue of "party discipline" on their support of the oath.

George E. Cox, Boaz automobile dealer, in pointing out the necessity of discipline, said he too "resented the treatment we have received from some Northern Democrats but it is a family matter to be worked out in the family."

Al Fox, a staff member of the Gadsden Times, in support of the oath said "you can't win by running away from fight."

Millard Fuller of Cusseta, a University Law School student, said he favored the oath because he would the "recurrence of the fiasco of 1948 when the people of Alabama were denied the right to vote for the President of the United States."

H. A. (Doc) Houze of Gadsden said he "wholeheartedly endorsed" the oath because it will "eventually put the Republican Party, Dixiecrats and the racial agitators out of the federal government."

Lovelace, seeking his third term on the committee, said he believed "there must be party discipline for we cannot trust our leadership to men and women who desert the party when they think it is the popular or expedient thing to do."

McKay sees 9000 chances of Butler 'boot'

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 13 — Alabama's Democratic National Committeeman Charles W. McKay Jr. said Saturday he believes "South-hating" Paul Butler can be replaced as the party's national chairman.

McKay, who long has been after Butler's political scalp, predicted he would be ousted at the February meeting of the committee Feb. 27-28 in Washington.

TAYLOR

But McKay, Sylacauga attorney and former legislator, declined to name a prospective candidate being groomed to run against Butler and a man McKay is convinced can win hands down.

McKAY WITHHELD the "prospective candidate's name. But he did say that "this man lives outside the South and has strong backing from national committee members, and other party stalwarts in the East and Middle West as well as in other sections."

"There's no question but that Butler can be replaced if we can get two things," declared McKay.

McKAY

For strategy purposes, McKay would not elaborate further than to say:

"Butler will be given the boot if we can get one of several persons who are reasonable men and who would be willing to accept the chairmanship, or who would be willing to be drafted for this important post.

"And if the move to replace Butler comes from outside the South."

McKay was quick to add that "the movement most certainly is expected to come from strong forces outside the South."

"Ill-timed" resolution

McKAY BRANDED as "ill-timed and ill-worded" a resolution praising Butler for his "forthright" utterances on civil rights, adopted recently by the national committee over protests of Southern members.

"This resolution gave a false impression of the strength of Paul Butler on the committee," said McKay: "That resolution was calculated to do three things:

"1. Embarrass the South.

"2. Put all committee members from the North and West in such a position as to praise Butler for his statements on civil rights and his support of the U. S. Supreme Court decisions on integration.

"3. It was written by a Pacific Coast group on the committee to curry favor with Butler in an attempt to lure the 1960 Democratic National Convention to a Pacific Coast city. (Both San Francisco and Los Angeles are seeking the convention.)

ENGLEHARDT GIVEN MAYHALL'S BACKING

JASPER (AP) — Circuit Judge Roy Mayhall Friday night said he is supporting State Sen. Sam Engelhardt to replace him as State Democratic Chairman.

Mayhall's statement indicates a political fight for control of the new Alabama Democratic Executive Committee may be in the offing when the group holds its organizational meeting in January.

Mayhall's statement followed one issued by three states rights members of the newly elected committee, which was issued at Mobile Friday.

Mayhall is a leader of the party's loyalist members.

He said he prefers to see someone elected chairman who favor's the party's loyalty oath, but added: "I do not think this can be done."

Mayhall said "it's my information that Sam Engelhardt favors staying in the Demoratic party and that he does not favor forming a third party."

The statement issued by the three states righters at Mobile said Engelhardt is permitting his name to be used as a candidate for the committee chairmanship contrary to agreement reached at a Sept. 3 caucus at Montgomery.

At that time, 39 states rights members of the committee pledged themselves to repeal the Democratic party loyalty oath and to support Frank Mizell of Montgomery for the chairmanship.

Mayhall said Friday night that "I was not invited to the caucus in Montgomery. I would feel free to support anyone I choose for chairman of the state committee."

Sen. Engelhardt Friday night branded as "just politics" charges that he had broken his word in a earlier pledge to support Mizell as chairman.

He still declined to confirm or deny that he was actively seeking the chairmanship of the committee.

Engelhardt emphasized that his position in opposition to the loyalty oath had not changed.

"If the motion to repeal the loyalty oath gets only one vote that will be mine," he said.

The charge was made by three new members from the Third Congressional District — S. Foy Williams and Dan R. Morgan of Dothan and W. H. Garner of Union Springs.

The move to elect Engelhardt developed after it appeared Mizell was a sure choice. The Montgomery attorney was one of 39 members elected to the 72-seat committee last May and June pledged to repeal the controversial loyalty oath.

In September these 39 men, representing a majority of the committee, held a caucus here at which time they renewed their pledge to repeal the loyalty oath and also agreed to support Mizell for chairman.

Engelhardt was one of the members elected on an anti-oath pledge; he was also one of the members who pledged himself to support Mizell for chairman.

It was this apparent change of heart by Engelhardt which aroused the ire of Garner, Williams and Morgan.

"Mr. Sam Engelhardt, also an elected member of the committee from the Third District, participated in the caucus with us and entered into its agreement," the statement by the three members noted. "We never entertained any doubt that his honor would bind him to abide by the action of the caucus."

"We were surprised, therefore, when it became known to us that Mr. Engelhardt was allowing his name to be used privately and publicly as a candidate for the chairmanship in direct contravention of specific engagements entered into by caucus.

"Surprise became astonishment and dismay when we learned that the Hon. Roy Mayhall, arch defender of the so-called loyalty oath, who fought us bitterly in the election, was actively supporting the candidacy of Mr. Engelhardt for the committee chairmanship.

"To us this can only mean one thing. It is that advocates of the gag rule have not given up, that they are attempting to nullify the votes of a majority of Alabama Democrats who thought they had thrown off the yoke of northern radicals. If the Mayhall followers can break the caucus agreement in one respect, they may well succeed in breaking it in all respects. The alienation of Mr. Engelhardt from his agreement is merely the first step in an attempt to regain gag rule over the Alabama Democrary."

NO SIGNS OF DIXIECRAT REBELLION AT NINE-STATE DEMOCRATIC MEETING

By S. L. LATIMER JR.
Editor, The Columbia State
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

COLUMBIA, S.C., Aug. 15.— The nine-state meeting of Democratic leaders held in Columbia this week was strictly a loyalist gathering, without the slightest suggestion of Southern deflection, though Hugh Clayton, Mississippi committeeman, one of the arrangers of the confab (along with Chairman Thomas H. Pope of South Carolina), said the election of a Republican congressman in North Carolina and another in Florida, plus the fact that several states voted GOP in 1952 and 1956, have made it clear that the South no longer can be taken for granted.

S. L. Latimer

Mr. Clayton, spokesman at a press conference following the executive session, said no resolutions of any kind were passed but the group had proceeded in a spirit of unity determined to make the party strong. He gave as the two prime concerns of the gathering, the following:

1. To make contact with voters, to make them more conscious of the Democratic Party, and to get the program of the party over. (He declared the Democratic Party has always been concerned about the South and the South has prospered under the Democrats, but not so under the Republicans); and

2. To solicit funds.

In keeping with these purposes, the group talked about how to organize and sell the Democratic Party better in the South and how to get the money to do this job. And it was agreed that those Southern states without permanent Democratic headquarters ought to have them. Four already have.

Signs of a Dixiecrat rebellion were conspicuous by their absence. As Mr. Clayton put it:

"The presence of Sam Wilhite (regional representative of the national committee) should be enough to establish that this was not a split party meeting."

Each of the nine states in the region was accounted for when the roll was called, but three—Georgia (Mrs. Edna D. Kendrick, committeewoman), Florida (Mrs. Christine Maxwell, proxy for the committeewoman) and Virginia (G. Fred Switzer, committeeman) had only one representative here.

SOUTH CAROLINA

The Week in South Carolina

State revenues for July—the first month of the new fiscal year—were up nearly half a million dollars over the same month last year. Collections (1958) amounted to $13,545,576. In view of an anticipated deficit, this increase in collections was hailed by state officials as especially good news. . . . South Carolina's cotton crop, according to Clifford Sims, agricultural statistician, is the smallest since 1871. The forecast is for only 260,000 standard bales. Once the crop ran 800,000. . . . Traffic deaths in this state this year are now more than 100 under those for the some period in 1957. . . . Thursday was visitors day for the South Carolina Air National Guard at Travis Field, Savannah. Maj. Gen. James C. Dozier, state adjutant general, and other South Carolina dignitaries were in attendance. . . . For the first time in this state's history there is a woman sheriff, Mrs. Almyra Hursey Kirkley of Chesterfield County, having been appointed to fill out the unexpired term of her late husband.

Refugee Romance

A Hungarian boy and a Hungarian girl, born and reared in the same little town, and sweethearts from childhood, fled their native country at the time of the revolt in 1956. They were to meet in Austria but their plans didn't work out. Neither could find out where the other was but both continued to yearn and to search. Finally he signed up in Europe with the United States Army under the Lodge Act and was sent to Fort Jackson. Here he met a fellow refugee who happened to know that an uncle of his girl was living near Akron, Ohio. The young soldier lost no time in getting off a letter to see if the uncle knew where his lost love was and, lo and behold, when the answer came it was not from the uncle but from her! She, too, had made her way to America. She came here and this week they became Pvt. and Mrs. Matyas Krim as the military post and a good part of Columbia joined in making their wedding a gala affair.

Dixie Discontented With Sen. Johnson

WASHINGTON—Lyndon Johnson is more interested in the Democratic Party than he is the country as a whole," a Southern member of Congress caustically commented the other day as the 85th session moved toward adjournment. This remark typified a growing irritation among Southerners with Johnson's leadership in the Senate.

The tall, suave Texan has done a masterful job in keeping his party from splitting wide open. But some of the Southerners recently thought he was more or less trying to sell them down the river in the interests of party harmony.

A master of compromise, Johnson was able last year to avert a party split when he helped to pass a civil rights bill and thus pleased the Northern liberals, but helped to weaken it and thereby pacified Southern conservatives.

However, some of these still blame Johnson for a civil rights bill passing. If Johnson had not supported it, they argued, the Southerners would have blocked the bill last year.

The Dixie faction was irritated this year when they had a states' rights bill ready for consideration but Johnson stalled it as long as he could. It was similar to a bill already passed by a thumping majority in the House to curb the powers of the Supreme Court. And Southerners figured they had the votes to pass it in the Senate if they could get the bill called up under favorable circumstances.

The last thing Johnson wanted, however, was an all-out, name-calling fight between the Northern and Southern wings of the Democratic Party in the closing days of the session and in a congressional election year.

Dixie forces figured they could achieve one of two things by having the states' rights bill called up soon enough before adjournment. They could either succeed in passing the bill they want very much or they could force Northern liberals into a filibuster. If that happened the Northerners would be in a poorer position next year in trying to change Senate rules to make the filibuster impossible.

But with time running out and the Senate droning on night and day on other bills, the Southerners were frustrated. Each day the session moved toward adjournment chances of getting the states' rights bill passed faded even if it could be called up.

Many observers believe Johnson not only is striving to hold the party together but that he has ambitions to be president.

Despite their irritation with Johnson, however, the Southerners really wouldn't want to swap him for someone else as majority leader. They might get some Northern or Western liberal less sympathetic to Southern conservative views than Johnson.

PLEADS WITH PARTY CHIEFS

Smathers Fears Race Issue Will Wreck Democrat Hopes

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP)—Sen. George Smathers (D-Fla) Saturday issued an "appeal to reason" to Democratic party leadership concerning the integration question, "a dark cloud floating on our bright horizon."

He told Young Democrats of the Southeast:

"If reason and moderation cannot bring about accord in the cold war between integration and segregation — if the future does indeed belong to the extremists—then the Democratic party as we know it, in my judgment, is doomed—and so are those who are its servants."

The occasion of the speech by Smathers, chairman of the Senate Democratic campaign committe, was the close of a two-day planning conference by Young Democrats club leaders of 12 Southeastern states.

Smathers confidently predicted sweeping Democratic victories at the polls this fall, saying, "we are going to increase our majority in the United States Senate by at least 10, and we will increase the Democratic majority in the house by close to 60."

SEES '60 TROUBLE

He said he did not anticipate that the integration issue would affect elections in November, but, he cautioned, "it could blot out the sunshine in 1959 and it could ruin our great chances for success in 1960"

The Florida senator pointed out that the racial issue "has been a problem within our party since the days of Jefferson and Jackson."

Smathers continued, "on the threshold of great victories as we Democrats now are, this is a time when our party needs peacemakers, not agitators."

Smathers said some Democrats in the North are talking about the party without the South. This would mean for the South, he said, "the futility of a third party, and when that course is followed we will see the end of Southern influence and power in the Congress and in the nation."

URGES UNITY

He said: "I would, therefore, like to suggest to the leaders of our party on the state level as well as on the national level, that they devote their talents and their energies to unifying our party and binding up its wounds, rather than allowing it to further divide itself.

"I would suggest to them that they remember they are supposed to represent all the Democrats from every area of the United States, and that a disservice results to our party when any leader forgets that he represents the whole of the party and begins to advocate the banishment of one segment in one area of the country in order to gain favor and encourage the die-hards in another area."

Smathers warned the Young Democrats of the South:

"This issue of so-called civil rights will have to be faced fully and fairly when we go into our national convention in 1960. A platform plank will have to be arrived at, and let us hope and pray that those men and women who serve on that platform committee will be first of all great Americans, and second, great Democrats who remember that their responsibility is to keep our party together, active and strong in all sections of our country."

BUTLER IS SCORED BY SOUTHERNERS

'Family Row' on Civil Rights Grows — Smathers Asks Unity, Hits 'Agitators'

By ALLEN DRURY
Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20—A Democratic "family row" over civil rights grew today. It was inflamed by a sharp suggestion from the party's national chairman that Southerners might have to "take political asylum wherever they can find it" if they did not like the party's stand on racial integration.

Paul M. Butler said on a television program over the weekend that "those in the South who are not deeply dedicated to the philosophies of the Democratic party will have to go their own way."

Mr. Butler said that if the Southerners did not want to go along on the racial issue and the whole area of human rights, they would have to find asylum either in the Republican party or a third party.

His remarks brought tart comments from Southerners, and one of them, Senator George A. Smathers, Democrat of Florida, announced he would hold a press conference tomorrow, presumably to discuss the issue. The Senator, chairman of the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee also is expected to discuss the prospects of Democratic candidates for the Senate across the country.

Smathers Asks Unity

Senator Smathers said yesterday he thought the time had come when Mr. Butler "should start spending his time pointing up the unity of the Democratic Party rather than its divisions."

"What we need is unity, not dividers," he said. "What we need are peace-makers, not agitators."

Another Southern Democrat, Senator A. Willis Robertson of Virginia, said he thought is was "a little too early for the left-wingers to throw the South out of the party on the grounds that they can win without us and don't need our help."

He said a lot of things could happen in two years' time, "and the Biblical injunction still stands: 'Let not him who buckleth on his armor boast as he that putteth it off.'"

In still another Democratic squable, Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin sent a telegram of gratitude to the Senate Democratic Campaign Committee for its "substantial help." A group of New York liberals charged last week that the committee had given more aid to Southern Senatorial candidates than to liberals such as Mr. Proxmire.

Says No Aid Was Given

Earle Clements, executive director of the committee, said that no aid had been given to Southern Senators seeking reelection because none was faced with important opposition.

Senator Proxmire wired Mr. Clements that, "your assistance has come at a most critical phase of campaign and will be extremely helpful to me in offsetting mispresentation of my record which is being attempted through saturation radio, television and press advertising by my opponents."

The Republicans announced today that a state-wide telecast from New York City would be added by Vice President Richard M. Nixon to a campaign swing he will start tomorrow. The tour will include Middle Atlantic, New England and Upper Midwestern states.

Arthur S. Fleming, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare, announced that he would make a campaign speech in Cleveland on Oct. 29 and then visit Minnesota to campaign for Senator Edward J. Thye, Republican, who is seeking reelection.

Faubus Scores Action

Special to The New York Times.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 20—Gov. Orval E. Faubus declared today that "it's going to be difficult to even drive Southern Democrats out of the party."

He made the statement in reply to the suggestion by Mr. Butler that Mr. Faubus and other Southern segregationist leaders accept a strong civil rights plank or join the Republicans or a third party.

The Governor said he had turned down requests to lead a third party movement, He added:

"Let's wait and see whether Mr. Butler is just speaking for Mr. Butler or who he's speaking for."

He also deplored the national chairman's recent attack on Gov. Earl K. Long of Louisiana. This stemmed from the action of that state's Democratic central committee in voting to oust Camille F. Gravel Jr. as National Committeeman.

Democrats' rights stand triggers Dixie conniption

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Democrats from the North and South last week engaged in several skirmishes while preparing for a showdown on the party's civil rights position.

Paul Butler, national chairman of the party, declared that the South will have to "go along with a strong stand on civil rights, or else."

But Mrs. Leonard Thomas of Montgomery, Ala., Democratic committeewoman, quickly retaliated.

She said "the southern states and not Mr. Butler will control the 1960 Democratic National Convention."

STILL JOCKEYING for positions, Gov. Averell Harriman ripped open a two-day conference of Democrats from 22 southern and eastern states by stating:

"Two-thirds to three-quarters of the people of the world have colored skins. If only in recognition of the National security we crave, we must learn to accept all creeds, nationalities and races on an equal basis."

The regional conference here is for Democratic leaders to discuss campaign tactics and other general problems to be faced by the party at the coming 1960 convention.

In addition, would-be Presidential candidates are putting their best foot forward to gain as many supporters as possible.

SO FAR, only Butler and Harriman have made clear-cut stands for strong civil rights, making the issue paramount to the election of a Democrat as the next President.

Governor Harriman's strong stand for civil rights is being looked on as a bid for the nomination as the party's next Presidential candidate.

Also considered as prospects for the nomination are Gov. Robert Meyner of New Jersey and Sen. John Kennedy of Massachusetts.

SENATOR KENNEDY and Governor Meyner, however, only treated civil rights issues with a passing mention during their speechs at the sessions.

The Massachusetts senator asked "better race relations ...better homes in better neighbors . .and better health programs.

Governor Meyner said he believed the civil rights problems could be ironed out by enforcement of Federal law giving everybody the right to vote.

BUT BACK in Alabama, Mrs. Thomas bitterly declared that if the South "fails (in nominating a southerner for President in 1960—not a blind radical), the whole nation will suffer."

She also assailed Butler's stand that the South must string along with a strong civil rights stand "or else."

Hinting that the South will fight to ouster Butler, she declared that "we shall let Mr. Butler know the 'or else' means he, and not the southern states, will be seeking refuge."

"The southern states are planning constructively to save the Democratic party from men of Mr. Butler's radical thinking," she explained.

DEMOCRATIC

Truman Has No Worries About Southern Defectors

By LEE M. COHN
Star Staff Writer

Even Harry S. Truman's loyalty to the Democratic Party wears thin when stretched to cover all the South.

Defections from the old solid South would be good riddance, the former President told a press conference yesterday. And, he continued, Congress would serve the Nation better without some of its Southern Democratic stalwarts.

This was his only lapse from the frank partisanship he relishes. He used most of his bubbling energy to throw barbs at Republicans.

"Good for Country"

It might be good for the country" if Democrats such as Senators Byrd of Virginia and Eastland of Mississippi were dislodged from their seats of power, he said, adding that he could expand the list without half trying.

But there are good Southern Democrats, Mr. Truman said, naming as examples House Speaker Rayburn of Texas, Senate Majority Leader Johnson of Texas and Senator Russell of Georgia.

Squabbling over civil rights may pull some Southern States out of the Democratic Party, Mr. Truman admitted. "But we don't need them all; we'll keep the ones that count," he remarked jauntily.

None of the reporters could remember any other occasion when Mr. Truman has willingly tossed even a handful of votes to the opposition.

Scoffs at Third Party

He scoffed at talk of a really big third party movement in the South, noting that "they tried it once before and it didn't work" when he was elected President in 1948.

The main reason most of the South will stay Democratic, Mr. Truman said, is that "they hate to give up their seniority."

Southern Democrats — who rarely face serious opposition in re-election campaigns — are chairmen of many powerful congressional committees by virtue of their long serivce. If the Democrats lose control of Congress, these Southerners will lose their chairmanships.

It was with reference to this point that Mr. Truman made his comment about the beneficial effects of demoting Senators Byrd and Eastland. He often has clashed with them and other conservatives.

"Reconstruction" Fear

Aside from the seniority factor, Mr. Truman said, fear of "reconstruction" will keep most of the South Democratic.

"I don't think they will be foolish enough to invite an invasion" by Federal troops, he said, referring to the use of soldiers to quell school integration disturbances last year in Little Rock, Ark.

Dispatch of troops to Little Rock amounted to revival of the "reconstruction" era, Mr. Truman charged. He implied that the South will blame the Republicans, since the G. O. P. also was in power during the reconstruction period after the Civil War.

The former President emphasized that he believes in civil rights and equality. He denied a Republican charge that in 1948 he said he did not believe in civil rights but needed it as a political issue.

Turning to his main mission this campaign year—attacking Republicans — Mr. Truman again charged that "the Republicans put foreign policy into politics in 1952 when they surrendered in Korea." He was commenting on the current fuss about the proper role of foreign policy debate in a political campaign.

Mr. Truman labeled foreign policy the top campaign issue this year — though "it's a shame" to make it partisan. He listed economics and agriculture as other major issues.

He blamed the Republicans for widespread failures of small business, and summarized his views on other issues by declaring that "they've bungled everything they've undertaken."

The Democrats, he predicted, will win "a great increase" in their Senate and House majorities, but he declined to make a detailed election forecast. He warned again against the dangers of "Deweyitis" — overconfidence—in his party.

Declines to Name Choice

Mr. Truman said "a dozen or so" Democrats would make good Presidents, but declined to name a choice for 1960.

"I'm not a candidate for anything," he chuckled, "I'm just having the best time in the world puncturing stuffed shirts."

The 74-year-old former President looked fit and acted jolly. He reveled in the homecoming flavor of the press conference, where he happily greeted newsmen remembered from his White House days.

After ending the press conference with the comment that "you've pumped the well dry," he chatted amiably with the reporters. "How are those grandchildren of yours?" he asked one of them.

Mr. Truman, who arrived here Friday noon with Mrs. Truman, attended a private reception and luncheon with former members of his staff after the press conference.

Truman Blasts Ike On Rights

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — Two Republican spokesmen said Saturday that former President Truman was guilty of recklessness and irresponsibility in campaign debate on the civil rights issue.

The attacks came from Sen. Clifford P. Case (R-N.J.) and Val Washington, a minister who is director for the GOP National committee.

Their statements reflected increased attention being given to attempts to exploit Negro votes as the Congressional election campaign approached its climax.

Case's statement was a reply to Truman's Thursday night Boston speech charging President Eisenhower with failure to give leadership needed to safeguard civil rights. The former President attributed violence and bombing to that failure.

CALLS IT UNWORTHY

The New Jersey Senator said Truman's "attempt to blame the President personally for bombings outrages of recent months is shocking and unworthy of him."

"Even a political campaign cannot excuse recklessness in this sensitive area," Case said.

He recited moves taken by the Eisenhower administration in the field of civil rights and said the first major civil rights law in 75 years was enacted after "20 years of Democratic inaction."

Washington said Truman had given the Negro a "slap in the face" by saying that Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas, leader of the southern fight against school integration, and other southerners should not be thrown out of the Democratic party.

He reminded that the former President had said a week ago that it might be good for the country if some southern Democrats in Congress were deprived of committee chairmanships.

DISPLACE THEM

"The way to dislodge them, of course, is to elect a Republican Congress so that the Democrat racists no longer would be in charge of the all-important committees," Washington said.

He noted that Truman had praised Speaker Sam Rayburn (Tex.), Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex.) and Sen. Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.)

Washington said Rayburn never voted for a civil rights bill and that Johnson had not done so until 1957. He described Russell as "perhaps the most dangerous man in the United States Senate as far as Negro rights are involved."

He said both Truman and Democratic national chairman Paul M. Butler had taken an "on-again-off-again" attitude toward "southern segregationists. . . in control of the Democrat party."

Southern Dems Lose Civil Rights Tests

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON—The Southern wing of the Democratic party went down in defeat on a series of civil rights tests, Saturday, on the last day of a three-day meeting of the National Democratic party.

The final test came when the body adopted by a 84-17 vote a strong resolution praising the work of Chairman Paul Butler, thus retaining him as head of the National Democratic Committee. The resolution was passed after the South had been defeated on a motion to delete all references of civil rights contained in the statement.

The lost motion offered by Camille F. Gravel, National Committeeman from Louisiana, would have removed from the resolutions the phrase which praised Butler for supporting all provisions contained in the Democratic platform "including his forthright utterances on civil rights, and the determinaton of the Democratic party that the provisions of the Constitution of the United States as interpreted by the Supreme Court shall be enforced and made effective."

THE AMENDMENT was offered by the Louisianian after the body had turned down by a 29-72 vote a motion to send the resolution back to the Resolutions Committee.

The Butler resolution was presented by Mrs. Georgia N. Gray of Kansas on behalf of herself and Leo C. Graybill of Montana.

Opposing the civil rights clause in the amendment was Byron Skelton of Texas who charged the Democratic party with cutting itself to pieces on civil rights. He expressed fondness for Paul Butler as a good Christian gentleman, but "we can't win a victory by playing one group against the other." He urged the group to "reason together. This is an issue which tries men's soul. If we put these words in this resolution we will split the party" wide open.

Gov. A. B. Chandler of Kentucky claimed that the civil rights reference was ill-timed. He pleaded with the party to "take time" on this issue and not try to ram it down the throats of their Southern brethren.

Contending that the party should maintain its strong stand on civil rights as previously expressed by Butler, Paul Ziffren of California said the question of principle and honor is at stake. We should not be asked to "be tolerant with dishonor." The great failure of the Republican party, he continued, is its refusal to take an honest and vigorous stand on this issue. This is a problem which we must face and "we cannot pretend that it does nto exist."

GERALD W. HEANEY of Minnesota reminded his Southern colleagues that this is a national issue and not aimed at any specific section of the country.

Orlando Antonsanti invoked laughter when he informed the group that "we of the deep south (Puerto Rico) express approval of the civil rights reference."

The voice of California, speaking through Paul Zifferen, added commendation to the civil rights reference to the Butler resolution. Adding that, through Butler's leadership, the Republicans lost California.

The most vigorous protest to this resolution came from Thomas H. Pope of South Carolina, who admitted that anything he said would not stop passage of this resolution, but he could not sit in a meeting like that and not make his position known. "I cannot sell my soul for something which I absolutely do not believe in," he emphasized. "The South is going to be punished here today, but don't try to make the South walk its last mile." He said he was not a member of the Citizens' Council, the Ku Klux Klan, or the NAACP, but he believes in the sovereignty of the States, and the party need not think the South is going to "take what you dish out and like it."

GRAVEL OFFERED the anti-civil rights amendment immediately after he had defeated the segregationalist group in an effort to maintain his position as Louisiana Committeeman.

The controversary over the acceptance of his credentials arose after the Democratic State Central Committee asked that he be removed from this position because of his so-called "moderate" stand on civil rights. It further recommended the appointment of Segregationalist Jett M. Talbot to fill the position for 30 days until the Central Committee could elect a committeeman in the 1959 primary. The motion to unseat Gravel was defeated by a 90 to 15 vote.

The credentials of five new committee members were accepted without protest, including that of Mrs. Vel Phillips of Wisconsin, the only Negro committee member. The other new committeewomen were Senator Lucinda Millin of the Virgin Islands, and Mrs. Beatrice Holt Rosenthal of Connecticut and Committeemen John B. Hynes of Massachusetts and John D. Larkin of North Carolina.

Integration Splits Democratic Party

WASHINGTON—Events point unmistakably, I think, to a 1960 North-South split in the Democratic Party which will make the Dixiecrat movement of 1948 look minor league. The ongoing breach in Democratic ranks is now visible and could have larger consequences in 1960 than the Strom Thurmond third party did 10 years ago when it took four Southern states from President Truman and nearly cost him the election.

There are two reasons why a Southern States' Rights Party can be far more formidable and more hurtful to the Democrats nationally than it was in 1948:

1. The Southern walk-out in the 1948 Democratic convention sprang from a plank in the platform which promised too much in the field of civil rights.

This time the forces which are making for a Southern walk-out spring, not from words, not from promises in the platform, but from live events; they spring from the reality of the Supreme Court decision making public school segregation unconstitutional and from the events which have flowed from it. The incentive for a Southern third party is greater today than in '48 and it will therefore be a much more powerful third party.

2. In 1948 many Northern Democrats wanted to compromise the civil rights dispute and President Truman himself opposed the stronger civil rights plank. In consequence the Thurmond third party had only limited success.

This time there is no inclination and no prospect of compromise on either side. Each side believes it must take an uncompromising position in order to survive politically.

That's the nub of it and it seems to me that the Northern Democrats face this dilemma: They know that they may well lose the presidency in 1960 because of a Southern third party, but they also know that they haven't a chance of winning the presidency in 1960 unless they take a stand on civil rights which will compel the Southerners to start a third party.

In other words, the Democratic Party cannot win the presidency without a ticket and a platform which alienates the South and, unlike 1948, this time they may not be able to win because the alienation of the South will be so complete.

This is why a North-South split in the Democratic Party now seems as inevitable as the nomination of Richard Nixon by the Republicans.

What is significant now is that the crevices in the Democratic ranks which will almost certainly lead to the 1960 split are already breaking open.

Democrats Can Find Compromise On Civil Rights, Rayburn Believes

By CLAUDE SITTON

(Copyright 1958, The New York Times Co.)

JACKSON, Miss.—House Speaker Sam Rayburn said Thursday that he thought Democrats could reach a compromise on civil rights in the 1960 national convention that would be acceptable to both North and South.

The Texas Democrat discounted the possibility that disgruntled Southerners would initiate a third party movement. But he flatly refused to discuss the issue that might touch one off—school desegregation.

Rayburn arrived here Thursday by plane for a speech Thursday night to a $20-a-plate Democrats' dinner.

"I'm not at this time going to talk about integration," he told reporters in the mansion of Gov. J. P. Coleman. "I don't think it would be helpful."

Rayburn questioned the action of the Louisiana Democratic Central Committee in voting Wednesday to oust Camille F. Gravel Jr. as national committeeman.

"I've always thought that a national committeeman or committee woman was elected for four years," he commented.

He attacked what he termed the "arms akimbo" foreign policy of the Eisenhower administration, declaring that "the people of the world don't want a big brother."

Discussing the crisis over Quemoy and Matsu, he said that during the last two weeks Secretary of State Dulles "has been on two sides of that question."

He added that the secretary had first indicated that the United States might not back Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek in defending the tiny offshore islands near the Chinese mainland but had reversed his field after the Nationalist Chinese leader protested.

"Whether they're going to stay with Chiang on Formosa or with him on Quemoy and Matsu at the hazard of a shooting war, I don't know," Rayburn remarked.

The speaker also said he foresaw an attempt in the next session of Congress to enact legislation to curb the powers of the Supreme Court, which has angered many Southerners with its desegregation decisions. He said that it was "too early" to speculate on who would be the Democratic presidential nominee in 1960.

But he predicted that the Democrats would add to their strength in both the House and Senate in next month's general election.

"The people think that this administration has failed as far as its foreign and domestic policies are concerned," he declared. He also said that the recent recession had "affected the pocketbooks of many" who would oppose Republican candidates as a result.

Negroes Asked To Vote Against Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP)—Val Washington, Minorities Director of the Republican National Committee, said Saturday a Democratic Congress has nothing to offer Negro voters.

Washington, a Negro, said in a statement that a vote for a Democratic candidate for the Senate and House in the coming election is a vote to return segregationist Southern Democrats to positions of power as committee chairmen.

Noting that Southern Democrats hold the chairmanships of eight important Senate committees and 13 of 19 House committees, the committee official said:

"This Southern domination of a Democrat Congress means that Negro voters are voting against themselves and their vital interests when they case a vote for any Democrat congressman or senator.

"Because of the seniority rule, if Negroes help elect a Democrat—even in the North—they are helping the Southern Democrats keep a stranglehold on committees which control what happens in Congress."

Washington said if Republicans control the next Congress it will make small potatoes of such Southern Democratic senators as Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, James O. Eastland of Mississippi, Richard Russell and Herman Tlamadge of Georgia and what he called their "wrecking crews."

Ark. Official Believes South Should Go Along with Party

Attorney General Also Hits High Court

(The Times-Picayune Capital Bureau)

BATON ROUGE, La. — The attorney general of Arkansas said here Thursday that if the South dropped from the Democratic party "we would have no other place to go."

Bruce Bennett made the observation in a press conference in the office of Louisiana Attorney General Jack P. F. Gremillion. Earlier, he made a speech to the Louisiana Kiwanis Club.

"The South now has control of 12 of the 17 chairmanships in the national senate," said Bennett—in rejecting the idea of a third party for the South.

In his speech to the Kiwanis Club Bennett said the National Democratic and Republican parties apparently were misinterpreting the recent liberal Democratic action sweep as an endorsement of integration.

NATIONAL ELECTION

"The national election of this month," he said, "I believe, was not so much a vote in favor of Democratic candidates as it was against the national Republican party, as exemplified by the U.S. Supreme Court."

He interpreted election of Nelson Rockefeller in New York State over Averill Harriman as a revolt against Harriman's contemptuous quest for votes" among the Negroes.

"In the recent elections in Alabama and Tennessee, the sole outstanding issue in the governor's races was who was the most avowed segregationist," he said.

He noted that Arkansas Rep. Brooks Hays, regarded as a moderate on segregation, was toppled from his job recently by a segregation write-in candidate.

Bennett said any person now in or seeking public office should be able to recognize these facts of life. "You go to Chicago or New York, and the cab drivers, the John Does, feel the same as we do."

COURT DECISIONS

He said the recent elections demonstrated "the people of America" have become "sick" of such supreme court decisions as follows:

1 — Permits any communist to obtain a passport to any country in the world.

2 — Opened the FBI files to "any criminal being prosecuted under the laws of these United States."

3 — "Gagged and oppressed" the public officials of America with reference to obtaining confessions.

Bennett said the trouble in Little Rock last year over integration at Central High school is "directly traceable to the Russian Kremlin."

The battle, he said, was not so much integration versus segregation, as Americanism versus Communism. He said this conclusion had been reached after "a research into the aims of the Communist party."

Faubus Says He Will Stay With Party

CRESTVIEW, Fla., Nov. 9 (UPI) — Arkansas Gov. Orval Faubus yesterday told 2000 persons at a "dollar" picnic that failed to live up to its billing as a big political rally that "I won't get out of the Democratic Party unless I'm kicked out."

U. S. Rep. Frank W. Boykin of Mobile introduced Faubus and touted him for president, as the Democratic Party candidate in 1960. Boykin and the sponsor of the event, U. S. Rep. Robert Sikes (D., Fla.) of Crestview, were the only congressmen who attended.

Former Florida Gov. Millard Caldwell was there, along with State Rep. Thomas Beasley, speaker of the state House, and State Sen. Newman C. Brackin, but the rally was most notable for those missing.

Sikes had balleyhooed the picnic as a giant political rally, predicting 30,000 persons would attend, including a host of Southern congressmen and governors.

Sikes invited every Southern congressman, senator and governor, but only Boykin showed up to hear Faubus, among the out of state invited guests.

Faubus made lengthy statements about the dangers of losing states' rights and his determination to maintain segregated schools in the face of Federal pressure to integrate schools.

We'd Like To See Them Go

The threat of another Dixiecrat split from the Democratic Party has been sounded by Louisiana's Sen. Russell B. Long.

Louisiana segregationists are unhappy over the blunt refusal of Democratic National Chairman Paul Butler to remove Camile Gravel Jr., as that state's member of the Democratic National Committee.

They voted to oust Gravel because he expressed approval of the 1956 Democratic civil rights plank and uttered the heresay that he felt segregation was morally wrong.

Arkansas' Gov. Orval Faubus has joined the third party blusterers, no doubt envisioning himself as standard bearer of the rebellion.

Mutterings have also come from that traditional hot bed of sedition, South Carolina.

FRANKLY, WE would like to see these malcontents take a walk at the 1960 Democratic National Convention as they did in the 1948 and never come back.

Too long, have they been the stinking albatross about the neck of a party dedicated to look forward, not backward, in the areas of civil rights, human welfare and economic progress.

And too long have they held a stranglehold on liberal legislation by their ascendancy to a preponderance of Congressional chairmanships gained through an archaic seniority system.

* * *

WE HAPPILY would bid these unreconstructed Confederates a farewell. They certainly will not be missed.

That was proved over and over again by the late Franklin D Roosevelt, who didn't need the electoral votes of a single Southern state to win.

More importantly, that political fact of life was made even clearer ten years ago when courageous Harry Truman brushed aside the bitter opposition of Alabama, South Carolina, Louisiana and Mississippi to win anyway.

BUT SOUTH WILL STAY

Truman Sees Strong Rights Program For Demos In '60

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman said Friday he believed the Democratic party will have a strong civil rights plank in its 1960 platform and that the South will not run out of the party.

However, he said he did not agree with Democratic National Chairman Paul Butler who said recently the South could either accept a strong plank on the civil rights issue or get out of the party.

"I think the civil rights plank we had in 1956 was a good one," said Truman. "The South stayed with it and it will again. It will be a strong plank, you can be sure of that."

But, he added, "I'm not reading anyone out of the Democratic party."

Patterson To Fight For States' Rights

Foes Accused Of Failing To Help Alabama

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 2 (UPI) — Gov.-elect John Patterson denounced opposition to him in his support of Sam Englehardt for chairman of the state Democratic Executive Committee as the "same political enemies that bitterly opposed him and attempted to smear him in his race for governor."

"These same people," said Mr. Patterson, "have never come forward and offered any help in my fight against the NAACP, the Civil Rights Commission, the abuses of the present administration, or anything else that I have tried to do for the people during my term as attorney general."

Mr. Patterson said his political enemies are seeking to prevent him from "having the voice in party matters" that he needs to carry out the platform "which the people endorsed" in electing him governor. He said the opposition to Engelhardt "is an organized effort by my political enemies to cripple my administration."

The young Governor-elect reaffirmed his determination to "carry on the fight for honest government, for segregation of the races and against the invasion of states rights by the Federal government."

"To carry on this momentous task in the years that lie ahead," added Mr. Patterson, "give me the tools that I need and I will do the job."

DEMOCRATIC

In interests of state—

Anti-loyalists call for loyalty

By FRED TAYLOR, News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Dec. 27—The Engelhardt-Mizell fight for chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee crackled with new developments Saturday, as State Highway Director-designate Sam Engelhardt Jr., won more support.

John F. Britton, Montgomery attorney and veteran committee member, who pointed out he had voted against the loyalty oath when it was first adopted in 1951, called on his fellow Montgomery attorney, Frank Mizell Jr., to release members pledged to him for chairman.

"I call on Mr. Mizell now to prove that his interest is with—not against—the people of Alabama," said Britton. "I call on him to release anti-loyalty oath members who he considers bound to him so that they may vote their convictions in an orderly and democratic fashion when the committee meets Jan. 19 to select a chairman."

THIS REQUEST came from Britton as he endorsed Engelhardt for chairman and declared, "I think it is time, in the interest of our state and the mutual fight against our enemies from without, that we unite behind our governor-elect, John Patterson, and Sam Engelhardt, his choice for committee chairman. If we are divided, we are beaten, and there will be no victors in Alabama or the South."

In another development, Joe S. Elliott, of Decatur, loyalist member of the state committee and one of the Eighth District ticket leaders in the Democratic primary last Spring, endorsed Engelhardt for chairman "because I know him personally to be a man of great courage and integrity. I believe he possesses the ability and necessary qualifications to keep the Democratic Party strong and secure within our state."

'Stay in party'

"SAM ENGELHARDT believes that we should stay in the Democratic Party and solve our problems within the party," added Elliott, newcomer to the committee. "Hon. John Patterson, governor-elect, has voiced his opinion that Sam Engelhardt would be the best man for our party chairman.

"The voice of the people spoke when we elected John Patterson governor and we should cooperate with him and follow his leadership and direction."

Helped plan walkout

BRITTON pointed out that Mizell was a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee which helped plan the walkout of Alabama delegates from the 1948 Democratic National Convention at Philadelphia and which adopted a resolution helping pave the way for the walkout, and asked:

"Will he favor such a course at the next convention?"

Mizell claims edge

Anti-loyalists hold a 39 to 33 margin on the 72-committee. And Mizell claims that a majority of the incoming party governing body members pledged to support him at a caucus held at Montgomery Sept. 3.

Mizell declared that Patterson's endorsement of Engelhardt would not change the outcome of the fight for the committee chairmanship and "would not make Quislings" of those pledged to back Mizell.

Patterson asserted that opposition to Engelhardt "is being engineered mainly by the same political enemies that bitterly opposed me and attempted to smear me in my race for governor."

Mizell declared he has fought actively "for states' rights, segregation, white supremacy and repeal of the obnoxious loyalty oath for the past eight of 10 years."

Britton's statement

Britton pointed out in his statement that Alabama voters had rejected the loyalty oath and, in so doing, "indicated clearly the course for our elected officials to follow."

He also pointed out that the voters, in the same elections, "chose in John Patterson the man they wanted in the position of leadership for the next four years in our state."

"Now we have developing before the surely startled eyes of these same voters a factional fight in which certain groups are trying to wrest from the governor-elect the mandate handed him by the voters only a few months ago," added Britton.

"We have the further confusing spectacle of both factions aligned solidly against the loyalty oath.

"This should bring the issues into clear focus:

Mizell berated

"WILL THE PARTY leadership in Alabama be delivered into the hands of the man elected by the people statewide, or into the hands of a small group of dissidents who have sought through a rump session of anti-loyalty oath committeemen to wrest control before all issues could be considered?

"The Hon. Frank Mizell, who claims to have won the pledges of a majority of the committeemen in his race for chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, has failed to pledge to the people of this state that, if elected to the post he seeks, he will use the power of that position to protect the vital interests of this state.

"It should be clear to all that we cannot win a fight against left-wing elements in the National Democratic Party by removing ourselves from the fight as soon as the battle is joined. Only by holding our advantages in the party—and by strong, united action—can we hope to make our presence felt during the difficult years looming before us."

Raps radicals

BRITTON'S statement added:

"Wild-eyed radicals within the Democratic Party are hoping we in the South will follow such a course, which would lead us unerringly down the path of economic self-destruction.

"For years, the integrationist states of the North and East have looked on with alarm while industry has invested its money and future in the Southland. More recently, they have looked with envy on the enormous military spending program represented at Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Brookley Field in Mobile, Maxwell Air University in Montgomery and Hayes Aircraft Corp. in Birmingham, to say nothing of Fort McClellan, Fort Rucker and the other military installations in Alabama.

"Let us realize that now we have none of these things by God-given right, and that the fight to keep them is growing more grim by the hour."

Committee posts vital

HE ASSERTED that "our one advantage — which the North would delight in seeing us dissipate through internal fights—is the vital chairmanships our congressmen and senators hold on committees in their respective houses. Give our enemies an excuse to read us out of the Democratic Party and these positions of leadership would go out with us.

"Then would come the vultures who seek our demise," said Britton. "With them would go all, or a large part, of the $600 mililon of military spending we now enjoy annually in our state. The result would be economic devastation such as we have not seen since Reconstruction Days."

Cites tradition

BRITTON declared that "by tradition and without exception the governor of Alabama elected by the people, has been head of the Democratic Party in the state.

"A rump session, such as was called by Mr. Mizell last September, was also without precedent, and John Patterson was not consulted before the 'Mizell loyalty oath' was extracted from at least a number of those present," asserted Britton.

"It must be a point of some bewilderment to voters who elected an anti-oath delegation to see these same men being asked to bind themselves to another—and equally vicious—personal loyalty oath."

GOV. COLLINS HITS 'COERCION' OF SOUTH

June 1 58

Special to The New York Times.

RALEIGH, N. C., Feb. 1—Gov. LeRoy Collins of Florida said here tonight that "reformers" should remove the "heavy hand of coercion" from the South and "permit us to resolve our sins of racial discrimination, such as they may be, by our own efforts in our own time."

New York N.Y.

He added that the South must accept universal brotherhood as "our Christian as well as our legal obligation" and move toward the solution of the racial problem when it is reasonably sound to do so."

The courts, he declared, should get out of the legislative business" in implementing the Constitution's Fourteenth Amendment and Congress should provide a "program of implementation developed and administered in each state."

He spoke at a Jefferson-Jackson dinner attended by about 650 North Carolina Democrats, who paid $50 a plate.

He pleaded for national "understanding about the segregation problem" and "acceptance of a sound states rights philosophy."

The Democratic party, he said, must stand for "a positive and dynamic brand" of states rights.

Concerning the party, he declared also that its members should spend the next two and a half years developing a new leader. Earlier, at a press conference, he predicted that a new leader would capture the White House in 1960.

Outpouring of Labor Votes Augurs Victory for Party in November, Boosts Influence of Unions

P. E 3

BUT SOUTH POSES THREAT

34d

By ARTHUR KROCK

WASHINGTON, June 7—Last Tuesday was a great day for the national Democratic party and for the political action committees of organized labor.

In California the law permits candidates to seek the nominations of both major parties, and registered party members may vote in either primary. Attorney General Brown, the Democratic aspirant for Governor, who had the indorsement of both his party committees and those of union labor, polled votes sufficiently in excess of those for the choice of the Republican organization, Senator Knowland, to invest his nomination with a victory psychology for the campaign that ends in November. And the political action committees of organized labor, aroused against Knowland by the Senator's advocacy of state "right-to-work" legislation, claimed and have received part of the credit for Brown's record totals.

But on that same Tuesday, June 3, 1958, a cloud appeared in Alabama that, though now no bigger than a man's hand, eventually could cast a heavy shadow over the prospects of Democratic national victory in 1960. The emphatic triumph in this state of Attorney General Patterson in the run-off primary for the Democratic nomination for Governor included approval of an amendment to the election laws that leaves the Presidential electors free to cast their ballots for any citizen they may select, regardless of which national party carries the state.

Southern Strategy

Alabama thus joins Georgia in the Southern Democratic movement against the party majority that is designed to deprive its national convention ticket of an electoral majority if this ticket and the convention platform are unsatisfactory to Southern Democrats. This movement if successful would constitutionally require that the next President be chosen by the National House of Representatives, where each state, regardless of its size, has an equal vote of one; and the choice of the next Vice President would be made by a majority of the United States Senate.

This decision by the Democrats of Alabama and Georgia—which will be repeated in other Southern States—also foreshadows another battle in the 1960 Democratic National Convention—more intense and divisive of the party than in 1948—over the "loyalty" oath. By that oath, if adopted by the convention majority, the delegates and Democratic organizations of every state will be bound to (1) pledge that the national party ticket will be placed on the state ballot, and (2) to give this ticket their "loyal" support. The only alternative for a state delegation is to withdraw from the convention. This withdrawal was made by four Southern delegations in 1948, and was followed by the selection of an independent Democratic States Rights ticket that took from President Truman forty-nine electoral votes which normally would have been his.

President Truman, by carrying Illinois, Ohio and California by small margins, was able to win the election without this Southern support. But that may not be the situation in 1960.

Future Speculation

This, however, is a matter of speculation for the distant future, whereas the statistics of the California primary are hard facts favorable to the national and the state democracy. The final returns will show that perhaps one million registered Republicans and a million and a half Democrats failed to vote in the primaries. But in the gross vote for Brown and Knowland the Democratic candidate not only had an excess over the Republican that may reach 600,000. Approximately 100,000 more registered Republicans voted for Brown in the Republican primary than registered Democrats voted for Knowland in the Democratic primary.

Thus, even if all the Republicans and Democrats who voted for Knowland repeat this in November, and are joined by the million or so Republicans who stayed home, Brown would need the votes of only about half of the Democrats who abstained, plus his primary support, to win the election handily. But, while this comeback by the Senator could be attained only by the hard kind of campaigning his duties in Washington prevented him from making before the primaries, it is not impossible.

Cause for Rejoicing

It was not the statistics of the California gubernatorial primary, however, that alone gave the Democrats cause for rejoicing. The indications of a November victory for that party in the race for Senator were even more impressive. Here a Republican politician, Governor Knight, who like Knowland had previously won both major party nominations, was far outrun by Rep. Clair Engle.

His total vote from Democrats in that primary was about twice the number Knight got from Republicans on their ticket, and while Knight, under the cross-filing privilege, got more votes from Democrats for their nomination than Engle got from Republicans for theirs, the Governor was closely pressed on his party ballot by Mayor Christopher of San Francisco. Since the Knight-Christopher campaign was bitterly personal also the Democrats are hoping for large defections to Engle from the Mayor's supporters in November.

Meanwhile, the political community is expecting consequences from Knowland's unexpectedly poor showing in the primaries that will spread beyond the borders of California. The large vote polled by a labor-endorsed candidate in the second State of the Union, in primaries where regulation of the union was a paramount issue, may influence the shape of the pending legislation in Congress for organized labor correctives. Republican Senators who were standing uneasily with Knowland, their leader, for firm restraints, conceivably could change front.

Nixon Involved

But what principally interest the politicians was the possible bearing of the returns on Republican national prospects in 1960, and on Vice President Nixon's present commanding lead for the Presidential nomination. If the indications of the primaries are confirmed in November by the election of a Democratic Senator and a Democratic Governor, a California delegation to the Republican National Convention will have far less influence on its decisions. And in nominating Nixon to succeed President Eisenhower the convention would be choosing a candidate from a State, essential to national victory, in which a Republican ticket largely named by Nixon had been defeated, and in which the Democrats had gained Statewide ascendancy for the first time in years.

Negro Named To High Position On Democratic National Committee

Washington, D. C., June 1.—Paul M. Butler, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, today announced the appointment of Arthur Chapin of Montclair, N. J., as Assistant to the Deputy Chairman for Political Organization. Mr. Chapin will take over his new post at party headquarters in Washington, D. C., immediately.

In announcing Mr. Chapin's appointment today, Mr. Butler said that his work will deal with organization matters, including increased registration and inter-party communications, entailing field work in various states. His background includes service with organized labor and as a member of the Executive Board of the New Jersey State Conference of Branches of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Since 1947, Mr. Chapin has served as Human Relations Director of the New Jersey State CIO Council, working for the elimination of segregation in public housing and for enactment of the State Civil Rights Law.

Born and educated in Philadelphia, Mr. Chapin attended Temple University there and served in the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry for three years, and later as Chairman of the Education Committee of the International Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (CIO), Chairman of the Race Relations Committee of the Pennsylvania State CIO Council, and in this latter post for the Retail and Wholesale Department Store Employees Union in St. Louis, Mo.

Mr. Chapin was elected as a New Jersey delegate to the Democratic National Convention of 1952 and served on the Committee on Permanent Organization.

Senators Expect New Rights Drive

By WILLIAM M. BATES

Sens. Russell and Talmadge warned Wednesday that the increased Democratic majorities in the new Congress will give fresh impetus to drives to push through legislation aimed at the South.

Both Georgia senators, leaders in the South's fight against civil rights legislation, said they expected the incoming Congress to be far more liberal in its outlook than the past one.

This, they said, could spell trouble for the South in renewed attempts to pass tough civil rights legislation and to change Senate rules to curb debate.

Russell and Talmadge agreed however, that the new Democratic-controlled Congress will be more receptive to more favorable farm legislation.

"From what I have seen of the composition of the next Senate, it will be more of what is now termed liberal than is the present Senate," Russell declared.

"I anticipate that we will have a great majority of these so-called civil rights bills that will be pressed very vigorously," Russell declared.

"Of course, we will continue to resist them to the utmost of our ability and we will oppose any change in the rules that will destroy the historic characteristics that distinguish the United States Senate from any other parliamentary body in the world."

Russell said he thought the complexion of the new Congress would be more favorable to farm legislation, national defense and public works projects.

Talmadge said that the results of Tuesday's nation-wide voting will result in a stepped up drive in Congress "to expand the federal government at the expense of the states."

He said the election of so many liberal Democratic senators will mean a more concerted effort in the new session of Congress to amend Senate rules to make it easier to curb debate.

"There will be a great number of very liberal senators in the new group, many of whom campaigned on what they were going to do to the South if they got elected," Talmadge declared.

"It will pose a very difficult problem in the next session of Congress in the field of federal-state relations," he said. "They will be a group who will want to expand the powers of the federal government at the expense of the states."

However, Talmadge said the Democratic victory did not mean all bad news for the South. He said the strong Democratic showing, particularly in the Midwest farm belt, raised hopes that Congress will pass "a meaningful farm bill."

"The election will work both ways for us," the senator said. "We'll have some benefits and some disadvantages."

Gov. Griffin saw little encouraging in the Democratic victory and in the defeat by the voters of several states of so-called "right-to-work" proposals.

"It looks like the people who are advocates of conservative government will have a fight on their hands to keep the principles of government that we know from being destroyed," the governor declared.

Democrats Split In Wisconsin

Negro's Election Causes Row In Party; Proxmire Is Rapped

Milwaukee, June 18 (UP)—The Wisconsin Democratic Party split wide open Wednesday night over the election of a Negro housewife as the state's national committeewoman.

Two Democratic Party workers quit over the issue and angry Democratic leaders charged "racial prejudice in reverse."

Senator William Proxmire, the political "wonder boy" who became Wisconsin's first Democratic senator in decades last year, was accused of ramming through the election of Mrs. Vel Phillips as national committeewoman at the state Democratic convention in La Crosse last week.

'One-man Rule' Is Charged

Anti-Proxmire Democrats charged "one-man rule" and the Senator's onetime campaign manager announced he would run against Proxmire in the September primary.

The controversy over Mrs. Phillips was the biggest split among Wisconsin Democrats since they reorganized their party nine years ago and began challenging Republica rule of the state.

Mrs. Phillips beat out Mrs. Marguerite Benson, the party's present vice-chairman and veteran of 28 years of party work.

Democratic field representative John Dulka and Committeeman Walter Anderson quit their party posts after Mrs. Phillips' election. They called Mrs. Benson's defeat "a repudiation of party service and loyalty."

Called 'Prejudice In Reverse'

Milwaukee County Democrats who supported Mrs. Benson by a 4-to-1 margin charged that Proxmire is attempting to create a machine "to further his own cause."

Fifth District Chairman Howard Meister said Proxmire, "through his handpicked state chairman, Patrick Lucey, is trying to establish his own party to rule the state Democratic Party.

"What happened at the state convention was not racial prejudice but racial prejudice in reverse," Meister said. "It is just as bad to elect someone because she is a Negro as it is to defeat her because she is a Negro."

Harry Halloway, Proxmire's former campaign manager, decided to oppose him in the September primary election after the convention was over. He said the convention was "a further demonstration of Proxmire's drive for power."

"Proxmire sure had me fooled for a while," Halloway added.

Vel Phillips Has Scored Many Firsts In Her Career

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — (UPI) — Mrs. Vel Phillips is a woman of precedent.

The latest accomplishment of the 34-year-old housewife, attorney and Milwaukee alderman, was getting elected as national committeewoman of the Wisconsin Democratic party.

This makes her the first member of her race elected by state organization to the ranks of the Democratic national committee. Mrs. Phillips is a Negro.

Since she first began knocking down the barriers to womanhood in general and her race in particular the petite relative newcomer to politics, also followed a 127 old tradition of motherhood.

Her first child, Dale Franklin Phillips, was born shortly after she became the first woman and first Negro ever elected to the Common Council in 1956. She is expecting her second child next month.

Mrs. Phillips has strong feelings on why she was elected Saturday to the national committee woman post against the formidable opposition of party veteran, Mrs. Marguerite Benson, 59, of Milwaukee.

Mrs. Benson, in her 28 years of politics, had held virtually every post open to a woman in the state —except national committeewoman—including becoming the party's first woman vice-chairman.

"I stand on my merits," said Mrs. Phillips in her clear, slow style of speaking.

"The majority of convention delegates voted for me because they believed I had something to contribute to the national committee. They believed I was young, and fresh, and new, and qualified to do the job.

"I wasn't elected just because I am a Negro. But my backers can doubley rejoice that this will show that there are states which just don't preach democratic principles, but make it a reality."

Mrs. Phillips said the racial implications of her victory "are greatly exaggerated."

She anticipates no trouble— at least racial—in her work with the national committee, including liaison with southern Democrats and national committeewomen from the deep South.

"I've been a member of a minority group 34 years," she said. "If I find it not the least bit difficult to adjust to 47 other women, they shouldn't find it the least bit difficult to adjust to me."

She holds with state Democratic party chairman Patrick Lucey that her election was not dictated by the northern wing of the Democratic party. Both do say she had the backing of liberal Sen. William E. Proxmire (D-Wis.),

Mrs. Phillips considers it merely coincidental that some have called her a "liberal symbol," including former state party chairman Philleo Nash, who said her election victory was "a blow for Little Rock."

"Not any real lady or gentleman will permit another lady or gentleman to be more gracious or dignified than they are themself," Mrs. Phillips contends, accounting for her confidence of smooth sailing in national party work.

After graduating from Howard University in Washington, D. C. in 1946, where she studied on an Elks scholarship, Mrs. Phillips spent two years doing social work in Milwaukee before enrolling at the University of Wisconsin law school in 1948, the year she was married to Dale Phillips.

In August, 1951, she became the first woman Negro graduate of the law school. Her husband had been gradcated from the U. of W. law school in 1950, and upon her graduation, they became the first Negro couple admitted to the federal bar.

They set up the law office of Phillips and Phillips in Milwaukee. Five years later, she won the common council vote.

"Door to door campaigning for alderman really opened my eyes to the challenge and opportunities for public service," Mrs. Phillips said.

VEL PHILLIPS

Some 'Dems' Bitter Over Election of Negro Woman

LACROSSE, Wis.—Mrs. Vel Phillips was elected Wisconsin's first Negro National Democratic Committeewoman and one delegate quit and the National Committeeman voiced his open displeasure in the heated aftermath.

Although Mrs. Phillips, a Milwaukee alderman, told supporters she would not disappoint the people who elected her, Herman Jessen of Philps, Wis., a Democratic national committeeman, was openly bitter.

• Thomas J. Joyce of Park Falls, a delegate, resigned his post and several others, including Milwaukeeans, were considering the same course of action.

Mrs. Phillips captured the post by defeating Mrs. Marguerite Benson (white) of Milwaukee by a 597-447 vote at the Democratic Party Convention.

MRS. PHILLIPS said, "This entire experience has been the most meaningful, wonderful thing that has ever happened to me. Wisconsin has a lot of grand people and all of them are Democrats."

• But Jessen complained, "It looks like it does not pay anyone to work faithfully for the party for 28 years, only to get beat by a newcomer who is not known by 5 per cent of the delegates to the convention. The whole thing looks like a beauty or popularity contest."

Mrs. Phillips denied that she was a newcomer, observing: "I have been active in Democratic circles for 12 years."

• She continued, "I wasn't elected just because I am a Negro, but my backers can doubly rejoice that this will show that there are states which just don't preach democratic principles but make it a reality."

She was nominated for the post by Frank Wallick, editor of the Wisconsin CIO News, and had the solid backing of all labor elements at the convention. Harold Flynn, who seconded the nomination, asserted, "We are not here to reward long service to the party. We are here to elect someone who can serve us well. We are practical politicians."

STATE DEMOCRATIC Chairman Lacey also spoke up denying charges that Mrs. Phillips' nomination was engineered by "the northern wing" of the party. He said that Mrs. Phillips' victory would "solidify and deepen the support of liberals, minority groups and intellectuals for the party in the November elections." Senator William E. Proxmire D., Wis.) was also behind Mrs. Phillips' candidacy.

Mrs. Phillips is an attorney, the mother of two children and is expecting the arrival of a third. In 1956 she was elected to the Milwaukee Common Council for a four-year term, thus becoming the first Negro to hold such a post in her city.

She succeeded Mrs. Betty Graichn, who is now living in Washington, D. C. She is 34 years old.

TRUMAN STUMPING TODAY IN HARLEM

Will Accompany Harriman and Hogan on Auto Tour—Governor Talks Upstate

By LEONARD INGALLS

Former President Harry S. [illegible] lem today with Governor Harriman and District Attorney Frank S. Hogan.

The announcement was made yesterday at Mr. Harriman's campaign headquarters in the Shelton Hotel. The Governor and Mr. Hogan, Democratic-Liberal candidate for Senator, are scheduled to drive through Harlem with Mr. Truman at 4:30 P. M. They will leave their automobile at 5:50 for sidewalk campaigning at Seventh Avenue and 125th Street.

The two candidates are scheduled to meet Mr. Truman at 3:30 P. M. at the Marine Terminal of La Guardia Airport, Queens, when the former President returns by plane from New Castle, Pa., where he made a political speech last night.

Labor Cheers Truman

Mr. Truman's value in the campaign was demonstrated several times yesterday by Mr. Harriman during a speech at a labor union rally. At each mention of the former President's name there was heavy applause.

Mr. Harriman spoke to 700 shop stewards of Local 91 of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union at the Roosevelt Auditorium, 100 East Seventeenth Street.

The Governor also told his audience that Nelson A. Rockefeller, his Republican opponent, should denounce as anti-union President Eisenhower and the Republican state ticket of Malcolm Wilson for Lieutenant Governar, and Representative Kenneth B. Keating for Senator.

Mr. Harriman criticized General Eisenhower for supporting Senator William F. Knowland, Republican candidate for Governor of California. Mr. Knowland is supporting "right-to-work" laws, which would prohibit the union shop.

The Governor contended that the President's trip to California had placed Mr. Rockefeller in an embarrassing position. Mr. Rockefeller has announced his opposition to right-to-work legislation.

Governor Rebukes Critic

Special to The New York Times.

SYRACUSE, Oct. 21—Governor Harriman startled a nonpartisan academic ceremony here today by including a sharp political rejoinder to a local Republican critic in his speech.

The Governor spoke at a dedication ceremony for a new $7,000,000 basic science building at the State University Medical Center. His prepared speech was almost exclusively nonpolitical.

However, after the first paragraph he interpolated a stinging attack on Senator John H. Hughes, who has ben one of his chief critics in the legislature. Last Sunday Senator Hughes accused the Governor of "dragging his feet" in the construction of the State Medical Center.

Without identifying the Senator by name, Mr. Harriman denied sharply that there had been any delay and told the audience of physicians, civic leaders and medical students, "ou will have to hold this individual accountable for the responsibility or irresponsibility of his statements."

Later Mr. Harriman attended a State Public Works Department conference at which a new route through Syracuse for the Empire Stateway—the north-south highway from Binghamton to Watertown—was announced. The revised route was designed to meet local objections.

Here the Governor, casting aside any campaign role, congratulated Republican Mayor Anson A. Henninger for his "splendid cooperation" and said he had been glad to work with him on the project.

Mr. Harriman then paid a brief visit to LeMoyne College, where he spoke to students. After that he flew back to New York City.

Gallup Poll—

Negroes Favor Democrats Despite GOP Integration

By GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 23.—The Negro vote, based on poll results up to the present time, will go overwhelmingly Democratic in the congressional election on Nov. 4.

It will come as something of a shock to Republicans that strong statements in behalf of racial integration which have come from President Eisenhower and other GOP leaders have had no great effect in shifting Negroes in the North from their strong attachment to the Democratic party.

In brief, the Gallup Poll finds, as another election in which the pocketbook is the all-important factor to the Negro.

Integration in the schools is just one of many inter-racial problems. There is widespread belief among Negroes that they are discriminated against in their search for jobs. A remark heard everywhere, sums this up:

Schools Only One Concern

"The Negro is always the last to be hired and the first to be fired."

To determine the "why" behind the Negro's allegiance to the Democratic party, the Gallup Poll sent a team of Negro interviewers to Northern centers of Negro population.

Negro voters were asked:

"If the elections for Congress were being held today, which party would you like to see win in this state — the Republican party or the Democratic party?"

The vote today and the vote of Northern Negroes in congressional races in the two previous national elections:

	TO-DAY	August, 1956	1954 Election
Democratic	72	77	77
Republican	28	23	23

High Prices Hurt

To make matters worse, along with unemployment are the problems of high prices and high rents. One woman pointed to a nearby car and complained:

"I've got a room not much bigger than the inside of that car and I pay $45 a month for it."

Deeply concerned as he is about the integration problem, the Negro does not think of either party as his champion in this cause. Any advancement in integration, he feels, would have come about regardless of which party was in office at the time.

Despite this lack of distinction the Democrats have the advantage in the over-all area of racial questions. Because the Negro regards the Democratic Party as his "friend" in the economic area, he feels that this friendship will help him in other areas—where racial differences are felt.

DEMO DIXIE EMPIRE TOTTERS

Steady Drop Shown In Voting Strength

By GENE WIRTH
Clarion-Ledger City Editor

The Democratic Party's Dixie empire is tottering.

The 1960 presidential marathon, thus, offers the party th opportunity to stabilize or reverse the drift, or watch a continued downward popularity trend.

The Democratic decline in the South has been established over the last four political campaigns, beginning with the fourth and final Roosevelt campaign in 1944. The 1944 drop was of little consequence at the time because Roosevelt's strong Southern standing was touched only slightly. But, it was a tip-off to further political reverses that were to follow.

Mississippi, long one of the more solid Democratic powers in the Southern bloc, gave birth to the States' Rights movement in 1948. It succeeded in carrying four states—Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina— and taking 39 electoral votes with a ticket composed of South Carolina Governor J. Strom Thurmond and Mississippi Governor Fielding L. Wright. The electoral vote also included one from Tennessee.

This States' Rights revolt represented the greatest break from either of the two major parties since 1912, when Teddy Roosevelt, running on the Progressive ticket, rolled up 88 electoral votes in Michigan, Minnesota, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Washington and part of California.

The States' Righters, on the ballot in 16 states, polled a total of 1,169,021 votes, all in the 11-state Southern belt except 14,496. Outside the South the ticket polled: California 1,228, Kentucky 10,411, Maryland 2,476, New Hampshire 7 and North Dakota 374. Additionally, in Maryland, Wright received a write-in vote of 2,294.

A look at the Southern states in this election show that the Democratic ticket of Hary Truman and Alben Barkley did not even get on the ballot in Alabama. The percentage of popular vote given the Democratic ticket in the other Southern states is as follows: Arkansas 61.7 percent, Florida 48.8 percent, Georgia 60.8 percent, Louisiana 32.7 percent, Mississippi 10.4 percent, North Carolina 58.0 percent, South Carolina 24.1 percent, Tennessee 48.2 percent, Texas 65.4 percent, Virginia 47.8 percent.

All of these represent a drastic reduction in Democratic strength from previous elections.

There followed the elections of 1952 and 1956 in which the Republicans with their Eisenhower-Nixon ticket took over the reins of government, cracking the Solid South as they went.

Dixie emocrats gave up four states to the Eisenhower cause in the 1952 election. They were Florida, Tennessee, Texas and Virginia. Again in the 1956 election the same four states went to the Republicans, plus. the additional Deep South state of Louisiana. It is interesting, too, to note that the Democrats lost Tennessee, even after her governor, Frank Clements, delivered the Democratic keynote speech, and one of her senators, Estes Kefauver, was put on the ticket as the vice presidential nominee.

Despite the fact that Eisenhower's great personal popularity was being strained by the time he came up for the second race, voting records show that, without exception, the percentage of Democratic popularity in the Southern states dropped in every state from the previous election.

State-by-state the popular vote percentages for the Democratic ticket in the last two prsidential races are as follows:

Alabama, 64.5 to 56.5; Arkansas 55.9 to 52.4; Florida, 44.9 to 42.6; Georgia, 69.6 to 67.3; Louisiana, 52.8 to 39.5; Mississippi, 60.5 to 58.2; North Carolina, 53.9 to 50.6; South Carolina, 50.7 to 45.2; Tennessee, 49.7 to 48.5; Texas, 46.6 to 43.9; Virginia, 43.3 to 38.3.

These are facts that the Democrats must face in 1960, when they go about selecting nominees and a platform to oppose the Republicans.

The Republicans, too, face some problems not the least of which is the reaction, not confined to the South, from the Little Rock incident. Also, the Republicans will have to come up with a replacement for Eisenhower.

Mississippians and Southerners will likely find it difficult to "swallow" anything that either of the two major parties offer, but they'll have to vote one of the tickets or that of an opposition force that may come to life as in the past.

Segregation Oath Caution Is Urged

Could Backfire Mayhall Warns

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 14 (AP)—A suggested new segregation oath for candidates in the Democratic primaries in Alabama this year brought a word of caution today from the party chairman.

Circuit Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper said he isn't opposed to the pledge as such, but that he questions its advisability. He said it might invite the Federal courts to nullify the primaries.

The controversial party loyalty oath will be up for readoption or rejection when the state Democratic Executive Committee meets here Jan. 24 to fix rules and regulations for this year's party elections.

It disqualifies would-be candidates who voted for President Eisenhower in 1956.

National Committeeman Charles W. McKay Jr., of Sylacauga had advocated readoption of the loyalty oath with a further provision requiring candidates to take a segregation pledge which reads like this:

"I believe in and will support the principle of segregation upon which the Democratic Party in Alabama was founded and will support in the general election all candidates of the Democratic Party who take this oath."

Mayhall, who heads the state committee, questioned both the wisdom and need of such a pledge. He said "it might get us in trouble if someone should appeal. That could result in the courts declaring our entire primary null and void."

The judge recalled that the Supreme Court outlawed the old Texas white primary several years ago. Texas Democrats had a rule limiting the party election to white voters.

CAUTIOUS—Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper.

Mayhall said he doesn't see any real need for a segregation pledge in Alabama because, as he puts it, "anyone who qualifies as a candidate will support segregation anyway. If he doesn't he might as well not run."

But he made clear he isn't opposing the oath. In fact, he said he would readily sign it if adopted.

Political Activity Results In Negro-Democratic Split

While the outcome of the past year's political activity left much to be desired, the Democratic party took 50 out of 53 contested offices from the Republicans but failed, however, to poll their usual sweeping majority in the predominately Negro wards.

A tabulation of the concentrated Negro precincts in the city wards 7-12 shortly after the election revealed that of a total of 45,697 votes cast, 20,318 or 44 per cent went into the Republican column.

Outregistered 2-to-1

It must be noted here that Negro Democrats outregister Republicans 2 to 1 in these precints. In short, the Democrats would have had to garner 88 per cent of the total vote to justify their advantage.

Another factor to consider is the 5,000 odd Democratic job holders in the city. Realizing that each job holder will influence one person, the Republican party were down 10,000 votes at the beginning of the campaign.

From the above figures it is safe to assume that Negroes no longer vote necessarily the way they are registered but for the individual they deem best qualified to do the job.

Attitude of Parties

There is yet another reason for the division of last year's vote, namely the non-committal attitude taken by candidates of both parties on the question of civil rights and housing, both vital issues to the Negro populace.

Successful candidate Mayor Bruce Hoblitzell, however, indicated that he was in favor of civil rights but this was not the time for such legislation. When it was suggested that an interracial committee be named, if he was elected, to educate the public in the matter of civil rights, he said that he would be glad to do so. The committee, as yet, has not been named.

W. W. Beckett

For Representative

Also last year a Negro announced his candidacy for U. S. Representative in the 3rd Congressional District (Louisville and Jefferson County). The candidate, Mark Anthony, deputy tax commissioner, said that he would run as an independent.

Of the four Negroes running for office in the last election, two were successful in their bids. Incumbent Alderman for the 8th Ward, W. W. Bcekett was re-elected and Rev. Felix Anderson elected state representative in the 42nd District. Anderson has since taken a leading position in the legislature.

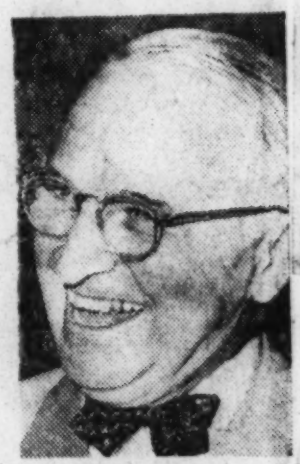
JOHN M. CUMMINGS

Civil War Is Still On Down in Mississippi

Inquirer Mon. 1-27-58
Philadelphia, Pa.
3A

ON AT least two good counts Harry Truman has every reason for remembering the Democratic National Convention of 1948 in Philadelphia. It was this convention which nominated the then President Truman, a nomination that bore juicy fruit in November when he defeated the Republicans' Tom Dewey.

The second reason was the big walkout of Southern delegates who protested the effort to bind them to full support of the platform and the candidates. Led by one Henry M. Fraser, of Mississippi, the Southerners took off for Birmingham where as Dixiecrats they nominated a third party ticket with Gov. Strom Thurman as the candidate for President. It was felt by some, and emphatically predicted by others, that this defection of a considerable number of Southerners would prove a fatal blow to Truman's chances. Truman won without the South.



EX-PRES. TRUMAN

Henry M. Fraser was back in the news the other day. He had read in a newspaper that a portrait of Union General Adelbert Ames, a native of Maine, was hanging in the Hall of Governors in the State Capitol at Jackson, Miss. The newspaper described the likeness of Ames in Yankee uniform with his chest bearing "a line of military decorations earned by the blood of Confederate soldier boys."

* * *

IT WAS too much for Mr. Fraser. He let go with this: "Are the portraits of Hitler, Mussolini, Joe Stalin and others of their ilk hanging in the Capitol at Washington?" The obvious answer, of course, is no. But a search that need not be too diligent will disclose more than one portrait of Robert E. Lee, Stonewall Jackson and other leaders of the rebellion and no one protests.

Unfortunately for the unity implied in the Republic's official name, far too many folks in the South continue to fight the Civil War which ended more than 80 years ago.

The Fraser outburst and the crack about military decorations earned by the blood of Confederate soldier boys emphasize this tendency. Boys from the North and West also died in that struggle. But in the North the disposition is to let the dead past bury its dead. Hot heads and hop heads keep the issue alive in the South.

General Ames, fourth Union officer to command the military district that covered Mississippi and Arkansas (remember Little Rock), was certainly no saint. He employed the military to drive the civil officers from the Mississippi capitol. He was military governor when what historians call the "Black and Tan" convention was held.

THIS body of carpet baggers, recently freed slaves and such Southern whites as would participate, adopted a constitution which granted the franchise to the Negroes. They held firm control for a while. Corruption was widespread. In 1875 the Democrats won control of the Legislature. They proceeded at once to impeach the Negro Lieutenant Governor. Proceedings were instituted against Gen. Ames. The charges were dismissed. He resigned.

Certainly the career of Gen. Ames in Mississippi can hardly be pointed to as a shining example of righteousness. But the times must be considered; the temper of the people; the triumphant North divided as to whether the South should be further punished or dealt with leniently, as Lincoln proposed.

People in the prostrate South were bitter and depressed. Their bitterness has descended on many of the present generation. For one reason or another, political no doubt, it is kept alive by men of the Fraser type.

Many years ago Gen. Lee and many Southern boys visited Gettysburg. Some of them lie there today in graves close to the last resting place of Northerners. If you want to see a good portrait of Gen. Lee go over there to Adams county and the historic battlefield. No one is demanding that Lee be torn from the wall.

Truman Says Ike Voters Got What They Deserve

Post Times Herald P.A7
Washington D.C.

International News Service

Former President Harry S. Truman declared yesterday that people who adopted the "I-Like-Ike" slogan in the last two presidential elections "got what was coming to them."

Mr. Truman spoke at a breakfast given in his honor by the Electric Consumers' Information Committee, an organization representing labor unions, and various cooperative groups.

The former Chief Executive said he would lay down "the facts of life" on Republicans at a $100-a-plate Democratic fund-raising dinner tonight. He advised the 150 persons present at the breakfast to "tune in."

(WTOP-TV (Channel 9) and WTOP-Radio (1500 kilocycles) will broadcast Mr. Truman's speech, Major Issues Facing the Nation in 1958, at 10:30 p. m.)

Mr. Truman asserted that when he gets started, he usually gets "steamed up." He added he could talk "until noon about things that haven't been done." But he said he had an obligation to the Party to deliver his major speech of the week tonight and not before.

Mr. Truman told his audience: "I am not sorry for you because most of you voted for this situation. I told you what you'd get."

He said he had seen a sign recently reading "I like Ike, but I don't think Ike likes me."

Mr. Truman declared the job of the President is to "help the 150 million people who have no lobbyists." He said this is what is meant by the idea that "the people control the Government."

Powell dares Democrats to toss him out

NEW YORK — "There's no real free leadership in this whole (NYC) city. They are all slaves to the white folks who control them.

"Well, I am one man they can't control. I dare them to fight me in my own district, but they don't dare. If they buck me for re-election, then there won't be a Democratic governor in Albany next year. I promise them that."

So spoke Rev. A. Clayton Powell as he took cognizance of reports that the Democrats may dump him in reprisal for his 1956 support of President Eisenhower's reelection in a speech before a Brooklyn mass meeting.

Assemblyman Bertram L. Baker, Sixth Assembly District leader, Brooklyn; City Councilman J. Daniel Diggs, Municipal Court Justices Lewis F. Flagg Jr., Oliver D. Williams and Supreme Court Justice Meier Steinbrink.

There is talk that the Democrats may seek to deny Mr. Powell renomination in the

THOSE INVENTIVE extremists among the Southern Democrats who gave us the Dixiecrat and State's Rights movements of 1948 and the Democrats-for-Eisenhower in 1952 and 1956 plan a different approach in 1960. This time they will work from within the Democratic Party with the Constitution as their secret weapon.

Most of us forget between elections that although there have been more than 200 attempts to modernize our method of electing Presidents since the electoral college system was adopted, we still operate under laws which do not bind the electors to vote for the candidates. Mortality is falling. Furthermore, the Soviet Union is of their party's choice. Legally electors are free to vote for whomever they choose. By revising state laws where necessary to give a few party leaders the power to pick the electors and specifically freezing the electors from any obligation to vote for the national party nominee after the election, the ultra-conservatives hope to control enough electoral votes to prevent either party from winning a majority if the next election is close.

Sat. 6-28-58

Alabama, South Carolina and recently Georgia—(with a total of 31 electoral votes)—have already taken these legal steps. There will be no immediate rush of neighboring states to follow suit—for most of them have more enlightened elected leaders. But more Little Rock incidents and the 1959 elections could quickly change that.

Politics Fills Leisure Time Of Concert Star's Wife

By ETHEL L. PAYNE

Handsome Gladys Duncan is a firm believer that politics is everybody's business and shouldn't be left to the fellow who makes a living at it. That's why she spends most of her spare time actively working in this and a number of other civic areas. This just about makes her one of the busiest people in Washington.

It so happens she's a Democrat, but she insists that she measures a candidate by his qualifications and record and not by party label.

Todd Duncan

Despite the fact that as a resident of Washington where she and some two or three hundred thousand other people do not have the right to vote, Mrs. Duncan works harder at good citizenship than most people who do have franchise privileges.

As the wife of the famous actor-singer Todd Duncan, she used to accompany her husband on his concert tours all over the world and acquired some of her higher education in this period.

Mrs. Duncan is a native of Charlottesville, Va. After going to boarding school at Barber Scotia in North Carolina, she enroiled at Teachers College in the District of Columbia and graduated from there. Her teaching career was interrupted by leaves of absence when she and her son, Charles would join Todd on tour.

She was among the first American Negro women to go to Australia and New Zealand and in between concerts, she managed to get in some extra studies at the University of London.

Gladys says she first became interested in politics in 1934 when she felt there was a job to be done and she still feels that way.

To every civic-conscious Washington resident, Home Rule is not just a dream, but a year in year out fight on which he works persistently.

In lieu of elections, District dwellers who are hard pro - Home Rulers put on preferential primaries. Especially in an election year, these are good stimulation for the "stateless ones" and are often a barometer for candidate support for convention nominee.

In 1956, Averill Harriman and Estes Kefauver were the principal contenders in a preferential primary in the District.

The drive had all the earnest intensity of a campaign in a regular Congressional district and Gladys Duncan threw herself into the Harriman boom with all of her energy.

At the big house on T St. where she and Todd make their home, she gave a big party with the Harrimans as guests of honor.

Top names in Democratic circles were included among the distinguished guests who enjoyed the hospitality of the Auxiliary.

That year, was a marked one for her because she not only helped Averill Harriman to win the primary, but was elected a delegate to the Democratic convention in Chicago and also to the District Democratic Central Committee.

Mrs. Harriman sponsored her for admission to the exclusive Democratic Women's National Club. She was the first and still is the only Negro woman member of the club.

The Duncans are proud of the achievements of their son, Charles, a practicing lawyer in the District who had the distinction of arguing in the historic schools cases which resulted in the 1954 decision to desegregate. Charles is a graduate of Harvard University and holds a Phi Beta Kappa key from Dartmouth College where he was a member of the exclusive Casque and Gauntlet Society.

But the pride and joy of the Duncan family is nine year old Todd II, who was born while his grandfather was on concert tour in Norway. His pet name for his grandfather is the Norwegian "Fa Fa" and Todd Senior thinks he has all indications of becoming a singer too.

The Duncans are members of Plymouth Congregation Church.

WHILE HER HUSBAND, Todd, relaxes at home she likes to listen to some of her husband's records on their hi-fi set.

Gladys Duncan is occupied with a busy round of civic duties but when she is away on concert,

Gladys serves on the boards of the Washington Housing Association, the Columbia Heights Boys club and the Americans for Democratic Action. She was president of the Washington chapter of ADA for two years.

In addition, she is a member at large of the National Symphony Association, the Women's Civic Guild and of course, the Committee For Home Rule.

Alabama Politics.

The hope of Southern independent Democrats to avoid being "in the bag" in 1960 were raised last week when state righters regained control of party affairs in Alabama. The states rights Democrats now have the power to repeal the loyalty oath which has bound Alabama to the national Democrats in the past two presidential elections.

Atty. Gen. John Patterson won the Democratic nomination for governor in the race that re-established the power of the states righters. The significance of his victory is unclear, however.

The charge has been made that he was the candidate of the Ku Klux Klan. Certainly, a revival of the Klan as a political force in a Southern state would be a matter to deplore in strong terms. But the fact that a candidate may have received the votes of individual Klansmen does not necessarily indicate that he subscribes to the ugly practices of the hooded order.

We shall await further information on Mr. Patterson's associations before attempting to assess the full situation.

Let 'Em Walk Out

Republican-minded pundits like Roscoe Drummond see in the landslide re-election of Orval Faubus an evil omen for the Democratic party in 1960.

They argue that the Arkansas victory portends bad news for Northern liberals and that the Democrats must saddle themselves with a presidential candidate acceptable to the segregationist South or face a split in the party.

That's utter hogwash.

In election after election, the late President Roosevelt proved that the votes of the South were not needed to win.

And President Truman, by his victory in face of an all-out Dixiecrat revolt, spiked that political illusion forever.

If Mr. Truman could do it in 1948, certainly an equally forthright and liberal candidate can do it in 1960, what with the growing strength of the Democratic party in the middle and far West.

Let the onerous Dixiecrats take a walk. It would be the best thing that could happen for us, the party, the nation and the world.

Wisconsin Demos Split Over Negro

MILWAUKEE, Wis., June 19 (UPI) — The Wisconsin Democratic Party has split wide open over the election of a Negro housewife as the state's national committeewoman.

Two Democratic Party workers quit over the issue and angry Democratic leaders charged "racial prejudice in reverse."

Sen. William Proxmire, the political "wonder boy" who became Wisconsin's first Democratic senator in decades last year, was accused of ramming through the election of Mrs. Vel Phillips as national committeewoman at the state Democratic convention in La Crosse last week.

Anti-Proxmire Democrats charged "one-man rule" and the senator's onetime campaign manager announced he would run against Proxmire in the September primary.

The controversy over Mrs. Phillips was the biggest split among Wisconsin Democrats since they reorganized their party nine years ago and began challenging Republican rule of the state.

Mrs. Phillips beat out Mrs. Marguerite Benson, the party's present vice-chairman and veteran of 28 years of party work.

Democratic Field Representative John Dulka and Wauwatosa Committeeman Walter Anderson followed up Mrs. Phillips' election by quitting their party posts. They called Mrs. Benson's defeat "A repudiation of party service and loyalty."

Milwaukee County Democrats who supported Mrs. Benson by a 4-to-1 margin, charged that Proxmire is attempting to create a machine "to further his own cause."

Fifth District Chairman Howard Meister said Proxmire, "through his handpicked State Chairman Patrick Lucey, is trying to establish his own party to rule the State Democratic Party.

"What happened at the state convention was not racial prejudice but racial prejudice in reverse," Meister said. "It is just as bad to elect someone because she is a Negro as it is to defeat her because she is a Negro."

Sen. Proxmire Denies Charge

WASHINGTON, June 19 (UPI) —Sen. William Proxmire (D., Wis.) dismissed as "ridiculous" today charges that he is trying to take over the Democratic Party in Wisconsin.

Proxmire said neither he nor any member of his staff took part in the election of Mrs. Vel Phillips over Mrs. Marguerite Benson as State Democratic National Committee woman.

Negro Woman Election Draws Democrats' Ire

Wisconsin Elects Her As National Committeewoman

LA CROSSE, Wis. (AP) — Mrs. Vel Phillips of Milwaukee, the first Negro national Democratic party committeewoman for Wisconsin, said Sunday she would not disappoint the people who elected her.

Mrs. Phillips, an alderman in Milwaukee, was named to the post at the Wisconsin Democratic party convention Saturday. She defeated Mrs. Marguerite Benson of Milwaukee, a veteran of 28 years of party politics, by a vote of 597-447.

An attorney, Mrs. Phillips is the mother of two children and is expecting her third child in about a month. Her public career began in 1956 when she was elected to the Milwaukee Common Council for a four-year term. She was the first Negro ever elected to the Council.

Mrs. Phillips succeeds Mrs. Betty Graichen, now residing in Washington, D.C.

Herman Jessen of Phelps, Wisconsin's Democratic national committeeman, was perturbed because Mrs. Phillips was elected.

"It looks like it does not pay anyone to work faithfully for the party for 28 years, only to get beat by a newcomer who is not known by five per cent of the delegates to the convention," Jessen said. "The whole thing looks like a beauty or popularity contest."

Thomas J. Joyce of Park Falls, a delegate, resigned his post after Mrs. Phillips was elected. Several others, including Milwaukeeans, reportedly were considering the same course of action.

Mrs. Phillips was nominated for the post by Frank Wallick, Milwaukee, editor of the Wisconsin CIO News, and had the solid support of all labor elements in the Democratic organization.

Election Of Negro Splits Wis. Dems.

By DAN HANLEY JR.

MILWAUKEE, Wis. — (UPI) — The Wisconsin Democratic party split wide open this week over the election of a Negro housewife as the state's national committeewoman.

Two Democratic party workers quit over the issue and angry Democratic leaders charged "racial prejudice in reverse."

Sen. William Proxmire, the political "wonder boy" who became Wisconsin's first Democratic Senator in decades last year was accused of ramming through the election of Mrs. Vel Phillips as national committeewoman at the state Democratic convention in La Crosse last week.

ONE MAN RULE

Anti-Proxmire Democrats charged "one-man rule" and the Senator's onetime campaign manager announced he would run against Proxmire in the September primary.

The controversy over Mrs. Phillips was the biggest split among Wisconsin Democrats since they reorganized their party nine years ago and began challenging Republican rule of the state.

Mrs. Phillips beat out Mrs. Marguerite Benson, the party's present vice-chairman and veteran of 28 years of party work.

Democratic field representative John Dulka and Wauwatosa, Wisc. committeeman Walter Anderson followed up Mrs. Phillips' election by quitting their party posts. They called Mrs. Benson's defeat "A reputation of party service loyalty."

Milwaukee county Democrats who supported Mrs. Benson by a 4 to 1 margin, charged that Proxmire is attempting to create a machine "to further his own cause."

Fifth district chairman Howard Miester said Proxmire, "through his handpick state chairman Patrick Lucey, is trying to establish his own party to rule the state Democratic party.

"What happened at the state convention was not racial prejudice in reverse, "Meister said. "It is just as bad to elect someone because she is a Negro as it is to defeat her because she is a Negro."

Harry Holloway, Proxmire's former campaign manager, decided to oppose him in the September primary election after the convention was over. He said the convention was a "futher demonstration of Proxmire's drive for power."

"Proxmire sure had me fooled for a while, "Holloway added.

Election Of Negro Woman Raises Furor In Wisconsin

LA CROSSE, Wis. (UPI)—Wisconsin Democrats renewed their task of hammering out a platform at the state convention today, but rancor lingered over the naming of a Negro to serve as national committeewoman.

Supporters of Mrs. Marguerite Benson interpreted the election of Vel Phillips, a Negro attorney, as a rebuff to Mrs. Benson's 25 years of party service.

State Democratic Chairman Patrick Lucey, meanwhile, denied the Negro's election was maneuvered by the northern wing of the party.

Her election by a 597-447 vote late Saturday would "solidify and deepen the support of liberals, minority groups and intellectuals" for the party in the November elections, Lucey said. Lucey is known to have the backing of Sen. William E. Proxmire (D-Wis.) in this case.

Mrs. Benson's adherents remained bitter and charged, that the Negro wman was elected merely to demonstrate liberalism, without any reference to the long service of the 59-year-old grandmother. The Negro, 34, is the first of her race to be elected to such an office in the country.

"I wasn't elected just because I am a Negro, "But my backers can doubly rejoice that this will show that there are states which just don't preach democratic principles, but make it a reality."

Harold Flynn, who seconded the woman's nomination, said "We are not here to reward long service to the party. We are here to elect someone who can serve us well. We are practical politicians."

"This entire experience has been the most meaningful, wonderful thing that has ever happened to me," Mrs. Phillips told the convention delegates. "Wisconsin has a lot of grand people—and all of them are Democrats."

Denies She's a Newcomer

Mrs. Phillips denied that she was a newcomer to Democratic party politics in Wisconsin "as my opponents claim."

"I have been active in Democratic circles for 12 years," she said.

An attorney, Mrs. Phillips is the mother of two children and is expecting her third child in about a month. Her public career began in 1956 when she was elected to the Milwaukee Common Council for a four-year term. She was the first Negro ever elected to the council.

Committeeman Perturbed

Thomas J. Joyce of Park Falls, a delegate, resigned his post after Mrs. Phillips was elected. Several others, including Milwaukeeans, reportedly were considering the same course of action.

Staunch supporters of Mrs. Benson said she should have been elected as a reward for her many years of service and that snubbing her could cause a breakdown in party discipline.

Mrs. Phillips was nominated for the post by Frank Wallick of Milwaukee, editor of the Wisconsin CIO News. She had the solid support of all labor elements in the Democratic organization.

Democrats Dilemma

But Some Republicans Act Like Faubus Too

By Samuel Hoskins

WASHINGTON

The word here is that the Democratic National Committee has a bad attack of Faubus shakes.

Politically, this is described as an extremely nervous condition, causing them to run scared in New York and indulge in much soul searching in border states and the Deep South.

The reason for the Democrats' anxiety in New York can be summed up in three familiar words — Adam Clayton Powell.

THEY FEAR the unpredictable congressman, who took on and defeated Tammany Hall, may throw his weight to Nelson A. Rockefeller, the GOP candidate for governor.

In fact, some of the Democrat policy - makers are almost certain this will happen.

If such comes to pass, they are even more certain that the Powell influence will be the margin Rockefeller, the multi-millionaire, needs to defeat Gov. Averell Harriman, also a multi - millionaire.

As if Powell wasn't enough to worry about, now they are also worried about Mrs. Anne Hedgeman, who "resigned" last week as aide to Mayor Wagner.

A brewing Democrat nightmare is the fear she will toss her support to the Republicans.

AS FOR Democratic worries South, all the ills of that unhappy area (afflicted with the Almond - Faubus blight) were symbolized by the aborted political pow - wow also known as the Southern Governors' Conference.

The extremes of this political conglomeration, almost wholly Democrat, were represented by Gov. Theodore McKeldin of Maryland and Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas.

McKeldin, a Republican, tried to persuade the group to take a firm stand in support of the Supreme Court school rulings.

FAUBUS, a Democrat whom some other Democrats call "the wild man of Little Rock," came out bluntly for open defiance of the Supreme Court and the Federal Government.

Caught between these grinding millstones were such alleged moderates as Govs. LeRoy Collins of Florida, Luther Hodges of North Carolina and Frank Clement of Tennessee.

Collins wanted to pass the buck to Congress. Hodge was for ignoring the desegregation issue all-together.

Clement, who created quite a stir at the last national Democratic convention as keynote speaker, backed into the issue with an amazing bit of logic.

HE SAID: "There are no parents in the South, white or colored, who want their children to attend integrated schools."

He added: "But no colored parent wants to be told his children cannot attend certain schools."

ALL OF THIS means Arthur Chapin, ex-New Jersey labor official turned aide to Paul Butler, embattled national Democratic chairman, has his work cut out for him.

From across New Hampshire Ave., NW, one almost can hear Val Washington, assistant GOP national chairman, saying, "I told you so."

This doesn't mean, however, that come November Val will be minus Republican headaches of his own.

GOP organizations in both Little Rock and Jackson, Miss., are making noises like Dixiecrats.

IN JACKSON last Friday, Rep. Ralph W. Gwinn of Bronxville, N.Y., (of all places) was banquet speaker for the White Citizens Council.

Not only did the New Yorker praise Herr Faubus, but he said the white people of the South should not be forced to integrate "their" schools "if they don't want to."

* * *

REMEMBER THE Rev. professor Clennon King, the former history teacher at Alcorn College?

Well, he has had it—but good.

Pending is a request to Bishop Frederick D. Jordan, prelate of the Eighth AME District, to be transferred to Africa.

Reason? The colored people of Gulfport, Miss., where he pastors, do not appreciate him and the white are against him.

To think, all of his troubles started when he attacked the NAACP.

* * *

LAST WEEK this column warned that the hatchet men would seek to make pro-segregation propoganda of the attack upon the Rev. Martin Luther King.

Among the first to jump to the attack was William S. Morris, publisher and editor of the Augusta (Ga.) Herald.

In an editorial he asks: "Just how crazy is King's assailant?"

He intimates she isn't crazy at all, just weary of the rabble-rousing about segregation and integration.

* * *

"SHE HAS grown to mistrust" King, according to the editorial.

In the same issue the fact that a Cartersville, Ga., citizens unit sent money to King's attacker is played up.

* * *

ANOTHER AUGUSTA newspaperman made the news, last week.

Roy V. Harris, publisher of a weekly and president of the Citizens Council of America, Inc., told a cheering crowd:

"We are engaged in the greatest crusade in the history of mankind."

He added: "If you're a white man, then it's time to stand up with us, or black your face and get on the other side."

* * *

HIS SIX-POINT plan of action is as follows:

1. Reduction of all political campaign issues in all state and local elections to a single question, "Who's the strongest man for segregation?"
2. A boycott of merchants who fail to join and actively support racial segregation.
3. A "straightening out" for clergymen who preach "the brotherhood of man."
4. Chasing Ralph McGill, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, "clean out of the state of Georgia."
5. A fight against all agencies of mass communications—newspapers, magazines, radio and television stations.
6. Absolute defiance of all federal court rulings favoring racial integration "by every means and at any cost."

* * *

SUCH ARE the people who form the hard core of resistance in the South.

These are the people the Federal Government is handling with kid gloves.

Their hearts can't be changed, nor can they be "educated," as President Eisenhower insists.

They understand only one language: Obey the law or go to jail.

VAL WASHINGTON

Takes firm stand; hits school closing

Dat-10-4-58

WASHINGTON (NNPA)—President Eisenhower Thursday criticized Governors J. Lindsey Almond of Virginia and Orval Faubus for the closing of public schools in their states to avoid complying with Federal court orders for desegregation of public schools.

In a letter to J. Albert Rolston, chairman of the Committee for Public Education, Charlottesville, Va., Mr. Eisenhower said the consequences of the closing of schools in those two states would be "disastrous" to the nation and the children affected.

The letter was regarded as perhaps the strongest statement the President has made on school integration since the Supreme Court decision outlawing racially segregated public schools.

IN IT HE said the belief in the equality of all men is a part of the religious faith of the American people and "substantial progress" toward achieving the ideal of the equality of man was being made, but the closing of the schools represented a "material setback" in the right to a public education.

Mr. Eisenhower's letter was in reply to a telegram Mr. Rolston sent him on Sept. 17, expressing appreciation for the President's recognition of the Charlottesville Committee for Public Education and endorsement of its aims as set forth in a statement issued by Attorney General William P. Rogers on the day before.

Mr. Rogers, after conferring with President Eisenhower on Sept. 16, announced that the Justice Department had received reports from both Virginia and Arkansas "concerning efforts on the part of parents and children to prevail upon the responsible state officials to open the public schools."

* * *

MR. ROGERS' prepared statement said: "The reports received from the communities involved indicate that the serious impact of what it means to have the public schools closed is beginning to be keenly felt and its significance more fully appreciated."

The text of Mr. Rolston's telegram, addressed to President Eisenhower at the Summer White House, Newport, R.I., follows:

"The Charlottesville Committee for Public Education wishes to express to you its greatest appreciation for your recognition of our group and endorsement of our aims as set forth in the statement as issued by your Attorney General yesterday.

"The fact that you know and approve of the efforts of Charlottesville's parents and children to prevail upon the responsible state officers to open the public schools is heartwarming and encouraging.

"AS EVIDENCE that the important human factor of good judgment and civic responsibility to which you refer in your statement are indeed beginning to play a much more important role, we would like respectfully to report to you that membership in our committee and support of our program is pyramiding throughout our city.

The response is inspiring and heart-warming. It convinces us beyond the shadow of a doubt that the people of this American community stand solidly in favor of our public education system.

"Our platform, as unanimously endorsed at our organization meeting just three short days ago and subscribed to by hundreds of new members who have joined with us since, is as follows:

"1. WE ARE determined to pursue every legal means to keep public schools open.

"2. We are here concerned with neither encouraging integration nor perpetuating segregation.

"3. We oppose any permanent arrangement which entrusts public education to private hands having no responsibility or accountability to the general public.

"4. We have faith in Charlottesville's ability to meet its public education problems."

* * *

THE TEXT OF the President's reply to Mr. Rolston follows:

"Thank you for your telegram of Sept. 17.

"I deeply regret the action of Virginia and Arkansas in closing schools that are subject to integration orders of the Federal Courts. The direct consequences to the children in those schools and the eventual consequences to our nation could be disastrous.

"Their education seemingly has no present prospect of early resumption. For this cessation, they are given a reason which is contrary to one of the generally accepted basic ideals of our country.

"MOST OF US in the U.S., as part of our religious faith, believe that all men are equal in the sight of God. Indeed, our forefathers enshrined this belief in the Declaration of Independence as a self-evident truth.

"Just as we strive to live up to our fundamental convictions, we constantly strive to achieve this ideal of the equality of man.

"We had been making progress toward that goal. The closing of the schools, however, represents a material setback not only in that progress, but in what we have come to regard as a fundamental human right—the right to a public education.

"I fervently hope that the schools will reopen soon and that progress toward our goal will resume."

THE COMMITTEE for Public Education was organized by 200 persons at a meeting Sept. 14, and reported a membership of 500 at its second meeting. It describes its goal as the opening of public schools and has declared it is concerned "with neither encouraging integration nor perpetuating segregation."

Mr. Rolston is a chemical engineer at the ordnance research laboratory at the University of Virginia. He has held that position for the past six years. He was born in Georgia and grew up in Tennessee and North Carolina.

Alaska Expected To Favor Demos In First State Voting

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — In city, village and arctic outposts through this vast northern land voters will cast their ballots Tuesday in the nation's last election of 1958 and Alaska's first as the 49th state.

More than one-fifth of Alaska's 200,000 plus residents are expected to visit the 287 polling places despite cold, snow and wintertime darkness near the top of the world.

For the first time they will choose two U.S. senators, one congressman, their own governor, a secretary of state and a 60-member State Legislature.

The voting will take place in four major election districts and 24 local districts stretching nearly 2,400 miles from Ketchikan to Barrow, and to within sight of Soviet soil in the Bering Strait. The new state covers 586,400 square miles, nearly 2½ times the size of Texas.

WAITING ELECTION

Not until the results of the election are certified will President Eisenhower issue a proclamation, probably in December or January, admitting Alaska as the Union's 49th state.

But that is only a formality. In essence Alaska will take its first steps in swaddling statehood clothes when the polls open at 8 a.m. local time.

Selection of two U.S. senators will bring the Senate's membership to 98. With Alaska still to be counted the Democrats held control 62-34. The Democratic edge in the House was 282-153.

The Democratic tide in the Nov. 4 general election in 47 states portended victory for most of the party's candidates in Alaska—but Republicans campaigned hard and had help from Vice President Nixon and Interior Secretary Seaton in the final weeks.

Democrats are expected to win control of the first State Legislature, perhaps with as great a majority as they held in the 1957 territorial session. They controlled the House 21-3 and Senate 11-5. As a state Alaska will have a Legislature of 20 senators and 40 representatives.

One major race has been virtually conceded. E. L. (Bob) Bartlett, 54, Democratic nonvoting delegate in Congress for 14 years, was regarded as a certain winner for one of the U.S. Senate seats. He has had little campaign opposition from Republican candidate R. E. Robertson, 73, and independent Keith Capper.

REPUBLICAN HAS EDGE

Republican Mike Stepovich, 39, was believed to have a slight edge over Democrat Ernest Gruening, 71, in a battle between two former Alaska governors for the other Senate seat.

A drawing when they take their seats in January will determine the length of the terms of the first Alaska senators.

The congressional contest between Democrat Ralph Rivers, 55, and Republican Henry Benson, 48, appeared a tossup.

Democrat William Egan, 44, was favored to win the governorship over John Butrovich Jr., 48, the Republican nominee.

Dixie Democrats Give Little Cash

Report Shows Contributions Small From South

GOP DONATIONS LISTED

By MORRIS CUNNINGHAM

From The Commercial Appeal Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—Dixie Democrats are contributing little cash to the Democratic National Committee these days, a report filed with the clerk of the House showed Monday.

The report showed the committee, headed by controversial Chairman Paul Butler, received a total of $110,256 in contributions between Sept. 1 and Oct. 24.

Big Gifts Deficient

Contributions of less than $100 were not itemized. But those of more than $100 were. It was in this latter category that the Southern deficiency was evident.

It was apparent many leading Southern Democrats are irked at the invitations that Chairman Paul Butler has made, asking the Southerners to join in the civil rights program or take a walk from the party.

Of $45,330 received in amounts of $100 or more, Dixie contributors supplied only $8,983.

The Davidson County Democratic Executive Committee of Nashville headed the list with a contribution of $2,817. The Young Democratic Clubs of Alabama and a Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner in Trenton, N. C., contributed $2,506 each.

The Anderson County Democratic Women's Club of Oak Ridge, Tenn., contributed $366, and W. T. Moran of Houston, Texas, $200. All other itemized Dixie contributions were for an even $100.

Two $100 From Arkansas

Two $100 contributions came from Arkansas. One was from the Lincoln County Democratic Committee, Allen Tarver, chairman, Star City, Ark. The other was from Sadie Overton, State Hospital, Little Rock.

Another was from Milton K. Cummings, 1204 Ward Avenue, Huntsville, Ala.

The report also listed unpaid pledges totaling $25,251. Under this heading Sam Wilhite of Aberdeen, Miss., was listed as having an unpaid balance of $220 on his pledge. And Representative Paul C. Jones of Kennett, Mo., was listed as "owing" $75.

A report on disbursements disclosed that the national committee paid $2,820 in September for rental of offices, pays Chairman Butler a salary at the rate of $25,000 a year, had a payroll of $9,489 for the week ending Oct. 18, and subscribes to the Arkansas Gazette.

A study of the Republican National Committee's report, filed Saturday for the Sept. 1 to Oct. 20 period, showed more contributions of $100 or more from the South than the Democratic report.

$4,000 From Arkansas Unit

Heading Dixie contributions to the GOP committee was $4,000 from the Arkansas GOP State Committee. Others of more than $100 included Millsaps Fitzhugh, 2724 Lombardy, Memphis, $750, and Dyer Butterfield, Lookout Mountain, Tenn., $100.

The Republican report also itemized contributions of less than $100. Some of these included G. L. Mallory, Little Rock, $5; Frederick McIntosh, 736 South Dudley, Memphis, $30; Howard E. Lucy, Little Rock, $25; Calvin Mahan, Charleston, Ark., $5; R. W. Ruff, Solgohachia, Ark., $30; James L. Cook, Rogers, Ark., $10, and W. E. Thorpe, 1420 Union, Memphis, $30.

The GOP report listed total contributions of $251,285 during the covered period. The disbursement report did not list a salary for Chairman Meade Alcorn, but indicated the total outlay for salaries is greater than the Democratic committee's.

Events Point To A 1960 North-South Split Among Democrats

BY ROSCOE DRUMMOND

WASHINGTON

EVENTS POINT UNMISTAKABLY, I think, to a new North-South split in the Democratic Party which will make the Democratic alignment of 1948 look like child's play.

The impending breach in Democratic ranks is now visible. It could have larger consequences in 1960 than the Strom Thurmond third party did ten years ago when it took four Southern states from President Truman and nearly cost him the election.

There are two reasons why a Southern states' rights party can be far more formidable and more hurtful to the Democrats nationally than it was in 1948:

1. The Southern walk-out in the 1948 Democratic convention sprang from a plank in the platform which promised too much in the field of civil rights.

This time the forces which are making for a Southern walk-out spring, not from words, not from promises in the platform, but from live events; they spring from the reality of the Supreme Court decision making public school segregation unconstitutional and from the events which have flowed from it. The incentive to a Southern third party is greater today than in 1948 and it will therefore be a much more powerful third party.

No Civil Rights Compromise Is Seen To Be In Prospect

2. IN 1948 MANY NORTHERN Democrats wanted to compromise the civil rights dispute and President Truman himself opposed the stronger civil rights plank. In consequence the Thurmond third party had only limited success.

This time there is no inclination and no prospect of compromise on either side. Each side believes it must take an uncompromising position in order to survive politically. Northern Democratic candidates can't carry their states if they oppose integration, and Southern Democratic candidates can't win if they support integration.

That's the nub of it and it seems to me that the Northern Democrats face this dilemma: They know that they may well lose the presidency in 1960 because of a Southern third party, but they also know that they haven't a chance of winning the presidency in 1960 unless they take a stand on civil rights which will compel the Southerners to start a third party.

In other words, the Democratic Party cannot win the presidency without a ticket and a platform which alienates the South and unlike 1948, this time they may not be able to win because the alienation of the South will be so complete.

This is why a North-South split in the Democratic Party now seems as inevitable as the nomination of Richard Nixon by the Republicans.

Crevices In Ranks Are Already Breaking Open

WHAT IS SIGNIFICANT now is that the crevices in the Democratic ranks which will almost certainly lead to the 1960 split are already breaking open.

The shape of things to come began to show itself in Louisiana last week. The telltale event was the action of the Louisiana Democratic State Central Committee seeking to oust Camille F. Gravel as the Louisiana member of the Democratic National Committee and demanding that the National Committee accept his removal so that another could be elected to his place.

The reasons? They are that Southerner Gravel had been consorting too cooperatively with Northern Democratic liberals, that as a member of the Democratic Advisory Committee he had supported several integration resolutions which other Southerners wanted him to oppose and because he had said that "a lot of people in the South realize the justice of the Supreme Court decision on school integration."

Gravel Is Great Supporter Of Kennedy

THE EVENT WILL NOT stop there. Mr. Gravel, himself a man of conviction and a great supporter of Sen. Kennedy of Massachusetts for the 1960 nomination, is not planning to yield. He is not going to resign and the Democratic National Committee, holding that it is the sole judge of its membership, is not going to allow the Louisiana State Committee to purge him.

The impasse which the Louisiana Democrats and the National Committee face over Mr. Gravel is exactly the same impasse which will arise between the Northern and Southern wings of the party in 1960. Since I see no way they can compromise, the result will likely be a bigger split than in 1948.—©

Democratic Party Chairman For Strong Civil Rights

A strong civil rights platform is a necessity in the Democratic Party's national campaign and one which must be adhered to, even at the risk of losing the South, Paul M. Butler said in an article in the New York Times.

The Democratic Party chairman said his party could win again in 1960 only by "taking a forthright and positive stand" on the issue, according to an article by Russell Baker.

Baker wrote: "Mr. Butler's statement was significant not so much for its sentiment—he has been saying essentially the same thing for the last month—but for its timing."

The article continued: "In the wake of Tuesday's big victory, the Democratic Congressional leadership has already started moving to hold Southern and Liberal factions together by restraining both sides from taking strong and emotional advance commitments on the issue.

"Mr. Butler, who has rarely been in political stride with his party's Congressional leaders, suggested today that the party could win in 1960 even if the South bolted, a suggestion scarcely calculated to fill the Southerners with goodwill.

"Asked whether the Democratic party would win the Presidency without the Southern states, he replied that President Harry S. Truman had won in 1948 despite the loss of some Southern States as well as New York.

"The essence of the Congressional leadership's view on civil rights has been, as illustrated in the Civil Rights Act of 1957, that some progress can be made if both sides are willing to accept compromises.

"Mr. Butler, by contrast, said the party could win nationally only if it took a most forthright and positive stand in the area of human rights.' He added that he could see no place for compromise on what was' a moral, not a political, issue.'

"Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas, who will be the Senate Democratic leader for the next two years, set forth a twelve-point legislative program for the next Congress in a speech at Big Spring, Tex.

"His tewlve points did not include civil rights legislation, but Mr. Johnson took the line that progress might be made in this area if both sides approached the problem in a spirit of conciliation.

"Mr. Butler said he found nothing in the Johnson program, to disagree with. But, he said, he is sure more points will be added. He said he hoped that Congress would seriously consider expanding civil rights protection beyond the right to vote.

"Whether he remains as national chairman for the next two years will be decided by his stand on civil rights, Mr. Butler said.

"The chairmanship will be decided next month when the Democratic National Committee meets here to survey its position and choose a city for the 1960 national convention.

"It will meet Dec. 4 and 5 to hear bids from Miami Beach, Atlantic City, New York, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Philadelphia and Chicago," the article said.

Manifesto Warfare

The Scopes plot campaign of chaos, turmoil

By Samuel Hoskins

WASHINGTON

It was a blunt statement, put bluntly and without apology.

"Let us talk plainly. The Southern Democrats are making war on the colored citizens and on colored children."

It was made by Roy Wilkins, NAACP executive secretary, in a letter to officers of the organization.

WILKINS SAID to wage that war, Southern Democrats (also known as Dixiecrats) are willing to do three things:

- Tear up the U.S. Constitution.
- Ignore the White House.
- Defy the U.S. Supreme Court.

DIXIECRATS cannot very well tear up the Constitution as long as the Supreme Court stands in their way.

There also is a limit beyond which they dare not go when it comes to ignoring the White House.

(Remember the 101st Division paratroops at Little Rock?

Consequently, the strategy is to attack the Court.

* * *

SO WHILE the Dixiecrats are screaming defiance, they also are busy on a campaign to curb the powers of the Court in the next session of Congress.

They hope to do this by passing a law to counter Article VI, clause 2, of the U.S. Constitution, which states:

"This Constitution and the laws of the United States . . . shall be the supreme law of the land . . . anything in the Constitution or laws of any State to the contrary notwithstanding."

* * *

IF THEY can nullify this part of the Constitution, they will be able to knock the props from under the Court's desegregation rulings.

The reason is there is no Federal statute that puts a criminal penalty on disobedience of the Court's desegregation rulings.

Without such a criminal statute, the only other provision is state officials may be jailed or fined for contempt of court if they disobey orders specifically and personally directed against them.

(This is the only reason Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas has not re-opened the Little Rock schools on a segregated basis.)

* * *

IF THE defiant Dixiecrats can curb this power of the Supreme Court, they feel they can successfully delay or even defeat school desegregation in the South.

The architect of this strategy is Senator James O. Eastland, Democrat of Mississippi.

Launching the anti-Supreme Court campaign, he told Southerners:

"You are not required to obey any court which passes out such a (desegregation) ruling.

"In fact, you are obligated to defy it."

OBVIOUSLY, Eastland is not alone.

Senators Russell, Georgia; Thurmond, South Carolina; McClellan, Arkansas, and Gov. Almond, Virginia, are all Dixiecrat generals in the war against colored citizens and school children.

In his letter to NAACP officials, Wilkins pointed out how freedom-loving citizens outside the South can help win the war against the Dixiecrats.

He suggests that before the Nov. 4 elections all voters do the following:

1 ASK CANDIDATES of both parties for both the House and Senate to pledge to vote against all bills in the next Congress aimed at curbing the authority of the Supreme Court.

2. Ask candidates of both parties for senator to pledge to vote on the opening day for the new Senate to adopt its own rules.

ONLY IN this way can the filibuster Rule 22 be changed.

If the new Senate organizes itself under the old standing rules, then the filibuster will remain undisturbed and the fight for civil rights will remain hamstrung.

Wilkins sums up his advice in this manner:

Keep your eye on the political effort to shackle the Supreme Court.

Stop cussing Arkansas (which won't do any good) and use your vote (which will do some good).

Four Declare Opposition To Loyalty Oath In Sixth District Campaign For Committee

(Editor's Note: This is the sixth and final article in a series devoted to the campaigns for membership to the State Democratic Executive Committee. The purpose of this series was to inform readers of The Advertiser as to how the candidates felt about the one overriding issue in the campaign—the Loyalty Oath.)

By BOB INGRAM

Opponents of the Loyalty Oath in the Sixth Congressional District at the very best cannot hope to win solid control of the eight seats to be filled on the committee in next week's primary election.

A poll of the 14 candidates showed that in the Sixth District the States Rights group did not enter a full slate. Of the 13 men who participated in the survey, only four declared their opposition to the oath.

Nine others declared their support of the oath and one candidate—Bruce Jones of Tuscaloosa—did not reply to questionnaries sent him by The Advertiser and The Associated Press.

The four who opposed the oath do so in no uncertain manner. They are Sen. David M. Hall of Eutaw, James B. Laseter of Tuscaloosa, H. Coleman Long of Uniontown and John D. McQueen Jr., of Tuscaloosa.

Long declared the "right to vote must remain free an uncoerced."

"We have lost all influence at the national level by this gag rule," he declared. "We must back our ideas with our votes."

Laseter, noting that no other state had such an oath, warned that it was causing "the Republican Party to grow in Alabama."

Sen. Hall made much the same observation.

"No other Southern state blindly binds itself as does the present oath in Alabama," Hall said, "we should use the type of oath which has served us well in the past."

SIXTH CONGRESSIONAL DISTRICT

Voters residing in Bibb, Chilton, Greene, Hale, Perry, Shelby, Sumter and Tuscaloosa counties will elect eight of the candidates listed below. We suggest you clip this box for use at the polls May 6.

Hall said an oath wtihin the was acceptable, but not one which extended to the national level.

Jeff B. deGraffenried of Tuscaloosa, in support of the oath, said that "in order to survive politically one must be a member of one of the two parties."

"For the South there should be only one choice — Federal troops have never occupied any part of the South during Democratic administrations" he added.

Jack McGuire, who described himself as "A loyal Democrat all the way," said the oath prevented "splints, splinters or bolters."

"It is a choice of our fine party or that of Ike, Tricky Dick and Little Rock," McGuire said. "It's that simple to me."

Former Adj. Gen. W. D. Partlow Jr., now practicing law in Tuscaloosa, replied briefly that he felt the oath "is best for the Democratic Party."

Eight Committee Hopefuls Opposed To Loyalty Oath

A widespread campaign throughout the Third District to elect a slate of eight members of the State Democratic Executive Committee opposed to the party loyalty oath was under way as the May 6 primary drew near. Cards bearing the names of the loyalty oath opponents were being circulated and word was being spread that the loyalty oath shackles Alabama Democrats to the Northern radical element of the party.

With eight members to be elected from the District, the eight anti-loyalists could sweep the ticket if all won election.

Opponents of the oath in the District are outspoken in their opposition, contending that the loyalty oath binds in advance the people of Alabama to support any platform, however humiliating to the South and however disruptive of the Southern way of life.

The eight committee candidates who are pledged against the loyalty oath are W. H. Garner, Union Springs, C. W. Johnson, Dothan, Hugh D. Kirkland, Newville, Sam Engelhardt, Shorter O. P. Lee, Opelika, Dan R. Morgan, Dothan, Joe Sanders, Dothan, and S. Foy Williams, Dothan.

Alabama Rejects Loyalty Oath As States' Righters Assume Control

Democratic Party loyalists in Alabama received a stinging defeat this past week, when voters in that neighboring state delegated control of their Democratic Executive Committee to States' Rights candidates. Tuesday's balloting placed 39 States' Righters and 33 Democratic Loyalists on the committee, at last count.

Voter action in this phase may prove more important that the gubernatorial election which gave John Patterson Alabama's governorship over Judge George Wallace. Control of Democratic Party machinery in Alabama by States' Righters might conceivably decide the outcome of the presidential campaign in 1960.

Defeated loyalists supported the controversial oath of loyalty to the National Democratic Party. They would have required all candidates in the state 1960 primary, including presidential electors, to pledge support in advance to the nominees and platform of the subsequent Democratic National Convention, in addition to nominees of the Alabama primary.

Since 1930, Alabama Democrats have had a loyalty oath for primary candidates to pledge allegiance to party nominees. In 1952, the oath was spelled out to include national nominees after Democratic loyalists had regained control of their state Executive Committee from those who led the States' Rights revolt against the Truman-Barkley ticket. The oath applied only to candidates and not to Alabama voters generally.

Now, however, this controversial loyalty oath seems certain to be junked before the 1960 presidential race, since States' Rights candidates have gained a comfortable majority on the Democratic Executive Committee as a result of Tuesday's voting.

During the recent campaign, States' Rights candidates for the committee contended that the people of Alabama "are too intelligent to bind themselves in advance to a national party which insults them at every turn." They also reminded that "other Southern states have realized this fact long ago and do not require the loyalty oath." Such an oath has been discussed occasionally in Mississippi but has never made much headway.

National Democratic Party leaders can find no comfort whatsoever in Alabama's rejection of the loyalty oath this past week. Alabamians appear to have served clear-cut notice that they cannot be counted in the lump, and that they are in no mood to have objectionable candidates and platforms crammed down their throats in 1960. There are growing indications that many people of other Southern states, including Mississippians, feel the same way.

has served 12 years as presiding elder and district superintendent, and as pastor of two charges for 12 years.

In 1934 Dr. Wroten was sent to be presiding elder of the Corinth District where he served with distinction for four years. He next served as pastor of the First Methodist Church at Columbus for six years. As pastor of this great church his work was outstanding. During the next six years of his ministry he was district superintendent of the Greenville District, now Cleveland.

This district made definite progress under his leadership as he continued to promote the total program of the Methodist Church. The next six years he served as pastor at Louisville. . . two years ago he was sent to the Cleveland District where he has given the last two active years of his ministry to leading the ministers and laymen to greater victories.

Through his long and fruitful ministry, Dr. Wroten has served in many places of Methodist leadership. The Church has honored him with great responsibilities. He has been a trustee of Millsaps College for many years.

Though he has reached the age where the Church has decreed that he must retire from the active ministry, Dr. Wroten will continue to make many worthwhile contributions to the cause of Methodism in Mississippi.

Demo Leader Hits GOP Claim of Making Inroads in Sou

Wilhite Declares 'Skeletons Are in Closet'

(The Times-Picayune Capital Bureau)

JACKSON, Miss.—A regional representtive of the national Democratic party said here Wednesday that claims by Republican leaders that the Democratic party is "dead" in the South are aimed at hiding "skeletons in the closet" of the GOP.

Sam Wilhite, who represents the Democratic national committee in nine Southeastern states, charged here that Southern states "will never again" be led by "a bunch of false promises" to support the Republican party.

Wilhite, West Point, Miss., native and former administrative assistant to former Gov. Hugh White, made the observation here as a rejoinder to an attack on the Democratic party by I. Lee Potter, special assistant to the Republican national committee.

DOWNFALL SEEN

Last week Potter, who is assigned to Southern states, said in Charleston, W. Va., that the Republican party's inroads in 1952 and 1956 had started the downfall of Democrats in the South.

"Mr. Potter reminds me of the little boy who is walking past the graveyard at night whistling to assure himself that those aren't real skeletons he sees," Wilhite declared.

The Democratic party representative said the "skeletons are right out of the Republican closet where they have been hidden from the public's view."

WILHITE REPLIES

Wilhite charged that reports from Washington Tuesday on a congressional probe linking presidential assistant Sherman Adams to a Massachusetts industrialist "shows a new way of peddling influence on the Washington scene, right out of the White House."

Southern industry, Wilhite said, "cannot keep pace with the displacement of farm workers caused by the Benson farm program.

His reference was to a statement attributed to Secretary of Agriculture Benson advising displaced farm workers to find jobs in industry.

AFL-CIO Meeting Flays Southerners To Please Negroes

Globe Nashville Tenn. Jul-10-58

"Liberals" Have Been Smoked Out And May Be Forced To Deprive Many Of South's Stalwarts Of Their Dominance In Congress; Political Action Group of Unions Issues Warning Of Probable Action In New Congress

Negro Democrats Up North have pleaded for sometime to the white "liberals" of the North to cut their alliance with the Southern wing of their party to make sure that Negro Democrats will remain in the Democrat fold.

While for a long time the Demorcat Party, as a whole, never did anything more than to assure Negro Democrats that they need not "pester" their minds over the fact that the Southerners appeared to hold a higher hand with the Northern "liberals" and Big City bosses than Negro voters, now it appears these Northerners are beginning to "speak out" in meetings and express their disgust with the way their party stalwarts Down South continue to say and do things which make it appear to the Negro allies that actually, they had no business "monkeying around" in the Democrat Party in the first place. This has been because the Democrat Party split in twain, away back there just before the Civil War, over the Negro.

Although the Democrats were able to "mend the split," enough to get their party going after the Civil War, it still was well understood by Negro leaders and rank and file as well that the Democrat Party, as a whole was dedicated to the proposition that Democratas were the "white man's Party."

In the present era, that is beginning with 1932, the Democrats put over a fast one with the colored brethren Up North. They nominated Franklin D. Roosevelt for president and sent him forth to make full use of the "Roosevelt name and fame," which had been made famous by Theodore Roosevelt.

Teddy's several sons and also his distinguished daughter, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, never did have much dealing with Franklin D. Roosevelt. Nevertheless the Democrats made no effort to dispel the rumor which got out in some colored circles in 1932 saying that Franklin D., was a son of "Teddy." Then as now a favorite slogan of Democrats, with regard even to their Negro supporters was: "Treat 'em rough and tell 'em nothing." This they did following the election of FDR and Harry S. Truman.

The world-wide depression of 1928 29 was just what the doctors ordered to help the Democrats to latch on to a powerful contingent of Negro voters Up North. Democrats were able to lay hands upon money like nobody's business and part with plenty of it to the colored "man and brother," to hear the Northern "liberals tell it." The Southerners with no intention whatever of carrying out any platform pledge to Negroes, nevertheless were glad to go along with the Democrats as long as what the liberals did for the Negro merely was Up North stuff; they knew that nothing in the shape of civil rights for the Negro had the ghost of a show of emerging Down South.

Globe 8-4

FDR was too smart to talk any civil rights Down South. Mrs. FDR was his spokesman in Dixie, which she visited often. She is closer kin to "Teddy" Roosevelt than was Franklin D. was a mere fifth cousin of "Teddy." But up to now it doesn't seem that the talkative Mrs. Eleanor has as yet been able to "hit it off" with Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth.

Jul-10-58

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt showed her true color in the 1956 presidential campaign. She blasted Congressman Adam Clayton Powell for coming out for Eisenhower. Talked ever so much like she believed that the Democrats and not a Republican issued the Emancipation Proclamation in 1863. She chastized Congressman Powell for "misleading his race." You would have thought Adam Powell was an unlettered politician instead of being, as he was and is, the son of a noted Baptist pastor, the late Rev. Clayton Powell, long time leader of the great Baptist congregation in Harlem, Abyssinian Baptist Church.

Congressman Powell was educated at Colgate University. On his own, he has moral courage, willing to oppost either Democrats or Republicans when he disagrees with their policies. He opposed the Democrats "Do Nothing" policy on civil rights and supported Eisenhower in whom he had more confidence than he had in Adlai Stevenson and Vice Presidential candidate John Sparkman of Alabama.

Sparkman a Senator from Alabama has just come out with a ringing endorsement of the Democrat decision to dismember the County of Macon in which Tuskegee Institute, the well known school founded by Booker T. Washington is located. The Democrats have counted noses and have found out that in Macon County, Alabama, Negroes outnumber whites seven to one and right now the Republicans are beginning to make a noise like they believe that Negro citizens of Macon County and everywhere else Down South must be allowed to vote, same as they do in Nashville.

"Ike" says he is in favor of 'em voting and you know how "Ike" is about putting the Constitution into effect.

Vice President Nixon, believes like Ike. He says let every citizen cast his ballot, with no interference with the Negro's Constitutional right to vote for whom ever he pleases.

Maybe you can give the Northern Democrats credit for candor and righteousness at the beginning of this great year of Decision. They talk like they are fixing to do what Northern Negroes have been pleading for the liberals and big city boses to do for several years. That is throw the Southern Democrats overboard, saying they are excess baggage for the part of Roosevelt and Truman to be carrying. Northern Negroes call all the Southern politicians "Dixiecrats." That is not so, of course. Many Southern Democrats are just as fairminded, all things considered, as Nortnern Republicans.

If there had been any fairminded Southern Democrats in Macon County, Alabama, they could have been assured of the support of Negro voters in local elections on par with what Negroes in Nashville have stood for when such fine citizens as Mayor Ben West and Judge Briley have run for office.

Incidentally, the Democrats of Tennessee have the likes of the man Faubus in Arkansas and his counterpart Judge Senpolfield of Chattanooga. He will "be considered" for governor this year. He is, lest you forget, ex-governor Prentice Cooper.

It is difficult to tell actually what the Democrats as a whole are going to do about the bad situation which has developed in their party over the Negro membership in their party. Southern Democrats are sincere in still saying that theirs is the "white man's party."

Northern "liberals" profess their belief in the equality of Negroes with whites as members and have begun to make many gestures to show this to be true.

But finally, it appears the Northern Negroes have become dissatisfied with mere toleration as Democrats. They want the Southerners to lay off insisting on segregation and in harrassing the Supreme Court.

Eisenhower's action in sending Federal troops to Little Lock to uphold that city's decision to desegregate the all-white Central High school wa sa popular politically and Republicans are due to profit by the action of the President even though Ike is not known to do things merely for their political effect.

Northern Democrats are so scared over the Little Rock incident that they have belatedly decided to make it plain to the Southerners that they are hurting the party, and will insist that the Southerners wither ceases and resist their misbehavior or suffer the consequencies.

It will be an easy matter for the Northern "liberals" to for a coalition with the Republicans and deprive the Southerners of their dominance in congress, which is now the last stronghold the Southern Democrats have in national affairs.

In 1936 Roosevelt and Farley took from the Southerners the power they had to force the Northerners to submit to a rule requiring a two-thirds majority to nominate candidates for president and vice president.

That was deliberate action by the Northrerners to reassure the Negro Democrats that the Democrat Party at long last would be dominated by Northerners. The AFL-CIO now is the voice of the Democrats and is the source of campaign funds. At their recent national convention they spoke as follows:

"The opposition to civil rights legislation by Southerners (note they didn't say Southern Democrats) who dominate the Democratic Party in Congress, has tended more and more to alienate the Negro voters from their natural allies (Democrats, that is) the liberal Democrats of the North and West. Thus the anti-civil rights Southerners are depriving the Democratic Party of one essential force in the coalition that carried Roosevelt and Truman to victory and kept the New Deal and Fair Deal in office for 2 (probably means 20) years."

That is all the convention said specifically about civil rights. They didn't threaten to do anything to the politicians fighting civil rights. They may do nothing, for instance, to prevent the Democrats of the next congress from going into caucus, putting Eastland and Co., on congressional committees where they can deal a death blow to any of the civil rights pleas of Negroes whom AFL-CIO call the natural allies of the Democrats.

An so Democrat politicians are becoming frightened about the likelihood of the masses of Negroes foregoing to be the "natural allies" of the Democrats. AFL-CIO could keep the reactionaries off the vital committees of congress. They could strike on furnishing campaign funds.

Democrat bosses near from their National Chairman that the party can not hope to win unless they can retain the support of the Negro masses. They hear the same from nearly all of the Northern Democrat governors.

They hear from the distinguished Thurgood Marshall predicting the revolt of Negro Democrats from the Democrat party Up North; they are due to keep hearing from the colorful Congressman Adam Clayton Powell who likes Eisenhower as president better than he could have liked Stevenson.

Undoubtedly the Democrats are in bad and VERY BAD.

"THE BIG WHITE JAIL"

(From The New York Times)

Mr. Truman's before-breakfast stroll on Sunday took him past the house in Washington where he used to live. He seemed happy enough to be outside looking in instead of inside looking out. He referred, indeed, to the Executive Mansion as "the Big White Jail." When he got around on the south side, he took another look at the controversial balcony which he caused to be built some years ago and insisted that this was still a good idea. He ventured into even more dangerous grounds when he declared that the White House could be and should be expanded to give more office space without, as The Associated Press put it, "changing its architectual design or historic beauty."

But he didn't go in. This may have been because the approaches are not only guarded but carry signs that say "Stop" and "Do not enter." If Mr. Truman had looked at the morning papers—this one, anyhow—he might have noticed something about another former White House resident, a lady who we have just learned called herself "Dolley" Madison. It isn't quite the same building, because in 1914 it was burned by tourists from abroad. Subsequently, during Mr. Truman's Administration, it was remodeled so that it wouldn't fall down on future Presidents and their families.

It doesn't seem that anybody ever enjoyed being an ex-President quite as much as Mr. Truman does—all the more, perhaps, when he can inspect historic sites without responsibility and testify as he did yesterday before a Congressional committee without having to sign or veto any resulting legislation.

Bitter, Below-Surface Fight Being Waged In First District On Loyalty Oath Stand

(Editor's Note: This is the first in a series of articles on the races for State Democratic Executive Committee from the various Congressional districts. The purpose of this series is to inform the readers of The Advertiser on the stands taken by the candidates concerning the Loyalty Oath.)

By BOB INGRAM

A bitter, below-the-surface fight is being waged in the First Congressional District for membership on the State Democratic Executive Committee.

Eight members are to be elected from each of the state's nine congressional districts May 6, and it is in the First where those opposed to the controversial Loyalty Oath appear to be strongest.

Under the guiding hand of Gessner T. McCorvey of Mobile, a former chairman of the state committee, a full slate of anti-loyalists have been entered with several to spare.

By comparison there are but six men in the First District race who have publicly acknowledged they favor the continuation of the Loyalty Oath.

In an effort to inform the voters as to how each of the committee candidates stand or the important issue, The Advertiser mailed questionnaries to all 20 candidates in the race from the First District. Simultanelusly, an identical survey was made by the Associated Press.

The combined efforts of The

Advertiser and the AP resulted in replies from 18 of the 20 candidates. As indicated by the accompanying table, Huston Carter and Frank A. Massa, both of Mobile, responded to neighter questionnaire.

Of the remaining 18, all but one took a definite stand either for or against the Loyalty Oath. The lone exception was Sidney Van Antwerp of Mobile, who insisted he was not on either side.

"I'm not taking sides," Van Antwerp declared. "The first meeting of the new committee will not be until January, 1959 and I intend to wait until that time to make up my mind."

The anti-loyalists (they object to the identification of "Dixiecrats") outnumber the loyalists in the First District by a margin of 11-6.

In reply to the question: "Do you favor the repeal of the Loyalty Oath?", the following men answered in the affirmative:

Sam C. Blount of Millry, W. H. Bruce of Catherine, Frank Bunkley of Mobile, David R. Coley, III of Mobile, Paul E. Delchamps of Mobile, A. F. (Dick) DeVan of Mobile, Albert H. Evans Jr. of Butler; Roy E. Haag of Fruitdale, H. H. Matthews of Camden, John Marvin Shipp of Wagarville and Frank Thomas of Thomaston.

In favor of the Loyalty Oath and opposed to its repeal are H. Tom Cochran, Mylan R. Engel, Wallace M. Johnston, Ed Kahalley and E. Allen Sullivan, all of Mobile, and John M. Coxwell of Monroeville.

Five of the men in the race are now members of the State Committee — Blount, Devan, Evans, Haag and Matthews.

An active campaign is being waged in behalf of the anti-loyalists by the Mobile Committee of States' Rights Democrats, of which McCorvey is a member.

The candidates polled by The Advertiser were given an opportunity to express their views on the Loyalty Oath, and most of them did in an outspoken manner.

Some of the replies received were:

Bruce: "I do not delieve our candidates should be pledged to national candidates who in all probability will be anti-South in their views and platforms."

Cochran—"It is essentil for Alabama to maintain its present position of influence in the National Democratic Party in order to present our views and beliefs within the party."

Bunkley: "I do not think it is any more necessary than it is in other Southern states."

(Alabama is the only state with a Loyalty Oath.)

Delchamps—"It is not right or conceivable that state Democratic candidates would be forced to pledge support to National Party nominees, prior to their selection and adoption as candidates."

Kahalley: "The repeal of the Loyalty Oath would allow the Democratic Party to be infiltrated by those who would destroy the party and its principles and use the party for their own selfish and greedy purposes."

Move started to knock out loyalty oath

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

Another campaign aimed at knocking out Alabama's Democratic loyalty pledge for candidates, which was attempted four years ago and which has the long-range objective of unseating both Sen. Lister Hill and Sen. John Sparkman, was underway today.

It is being spearheaded by Dixiecrats and "Eisenhower Democrats" in an effort to regain control of the State Democratic Executive Committee.

HILL SPARKMAN

They are still smarting from action of Hill and Sparkman, who, aided by several other Alabama congressmen, took the stump in 1950 to help wrest control of the state party governing body from those who led the 1948 revolt against the national Democratic presidential ticket.

SLATES OF anti-loyalty oath candidates for state committee have been lined up in each of the nine congressional districts. They are opposing Democratic Party regulars who are running as candidates to retain the loyalty oath for candidates. Eight committeemen will be elected in each district.

This oath was readopted Jan. 25 by the State Democratic Executive Committee by a 56 to 2 vote.

If the anti-loyalty oath fight is successful this year, it could lead to another bolt from the National Democratic Party, such as occurred in 1948 when Dixiecrat leaders controlled the party's policymaking organization.

OLD-LINE Democrats, led by Sens. Sparkman and Hill and U. S. Reps. Albert Rains, Bob Jones and other members of the congressional delegation, made speeches throughout Alabama in 1950 in behalf of "stick-by-the-party" candidates for state committee.

Their side triumphed, winning 44 of the 72 seats on the committee.

The fight was centered on the fact that no presidential elector candidates for the national Democratic Party ticket of Truman and Barkley were on the 1948 Alabama ballot.

ALABAMA'S 11 presidential elector candidates were pledged against the national Democratic Party nominees, and they voted for the States' Rights ticket of Thurmond and Wright. Alabama joined with Louisiana, Mississippi and South Carolina in supporting the Thurmond-Wright ticket, as did one presidential elector from Tennessee.

The 1950 fight over control of the State Democratic Executive Committee was repeated in 1954 when candidates pledged to support the loyalty oath won 61 of the 72 seats on the party governing body.

SPARKMAN, Democratic vice presidential nominee in 1952, comes up for reelection in 1960, with Sen. Hill's seat open in 1962.

Former State Democratic Chairman Ben Ray, commenting on the attacks on the loyalty pledge for candidates by Dixiecrats and Eisenhower "Democrats," asserted they were heading "a dead-end movement."

Among those helping lead this year's fight on the loyalty oath are Mobile's Gessner T. McCorvey, who was chairman of the state committee during the 1948 revolt, and Montgomery's Frank J. Mizell Jr. Mizell was one of the two state committee members who voted for readoption of the loyalty oath Jan. 25.

McCORVEY SAID, "We have a slate of eight good men running for the state committee in the First Congressional District. And I understand the same is true in other districts."

Mizell said, "All we want to do is change the loyalty oath to require candidates to support nominees of their party in Alabama and not tie their hands to support anyone the national party decides to run."

The loyalty oath was spelled out by the state committee in 1952 to require candidates in Alabama Democratic primary elections to pledge they would support all Democratic nominees, including those for president and vice president.

As May primary draws nearer—

Bitter battle over Demo loyalty oath is certain to get hotter

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 8—The long and bitter fight over the controversial loyalty oath for candidates in Alabama's Democratic primary elections is certain to get hotter and more heetic during the next eight weeks before May 6 voting day.

The battle again has been joined between "stick-by-party" Democrats, who have refused to break away from the national Democratic Party, and "free Democrats," or would-be bolters, who emphasize they want no part of the national party.

Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee and strong supporter of the loyalty pledge recently readopted by the committee by a 56 to 2 vote, Friday certified a total of 175 qualifiers as candidates for the 72 seats on the party governing body.

Senators lead fight

OPPOSING SLATES have been lined up in all nine congressional districts, with eight committee members to be elected from each.

The fight is for control of the state committee, which was held by those who bolted from the national Democratic Party in 1948 to support the States' Rights presidential ticket of Thurmond and Wright.

Led by Sens. Lister Hill and John Sparkman, and aided by several other Alabama congressmen, stick-by-party Democrats wrested control from the bolter forces in a torrid scrap in 1950.

Chairman Mayhall and former Chairman Ben Ray were among other "stick-by-party" campaigners fighting alongside Sparkman and Hill that year. And their side won 44 of the 72.

Oath is readopted

FOUR YEARS LATER—in the equally heated 1954 fight—these campaigners, aided by other loyalists up and down the state, won 61 of 72 committee places.

It was in 1952, two years after the 1950 battle between the groups, that the state committee adoped a spelled-out loyalty oath to require candidates to pledge they would support all Democratic Party nominees, including those for president and vice president.

As readopted this year, the loyalty oath bars as candidates in primary elections those who supported the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket in 1956 or "failed or refused" to support the Democratic nominees.

Actually, Alabama Democrats had had a loyalty oath since 1930 to require candidates in primary elections to pledge loyalty to party nominees in this state. That was adopted to bar the late U. S. Sen. Tom Heflin from running again as a Democrat, after he bolted against Al Smith as Democratic presidential nominee in 1928.

Mizell raps Mayhall

FRANK MIZELL JR., Montgomery attorney and veteran committee member, who has opposed the spell-out loyalty oath and was one of the two members voting against its readoption, said:

"All we want to do is change the loyalty oath to require candidates to support nominees of their party in Alabama and not tie their hands to support anyone the national party decides to run."

Mizell sharply criticized Chairman Mayhall for permitting Perry L. Thompson, Negro janitor in a Bessemer plant and radio announcer, to qualify as candidate for lieutenant governor.

Mizell said the Negro should be questioned as to his stand on segregation. He added that if Thompson's position is inconsistent "with the racial segregation principles of our party, the chairman should refuse certification."

The Democratic Party long has printed—and still does—the words "White Supremacy" over a crowing rooster emblem at the top of primary election ballot forms.

Hearing promised

JUDGE MAYHALL told Mizell that he would set the matter down for public hearing, if "legal grounds" were presented to block Thompson's candidacy.

But Mizell said such a hearing would be "unnecessary and expensive," in renewing his request that the chairman bar Thompson as a candidate.

Judge Mayhall then had this comment:

"Four years ago Negro candidates ran for offices in the Democratic primary elections in Jefferson, Mobile and Montgomery Counties and no complaints were made by those who are now raising the question as to whether Negroes should be permitted to run this year.

"Actually, five Negroes were candidates in Democratic primaries in Alabama in 1954—three in Mobile, one in Montgomery and one in Jefferson.

"I reiterate that if any legal objection is made now to the two Negroes who have filed to become candidates in the May 6 Democratic primary elections, I will set the matter down for immediate public hearing."

Negro House candidate

HE REFERRED to Arthur B. Tiddle, Birmingham Negro motion picture machine operator, who is one of 37 candidates for seven Jefferson County House seats in the Legislature.

Arthur Shores, Birmingham Negro attorney, ran for the State Legislature from Jefferson four years ago and received approximately 4000 votes of more than 73,000 cast to trail far behind. It was said this was only about one-half the total number of Negro votes in the county.

In 1954, E. D. Nixon, former state NAACP president, ran for county Democratic executive committee in Montgomery and was defeated. The same year three Negroes also ran for county Democratic committee posts in Mobile County, with two being elected in predominantly Negro precincts.

McCorvey against oath

GESSNER T. MCCORVEY, Mobile attorney and former state committee chairman who favored the loyalty pledge for Alabama Democratic nominees but who opposes pledging loyalty to national party nominees for president and vice president is helping lead the fight on the spelled-out oath.

Others who are helping direct the fight to knock out the spelled-out loyalty oath are former Gov. Frank Dixon and Sidney W. Smyer Sr., Birmingham attorney-business man. The latter's son, Sidney Jr., is one of the anti-loyalty oath slate in Jefferson (Ninth District). Dixon and Smyer were leaders in the 1948 revolt against Truman and Barkley.

Judge Mayhall asserted that "'Eisenhower Democrat' bolters and would-be bolters, who want to knock out Alabama's Democratic loyalty oath, are some of the same ones who supported Mr. Eisenhower and Dick Nixon in 1956 and who now seek to destroy the Democratic Party in Alabama."

List of qualifiers

OF THE 175 filers for the state committee, 20 are running for the eight places from Jefferson. Eight are against the oath, 10 are pledged to retain it, with two uncommitted.

Opposing it are Mike Bagwell Jr., Barron Bethea, Lawrence McNiel, Earl T. Rogers, James E. Simpson, Victor H. Smith, Sidney W. Smyer Jr. and John Golden.

Loyalty Oath Row Gets New Impetus

BY CLARKE STALLWORTH

The sputtering fight over Alabama's loyalty oath got some new fuel yesterday as a Montgomery man blasted Democratic Party officials for allowing Negro candidates to qualify for office while the loyalty oath "bars white Democrats from qualification."

Frank J. Mizell Jr., a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee and an outspoken opponent of the loyalty oath, said the situation was "tragic."

His statement came shortly after Perry L. (Tiger) Thompson, a Negro radio announcer from Bessemer, qualified for lieutenant governor.

In a letter to Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, state Democratic chairman, Mizell said he was aware of rulings by the U. S. Supreme Court which forbid the barring of a candidate because of his color.

But, he said, "There is nothing to preclude the Democratic Party of Alabama from requiring a would-be candidate to subscribe to and uphold the philosophy and declared principles of our Democratic Party in Alabama."

Mizell asked that Thompson be questioned by Mayhall on segregation principles.

"The Democratic Party of Alabama believes in the continuation and enforcement of all laws relating to racial segregation . . . (and) continued, unremitting and total opposition . . ." to any legislation contrary to this, he said.

In its January meeting, the State Democratic Committee adopted a resolution calling for continuating and enforcement of all laws relating to racial segregation. The party primary ballot carries a slogan: "White Supremacy."

Questioned about his support of Democratic Party philosophy, Thompson said yesterday:

"I want to make it plain that I'm a member of the Democratic Party and it is Southern gentlemen like Mr. Mizell who confuse people and create fear.

"I'm running for the office of lieutenant governor, not because I'm a Negro, but because I believe I can bring both races closer together.

"You know the Southern politician used the anti-lynch law to get into office for 40 years and God and the people changed that.

"Now they are using integration and segregation to continue that type of campaigning.

"Now we should be thinking more about the welfare and the people of Alabama. I want to quote from history, 'While Nero played the fiddle, Rome burned.'

"While the politicians go around Alabama hollering, 'Nigger,' the welfare of Alabama is burning down."

One announced candidate for governor said he didn't qualify because of the loyalty oath. "I will not sign the loyalty oath," said Sam L. Chestnut Jr., "I am an Alabama Democrat."

Gessner T. McCorvey, former chairman of the state Democratic committee, said over the weekend that "a number of good men" have qualified to run for the state committee on an anti-loyalty-oath platform.

At the University of Alabama, Leonard Wilson, former University student and later Citizens Council official, said he had qualified to run for the state committee from Walker County.

Wilson, who was expelled from the University after the Autherine Lucy incident, is now a student at Baylor.

Meanwhile, the campaign for governor went on, with speeches by at least three candidates yesterday.

Candidate A. W. Todd, speaking in Scottsboro yesterday, said he would propose a minimum cotton acreage allotment of 25 per cent of total cultivated land for farmers tilling less than 100 acres.

Todd said he would lay the proposal before the U. S. Senate Agriculture Committee in Washington today. He left Scottsboro for Washington by plane immediately after his speech.

He advocated the establishment of a system of junior colleges in each Congressional district of Alabama.

He said he would recommend some action be taken by the U. S. Congress to help cotton ginners, warehousemen, and oil mill operators who have been hit by the land bank program.

He added that any farmer allotted eight acres or less cannot raise cotton at a profit. "Every business has its point of diminishing return. With the farmer, that point is eight acres," he said.

In Birmingham, before an alumni dinner of the Birmingham School of Law, Candidate Karl Harrison of Columbiana said he would not "play politics" in selecting a director of the "often neglected" State Conservation Dept.

He said a thorough and complete conservation program must be executed immediately for the protection of state forests, and he said steps must be taken to conserve and make plentiful for the future Alabama fish and game, while providing adequate hunting and fishing now.

Harrison will address the Alabama Foresters Assn. at Tuscaloosa tonight.

Candidate Laurie Battle of Birmingham, in a Lafayette speech yesterday, said he "will see that exemptions on feeds, seed, fertilizer and the other things now exempted are left as they are so farmers will not pay sales tax on these things."

"And I stand solidly against any new taxes," he said.

Candidates Are Split On Loyalty Oath

In the Fourth Congressional District, which includes Talladega County, candidates for the State Democratic Executive Committee are split sharply on the loyalty oath.

Eleven candidates favor keeping the oath and eight are opposed to it.

Those against the oath are Robert M. Alton, Jr., Tallassee; Walter C. Givhan, Safford; M. Alston Keith, Selma; John W. Lapsley, Selma; R. H. (Dick) Monk, Anniston; Jerre W. Reynolds, Anniston; Sam Venable, Sr., Talladega; A. J. (Jack) Winfield, Anniston.

Candidates committed to keeping the oath are Travis L. Arnold, Anniston; Earl V. Atkinson, Sylacauga; Horace R. Batchelor, Anniston; Tom Cooley, Talladega; Percy H. Farnham, Talladega; Wiley F. Gafford, Billingsley; Curtis C. Gauntt, Talladega; Leonard A. Goldberg, Sylacauga; J. P. Miles, Anniston; Charles Thomason, Anniston; John W. Walker, Jr., Springville.

Gauntt, Goldberg and Lapsley are incumbent members of the committee.

Our Opinions

A Superb Opportunity Muffed

Reactions to former President Truman's "give 'em hell" speech are mixed. It was to be expected that partisan viewpoint would attempt to wring out all manner of inferences from the context of the speech. Republican interpreters used a string of adjectives to describe it. They called it vindictive, ruthless, dishonest, demagogic and divisive. They accused Mr. Truman of erecting barriers of class hatred rather than tearing them down.

To the Truman charge that the Republican Party had led the nation into depressions and panics, notably in 1873, 1893, and 1929, the GOP leaders countered with the indictment that Democratic Presidents had dragged the United States into three wars since 1917.

The sad fact is that American history is replete with evidences in support of the contentions of both political camps. Whether the mournful events that occurred during Republican and Democratic Administrations respectively were mere accidents of history is an academic matter that will remain in the realm of speculations for many years to come. The present generation is yet to close to those events to assess them with detachment and objectivity.

Judging from the chorus of howlings that echoed through Republican ranks from Maine to California, the Truman shafts must have hit their target. There is no doubting of the vulnerability of the present Administration. The transient nature of American politics makes inevitable the misfortunes that befall the party in power. With the cost of living showing no signs of leveling off, with business on a yet unhalted downward skid, with unemployment reaching an alarming peak, the Administration in Washington finds itself hard pressed to restore confidence and reverse the accelerated trend toward recession.

While the machinery for pump priming our sagging economy is ready to be set in motion should the situation grow more critical, the incontestable fact remains that there are nearly 5 million homes hit by the business slump. The Republican leadership cannot be too happy over the dire consequences of these developments.

Though applauding Democrats consider the Truman broadsides as a most effective pre-campaign assault upon the Republican Administration, there are some loyal Democrats who fear that many of the hits were deflected by the presence of Gov. Faubus at the $100-a-plate dinner.

From all accounts the Arkansas Governor, who created a constitutional crisis over school integration at Little Rock, and who used the National Guard at bayonet point to bar a few Negro students from entering the Central High School, was given virtually a hero's welcome at the Truman banquet.

This raises a hot question whose answer must be disturbing to the conscience of the Party's leadership. That is: how to equate Civil Rights with Faubus' determined policy of racial segregation?

It seems that the Democrats missed a splendid opportunity to face up to the issue once and for all. By declaring frankly and openly that the Dixiecrats were a liability to the Party, the Democrats would have blunted the sharp edge of the knife which the Republicans, no doubt, intend to use against them. The Truman banquet provided a superb backdrop for such a declaration. For in politics as in war, the best defense is a vigorous offense. It is a truism that seldom fails.

Bare Seating Row At Truman Dinner

By ETHEL L. PAYNE

WASHINGTON — A minor incident over seating arrangements at the $100-a-plate dinner honoring Harry Truman here Saturday was disclosed yesterday.

It was a equel to charges made earlier in the day that attempts wre being made to sgrgat some of the Negro guests.

At party clambaks, such as this, such charges are taken seriously for fear that unfavorable publicity will affect the sensitive Negro vote.

But that doesn't keep some of the smallfry from trying to carry their southern traditions into such an affair.

It was noted that Negro Democrats attending the dinner were being bunched together at tables instead of being scattered around over the rooms and seated with their state delegations.

When Mrs. Edith Sampson saw that one table had eight out of 10 seats for Negroes, she went up to see Mrs. Ethel Black of the committee who was in charge of the seating arrangements to suggest that this be broken down.

Busy Mrs. Black said to her very brusquely. "I'm sorry, I can't do anything for you." But she hadn't reckoned with her caller who retorted.

"That's right dearie. You can't do anything for me. I came to do something for you before you embarrass the whole party and yourself."

There was a flurry of re-arrangement and a last check, Edith Sampson had the choice of sitting either with Mayor Daley and the Illinois delegation or with the Deputy Chairman of the National Committee, Drexel Sprecher, whose table incidentally had Sam Wilhite, the segregationist southern organizer for the party who hails from Miss.

Well, anyway one table did have a sizeable number of Negro occupants, including Mr. and Mrs. Richard Atkins — he's president of the National Bar Association — Atty. Belford Lawson, Emory Smith and Roy Garvin, all of Washington and Hobart Taylor, the powerful Negro Democratic leader from Houston, Texas.

But Negroes were scattered throughout both halls. There just weren't a lot of them. But I noted Elmer Henderson of the House Government Operations Committee and Mrs. Christine Davis, staff administrator of the committee; Major and Mrs. Dan Collins of San Francisco; Frank Monterro of the Urban League in New York and Mr. and Mrs. Howard Johnson of Cleveland.

Mayhall Voices Illegality Fear Of Segregation Oath

Circuit Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper warned yesterday that a suggested segregation oath for candidates in the Democratic primaries might invite the federal courts to nullify the primaries.

Judge Mayhall, party chairman, said he isn't opposed to the pledge but that he questioned its advisability. The controversial party loyalty oath will be up for readoption or rejection when the state Democratic Executive Committee meets here June 25.

In the fixing of rules and regulations for this year's party elections, the oath would disqualify would-be candidates who voted for President Eisenhower in 1956.

Readoption of the loyalty oath was advocated by National Committeeman Charles W. McKay Jr., of Sylacauga. The segregation pledge, a further provision of the oath, reads like this:

"I believe in and will support the principle of segregation upon which the Democratic Party in Alabama was founded and will support in the general election all candidates of the Democratic Party who take this oath."

As head of the state committee, Mayhall questioned the "wisdom and need for such a pledge."

"It might get us in trouble if someone should appeal," he said. "That would result in the courts declaring our entire primary null and void."

The judge recalled that a Texas law limiting the party election to white voters was outlawed several years ago by the Supreme Court.

There was no need for a segregation pledge anyway, Mayhall said, "because anyone who qualifies as a candidate will support segregation anyway. If he doesn't he might as well not run."

He said, however, that he would readily sign the oath if it is adopted.

Demo rule by Southerners is deplored

NEW YORK, March 28—(AP)—Former Sen. Herbert H. Lehman said yesterday the Democratic Party's national leadership should not lie exclusively in the hands of Southerners.

He said a revision of leadership is necessary to avoid repetition of the loss of the presidential election in 1956.

The defeat was caused, he added, by the Democrats' failure to take firm stands on the controversial civil rights and foreign policy issues.

In a SPEECH before the National Democratic Club, the former New York senator and governor said:

"The times are too serious and critical and the issues of the day too momentous to permit the leadership of the party out of power to rest exclusively in the hands of individuals who happen to be the party leaders in Congress . . ."

Because of seniority and other traditional considerations, Lehman continued, "as far as the Democratic Party is concerned, the Southerners in Congress have all the advantages."

He did not name Sen. Lyndon Johnson or Rep. Sam Rayburn, the congressional majority leaders, but he said the two dominant figures in both the House and the Senate are both from Texas.

"They are both men of outstanding ability and patriotic devotion," he said, "but their primary political orientation is to the voters of Texas rather than to the voters of the nation as a whole."

The South's Two-Headed Party

Even though Alabama is the only state subject to one, the so-called loyalty oath for candidates in Democratic primaries might be less a bone of contention here if there were a genuine, top to bottom, two party system. Certainly no one would call the oath "slavery" or "suppression."

What subjects it to both appellations now is that on state and local levels we have only one party that counts. If you don't vote in its primary you don't really vote at all. But many who are thus forced to vote as Democrats on state and local levels feel properly entitled to freedom of choice on presidential levels. And they see no ideological connection between state or local issues and national ones insofar as the two parties are concerned.

Some have called the peculiar political set-up in the South which has come of history and the race problem a "one-and-a-half party" system, or a "two-and-a-half." In actuality it is a two-party system within a one party system, or, it might be said, a "two-headed party."

Alabamians and other Southerners divide and debate as hotly in their primaries as others do in general elections. And in the last three presidential years they have voted freely for and against the Democratic nominee while still looking on themselves as Democrats and voting the straight Democratic ticket in all else.

Whatever may be destined to happen to this "two-headed party" system as the Negro vote increases in fateful years ahead and the quarrel with Washington administrations, Republican and Democratic, continues, this is what we have as of today.

Pretense to anything else is impractical and unfair.

Keep South solid, Clement pleads

SALISBURY, N. C., March 15—(AP)—Gov. Frank Clement of Tennessee, predicting that Vice President Nixon will head the Republican ticket in 1960, urged Young Democrats here to keep the South solid and work together to win the next presidential election.

Clement, 37, spoke Friday night to a state Young Democrats Club rally, attended by about 1000 persons.

Clement, assailing the Republican administration as "do-nothing, know-nothing," said it has "degenerated into one of helplessness, hopelessness and happlessness because it lost the vision of the needs of the people."

Alabama Democrats Divided Over Loyalty Oath Change

National Committeeman Wants To Include Segregation Pledge

By FRED TAYLOR
Staff Writer, The Birmingham News
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 18—Warring factions among Alabama Democrats, all of whom emphasize their opposition to racial integration, are about to get into a hassle over broadening the party's loyalty oath to require candidates to stand firmly for segregation.

State Rep. Charles W. McKay Jr. of Talladega, Democratic national committeeman and Citizens Council leader, will seek to get the segregation provision written into the party's loyalty pledge.

He will seek to do this when the State Democratic Executive Committee meets here next Saturday to prescribe qualifications for candidates entering the May 6 primary election.

But Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, state committee chairman, has questioned the wisdom of broadening the controversial loyalty oath in this state to include the segregation pledge.

Not Opposing It

However, Chairman Mayhall made it clear he isn't opposing the segregation pledge proposed by Rep. McKay, declaring he will readily sign it if the proposal is adopted by the state party governing body.

But he warned that the federal courts might rule the party primary election results "null and void" if candidates are required to take an oath against racial integration.

Instead of including such a provision in the pledge, Judge Mayhall suggested that the Democratic committee adopt a resolution expressing the same thing to put candidates on record for maintaining segregation.

Rep. McKay's proposed amendment to the loyalty oath would require those qualified as candidates in primaries to pledge:

"I believe in and will support the principle of segregation upon which the Democratic Party in Alabama was founded, and will support in the general election all candidates of the Democratic Party who take this oath."

The loyalty oath, aimed at bolting "Eisenhower Democrats," would bind candidates in Democratic primary elections to support party nominees in the general election next November.

It would disqualify those who supported the Republican presidential ticket in 1956.

Chairman Mayhall has recommended that the loyalty pledge be adopted again by the state committee.

First Used in 1927

Alabama Democrats first adopted a loyalty pledge back in 1927 to bar the late U.S. Sen. Tom Heflin, who had bolted the Democratic presidential ticket in opposition to Al Smith as party standard bearer.

After the 1948 Dixiecrat revolt against Harry Truman as the Democratic presidential nominee, old-line Democratic regulars on the state party governing body spelled out the oath to bar as candidates in primaries those who had bolted. This was done after loyalists to the national Democratic Party regained control of the state committee in 1950.

The new loyalty pledge not only barred those who had kicked the party's traces, but raised barriers against those who "failed or refused" to support the Democratic nominees in the last general election.

Chairman Mayhall, in warning against broadening the proposed new loyalty oath to include Rep. McKay's segregation proposal, pointed out that he based his reasoning on a U.S. Supreme Court decision several years ago outlawing the white primary in Texas.

The Democratic Party in Texas had a rule at that time that only white voters could take part in party elections.

Alabama Democrats long have placed at the top of primary ballots the words "white supremacy" over a crowing rooster. But for many years they have permitted Negroes to participate in primary elections.

Committeeman Will Support Segregation Pledge

BUT ACTION IS FEARED

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 18.—Party leaders will be asked in effect next week to bar Negro candidates for the Democratic primaries in Alabama this spring unless they agree to abandon their fight for racial integration.

The state Democratic Executive Committee, meeting here Saturday, also will decide on readoption of the controversial party loyalty oath which disqualifies Eisenhower Democrats as candidates.

Segregation Pledge Backed

National Committeeman Charles W. McKay Jr. of Sylacauga said he still intends to seek approval of a segregation pledge binding candidates to "support the principle of segregation upon which the Democratic Party was founded."

Asked if the effect of that would be to bar Negroes as candidates, Mr. McKay replied: "Not at all. Any of them who wanted to run could do so by signing the pledge along with everyone else."

But if they refused to take the oath, the Talladega County legislator said, they would be disqualified. Mr. McKay is a member of the Alabama House of Representatives.

The national committeeman disagreed with Committee Chairman Roy Mayhall's expressed fear that adoption of the proposed segregation pledge might invite the courts to nullify the party elections.

Judge Mayhall, a Circuit judge from Jasper, said earlier this week that he doubted the wisdom of such an oath. He reasoned the courts might intervene on the same theory the Supreme Court outlawed the Texas white primary several years ago.

Texas Democrats refused to allow Negroes to vote in the party elections before the court held the restriction unconstitutional.

Negro Candidate Issue

The Alabama party chairman apparently was thinking of what might happen if a Negro sought to qualify as a candidate, refused to sign the segregation pledge and then went into court.

Mr. McKay said he is not worried because, he explained: "The courts have held that a party can fix its own rules and regulations." He recalled that the loyalty oath itself, disqualifying Democrats who voted Republican in the presidential election, was upheld by the United States Supreme Court.

"If the Democratic Party has a right to impose the loyalty oath," he continued, "it has the right to impose other conditions as it sees fit."

Mr. McKay argued the state committee could refuse to call a primary and nominate candidates instead by convention.

"And then it could ask them any questions it wanted to," he added.

Judge Mayhall said he was not opposing the segregation oath but that he was concerned about its advisability. Whether a fight will develop at next Saturday's meeting remains to be seen.

One committee member predicted, however, that a compromise might be drawn up Friday night at a caucus of party officials.

Urge Loyalty Oath

Meanwhile Judge Mayhall and Mr. McKay both are advocating renewal of the party loyalty oath which grew out of the famed revolt in 1948 when Alabama's 11 presidential electors, all Democrats, refused to vote for Harry Truman and supposed the States Rights ticket.

Since then, all candidates running for presidential elector as well as all others have been compelled to sign a pledge to support the national party's presidential ticket.

That is not too significant at this time because there is no presidential election this year.

But the pledge also goes back to the 1956 election and requires candidates to swear they did not oppose or vote against the Democratic state of Adlai Stevenson and Senator Estes Kefauver.

That is important because it disqualifies any Democrat who voted for President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard Nixon in the election 14 months ago.

Along with settling those two issues, the committee next Saturday will adopt rules and regulations for the May 6 primary and the June 3 runoff.

Voters casting ballots in the party election will nominate candidates for governor, lieutenant governor, the Legislature, all nine places in Congress, and scores of lesser state and district offices.

They will elect a new 72-member state Democratic Committee.

Alabama GOP Denounces Democratic Loyalty Oath

BIRMINGHAM (AP) — Alabama's Republican Executive Committee called a state nominating convention to meet May 30 in Birmingham to select candidates for the November election.

The committee also adopted a resolution denouncing the loyalty oath recently adopted by Democrats. It also approved a resolution urging "continued separation of the races by legal means."

The segregation resolution, introduced by Milton Lanier of Huntsville said "We believe in the continued preservation of our Southern tradition."

Lanier is vice chairman of the state committee.

The Republican committee accused the Alabama Democratic executive committee of "political tyranny" for readopting its loyalty pledge for candidates."

The resolution, introduced by Tom Abernethy of Talladega, former member of the Democratic governing body, said the loyalty pledge is "in direct violation of all principles of American political freedom."

The resolution was adopted unanimously by voice vote. It invites "all Alabamians so minded to express their resentment of the state Democratic executive committee's outrageous attempt at dictaorship by joining the Republican Party in its labor for the freer, cleaner air two-party politics in this great state."

Republican nominees in the past have been selected by a convention, even though the party polled 20 per cent of the vote in the last general election.

Hiram Dodd, Birmingham attorney, was chosen temporary chairman of the convention, and Richard Emmett, Greenville was selected temporary secretary.

Committee's outrageous attempt at dictatorship by joining the Republican Party in its labor for the freer, cleaner air of two-party politics in this great state."

I. Lee Potter, special assistant to the GOP National Chairman Meade Alcorn, spoke at yesterday's meeting.

Mr. Potter, state GOP chairman in Virginia, said the sending of troops to Little Rock had given the Republican Party in the South "a temporary setback."

But, he said, if Adlai Stevenson had been elected President of the U. S. in 1956, "the troops would have been in Little Rock two weeks earlier."

He said prominent Democrats — such as Sen. Hubert Humphrey and Democratic National Chairman Paul Butler—"never miss an opportunity to insult the South."

When the emotion of the Little Rock action wears off, Potter said Republicans in the South would be in a better position than ever.

State GOP Chairman Claude Vardaman told Potter that Alabama Republicans had two choices after the Little Rock action—"to fold up and join the Democrats, or to stay with the Republicans, the party of good government. You tell 'em in Washington that we're staying."

A total of 54 members of the 74-member committee showed in at the Tutwiler Hotel yesterday. There was some evidence—shown by several resignations—that the Little Rock action had hurt the Republicans in Alabama.

Among the resignations and vacancies filled were:

Roy Banks, postmaster in St. Clair County, resigned to take his new postmaster's job, and Tom Bradshaw of Oden was elected to fill his place.

Ralph Roberts of Eufaula resigned more than a year ago, and his picking of his successor was delayed until the May 30 convention.

W. H. Albritton of Andalusia resigned, and George H. Barnes of Andalusia was elected to fill his place.

J. Foy Guin Sr. of Russellville resigned, and J. Foy Guin Jr. was elected to fill his place. Mr. Guin resigned because of his health.

The committee eulogized the late W. T. Campbell of Jackson County, a member of the committee before his death.

The committee chose Hiram Dodd of Birmingham and J. R. (Dick) Bennett of Greenville as temporary chairman and temporary secretary of the May 30 convention.

The members ruled that county conventions should be held before May 10, and that county committees should meet before Feb. 20.

GOP Meets Here Today; Segregation Stand Eyed

The Alabama Republican Executive Committee, meeting at 11 a.m. in Birmingham today, may adopt a resolution on segregation, according to State GOP Chairman Claude O. Vardaman.

Vardaman said today's meeting "will be brief, merely to adopt a call for a primary or convention and select temporary officers."

"It is possible, however, that the committee might adopt a resolution on segregation," he said.

R. Lee Potter of Arlington, Va., special assistant for the South to Republican National Chairman Meade Alcorn, will address the committee members at the Tutwiler.

The main purpose of the committee session today is to decide whether Alabama Republicans will select their candidates by a primary election or by state convention.

Vardaman has said the committee members "probably" will vote to hold a statewide convention, "sometime in late May."

The GOP leader said the party will affer candidates for governor, lieutenant governor, Congressional seats, and legislative seats in Jefferson and some other counties.

The Republican Party is eligible to hold a state primary, since its candidates polled more than 20 per cent of the vote in the last general election.

Republicans have criticized Alabama primary laws, which require a voter to announce whether he is a Republican or Democrat before he can vote.

Vardaman says this feature of the Alabama law interferes with a voter's right to a secret ballot.

Hits Demo Loyalty Oath—

Alabama GOP For Segregation

BY CLARKE STALLWORTH

Alabama Republicans, meeting in Birmingham yesterday, called for continued segregation "by all legal means" and rapped the recently-adopted Democratic loyalty oath as "political tyranny."

The 54 member present of Committee adopted both resolutions unanimously.

The committee members also set up a statewide convention for May 30 in Birmingham, to pick Republican candidates for governor, lieutenant governor, and other state races.

Milton H. Lanier of Huntsville, vice chairman of the state GOP committee, introduced the segregation resolution. It said, in part:

"...The people of Alabama have made unprecedented economic advances and great social progress during the past several years... (and) this has been due mainly to our Southern traditions...(and) we believe that such progress should and will continue.

"Now, therefore, be it resolved, that we believe in the continued preservation of our Southern traditions and the continued separation of the races by all legal means."

The loyalty oath resolution was offered by Tom Abernethy, Talladega editor who ran for governor in 1954 on the GOP ticket. Since the Little Rock incident, Abernethy's voice had not been heard often in Republican circles, and yesterday's resolution was an indication that he was "back in the Republican State Executive fold" and possibly might seek the GOP gubernatorial nomination again.

ABERNETHY

Abernethy is a former Democrat who walked out of the 1948 Democratic convention in Philadelphia.

His resolution said, in part:

"The so-called loyalty oath bluntly demands of Alabamians who would be candidates for Democratic nomination that they pay for the right to seek nomination by giving up their right to vote as their conscience might direct in general elections....

"Such political tyranny is in direct violation of all principles of American political freedom, and...no Democratic candidate can wear the handcuffs prepared for him...and be free to act, think, speak and vote for the welfare and the traditions and institutions of his people....

"...This committee recognizes the desperation which obviously lies behind any such attempt to employ tyranny to prevent the certain creation of a two-party politican system in Alabama.

"...This committee reminds Alabamians that under the same oath the gates have been opened for the candidacy of any radical agitator bent on destruction of our social order....

"...This committee invites all Alabamians so-minded to express their resentment of the State Democratic Executive

Loyalty Oath Foe Qualifies In Race For Committee Post

Frank Mizell, who led an unsuccessful attempt to block readoption of the loyalty oath last month is seeking a new term on the State Democratic Executive Committee.

Mizell, a Montgomery attorney, was one of the candidates qualifying with Democratic Party Chairman Roy Mayhall at Jasper yesterday to run in the May 6 Democratic primary.

A new state committee will be elected and candidates for public office will be nominated in the primary and in the June 3 runoff.

Mizell, a member of the outgoing committee from the 2nd Congressional District, opposed the controversial party loyalty pledge when it was rewritten into the election rules at last month's state committee meeting.

The oath disqualifies prospective candidates who voted Republican in the 1956 presidential election, and binds all others running in the primary to support the party's nominees in the November general election.

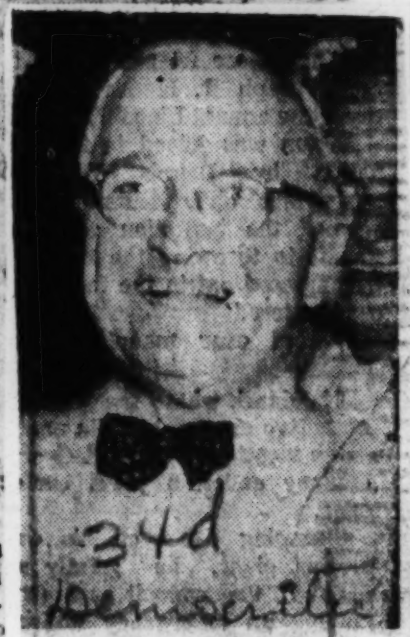
Mizell signed the pledge, however, in filing as a candidate for reelection to the state committee.

Three other candidates also qualified with Mayhall for places on the party's governing body. Charles W. Eiland of Andalusia is running in the 2nd District; Robert P. Schween of Huntsville, in the 8th District, and M. W. Bagwell Jr., of Birmingham, in the 9th District.

Filing for other offices during the day are:

R. G. Kelton of Oneonta, for circuit solicitor of the 30th Circuit (Blount and St. Clair counties).

W. B. Kennedy of Oak Hill, for the Alabama House of Representatives from Wilcox County, Place No. 2.



HARRY TRUMAN

HST Lists Rights As Demo Aim

By ETHEL L. PAYNE

WASHINGTON — Former President Harry Truman listed civil rights as one of the five principles upon which the Democratic party must stand, Saturday evening at the dinner in his honor.

Without naming either President Eisenhower or Little Rock, he indirectly placed the blame for the situation which led to the ordering out of federal troops on the President's failure to give firm leadership in the crisis.

Said Truman: "The Democratic party must stand firmly and forthrightly for the full enjoyment and protection of the civil rights and liberties of every citizen in the land regardless of race, creed, or color. I think that firm and foresighted leadership might accomplish without calling on the Army for help.

"Indeed, I know that patient and persistent action, coupled with firmness, can work wonders in the field of civil rights. But unless a President works at it day and night, and shows the people where he stands, you can expect the demagogues to move in at any chance. Be that as it may, for the Democratic party there can be no compromise which will deny to any of our people the enjoyment of their basic rights of citizenship."

Truman made his major speech before 3,100 Democrats from all over the country jammed into two ballrooms of the Sheraton Park hotel. The speech was televised over one network.

Civil Rights was the second of the five principles ennunciated. The others in order were (1) The Democratic party is, and must remain the party of the people. Our primary concern is with the vast majority who make the backbone of the nation — the working men and women, farmers, people on salary, and people of moderate incomes.

(3) The Democratic party must believe in and work for, a constant economic growth and rising standard of living.

(4) In foreign policy, the Democratic party must stand firmly for cooperation and concerted action with other free nations . . . In the world of today there is no acceptable alternative. This is a contest we cannot afford to lose.

(5) The Democratic party must support an adequate national defense, whatever the cost.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman ate with one half of the $100 a plate dintrs in the lower hall, and then after the former President gave a short pep talk, they joined the other half of the gathering in the main ballroom where Truman delivered his address.

Seated on the dias as he spoke were the President daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Daniel. Mrs. Daniel is the former Margaret Truman. Guests in the other room heard the speech over closed circuit television.

The Truman talk had been widely hailed in the press as a "give 'em hell" and the former President lived up to his reputation as he "poured it on" the Republicans.

He also took the opportunity to jibe at the "one party press." Paying tribute to George Washington on whose birthday the dinner was held, Truman said the First President was "roundly abused by th press of that day because he was a President of the whole country and not just the special privilege coteries.

Truman Dinner draws guests from all sections

WASHINGTON

The Harry S. Truman Dinner held at the Sheraton Park Hotel was a tremendous success drawing more than 3,000 guests from all over the United States.

Just to note a few of the good Democrats that were seen at the Dinner: There was Dick and Dorothy Atkinson, Mrs. Bessie Buchanan of New York, James L. Watson of New York, Hobart T. Taylor of Houston, Texas, Anne Hedgeman of the Mayor's office in New York, Arthur Chapin of New Jersey, Elmer Henderson from Congressman's office, as well as Christine Davis, Administrative Assistant to Congressman Dawson.

Also saw Edith Sampson of Chicago, Harvey Johnson and his wife from Cleveland, Ohio; Roy Garvin, the Belford Lawsons, Wilbur Sewell, popular lawyer in the District; Dorothy Quaker from Congressman Charles Diggs' office, Emory Smith, Charlotte Phynes, Berkley Williams, Geraldine Gaskill and her husband, Gilbert Campbell, and Mrs. Todd Duncan.

Mrs. Duncan was beaming with pride as her husband, the illustrious Todd Duncan sang the National Anthem before the distinguished Democrats in the Sheraton Hall. In the Banquet Hall, which carried an overflow crowd, Robert McFerrin, baritone, of the Metropolitan Opera Company, also sang the National Anthem. The two nationally known singers received a tremendous ovation at the completion of their song.

Mrs. Buchanan Willing To Take On Mr. Powell

By JAMES BOOKER

The state-wide political spotlight was centered on Harlem's 16th Congressional District this week as Democratic leaders began a series of backdoor meetings hoping to build a candidate to oppose Rep. Adam Powell, and with Powell angrily asserting that if he is not supported, "it might be the end of the Democratic Party in Harlem."

At the same time, however, Tammany leader Carmine DeSapio was reported to be launching a campaign to build either Assemblywoman Bessie Buchanan or State Senator James Watson to oppose Powell.

"If this is true, I would consider it an honor," Mrs. Buchanan told the Amsterdam News Monday. Sen. Watson refused to comment on the report. DeSapio had the two Harlem legislators as his special guests at the Democratic National Committee's annual dinner in Washington last weekend, considered a high honor in party circles.

Powell Ready

Powell, addressing a meeting of the 11th A.D., New Era Democratic Club, angrily spelled a red-hot campaign in his bid for election to his eighth term in Congress, declaring, "If anybody wants to run against me, I'm ready, I'm willing, and I'm able to face them on the streets of Harlem."

Earlier the Harlem Congressman, who bolted the Democrats in 1956 to support President Eisenhower, told newsmen, "If I don't get the support of the Democratic leaders of Harlem, then I don't think I am bound to support the Democratic nominee for Governor this year."

"I'm a card-carrying Democrat, and it costs me $100 a year," Powell said.

The DeSapio action and Powell's blasts were considered the opening rounds in what Harlem Democrats predict will be an all-out battle for political power in Harlem between Powell and Manhattan Boro President Hulan Jack, who is reported to be strongly backing Mrs. Buchanan.

In his speech Monday night Powell charged that persons seeking to stir up American Negro versus West Indian Negro feelings or Catholic versus Protestant dissentions were "enemies of all Negroes."

"I'm not going to let the bandanna of Uncle Tomism come back to Harlem. I am not going to keep my mouth shut while a white man who sits downtown comes up and tells me or my people what to do," Powell said.

Charges Persecution

Asserting that he was being persecuted because of his constant battles for Negroes, Powell said, "no political job in this town is big enough or should be big enough for me or any other Negro to sell out and wrap the bandana around his head."

While Powell received warm applause at the New Era speech, many political observers were wondering if the popular Harlem Congressman was not going too far in challenging the Democrats to oppose him.

Many observers doubt that either Mrs. Buchanan, whom Powell said he helped elect four years ago, or Sen. Watson, would be formidable opponents against Powell in an all-out street corner slugfest as Powell indicated he planned to wage to win his renomination.

Alabama Democrats To Officially Launch '58 Campaign Today

Reports Hold Segregation Oath Blocked

By BOB DURHAM

The Alabama Democratic Executive Committee meets at 11 a.m. today to go through the formality of officially opening the 1958 party campaign.

Once the meeting has adjourned candidates may qualify for the variety of states offices to be filled in the upcoming election. A long line of would-be office holder had begun to form as early as last night in the lobby of the Jefferson Davis Hotel. It was expected to grow longer by morning. The qualifying season will close at midnight, March 1.

For the most part, today's meeting will be mere formality as the real work was completed last night in a closed-door caucus of about 40 members of the 72-man committee.

This group, under the tight reins of Circuit Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, committee chairman, agreed to readopt the loyalty oath but not to include a segregation oath which had been suggested by National Committeeman Charles W. McKay.

SEGREGATION OATH

A committee member attending the secret caucus said the group had agreed to approve a resolution in support of segregation, but that no segregation oath would be approved.

He said all the committee members faovred segregation, but they feared an oath to that effect might jeopardize the elections if the oath should be challenged in court.

Resolutions also expected to be introduced which will denounce the U.S. Supreme Court as well as President Eisenhower for having dispatched federal troops into Little Rock, Ark.

The loyalty oath to be readopted today is identical to that approved in past years. It pledges the candidates in the primary to support all party nominees in the general election, and it bars from the primary any person who voted for candidates other than the Democratic nominees in the last general election.

APPLIES TO CANDIDATES

The oath applies only to candidates and has no bearing on individual voters.

McKay, who is also a member of the House of Representatives, suggested several weeks ago that a segregation oath be adopted in addition to the loyalty oath.

McKay's proposal would have required candidates to pledge they would support continued segregation in Alabama. It would have had the effect of preventing Negroes from seeking office unless they too agreed to support segregation.

Today's meeting will be the last regular session of the present executive committee. The terms of all members expire this year and a new committee is to be elected in May.

The offices to be filled in the May primary include governor, lieutenant governor, attorney general, school superintendent, agriculture commissioner, auditor, treasurer, secretary of state, two associate seats on the Public Service Commission, all three members of the Court of Appeals, the chief justice and two associate justices of the Supreme Court, the entire 141-member Alabama Legislature, and all nine Alabama seats in the U.S. House of Representatives.

In addition, a number of county offices are to be filled also.

Committeeman Says—

Demos Now Have Segregation Oath

MONTGOMERY, Jan. 23 (AP)—A member of the State Democratic Executive Committee said today the party already has adopted a strong pro-segregation stand such as the one embraced in a proposed new oath for candidates.

National Committeeman Charles W. McKay Jr., of Sylacauga said he will try to get the state committee meeting here Saturday to adopt a pledge committing candidates running in the Democratic primaries to support segregation laws.

Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, party chairman, has expressed opposition to the proposed oath, warning that it might invite federal courts to "nullify our entire primary system."

The pledge in effect would bar Negro candidates from the primary unless they agreed to abandon their fight for racial integration since it would bind them to support the segregation laws.

Frank Mizell of Montgomery, a committee member from the Second Congressional District, said the state committee adopted a resolution in 1954 which he said covers what McKay proposes to do.

Gov. Collins on Doing Good

In his much-praised speech at the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner of Democrats in Raleigh, Florida's Governor Collins failed to realize what has made the word "do-gooder" an epithet.

"Since whne in America is it wrong to do good?" he asked rhetorically, and none could say him when. America stands for doing good and will continue to do so, let us hope.

Human welfare is a basic, historic and continuing American concern. But there is all the difference in the world, as Americans are supposed to see it, between welfare and the welfare state, between doing good and being taken over by a well-intended but too-interfering state. There's a limit to how far the state can go in good doing and remain free, democratic and solvent, peopled by individuals with a heart, enterprise and initiative of their private own.

Governor Collins took his stand for states' rights against modern Federal interfering, but he accompanied it with the cliche for having the states themselves undertake more responsibility for human welfare and social advance. The point is very old and very good but in the American ideal a welfare state is dangerous and self-contradicting when operated by a state government as well as by a Federal.

The Founding Fathers reserved rights to the states against the Federal government. Also, in the so-called "Forgotten Ninth Amendment," they reserved rights to the people against both state and Federal government.

In the matter of foreign aid, too, Governor Collins seemed to some of us to confuse doing good with doing it through the government.

Harriman Defends His Big Budget

$100-Plate Fete Here a Sell-Out

By Tom O'Hara

Gov. Harriman defended his all-time record high budget at the Democratic State Committee's annual $100-a-plate dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria last night when some 2,600 persons turned out to make it the largest fund-raising dinner in the state party's history.

Carmine G. De Sapio, New York Secretary of State and Tammany Hall leader, forecast that Mr. Harriman will win again in November by a "minimum plurality of 375,000" votes. Michael H. Prendergast, Democratic State Chairman, said there would be a "landslide" victory.

Mayor Wagner, re-elected last November by an unprecedented plurality of 923,007 votes, said "that 1958 is going to be a bad year for the Republicans, any place you go."

The dinner was so large that it spilled out from the giant ballroom into the east and west foyers. Mr. Prendergast hired a closed circuit television set-up for $2,000 so that the paying guests could see and hear the speeches.

While speculation continues on whom the party will nominate as its candidate for United States Senator, the seat now held by Sen. Irving M. Ives, of Norwich, a Republican, the only name mentioned came from Mayor Frank A. Sedita of Buffalo, who advanced the name of Peter J. Crotty, also of Buffalo, who is Erie County Democratic chairman and a popular figure in upstate party circles.

Buckley Pledges Fight

There was no specific mention in the prepared texts of Lt. Gov. George B. De Luca, of the Bronx, who reportedly will be dropped and another man put up to run with Gov. Harriman. Rep. Charles A. Buckley, Bronx County chairman, has said that if there is an attempt to replace Mr. De Luca he will start a floor fight to oppose it.

Of his record budget of $1,750,000,000, Gov. Harriman, heaping scorn on the Republican leaders of the Republican-controlled Legislature, admitted it was high and has "increased substantially." But he said most of it was mandated, that is required by existing state laws to keep up the physical plant and personnel in schools, highways, hospitals and the State University.

The Governor said:

"Did the Republican legislative leaders oppose the increased aid to local governments and school districts, the expanded construction program and improved conditions for state employees? No, indeed, they take credit for them. But at the same time, they try to blame me for increased spending. They can't have it both ways. Nobody is going to be fooled."

Mr. De Sapio, explaining what he construed to be the bright prospects next November, said:

"In 1957 the people of the greatest of all cities re-elected Bob Wagner as Mayor by a plurality close to a 1,000,000. In 1954, the people of the leading state in the nation elected Averell Harriman as Governor. And in 1958 they will re-elect Gov. Harriman and the entire state ticket by a minimum plurality of 375,000 because the people of New York State want to place their faith, their trust, their future in our party's program and philosophy."

Rep. Emanuel Celler, D.-Lib., Brooklyn, speaking as senior member of the state's Democratic Congressional delegation to Washington, painted a gloomy picture of the nation's economy, citing "five million people, willing and able to work, unemployed" with "bread lines beginning to form." He also sharply criticized the nation's foreign policy.

Faubus Still Plans To Attend Dinner

LITTLE ROCK, ARK. (AP) — Gov. Orval Faubus reiterated Tuesday that he will attend a Democratic fund-raising dinner honoring former President Truman in Washington Saturday and added "if I'm not welcome then nobody from the South is welcome."

Faubus said "I don't know many Southern Democrats whose attitudes are much different from mine."

FAUBUS

The reference to his attitude concerned the Little Rock integration controversy in which Faubus has been criticized by Northern Democrats.

The governor said he would not expect "any special reception" and commented that if that meant a "cold shoulder" he supposed it could be construed as such.

"I'm only one of a number of Democrats who will be there and I certainly don't expect any special consideration."

The governor said he still considers former President Truman as "my friend."

Truman once criticized Faubus for his opposition to the federal authorities in the integration row.

"But Mr. Truman and I didn't fall out—just say we disagreed and I still consider him my friend," Faubus said.

POWELL DEMANDS AID OF DEMOCRATS

Representative Who Bolted Party in '56 Says Fight on Him Will Hurt Harriman

By RICHARD AMPER

Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. warned Tammany Hall and Governor Harriman yesterday against opposing him for re-eelction this year.

Mr. Powell bolted the Democratic party in 1956 to support President Eisenhower for re-election. He threatened yesterday to refuse to support Governor Harriman this year if the Democratic organization fought his bid for an eighth two-year term in Congress.

The Representative contended that denial of the Democratic support might seriously impair Mr. Harriman's vote. Mr. Powell, who represents the Sixteenth Congressional District in Harlem, is pastor of the Abyssinian Baptist Church.

"If I don't get the support of the Democratic leaders of Harlem, then I don't think I am bound to support the Democratic nominee for Governor this year," he said.

"I prefer to run along with my Democratic colleagues and have no primary fight, which would be costly. But if there's the slightest feeling on the part of the so-called Democratic powers to run someone against me, I'm ready, I'm willing and the people are able. And it [a primary fight] might be the beginning of the end of the Democratic party in Harlem."

Warns on G. O. P. Candidate

He said that if the Republicans ran a strong civil rights champion such as Nelson A. Rockefeller, John Roosevelt or Senator Jacob K. Javits for Governor, "it could mean a loss of 15,000 or 20,000 votes in Harlem for Mr. Harriman."

While there has been little love lost between Mr. Powell and top Tammany leaders, the regular Democratic organization has encountered difficulty in finding a candidate considered strong enough to defeat Mr. Powell in a primary battle.

This difficulty was emphasized by the fact that although Mr. Powell backed General Eisenhower against Adlai E. Stevenson two years ago, Tammany continued to support Mr. Powell for re-election then. New efforts have been reported under way to build up a contender for his House seat.

Mr. Powell called off a scheduled speech yesterday to the New York Young Republican Club because of fatigue. He said he told the club he would be glad to speak on another occasion.

Washington week-ender—

Alabama should know...

BY JAMES FREE
News Washington correspondent

WASHINGTON, March 29—Sen. John Sparkman has some bare-knuckle comment about the move to kill the loyalty oath now required of candidates in the Democratic primary in Alabama.

The anti-oath campaign—whether it is intended that way or not—would, if successful, weaken the South's faight against new civil rights bills, help promote economic recession in the area, and help put a Republican in the White House in 1960. Or that's the way it looks to the Alabama senator.

JAMES FREE

In an interview, Sparkman said that the present contest for control of the Alabama State Democratic Executive Committee (with anti-loyalty oath candidates seeking to overturn the majority that favors the oath) boils down to one simple issue: Do we want a Democrat or a Republican as president in 1960?

Either or

"COME 1960," he said, "either a Democrat will be elected or a Republican will be elected. Any division among Democrats in Alabama or elsewhere will give aid to the Republicans and thereby help to insure the continuation of the farm depression, of employment, or small business bankruptcies, and the idiotic occupation of Little Rock.

SPARKMAN

"Present conditions in the South illustrate the fact tht our part of the country always suffers under a national Republican administration."

Blasts 'bargaining'

WE ASKED THE SENATOR what he thought of the idea of anti-loyalists that killing the oath would let Alabama Democrats become an independent political force, put them in a position to deal with either party more effectively.

"Politics doesn't work that way," he replied. "History shows that the South's best hope lies in getting help from within the Democratic Party. Only last year, Southerners in the Senate got enough help from Democrats outside the South to eliminate the most vicious parts of the Eisenhower so-called civil rights bill."

Deadend in 1948

WE REMINDED Sparkman of the claim that the Dixiecrat revolt of 1948 was a glorious loss, one that didn't hurt the South very much, and the type of try that—with better luck—might succeed next time.

The senator termed 1948 a "deadend street mistake" so far as Alabama is concerned. "That mistake," he added, "weakened our chances in the civil rights fight, hindered the work of the Alabama delegation in Congress, and only helped our enemies."

No freedom loss

WHAT ABOUT the charge that the loyalty oath takes away some basic voting right?

"It in no way interferes with one's freedom to vote as one pleases," said Sparkman. "It only says that if you vote Republican you cannot run on the Democratic ticket."

Tommyrot for 1960

WHAT ABOUT the claim that killing the loyalty oath will help Alabamians prevent the nomination of a Democratic radical, or even perhaps a Negro on the presidential ticket in 1960?

"That is a lot of tommyrot," said Sparkman. "Neither party on the Republicans doing so will take that step. But, based on what happened in Little Rock, I'd say the odds are more than on the Democrats."

Alabama Dems readopt loyalty oath, nail down racial stand

Mayhall warns against Demo racial pledge

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 14 —(AP)— Chairman Roy Mayhall today questioned the wisdom of broadening the controversial Democratic Party loyalty oath in Alabama to include a segregation pledge.

He said it might invite the federal courts to rule the party primary elections "null and void" if candidates are required to take an oath against racial integration.

But Mayhall, a circuit judge at Jasper, made it clear he isn't opposing the segregation pledge proposed by National Committeeman Charles W. McKay Jr. The judge said he would readily "sign it myself" if adopted:.

THE LOYALTY OATH, which binds candidates in the Democratic primaries to support the party nominees in the general election and disqualifies those who supported the Republicans in 1956, will be adopted again or rejected at the State Democratic Executive Committee meeting here Jan. 25.

It would compel candidates for governor and other state and party offices in effect to sign a statement that they didn't vote for President Eisenhower.

McKAY, A MEMBER of the House of Representatives from Talladega County, has urged readoption of the loyalty oath. But he proposes to broaden it to include the following segregation pledge:

"I believe in and will support the principle of segregation upon which the Democratic Party in Alabama was founded and will support in the general election all candidates of the Democratic Party who take this oath."

Mayhall based his reasoning, he said, on a Supreme Court decision several years ago outlawing the white primary in Texas. The Democratic Party there had a rule that only white voters could take parti n the party elections.

BY FRED TAYLOR, News staff writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 25—Alabama's Democratic Executive Committee Saturday readopted a loyalty pledge for candidates by the lopsided vote of 56 to 2, went on record strongly for segregation and officially opened campaigning for the May 6 primary election.

Except for fear of federal court action to knock out results of the Democratic primary, the 72-member state committee apparently would have written a segregation pledge into the loyalty oath.

But instead, the party governing body adopted a resolution offered by State Rep. Hugh Merril Jr. of Anniston, Fourth District member, declaring that "we believe in and support the principle of segregation of the races and we abhor and are unalterably opposed to racial integration in any and all forms."

Hits at bolters

THE LOYALTY OATH, as adopted, places no restrictions on rank and file voters.

But it bars as candidates in the primary election those who bolted in the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket in 1956.

Action of the committee in adopting the segregation resolution came after Alabama Democratic National Committeeman Charles W. McKay Jr. of Sylacauga abandoned his plan to include this provision in the loyalty oath, which he favored.

McKay, attorney and member of the House of Representatives, but not a member of the state committee, congratulated the party governing body for adopting the segregation resolution.

"I'm for it 100 per cent," said McKay, adding that he regretted not being able to congratulate committee members for including the provision in the loyalty oath, as he had advocated.

If the segregation declaration had been embodied in the oath, it could have barred Negroes as candidates in Alabama's Democratic primaries.

The new oath

ALABAMA DEMOCRATS have had a loyalty pledge since 1930, when the late U. S. Sen. Tom Hemlin was barred as a candidate in the party primary because he bolted the Democratic presidential ticket headed by Al Smith in 1928.

The oath was spelled out, after the 1948 Dixiecrat revolt, to disqualify any prospective candidate in a Democratic primary election who had bolted the party to support Republicans or others who put out a presidential ticket.

The new oath, which will be effective this year, will prevent any persons who voted Republican in 1956 or who "openly and publicly" opposed the Democratic presidential ticket.

Frank Mizell Jr., Montgomery attorney and one of two committee members opposing adoption of the new loyalty oath, said he thought the party governing body should relent and permit Ike voters to become candidates if they desired.

Grady W. Hurst Jr. of Chatom was the only other committee member voting against the oath.

Merrill's segregation resolution assailed what it termed "illegal and high-handed action" by President Eisenhower in sending federal troops to force school integration at Little Rock.

This resolution also called for the U. S. Supreme Court to back down from its 1954 desegration decision "in order that white and colored people may continue to live together in peace and harmony."

Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, state committee chairman, lashed out bitterly at President Eisenhower and his supporters in Alabama and attacked "Republican-flavored and Ike-liking newspapers" for backing the GOP ticket in 1956.

Big dailies hit

MAYHALL REFERRED to newspapers in the state's three largest cities—Birmingham, Mobile and Montgomery—which went Republican in 1956. So did the counties in which these cities are the county seats.

But the Democratic chairman praised newspapers in smaller cities and counties for having remained loyal to the Democrats.

"The boys who sang the praises of Ike and Dick in 1956 are now singing a different tune," said Mayhall. "Now they are saying: 'Let's do away with the loyalty oath.'"

The GOP-ers also were savagely attacked in a resolution offered by Judge Frank Embry of Pell City, one of the committee stalwarts.

Eisenhower attacked

THIS RESOLUTION, which was adopted unanimously, charged that President Eisenhower "during the past five years has given our country the most derelict and incompetent administration in its history."

The resolution asserted that Eisenhower is under direction of "Gen. Sherman Adams, the publicly-approved enemy of the South, and has allowed the nation's business to be run by big business and big money agreeable to the Republican Party spirit."

This resolution also charged that 40,000 farm families in Alabama have been driven from their homes "under the Eisenhower-Benson conspiracy."

Former Democratic Chairman Ben Ray of Birmingham, still one of the party's wheelhorses, had a kind word for newspapers and newspapermen generally.

But he asserted that "when some of them say we're trying to hamstring the voters, it is pitiful."

The homespun Ray added that such attacks on the Democratic committee in Alabama amounts to "throwing wet cobs at the lead gander."

Backed loyalty oath

McKAY, WHO WAS ready to qualify as candidate for attorney general, told the committee that he believed in the loyalty oath and had hoped it would be amended to include the segregation plodge.

"But I acquiesce in the majority and respect your wishes," he said.

Judge Mayhall, in warning against including the segregation provisions in the oath, said he would readily sign such an oath, if adopted.

"Any candidate who does not declare himself emphatically for segregation might just as well not run in Alabama," he said.

Cites Texas case

HAYHALL recalled that the Supreme Court several years ago knocked out the Democratic white primary in Texas, adding the same reasoning might apply if a segregation oath were adopted in Alabama.

Judge Mayhall obviously had in mind that Negroes might try to seek office without signing such a pledge and then challenge it in court.

He had warned that if the high court did invalidate results of a Democratic primary in Alabama, Republicans might be able to take over the public offices from governor on down.

Alabama's Loyalty Oath To Be Issue In May Primary

Foes of Pledge Lining Up Slate To Oppose Democratic Officials

By FRED TAYLOR
Staff Writer, The Birmingham News
Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 8—Birmingham and Jefferson County have become one of the main battle grounds in the fight over Alabama's controversial Democratic loyalty oath.

Candidates have begun lining up on opposite sides to battle it out in the May 6 Democratic primary election in the Ninth District, which embraces heavily populated Jefferson County.

Republicans and erstwhile "Eisenhower Democrats," who have denounced the loyalty pledge as amounting to "political tyranny," have thrown their weight on the side of those seeking to get elected to the State Democratic Executive Committee on promises to repeal it before the 1960 presidential election.

Elected by Districts

Eight committee members are elected from each of the nine congressional districts to make up the 72-member state party governing body.

Anti-loyalty oath "slates" also are being formed in other districts over the state in an effort to oust most of present committee members who will run for re-election on pledges to retain the pledge.

The loyalty oath, which was recently readopted by the committee by a 56-to-2 vote, bars as candidates in this year's Democratic primary persons who supported the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket in 1956. It also bars as candidates those who "failed or refused" to support the Democratic presidential ticket two years ago.

Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, state Democratic chairman and one of the main advocates of the loyalty oath which has been in effect in Alabama for a number of years, repeatedly has emphasized that it does not prevent rank and file voters from voting as they please.

All eight of the State Democratic Executive Committee members from Jefferson County's Ninth District voted for readoption of the loyalty oath. They are Ben Ray, Chester Austin, Bob Gwin, Floyd Ansley and William C. Barber, all Birmingham attorneys; Bob Bell, Jack Beasley and Raymond Weeks, all businessmen of this city.

Beasley, who requested that the committee conduct a campaign to popularize the loyalty oath, already has announced as candidate for reelection on a promise to retain the pledge.

And the other seven, along with others who favor the loyalty requirement, are prepared to enter the race.

Three anti-loyalty oath candidates already are in the race, with others planning to run to complete an eight-candidate "slate" pledged to knock out the oath.

Assails Oath

Sidney W. Smyer Jr., Birmingham attorney and businessman, in qualifying as a candidate, assailed the oath. He charged "the present committee is controlled by a group who wish to make the Democratic Party of Alabama a puppet to do the bidding of the national Democratic Party and their integration - favoring leaders.

"They have done this by using a loyalty oath," Smyer added. "No other state has one."

In commenting on the fact that Alabama is the only state that has a Democratic loyalty oath, Chairman Mayhall pointed out this state was the only one which prevented the presidential ticket of Truman and Barkley from appearing on the ballot in 1948.

Two other anti-loyalty oath candidates — Victor H. Smith, Birmingham attorney, and Barron Beathea, Birmingham manufacturer — have qualified for the May 6 primary.

Beathea, in urging repeal of the oath, said "I think it is against the interest of the Democratic Party and prohibits its growth."

Smith said "the Solid South is the only thing which is preserving our institutions. We ought to forgive and forget those who strayed the reservation in 1956."

ALABAMA

State Committeewoman Says Dixiecrats On Hopeless Path

Advertiser Montgomery Ala.
Sun 11-6-58

Alabama's National Democratic Committeewoman charged Saturday that the Dixiecratic candidates for the state Democratic Executive Committee are following a "hopeless road."

Mrs. Lennard (Nanna) Thomas of Montgomery, in a prepared statement, took a firm stand in support of the controversial party loyalty oath and sharply criticized the slate of candidates in the May 6 party primary who are pledged to kill the oath.

"The year of 1958 is an important one for Alabama and the South," she declared. "We are the strongest group in the nation if we will stand together to preserve and recapture our Democratic Party."

"There are those in Alabama who would destroy the Democratic Party—and feel Alabama could go it alone," Mrs. Thomas added. "This is a hopeless road to travel."

"There are those who are using the loyalty oath for selfish reasons," she continued. "These we can defeat at the polls May 6."

Mrs. Thomas insisted that "we must do nothing to promote a splinter party" in Alabama, but instead to aid the South in regaining its position of strength within the ranks of the Democratic Party.

"The healthiest form of government is the national two-party system," she said. "Be a loyal Republican or a loyal Democrat, don't be a destructive citizen but work toward the betterment of your choice."

In addition to taking her firm stand as a loyal Democrat, Mrs. Thomas disclosed she would attend the 1958 Campaign Conference for Democratic Women in Washington April 20-22.

She said the purpose of this conference was to help increase the effectiveness of Democratic women campaign workers in the upcoming general election.

Mrs. Thomas said the conference was open to all women members of the party. Reservations can be made by writing the Sheraton-Park Hotel, Washington, or the Women's Division, Democratic National Committee, 1001 Connecticut Ave., Washington.

Mrs. Thomas said she planned to issue a statement at the conference in opposition to racial integration.

"I shall tell the women at the conference this month what I have been telling them since 1948 —that enforced integration is immoral, illegal, undemocratic, unconstitutional, unamerican and unchristian," Mrs. Thomas said.

View Own Party Urged On Southern Democrats

By W. D. WORKMAN JR.
Editorial Correspondence

COLUMBIA — Southern Democrats would do well to take time out from their excoriation of Republicans to see where their own party stands on the touchy subjects of civil rights and racial integration in the election year 1958.

The record shows that the Democratic Party spokesmen, from old pros like Harry Truman down to the fledgling Young Democrats, all stand solidly in favor of increased race mixing. Thus the South, as it has been for 10 years or more, still stands apart from both national parties with respect to the sensitive area of race relations.

Ex-president Truman, whose attitude in the field of civil rights already is well-known, had this to say in a Washington speech on Feb. 22:

"The Democratic Party must stand firmly and forthrightly for the full enjoyment and protection of the civil rights and liberties of every citizen in the land regardless of race, creed or national origin. I think that firm and foresighted leadership might accomplish this without calling on the Army for help.

"Indeed, I know that patient and persistent action, coupled with firmness, can work wonders in the field of civil rights. But unless a president works at it, day and night, and shows the people where he stands, you can expect the demagogues to move in and make trouble."

A couple of months earlier, the Young Democratic Clubs of America had gathered in national convention at Reno, Nevada, and had recorded their collective beliefs in pronouncements such as these:

"We oppose segregation or discrimination on the basis of race, color, creed or national origin in all areas of the United States. . .

"We favor the immediate enactment of a national fair employment practices act with adequate enforcement provisions. . .

"We favor the loss of Congressional committee seniority and chairmanships for any Democratic Congressman or . . . Senator who supports a third party or Republican presidential candidate or aids in the formation of a third party in the 1960 presidential campaign. . . .

". . .The Young Democratic Clubs of America approve federal intervention as a necessary means of effectuating the laws of the land."

And out of the mouth of the National Democratic chairman, Paul Butler, come words like these:

"Our (1960) platform will be the most liberal, most progressive and most forward-looking we ever adopted. . . . We will not make an effort to reconcile the Democratic Party's policies with other policies or persons. We will not be deterred by threats of third party movements."

Gov. Averell Harriman, of New York, who still carries weight within the national party, says "there can be no compromise" on civil rights, even in the face of a Southern split. "I have no doubt that the Democratic Party's 1960 platform will contain a strong civil rights plank, including support of school integration in accordance with the Supreme Court decision and federal district court orders, and that the national Democratic candidates will stand unequivocally for equal rights for all."

And from liberal California, which is beginning to rival New York for domination of the national party, comes this statement from Attorney General Edmund G. Brown:

"California Democrats want complete divorcement from the South. Win or lose the next presidential election, there can be no further compromise on civil rights. We made a serious mistake (in 1956) trying to appease the South. Those people are unappeasable."

All of which leaves the Southern states where they have long been—with more in common with each other than with either national party.

Voters Have A Chance This Weekend To Influence State Convention

For more than 10 years voters of South Carolina have been handing up bills of indictment against the leadership of the National Democratic Party.

To many of these voters the names Walter Reuther, Harry Truman, Eleanor Roosevelt, Hubert Humphrey, Soapy Williams and Averell Harriman — the bosses of the National Democratic Party — represent the worst forces in American political life. These leaders time and again have expressed contempt and enmity for the South.

Yet a presidential election finds bosses of the South Carolina Democratic Party supporting men and policies that are abhorrent to the people of the state. It is a tragedy that South Carolinians, who take pride in their freedom, should be political captives of state party bosses.

On Tuesday, delegates from the state's 46 counties will gather in Columbia for the South Carolina Democratic convention. The chief item of business will be the naming of a successor to Neville Bennett, the state chairman who used his term of office to protect the interests of the National Democratic Party in the Palmetto State.

What sort of man do South Carolina Democrats want as state chairman? Do they want a man who will carry South Carolina's states rights views to national party meetings? Or do they want a man who will keep South Carolina voters "in the bag?"

We do not presume to speak for all South Carolinians. We recognize that independent Democrats did not stir themselves in every county when precinct meetings were held last month. In some counties discredited "party loyalists" were elected delegates to the state convention despite the fact that their counties voted independent in the last presidential election.

The "party loyalists" are seeking to elect Thomas H. Pope of Newberry as state chairman. Mr. Pope is a capable man but a down-the-line supporter of the Truman-Reuther-Harriman National Democratic Party.

Independents are seeking the election of Julian Dusenbury, one of South Carolina's war heroes who is fighting as hard for the rights of his state as he fought for the liberty of his country in World War II.

Elsewhere in The News and Courier today appears a list of delegates to the state convention from many counties in our circulation territory.

Over the weekend, South Carolinians will have time to consider the political direction of their state. Some citizens are reluctant to communicate with delegates with whom they are unacquainted, and fear personal involvement. But delegates who approve a party leadership that will hold captive the state's voters are already deeply involved with every voter in a personal way.

The voters have an opportunity to let the delegates know where they stand. A telephone call or a postcard mailed this weekend will inform delegates what individual voters expect of them at the state convention.

Men in political life know that, in the last analysis, a handful of persons in a precinct meeting cannot overrule the will of the people expressed in elections. If independent South Carolina Democrats are outspoken this weekend, they may obtain on Tuesday a state party leadership that respects the wishes of the people.

How they voted

WASHINGTON, D.C. — (NNPA) — The votes of Reps. William L. Dawson of Illinois, Adam Clayton Powell of New York, and Charles C. Diggs of Michigan, all Democrats, on important roll calls in the House last week were:

On Senate Concurrent Resolution 68, requesting the President, as an anti-recession measure, to accelerate spending of funds already appropriated for civil construction projects (two-thirds majority required), adopted, 377 to 16 — Dawson, Powell and Diggs voted "yea."

On S. Con. Res. 69, requesting the President, as an anti-recession measure, to accelerate spending of funds already appropriated for military construction projects (two-thirds majority required), adopted, 375 to 20: Dawson, Powell and Diggs voted "yea."

On Senate Joint Resolution 162, House version of a bill that would prevent reductions below the 1957 level of farm commodity price supports for one year and of acreage allotments for two years, passed, 210 to 172: Dawson and Diggs voted "yea." Powell voted "nay."

Motion by Representative Ralph Harvey, Republican, of Indiana, to substitute a price support "freeze" for dairy products only. Rejected, 173 to 210 Dawson, Powell and Diggs voted against the Harvey motion.

Alabama Democrats Attack Alcorn's Visit to State

Charge Move Aimed at Killing Party's Primary Loyalty Oath

BIRMINGHAM, Ala, March 29—Alabama Democrats have pounced on the announced early visit of Republican National Chairman Meade Alcorn to Birmingham to address a statewide GOP fund-raising rally as another move aimed at knocking out the Democratic loyalty oath for candidates.

Alcorn, who will be accompanied by Lee Potter, Virginia Republican chairman and director of the GOP's "Operation Dixie," will speak to a $15-a-plate dinner meeting here April 11.

Dem 3-30-54

This announcement was greeted by a blast from Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, state Democratic chairman, that Alcorn "apparently is being brought to Alabama in an attempt to give a shot in the arm to 'Eisenhower Democrats' and other would-be bolters who are trying to take over the Democratic Party."

Referring to attacks on Alabama's Democratic loyalty pledge for candidates in primary elections by State and Jefferson County Republican Executive Committees, Judge Mayhall declared:

"The Republicans, of course, want to capture control of the Democratic Party in this state and deliver it into the hands of the GOP to do with as it pleases."

The fight between Democratic regulars, who are pledged to retain the loyalty oath and stick by the national party, and "Eisenhower Democrats" and other would-be bolters, who say they want no part of the national Democratic Party, is becoming more heated each day.

The anti-loyalty oath slates of candidates in all nine congressional districts have promised that, if elected to the 72-member State Democratic Executive Committee, they will repeal that part of the pledge that requires candidates in primaries to sign an affidavit they will support national Democratic Party nominees for president and vice president. They say they are willing to reinstate the loyalty oath which formerly required that primary candidates pledge only to support party nominees in Alabama in the general election.

State Republican Chairman Claude O. Vardaman, who announced tha Alcorn would speak in Birmingham, denied that the visit would have any bearing on the fight being waged against the Democratic oath.

"Republican Chairman Alcorn is coming to Birmingham to address a fund-raising rally and for no other purpose, other than to try to help build up the Republican Party in this state," said Vardaman.

Plans for Rally

"This dinner rally was planned long before either the State Democratic Executive Committee met last Jan. 25 and readopted the loyalty oath for candidates in that party's primary elections, or before the Committee met and adopted a resolution denouncing the Democratic oath.

"Mr. Alcorn is coming to Alabama purely in the interest of the Republican Party, and I doubt if he is aware of or concerned over the fact that the Democrats are getting ready to hold a state-wide primary election on May 6."

The fight between the slates of loyal Democrats and those who want to bolt against the national party leadership has been going on for several years.

It started when the Dixiecrats bolted in 1948 and gave Alabama's electroal vote to Strom Thurmond and Fielding Wright, with voters of this state not even having an opportunity to vote for Truman and Barkley.

Then the Democratic regulars, with the aid of Sens. Lister Hill, John Sparkman and other members of Alabama's congressional delegation, wrested control of the state committee from the bolters in 1950.

Sparkman, Hill and the other congressmen took the stump to help campaign for stick-by-the-party Democrats running for committee places. They won 44 of the 72 places.

Another fight ensued in 1954 when loyal Democrats won by an even larger margin, capturing 61 of the 72 seats.

South Is Looking To A Third Party

Atlanta Daily News 1 p 2a
Sun 4-18-54

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS

Democrats' bright hopes for the 1958 congressional and Gubernatorial elections definitely do not extend into the 1960 Presidential election. Southern Senators and Representatives at home for the Easter recess heard of mounting sentiment for a third party, based on belief that Northern Democrats overwhelmingly in control of party's next National convention will write a civil rights plank South cannot swallow. Also that next session of legislatures in Florida and possibly three other states will write laws similar to that recently enacted in Georgia freeing their Presidential electors from national convention control. Such laws are already in effect in Alabama and South Carolina.

BETTING FAVORS LANGER—Although the Republican organization in North Dakota has endorsed Lieutenant Governor Clyde Duffy for the Senatorial nomination, betting in North Dakota is that Senator William Langer will be returned to his seat.

PRESIDENT AND VICE PRESIDENT — It is denied, but the reports was all over town that President Eisenhower spoke very sharply to Vice President Nixon over the latter's advocacy of a tax cut, and it is no secret that Nixon thought the President's veto of the farm support freeze a political and economic mistake. There are other issues on which the President and Vice President are no longer palsy-walsy.

CHANGE IN BADGERLAND—Republicans have erased the name of Senator William Proxmire of Wisconsin from the one-man list of sitting Democrats most likely to be defeated by Republicans. There has been a big change in the Badger state and Proxmire is now put down as an overwhelming favorite to defeat whatever candidate the divided Republicans there offer against him.

WHO'S TO BLAME? — Look for the Administration to be charged with buck-passing when Congressional debate begins on the Pentagon re-organization measure. Critics were quick to point out that President Eisenhower's message to Congress put most of the blame for military defects on interservice rivalry and studiously attempted to evade any White House, Secretary of Defense or National Security Council faults or responsibility.

OUR NORTHERN NEIGHBOR—Never has a session of the Canadian Parliament been watched by the United States government as closely as the coming session will be. Dierenbaker's Conservative party has made it plain that it will not retreat from its announced policy of transferring 15 percent of its imports from the United States to Great Britain. One probability is that the Dominion will put higher tariffs on iron, steel, pipe, zinc and its products, fruits, and vegetables.

FEW WAGE CUTS — Labor Department information is that few wage cuts are in the offing and these, if made, will be in the higher brackets. The 10 per cent slash in salaries of all receiving over $10,000 per year by the Pennsylvania Railroad and of all receiving over $12,000 by the Erie Railroad are of more than minor dimensions which have been reported.

Some prominent conservatives believe that Justice Felix Frankfurter is fast emerging as their hope on the supreme Court who will be able on occasion to lead a majority of the court away from the leftists — Warren, Black, Douglas and Brennan. Senate speech by Ohio's Senator John W. Bricker praising Frankfurter, points up the new Conservative feeling for Frankfurter.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CHAIRMAN
CHAIRMAN PAUL M. BUTLER

Butler defies Dixie Demos on civil rights

By The Associated Press

President Eisenhower car-ed his election efforts to-ard California today while ther campaigners argued bout his foreign policy and place in the political de-ate.

A stepped-up week-end tempo found Democratic National hairman Paul M. Butler vir-ally inviting those Democrats ho disagree sharply with the rty's civil rights program to t out of the Democratic Party. e said they could "take politi-l asylum" in the Republican rty or a third party.

WITH THE congressional elec-n campaign moving into its al two weeks, Eisenhower eaks tonight in Los Angeles d tomorrow in San Francisco what the White House said uld be a hard-hitting expla-tion of Republican accomplish-nts.

FORMER PRESIDENT Harry Truman and Vice President on resume their campaign tivities tomorrow in the East r a week-end of rest for each Adlai Stevenson, twice the mocratic presidential nomi-e, called U. S. policy toward Nationalist Chinese islands Quemoy and Matsu "This serable mess."

Speaking in Milwaukee Satur-night, he said "we have had most four years of grace over last crisis of Quemoy to ex-ate ourselves. Instead, we ve allowed Chiang kai-shek to ve us closer to war, to imperil prestige and the peace of United States over little lands . . . which in the long run e untenable."

BOTH EISENHOWER and cretary of State Dulles had id they thought foreign policy uld not be subject to partisan ttle. Dulles left some ckers and later approved sident's action in attacking mocratic critics.

Truman said in Washington Friday that he and that Eisenhower now "agrees with me" that a foreign affairs should not be a campaign issue.

BUTLER WAS asked about that during a television interview (ABC-College News Conference). He said he thinks Truman was speaking then primarily as an ex-president who thinks there should be mercy on the man in the White House. He added:

"I think the Republican Party has made foreign affairs an issue by saying they are responsible for peace. Then the Democrats have the right to discuss foreign policy and areas of disagreement."

Republican National Chairman Meade Alcorn took issue with another Truman statement which described as "the Korean surrender" the armistice ending that struggle. Truman said "a settlement was made that I could have made on the same terms three years before."

IN A STATEMENT, Alcorn said that "the only possible interpretation to be made of this comment is that, if it were up to Mr. Truman and his party, Americans would still be bogged down in the casualty-ridden morass of the Korean war. . ."

Butler, questioned about his comment on civil rights during the television interview, said they applied specifically to Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas and also to Sen. James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) if he felt the same way.

HE SAID THE Democratic Party would welcome as many Americans as possible, but added that "if they don't want to go along on the racial problem and the whole area of human rights then I think they are going to have to take political asylum wherever they can find it, either in the Republican Party or a third party."

OTHER ISSUES also were raised, during the week-end.

Rep. Joseph W. Martin Jr. (R., Mass.) House GOP leader said in a statement that if the Democrats control Congress next year "we will see a federal spending spree that will be unequaled in the history of the nation."

Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Tex.) said in Welch, W. Va., that the Republicans are kicking around socialism, which he described as a dead issue, in the campaign, and added:

"We are faced with the challenge of whether we shall lead the world or default that leadership and be led ourselves with a ring through our nose."

Huddleston replies to Butler statement

Rep. George Huddleston Jr. of Birmingham after hearing of Paul Butler's statement had this comment to make:

"Paul Butler has made such statements before. The ignorance of some people in other sections of this country regarding the attitude of the people of the South towards so-called civil rights legislation and efforts to integrate our schools continue to amaze me.

"We of the South are not ever going to accept the dictate of those from outside our section who do not understand our problems and who presume to force a police state upon the country. We shall await developments in 1960.

Democrat Party Donations Slow

Butler Not Much Of Magnet For Contributions

SOUTH'S FUNDS MISSED

From The Commercial Appeal Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—The Democratic National Committee under the chairmanship of tough, blunt-spoken PAUL M. Butler isn't proving much of a magnet for campaign contributions.

Lee Birkhead, the committee's finance officer, conceded Friday that most state Democratic organizations are spending their money at home rather than sending it to the National Committee for allocation.

He said nearly all states are lagging behind their quotas to the National Committee. And, as a result, he said it's highly unlikely the committee will collect the $1,300,000 total it had anticipated for the fall campaigns.

General Over Country

Mr. Birkhead declined to release actual state quotas. And he said no tabulation has been made of contributions by states since Sept. 10.

"It isn't any particular state or area that isn't coming up to its quota," he added, "it's general all over the country."

He said this isn't unusual in non-presidential years and particularly when the opposing party holds the White House.

However, reports from the South have indicated that Democratic organizations in many Southern states have slowed down their contributions to the National Committee because of hostility to Mr. Butler and his frequent, blunt, pro-integration statements.

The National Committee normally depends heavily upon Democratic organizations in Southern states to finance its activities.

This is because little money is needed to finance November general election campaigns in the one-party South, and funds therefore can be forwarded to the National Committee.

Democratic organizations in two-party states in the North and West spend what money they can collect at home and also draw on National Committee funds.

Could Reduce Standing

The slowdown in contributions to the National Committee from the South could have the effect of reducing Mr. Butler's standing in the party. And this could be one of the objectives of the Dixie party leaders.

At the recent Southern Governors conference in Lexington, Ky., several deep South governors made no secret of their hostility to Mr. Butler.

They took the view that he is unnecessarily dividing the Northern and Southern wings of the party with his crusading attitude in favor of racial integration.

They indicated a belief he could adopt a more moderate policy without losing votes for the party in the North.

Butler Sounds Off

National Democratic Committee Chairman Paul Butler invites Southerners who refuse to support integration to seek asylum either with the Republicans or in a third party.

"Invite" is hardly the word for it. Mr Butler, in his frantic bid for the Negro vote in New York, Chicago, Detroit and other critical areas, virtually read Southern Democrats out of the party.

In a television interview over the week-end the national party chairman promised there will be no "compromise" on integration and other so-called civil rights issues in the party platform.

His attitude is nothing new. Mr. Butler merely picks up where Harry Truman left off years ago.

Which serves to underscore the wisdom of Alabama Democrats when they discarded the party loyalty oath last May.

Administration scored—

Butler hits hard at GOP criticism

MANCHESTER, N.H., Dec. 13 —(AP)—Paul M. Butler, Democratic national chairman, said Saturday night Democrats favor a balanced budget, but are also for a balanced and expanding economy.

"This is more important in the race for survival," Butler said in a speech prepared for a Democratic meeting. "We believe both can be attained."

Hitting hard at Republican criticisms of Democratic spending programs, Butler said President Eisenhower is trying to "thwart the will of the people by crying out that if the Democratic Congress dares to do what the times and the voters demand, we will be responsible for catastrophic inflation and an unheard-of public deficit."

"I WANT TO NAIL this canard right here and now," said Butler, who apparently referred to Eisenhower's day-after-election news conference warning against unnecessary spending and his promise to fight against it in the new Congress starting next month.

"The plain facts are," Butler said, "that by not doing what has been necessary over the past five years, the Eisenhower administration has already brought on the fastest peacetime inflation and the largest peacetime deficit in the history of the United States.

"What is more, they have compounded these evils by producing simultaneously the worst recession and the greatest unemployment of the postwar era. These are unique accomplishments of the Eisenhower-Nixon administration in violation of every campaign promise they ever made."

Butler said the overwhelming vote given the Democrats on Nov. 4 was an unmistakable mandate for positive and progressive action to put America "once again on the road to progress and expansion."

MR. PAUL M. BUTLER, CHAIRMAN
DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEE

Paul Butler Stands Behind Southern Democrat Who Is Too Liberal for Southern Whites

Paul M. Butler, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, today made the following statement which was issued from the Committee offices in Washington:

The Democratic National Committee has received no communication from the Louisiana Democratic State Central Committee relative to National Sommitteeman Camille Gravel, Jr., but on thet basis of published accounts I would like to make this comment:

Mr. Gravel is still the Democratic National Committeeman from Louisiana and he will remain in that post until the conclusion of the next Democratic National Convention unless proper grounds for his removal are presented to the Democratic National Committee, which finds them to be true and right to remove Mr. Gravel under the rules of the Committee. These rules provide for removal by a vote of two-thirds of the members present at such a meeting but not less than a majority of the full membership of the Committee. This information was transmitted to the Chairman of the State Central Committee in 1957.

The rules provide for removal after notice and opportunity for a public hearing and upon grounds found by the National Committee to constitute good and sufficient cause. I am certain that an overwhelming majority of the National Committee would vote that the charges made against Mr. Gravel at Baton Rouge, as described in published reports, do not constitute good and sufficient cause.

Under all of the precedents of the Democratic National Committee, support of the Party's platform, adopted by a majority vote of the National Convention, is not grounds for removal. Both precedent and the written rules of the National Committee are clear as to the fact that the Democratic National Committee is the judge of its membership, not a State Committee or a State Convention. A National Convention member does not serve at the whim or pleasure of a State Committee.

In conclusion, I would like to comment on Mr. Gravel's role as a member of the National Committee, its executive committee and its Advisory Council. He is respected by the members of all of these bodies for his integrity, candor and intelligence. As a man of honor he has felt bound to support the platform which was adopted by a majority vote of the National Convention including the Louisiana delegation. As a representative of the South he has always told these bodies frankly and forcefully the views of the South on whatever matter was at issue. As a man of conscience he has stated his personal views when the occasion called for it. In doing all of these things he has carried out the duties of his various roles in the Democratic Party with honor, vigor and dignity.

I am certain that any hearing before the National Committee will result in an overwhelming vote to uphold Mr. Gravel and retain him as a member of the Committee. On the basis of the fact now available to me, I shall urge such a course with all of the vigor at my command.

Butler Critics Get Challenge To Unseat Him

Democratic National Chairman Paul Butler has challenged Southern Democrats to try to unseat him.

Renewing his attack on their civil rights views in a National Press Club luncheon appearance yesterday, Mr. Butler declared the Democratic Party "will not tolerate anybody defying the Supreme Court of the United States.",

He challenged those who disagree with him to regain him. It would take 55 members of the 108-member Democratic National Committee to do it, he said.

But he claimed he spoke for the "vast majority" of Democrats and even suggested that several Southern Democrats on the National Commitee would vote for him in a showdown.

He denied he was attempting to read any Democrat out of the party, or advocating formation of a third party by Southern Democrats. He also said, however, that "there is always the prospect of a third party developing" in the 1960 presidential election year and some Democrats may "walk out" of the convention rather than support the liberal civil rights platform he expects his party to adopt.

In his prepared address, Mr. Butler lambasted Vice President Nixon for using "ugly and divisive" language against the Democrats. He particularly deplored the Vice President's use of the phrases "rotgut thinking, political radicals and appeasers."

He also charged that Mr. Nixon had reversed President Eisenhower and Secretary of State Dulles on foreign policy's role in the congressional election campaign.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL COMMITTEEMAN, (LOUISIANA)

Party Chief Opposes State Unit's Removing National Committeeman

© New York Times News Service

Washington, Oct. 9.—The chairman of the Democratic National Committee said Thursday that Camille F. Gravel, Jr., "is still the Democratic national committeeman from Louisiana" and will remain so despite the state committee's vote Wednesday to remove him.

The state group voted, 69 to 30, to remove Gravel because of his moderation on the racial integration issue and his support of the 1956 Democratic platform on that issue. The state committee voted to replace him with Jett M. Talbot, a segregationist.

Paul M. Butler, the national chairman, said in a statement that the Democratic National Committee "is the judge of its membership, not a state committee or a state convention." A national committeeman, he said, "does not serve at the whim or pleasure of a state committee."

Butler said Gravel would continue to serve until the presidential nominating convention of 1960 unless "proper grounds" for his removal were presented to the national committee and it voted to remove him, under rules that require a vote of two thirds of the members present.

National-committee members are selected by state delegations to the presidential nominating conventions every four years.

Dispute May Be Felt In '60

The dispute, with its overtones of states' rights and the integration controversy, was regarded here as a foretaste of deep-seated differences that could cause a major upheaval at the Democratic convention of 1960.

Senator Russell B. Long, Louisiana Democrat, whose uncle Governor Earl K. Long, joined the move to oust Gravel, said Thursday it was possible the dispute might produce two rival Louisiana delegations to the convention.

He also pointed out that the state committee decides the names of candidates to be placed on the ballot with Democratic endorsement—a hint that the state committee might conceivably bar the party's nominees for president and vice-president from the ballot if the national committee does not accept Gravel's removal.

Senator Favors Removal

The senator said he thought Gravel "shouldn't want to represent an unwilling client, and the national committee should not insist that he do so."

Gravel said Wednesday that he was "not going to resign and I am going to place this matter before the committee if I am voted out for supporting the Democratic platform."

Butler said Gravel had served with "honor, vigor, and dignity" on the national committee, its executive committee, and its advisory council.

Party Upholds 'Integrationist' Of Louisiana

Democratic Group Rejects Effort To Oust Man Saying Segregation Morally Wrong

By ROBERT L. RIGGS

The Courier-Journal Washington Bureau

Washington, Dec. 3.—Northern Democrats, stiffening in their support of Southerners who stand by the national organization, rejected Friday an attempt by the Louisiana State Committee to turn out of office a national committeeman who has said segregation is morally wrong.

By a strictly sectional vote of 7 to 2, the credentials committee of the national committee held that Camille F. Gravel, Jr., having been chosen for a four-year term, cannot be displaced until the expiration of that period at the close of the national convention in 1960.

In upholding the continued service of Gravel, the credentials committee refused to give his seat to Jett M. Talbot, who was chosen by the Louisiana State Committee to replace him.

Transfer Legal Point

The decision turned on the narrow legal question of whether the state committee, having nominated Gravel for election by the national committee in 1956, can displace him at its own pleasure.

But behind the legalism was all the controversy over school integration, the threat of a Southern third party in 1960, the bolt of some Democratic leaders to the Dixiecrat forces in 1948, and their support of Dwight D. Eisenhower in 1952 and 1956.

The same question will come before the full national committee at its session Saturday, but the outcome there will be a duplication of the committee vote.

Although Talbot, whom the Louisiana committee had tried to put in Gravel's place, has a record of not bolting the Democratic Party, his chief spokesman before the national committee was a backer of J. Strom Thurmond's third party in 1948 and did not support Adlai Stevenson in 1952 and 1956.

'May Well Be Signal'

He was former Governor Sam Houston Jones, who told the credentials committee, in unimpassioned tones, that it was about to bring on another party bolt.

"What you do here, Jones said, "may well be the signal that determines what the South does in 1960."

Another spokesman for Talbot was William Shaw, who is also legal counsel for the prosegregationist White Citizens Councils of Louisiana.

Putting their case frankly on the segregation issue, Jones said, "Gravel considers segregation morally wrong. To have him say that was more than our people could take."

Shaw, Jones Challenged

As evidence that the South has people willing to support the Democratic national platform on civil rights and segregation, Gravel produced leaders of volunteer party groups and a spokesman for organized labor.

His chief counsel was Ralph N. Jackson, Louisiana chairman of Volunteers for Stevenson in the last two presidential campaigns. Another was State Senator J. D. De Blieux.

Pointing his finger at Shaw and Jones, De Blieux challenged them to deny they had bolted the Democratic Party in the last three presidential campaigns.

"The stand Jones has taken," the State senator said, "involves segregation. It involves hate. It involves the bombing of churches and temples. Their White Citizens Council raised money to send to Little Rock, but I've never seen them raise money for bombed-out people.

"As long as they can deprive people of their civil rights, our economic problem will never be solved. That's why these people seek to engender this cleavage."

Victor Bussie, speaking for the A.F.L.-C.I.O. Council of Louisiana, charged that those seeking to replace Gravel are "anti-Negro and antilabor. They fathered the 'right-to-work' amendment. They are against everything that the good and loyal Democrats of Louisiana stand for."

Asks Test In Primary

Gravel said he was so confident that the Democrats of Louisiana would support him in upholding the national-party platform that he had challenged his foes to put the issue to a test in next December's primary.

The two credentials-committee members who voted to put Gravel out were Mrs. John Garland Pollard, Virginia, and Edgar A. Brown, South Carolina.

Voting to keep Gravel were Chairman Calvin W. Rawlings, Utah; Donald J. Mitchel, Iowa; Tracy S. McCraken, Wyoming; Mrs. U. D. Sawyer, New Mexico; Carmine de Sapio, New York, and Mrs. Elizabeth Stanton, Massachusetts.

Angered State Leaders

Reinforced by their recent victories north of the Ohio River, the party's leaders show every determination not to let their loyal members south of the border be displaced by those who are threatening a new bolt.

Gravel had angered Louisiana leaders by his loyalty to the national leaders, including Chairman Paul M. Butler. He had given them a weapon with which to strike at him by asserting that he believes segregation to be morally wrong and that, legally, the matter has been settled by the Supreme Court.

He had added, however, that it would be "disastrous and dangerous" to try to integrate the schools of Louisiana now.

Rights Bill Brought Up

Another complaint against Gravel was that he had given support to the civil-rights bill when it was before Congress a year ago last summer.

Gravel countered that he had favored only that portion guaranteeing the right of every citizen, regardless of race or creed, to vote. He was opposed to other features of the bill, he said, adding that his position coincided with that of Senate Leader Lyndon Johnson of Texas.

DEMOS REFUSE TO OUST GRAVEL

Credentials Group Rejects Move, 7-2

By DOUGLAS B. CORNELL

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democratic national credentials committee rejected 7-2 Friday night a move to oust Camille F. Gravel Jr. as Louisiana national committeeman.

In a decision reflecting national committee views on the explosive civil rights issue, the credentials group turned down a plea to seat Jett M. Talbot as Louisiana committeeman.

Previously, the Louisiana state committee had voted to oust Gravel because it contended he was out of step with Louisiana Democrats' opposition to integration. The state committee had chosen Talbot to succeed Gravel.

The credentials committee's decision, taken behind closed doors after a four-hour public hearing, was announced by Calvin Rawlings Jr., Utah national committeeman, and chairman of the group.

TWO BACK TALBOT

Rawlings declined to name the two who supported the move to oust Gravel. It was learned from other committee members, however, that the two who supported the seating of Talbot were Edgar A. Brown of South Carolina and Mrs. John Garland Pollard of Virginia.

Besides Rawlings, other committee members who voted to retain Gravel as a member of the national committee included Donald J. Mitchell of Iowa, Willa Mae Roberts of Missouri, Tracy S. McCraken of Wyoming, Mrs. U. D. Sawyer of New Mexico, Carmine de Sapio of New York and Elizabeth Stanton of Massachusetts.

Rawlings said the credentials group is drafting a report to be made to the national committee Saturday. At Saturday's session most southern members are expected to vote against retaining Gravel as a member of the committee but the Louisiana member seems likely to get sufficient support from other sections to retain his post.

Opposing factions in the Louisiana battle traded charges of political murder in arguments before the credentials committee. Warnings were voiced that another party rupture may be in the making that could endanger Democratic victory chances in 1960.

'CEREMONIAL MURDER'

Ralph Jackson, attorney for Gravel, told the credentials committee that the effort to oust Gravel was an "effort to kidnap and carry off one of your own members in midterm."

"You are asked," he said, "to commit ceremonial murder, premediated, on the altar of segregation."

William Shaw, Talbot's lawyer, countered that it wasn't a matter of asking for a ceremonial murder of Gravel —"we're asking you to bury him. His execution has already taken place. Let's let his ashes remain in peace."

Gravel backers took the position that the national committeeman was the target of a dastardly plot by leaders of a movement to form another party—by men who they said have been consistently disloyal to the Democratic party and its platforms.

JONES SOUNDS WARNING

Ill-concealed threats of a southern rebellion were sounded mainly by Sam H. Jones, former Louisiana governor, who made no attempt to deny that he had not supported the Democratic presidential slates in 1948, 1952 and 1956.

Jones told the credentials committee that what is done here "may well be the signal that determines what the South does in 1960."

The Louisiana row was the big item on Friday's agenda of a four-day Democratic get-together to draft plans and strategy looking to the 1960 presidential election.

Behind closed doors, a site committee heard spokesmen for five cities lay down financial offers and extol the qualifications of their communities for the national conventions two years from now.

Los Angeles and San Francisco made bids Thursday. Friday the site committee heard delegations from New York, Atlantic City, Philadelphia, Miami Beach and Chicago.

Three-member subcommittees representing both the Democratic and Republican national committees will meet next Tuesday in an effort to agree on a common site for the conventions.

Democrats Balk Move to Oust Committeeman From Louisiana

Credentials Group Upholds Gravel Despite Warning of Bolt by South

By W. H. LAWRENCE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5 — A Democratic Credentials Committee turned back tonight an effort to replace Louisiana's national committeeman in the face of warnings that the action might promote a Southern bolt.

By a 7-2 vote, the Credentials Committee sustained the continuing membership claims of Camille F. Gravel Jr. His ouster had been voted by the Louisiana Democratic State Central Committee on the ground that his views on continued public school segregation were too moderate. By the same vote, the committee refused to accept the credentials of Jett M. Talbott, elected by the Louisiana committee to replace Mr. Gravel.

Earlier, the committee had heard nearly three hours of impassioned oratory and argument reflecting the party's deep split on civil rights.

Southerners Ask Ouster

The issue will be reargued tomorrow before the full National Committee. There is no doubt. However, that it will sustain the Credentials Committee's ruling that National Committeemembers are elected for four-year terms, subject to removal only for violation of National Committee rules.

Two Southerners, Mrs. John Garland Pollard of Virginia and State Senator Edgar A. Brown of South Carolina, voted to dismiss Mr. Gravel. There may be moves to remove the Louisiana member from the party's Executive Committee or the Advisory Committee.

Former Gov. Sam Houston Jones of Louisiana pleaded for Mr. Gravel's ouster. He argued that it was the sovereign right of a state party to choose and change its own representatives in the party's national councils. He argued that Southerners loyal to the party had already made many concessions to preserve the national party, but should not be denied this right to pick their own spokesman.

1948 Bolt Is Recalled

He pleaded with the national party not to force the Southerners to face the prospect of another party bolt. He recalled the states rights bolt of 1948 and the defections of Democrats to the candidacy of President Eisenhower in 1952 and 1956.

William Shaw, also arguing for Mr. Talbott's acceptance, told the credentials group that "politically speaking, he [Mr. Gravel] already has been indicted, tried, found guilty and executed by the Democratic party of Louisiana, and there is nothing this committee can do to revive him."

Ralph N. Jackson, arguing for Mr. Gravel's continuing membership on the National Committee, recalled the recent defeat, by a write-in vote, of Representative Brooks Hays, Democrat from Little Rock, Ark., an dcalled this action "political manslaughter."

Brief Charges Plot

"You are asked to commit premediated ceremonial murder of one of our own members on the altar of segregation," Mr. Jackson said.

A brief filed in Mr. Gravel's behalf also asserted that the effort to oust him was "part of a plan designed to undermine the Democratic party in Louisiana."

Mr. Gravel, in his own defense, argued that the attacks upon him had grown out of his loyal support of the Democratic party and its platform, including moderate civil rights legislation.

The National Committee and its Advisory Committee continue sessions through tomorrow and Sunday.

State Young Democrats Pass Resolutions Favoring Negroes

Two resolutions, both carrying meaning for Oklahoma Negroes, were passed by the League of Young Democrats at their state convention at the Mayo Hotel, Saturday.

The resolution dealing with fair employment stated, "We favor the Fair Employment Act, with adequate enforcement provisions." The fair employment resolution also stated that the practice of racial discrimination in employment endangers the peace and welfare of our state and safety nation-wide.

The other resolution, also dealing with race relations, praised Gov. Raymond Gary for his leadership in leading the Democratic party to be conducted in compliance with the federal law to desegregate the schools. It further commended the peaceful governor for bringing about a resolution in racial relations and the maintaining of harmony between the races.

Gary Jay, president of the Tulsa County League of Young Democrats and newly-elected secretary-treasurer of the State League, said the resolutions had the full backing of the Tulsa delegation.

Receive Action for Jobs

The Young Democrats also requested that Governor Gary be encouraged to foster through working with bi-racial groups the following:

"The opening up of new fields of employment for qualified Negroes.

"The employment by school districts of qualified Negroes, and the opening up of public accommodations for persons of all races, so that no one will be denied those amenities which most take for granted."

Among the 650 delegates from 37 counties who attended the two-day conference were 20 North Tulsans, who are members of the Tulsa County league.

DEMOCRATIC SLUGFEST

Dixiecrats Again Seek To Gain Party Control

BY BOB INGRAM

A clam-bang fight for control of the Democratic Party in Alabama has developed between two familiar combatants—the Loyalists and the State Righters.

And one of the leaders of the latter group in Alabama said last night the bitter intra-party fight might not be limited to this state alone but would probably be waged in several Dixie states.

The prediction was made by Gessner T. McCorvey of Mobile, who was chairman of the Alabama committee before the Loyalists regained control in 1950.

McCorvey was contacted for comment late last night after it became apparent that full slates of State Rights candidates for the Executive Committee had been entered in most Alabama districts.

PUSH ADMITTED

The big push by the States Righters was readily admitted by McCorvey.

"There certainly is a move to get States Righters into controlling position in the State Democratic Executive Committee," McCorvey declared. "We're pushing State candidates in the First District and in other districts too."

"We are pushing for a full slate of States Righters in Alabama, and I think there will be an attempt to do the same in other Southern states, McCorvey added.

McCorvey said the revival in States Rights activity was a direct result of both national parties "playing politics" for the Negro vote.

POSSIBILITY CITED

He said there was a possibility both parties might nominate a Negro for vice president in 1960, and with the Loyalist in control Alabama might have to cast its electoral votes for such a candidate.

McCorvey identified the States Rights slate in the First District as A. F. Devan and D. R. Coley, both of Mobile; H. H. Mathews of Camden, Roy Haig of Fruitdale, A. H. Evans of Butler, Sam C. Blount of Chatom, Frank Thomas of Demopolis and W. H. Bruce of Catherine.

At least eight known States Righters are running for the eight seats to be filled from the Second District. They include Frank Mizell Jr., S. T. (Tyre) Russell, Morris (Bubber) Dees and Cliff Herren, all of Montgomery; L. W. Brannan of Foley, Joe B. Nix of Atmore, Joe Kettler of Luverne and L. D. Anderson of Atmore.

LINES INDISTINCT

A spokesman for that group admitted last night that there might be other candidates from the Second who are also in sympathy with the States Rights cause.

The lines could not be drawn clearly in the Third District, but it was known that a full slate of States Righters were in the running. At least two of them were known to be Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon and weekly newspaperman Hubert Garner of Union Springs.

In the Fourth District four members of the States Rights slate were identified—Col. Alston Keith, N. L. Horne and John Lapsley, all of Selma; and Sen. Walter C. Givhan of Safford. Givhan was scheduled to qualify for the committee last night.

The outcome of the heated struggle will be settled May 6 in the Democratic Primary when all 72 seats on the Democratic Executive Committee will be filled. The committee reigns supreme over all party matters in Alabama.

The fight between the Loyalists and States Righters developed suddenly. No more than a fortnight ago there weren't enough candidates qualified to fill the seats on the committee.

But during the closing days of the qualifying season there was a flood of candidates qualifying. The total last night stood at 157 in the race, with more expected before the midnight deadline.

LOYALTY OATH

Basically, the bone of contention is the controversial loyalty oath, which prohibits a person from being a candidate in the Democratic Primary if he voted other than Democratic in the last general election.

It is this pledge which has prevented the so-called Eisenhower-Democrats from running in a Democratic primary.

The Loyalist bloc in Alabama, that is those who support the loyalty oath, now have a firm grip on the state committee, a control they have maintained since 1950.

It was in that '50 primary that perhaps the most heated fight between the two groups occurred.

This election followed by but two years the historic 1948 Democratic National Convention, where half of Alabama's delegation walked out in protest to President Truman's Civil Rights platform.

RIGHTERS IN CONTROL

At that time the States Righters were in control, to the extent that the Democratic presidential nominee in that year did not even appear on the general election ballot in Alabama.

Instead, the Dixiecrat slate of J. Strom Thurmond and Fielding there was little contest. When the Wright was on the Alabama ballot. This slate captured Alabama's electoral votes as well as those in Mississippi, South Carolina and Louisiana.

The election of a new state committee in 1950 boiled down to a fight between the bolters and the Loyalists. After a torrid campaign, the loyalists regained control of the committee, 44-28.

It was this committee which adopted the loyalty oath, a pledge which has since been readpoted each two years for the Democratic primary elections.

LOYALISTS STRONG

When a new committee was elected in 1954 the Loyalists were in such a strong position that votes were tabulated, the States Righters had lost all but a dozen seats on the committee.

If there was any doubt as to the division of strength, a meeting of the committee in 1956 dispelled it. The States Right bloc offered a resolution to kill the loyalty oath, but the resolution was tossed out by a resounding vote of 42-10.

The same oath was readopted by the committee here in January by a vote of 42-2.

Democratic women leaders appointed

'Keep your clammy claws off Powell,' N.Y. Democrats told

By LOUIS E. LOMAX

NEW YORK — The men of God have told the men of Tammany Hall to go to H—.

In a rousing and all out unprecedented action, the powerful 500-member Baptist Ministers Conference passed a unanimous resolution backing clergyman-politician Adam Powell for his eighth consecutive bid for the U.S. House of Representatives.

Feeling the emotion of their own power, the Baptist brethren then went on to appoint a "watch dog committee" to see to it that Tammany Hall men stay out of Harlem and "keep their clammy claws off of the Rev. Mr. Powell."

THE RESOLUTION was sparked by a highly dramatic speech by the Rev. O. Clay Maxwell Jr., who charged that the conspiracy against "Brother Powell" is, in effect, an attack upon all ministers.

The Rev. Mr. Maxwell then declared that the issue was no longer political, but a question of the freedom of Harlem and the dignity of the cloth.

It is no accident that this rousing approval of the controversial Harlem congressman comes one week before Powell will begin his active campaign.

Powell will campaign through a series of "person to person" talks with the people. The first of these chats will be before the Baptist Ministers' Conference next week.

THE ACTION by the conference means that Powell has returned to the tactic he has used with great effectiveness for years.

The images of Adam C. Powell, the minister and man of God, and Adam C. Powell, the civil servant. U.S. Congressman from New York, are beginning to fuse. They make this fusion each election year.

As a result, any person who runs against Powell either in the primary or the general election will be cast as a reluctant pagan challenging the man of God. Thus the charges "heathen" and "sinner" will fly around the corners of Harlem and ring out in the bars and numbers joints.

THE ACTION is, however a great tribute to Powell as a leader. Powell is in disfavor with the Democratic party nationally and locally. As a result his patronage is all but nil. Yet he has been able to once again rally the ministers' conference to his side.

The magic in this is that the Baptist ministers have great influence in the party councils of both the state and the city. One of their number, the Rev. Gardner Taylor was just Tuesday elevated to the New York Board of Education. The Rev. Sandy Ray as well as the Rev. Thomas Kilgore are frequent advisors to the mayor on critical problems.

IN THE wake of the Baptist action, all primary opposition to Powell took to the hills. Assemblywoman Bessie Buchannan let it be known that she was not too interested in challenging Powell. Her backers have long since repented and come to the Powell mourner's bench for absolution.

Mrs. Ann Hedgeman told the AFRO:

"You can quote me. I know nothing about the fact that Tammany Hall has suggested my name to run against Powell."

The fear of God has been put into Powell's opposition. Mainly because the powerful religious alliance that supports Powell can also say who eats at the public trough in Harlem for the next two years. An all-out war by members of the powerful religious alliance can defeat both assemblymen and councilmen in the next election.

OVER AND above all this is the fact that of the three colored congressmen, Powell is the only one whose voice rings consistently and always for the rights of his people.

Even those who would oppose Powell in New York don't do it because in Illinois' Dawson and Michigan's Diggs the cause of colored citizens rights is muted.

There was no mention of the domestic and church difficulties Powell has had during the past months. The Baptist ministers met of one accord and shocked all Harlem with their action.

And the bookie is the man who knows the way things are going. He will give you twenty to one that the winner and eight times congressman from Harlem is Adam C. Powell Jr.

Loyalty Oath Can Aid Integration

If the Democratic Party of Alabama keeps the so called "loyalty oath" and if the people of Alabama continue to vote for and elect those who take this oath, segregation will come to an end in this state sooner than most people think.

The National Democratic Party, in effect, is dedicated to the proposition that segregation of the white and Negro races must end. Then why are the leaders of the Democratic Party of Alabama insisting that every person who runs for office within the Democratic Party must take this "loyalty oath."

Not many men, at this time, who have taken the "Loyalty Oath," are traitors to the principle of segregation. But we do have men in Alabama who are traitors to the cause of segregation so says the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In a pamphlet put out by the NAACP, titled, "What the President Could do About School Desegregation," the NAACP says this is the situation in the South:

"When the desegregation decision was handed down in 1954, the law-respecting and more liberal citizens of the South soon found themselves engulfed in a surge of intransigent emotion that compelled them to join the insurgents if they were not to lose their own positions in the community and, in some cases their political futures."

"The NAACP is telling us in plain words that we have men here in the South, who are pretending to be for segregation while at the same time deep down in their hearts, they are for integration.

In the pamphlet put out by NAACP, the NAACP thinks that the President can use four senators of the South to help desegregate the schools of the South.

In this matter, NAACP says this: "There is the patronage power. The responsible elements in the South—the Sparkmans, the Kefauvers, the Hills, the Fulbrights—should be favored, even though they may disagree with the Supreme Court ruling.

To think that these four senators are the only responsible men in the United States Senate from the South would be stretching the imagination to the breaking point. Then why do the NAACP think that they could be so useful to the President to help desegregate our schools? To answer this question, I will turn to Gunner Myrdal.

On page 440 of his book, "An American Dilemma." Myrdal says, "Southern conservatism is a unique phenomenon in Western civilization in being married to an established pattern of illegality."

"In the South, it is the weak liberal reformers who have had, and have now, to stand up for the majesty of the law."

Then on page 466, Myrdal says, "Southern liberalism is not liberalism as it is found elsewhere in America or in the world. It is a unique species It is molded by the forces of the region where it carries out its fight."

"As an intellectual and ideological phenomenon it is, as we shall find, highly interesting. But in spite of its local, not to say provincial, character, it has always had its chief strategic function as a liaison agent with the North. It gets its power from outside the South."

If Myrdal is correct concerning Southern liberalism, then on issues concerning our Southern way of life, we cannot expect any thing except half truths and deception from Southern liberals.

When Myrdal wrote his book, in 1942, he said, "Only two senators in the Upper and Lower South—Claude Pepper of Florida and Lister Hill of Alabama—and two or three Southern representatives (Notably, Robert Ramspeck of Georgia) could be considered as liberals."

Follow the leadership of John Sparkman, Lister Hill and others who would have us retain the so called "Loyalty Oath," and our schools will be integrated.

You cannot serve two masters. No matter how loud you howl for segregation, you cannot maintain it, so long as you swear allegiance to the national party that is dedicated to the proposition that segregation must end.

Dixiecrats Rebuked By Democrats

By Chas. Livingston for ANP

After failing for several months to take the initiative, liberal forces now appear to be overtaking anti-integration and segregationists groups in continuing civil rights battle.

In three major developments this week, segregationists either were dealt solid thumpings or at least put on the defensive.

Two of these developments occurred Saturday; one in Washington, the other in Little Rock, focal point of the school integration struggle.

In the nation's capitol, Dixiecrats got a forecast of what to expect in the next session of Congress, when the Democratic National Committee brushed aside their protests and endorsed the liberal civil rights stand of its chairman, Paul M. Butler.

White citizen council politicians and segregationists from Louisiana were likewise beaten back when they tried to have Camille Gravel, Democratic National Committeeman of Louisiana, ousted from his post. The National Democratic Committee voted 91 to 15 to retain Camille Gravel. Earlier the Credentials committee by a 7 to 2 vote recognized Mr. Gravel rather than Jett Talbot, an outspoken segregationist named to the post when Gov. Long fell out with Gravel. Gov. Long 'surrendered' to the white citizens council extremist element after the falling out and gave the 'green light' for a special meeting of the State Central Democratic Committee for the purpose of 'ousting' Gravel. Gravel at the time said he couldn't be ousted for supporting the National Party views and the National Democratic committee has upheld his contention most convincingly.

Butler had been taken to task by pro-segregationist party members for an alleged statement over a national television hook-up recently declaring that Democrats will press for a strong civil rights platform in 1960 and that those (Dixiecrats) who refuse to support it will have to take a walk. His statement stirred up a furor in the South, with Dixiecrats in general gunning for Butler's scalp.

However, the Democratic National committee not only upheld Butler, but issued a stinging rebuke to the Dixiecrats in the form of a resolution praising the chairman for his "forthright utterances" defying the South on the racial issue. Later, the Democratic Advisory committee poured salt on an already open wound by calling for enactment of strong civil rights measures, particularly to stave off future Little Rocks, in an 11-point legislative program.

The civil rights section read: "Enactment of those parts of the 1957 civil rights bill that were compromised out of it--including civil injunction suits by the attorney general to help those deprived of 'equal protection of the law,' and 'such legislation action as will aid, assist, and encourage the reopening of public schools now closed to avoid racial integration, and avoid other closings."

Northern and western members of the national committee teamed up to issue the Dixiecrats the political spanking, and party leaders in general were reported to believe that victory in '60 depends more on a strong civil rights record than appeasing the southerners.

Among those who added their support for strong civil rights measures, was Sen.-Elect Stephen Young, Ohio Democrat, who said this week he will vote for a change in the Senate rules limiting filibusters.

The second major setback handed the segregationists came when three of five candidates supported by Gov. Orval Faubus suffered resounding defeat in an election to fill vacant seats on the Little Rock school board.

One of the winners, whom Faubus had called "integrationists," described the defeat as "the beginning of the end" for the turbulent governor.

Ted Lamb, owner of a local advertising agency, termed Faubus "a 20th century Machiavelli (opportunist)," and added:

"This is the first crack in the Faubus edifice and I predict that his entire political empire, founded. . .upon misrepresentation and bigotry, will soon be crumbling at his feet." He also called Faubus a demagogue.

Besides Lamb, other anti-Faubus candidates elected were Everett Tucker, Jr., and Russell H. Matson. Matson is a Little Rock contractor, while Tucker heads an industrial development company. The three want to reopen the closed Little Rock schools, integrated or not; Faubus wants to keep them closed to avoid integration.

Meanwhile, in Montgomery, Ala., the Civil Rights commission held a hearing to investigate charges that the voting rights of Negroes were being violated in Alabama. The commission hearing may lead to possible federal action against state officials, who so far have refused to produce voters registration records as ordered. The commission have issued a flood of subpoenas, including one to Chairman E. P. Livingston of the Macon County board.

The commission lacks enforcement powers, but if the records are not produced, it can ask the Justice Department to cite those disregarding the subpoenas with contempt.

While the Montgomery hearing is in progress, the commission is housed at nearby Maxwell Air Force base, after members were refused accommodations in local hotels. One Negro, former assistant Labor Secretary J. Ernest Wilkins, is on the commission. There are also several Negro staff members.

In Chicago Friday, President Alonzo G. Moron of Hampton Institute, came out with a bold prediction that Virginia's so-called "massive resistance" to school integration will soon crumble. Moron said the closing of scools in the state has ing of schools in the state has awakened the people to the bald facts of a community without proper public educational facilities.

In still another development Friday, James Devore, 33, testified at the trial of George Bright, held for the bombings of an Atlanta Jewish Temple last Oct. 12, thatthe defendant told him he (Bright) served as a lookout for those carrying out the plot. Devore is a cellmate of Bright. The trial was being conducted in Atlanta.

On the brighter side, the federal government approved a grant of $44,519 to help rebuild the dynamited Clinton (Tenn.) school, and legislative proposals calling for stronger civil rights laws were recommended by the San Francisco NAACP branch and the Americans for Democratic Action.

Press Conference—

Hill, Sparkman hopeful filibuster to remain intact

Birmingham News

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

Alabama Sens. Lister Hill and John Sparkman are confident the Southern bloc, with help already assured from Senate colleagues from other sections of the country, will defeat a new move by "Northern radicals" to change the filibuster rule.

"I think we will be able to beat down efforts to change the rule allowing, unlimited debate in the Senate and defeat attempts to push through any civil rights legislation," declared Sen. Sparkman.

SEN. HILL, saying he felt that in southern senators, with aid from other areas, would be able to defeat the proposal by two-thirds of all of elected Senate members necessary to cut off debate, declared:

"We will fully expose the evils and inequities in this civil rights legislation, and when we do, I think we will be able to defeat these anti-lynch measures."

Sparkman and Hill said the "radical" advocates of civil rights legislation have "over-dramatized" themselves.

12-15-58

THEY VOICED the belief that sentiment in sections outside the South, as well as those in Dixie, resented "resentment" in the recent elections to President Eisenhower sending federal troops to Little Rock and to U. S. Supreme Court desegregation decisions. They were referring to the Democratic victory.

Sen. Hill said the national budget should be balanced, but will be balanced.

Both senators are keeping hands off in the fight among anti-loyalists for chairmanship of the State Democratic Executive Committee. This is a tussle between State Highway Director Sam Engelhardt of Macon and Montgomery Attorney Frank Minisi Sr.

Press Conference," public information program sponsored by The Birmingham News and Stations WAPI-TV and WAPI.

Concerning the fight between Engelhardt and Mizell, Sen. Hill said:

"I'M NOT TAKING any part in it. I believe in majority rule. The anti-loyalists have a majority on the committee and it is their business and responsibility to elect a chairman. I supported loyalist candidates for the committee."

Sparkman, who did likewise, declared "I haven't had a thing to do with it and I don't propose to. I haven't spoken to a single member of the committee regarding this fight and I don't intend to."

Sparkman reiterated that in 1960, when he comes up for reelection to the Senate, he would not be a candidate for delegate to the Democratic National Convention.

News

"TRADITIONALLY, senators running for reelection don't run for delegate," said Sparkman, who was chairman of Alabama's delegation to the 1956 national party convention at Chicago.

Asked if he would run for delegate in 1960, Sen. Hill replied: "It's difficult to say a year and a half ahead of time what I'll do. But in the past, when I was not up for reelection, I did run for delegate to the Democratic National Convention."

Mon. 12-15-58

BOTH HAVE BEEN elected Democratic delegates through the years, with Sen. Hill also having served as chairman of the Alabama contingent.

Sparkman, Democratic vice presidential nominee on the ticket with Adlai Stevenson in 1952, declined to speculate as to whom would be nominated by the Democrats for president in 1960.

He added that "some of those being mentioned are friendly to the South and have demonstrated their friendliness. But there are degrees of friendliness."

Hill declared, "I'm for a balanced budget and I very strongly feel we must and will get it balanced."

"But there's nothing that contributes so much to an unbalanced budget as a recession," he added. "We're just coming out of a recession."

SPARKMAN, in commenting on the "terribly unbalanced" budget, also referred to the fact that revenues had fallen off during the recession.

In predicting the budget would be balanced, Sparkman said, "If we don't balance it next year, we'll come close to doing it. We must get it balanced."

Sparkman suggested a plan to make certain that the budget stays in balance, adding that "I would set up a sinking fund to keep the budget balanced."

AS TO A PLAN suggested by Sen. Lyndon Johnson of Texas, Democratic majority leader, to change the filibuster rule to require a two-thirds vote of senators present to slap on clotture, Sen. Hill said, "I favor the rule just like it is now."

Both Hill, who is chairman of a strategy group of Southerners to oppose changing the filibuster rule, and Sparkman said they would continue to fight for keeping the present rule unchanged.

But they pointed out that up until 1949, the plan suggested by Sen. Johnson had been in effect.

IF THE RULE is changed, as Johnson suggests, the Alabama senators emphasized that Southerners "would always be there" to block any attempt to cut off debate.

"As long as we have the weapon of free debate, we will be able to take the war to the enemy and win," added Hill.

As to the U. S. Supreme Court rulings, Sen. Hill pointed to severe criticism of the high tribunal by other federal judges, notably Judge Learned Hand of New York, and by chief justices of 36 state Supreme Courts.

He also mentioned Judge John Parker of the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals and Judge J. C. Hutchinson of Texas as having rapped the high court for its rulings.

"JUDGE HAND has spoken out in criticism of the Supreme Court for going far and beyond any authority it has under the U. S. Constitution," added Sen. Hill. "The U. S. Supreme Court has set itself up as a third legislative body.

Questioning Hill and Sparkman were Lynne Brannen, Associated Press staff member of Montgomery, and this reporter. Charlie Davis, WAPI-TV and WAPI news editor, moderated the program.

Next Sunday, U. S. Rep. Kenneth Roberts of the Fourth Congressional District will be special guest on this public information program.

The commission, made up of legislators, school, business and labor leaders from over the state, will meet at Montgomery at 10 a.m. Thursday to consider the various subcommittee reports.

CHAIRMAN DAWKINS announced that the entire commission would meet again at Montgomery Jan. 5 for three days of public hearings on school finance and other problems before drafting its final report to the Legislature.

Recommendations for employment of more teachers and boosting teachers' pay were made by other subcommittees reporting to Dawkins.

The lengthy report turned in by the finance group pointed out it would be impossible to double present school expenditures in one, or even four, years "without irreparable damage to the economy of the state."

Instead, it suggested a 25 per cent boost in revenues the first four years, with an additional 5 per cent increase each succeeding year to bring the present yearly school budget up to $237 million by 1973.

LOCAL SCHOOL BOARDS would get more aid under a recommendation which would exempt gasoline used by school buses from the state's 7-cents-a-gallon tax. This would save local school boards of education an estimated $420,000 a year.

Identical recommendations were made by the subcommittees on personnel and instruction that the state education superintendent — and all 67 county school superintendents —be appointed instead of elected. Some county superintendent posts are already appointive.

Strong laws to guide local officials in administering property tax laws, including a mandatory inventory of real estate in each county, were recommended.

IN URGING BONDS for building needs, the subcommittee proposed that the money for college needs be spent over a four-year period, with a five-year building program for the elementary and high schools.

It was suggested that below the college level, each county be given a $250,000 grant out of the $50 million proposed. Any unspent money would be divided among the counties on a teacher unit basis.

Under the 50-50 matching program for the counties, local boards would be given credit for building programs started since Oct. 1, 1956.

Among various other recommendations were increased appropriations for textbooks and school bus transportation.

The Gallup Poll

Prejudice in Politics Declining

34d

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J.—There is evidence that prejudice in politics is on the decline in the United States.

Comparable surveys by the Gallup Poll, spanning nearly two decades, show that the number of voters who would support a Catholic for President has grown.

Nearly seven out of every 10 voters, 68 per cent, say they would vote for a Catholic if he were the nominee of their party, whereas the 1940 survey figure was 62 per cent.

As for a woman for President, the public is getting to like the idea better and better. From being flatly opposed 21 years ago, public opinion has shifted around to the point where a majority today say they would vote for a woman for President.

In 1937, only one voter in three, 33 per cent, liked the idea of a woman for President, compared to 52 per cent today.

TREND DATA are not available except in these two instances. But latest survey evidence indicates that when it comes to a presidential candidate's religion—whether he is a Catholic, Baptist or Jew—most Americans are free of prejudice.

(Baptist was chosen for the survey because it is the most numerous Protestant group in America.)

The comment of a Verona, Pa., housewife, a Protestant herself, is typical:

"Religion should have nothing to do with it if the person is qualified in every other respect."

A Los Angeles buyer for a winery, a Protestant, had this to say:

"I don't let religion enter into my political feelings."

Even in the case of a presidential candidate who is an atheist, nearly one voter in every five, 18 per cent, say they would support him if he were generally well-qualified.

And nearly four voters out of every ten, 38 per cent, say they would support a Negro for President if he were running as the nominee for their party.

The figures in brief:

	% Who Say They Would Support
Baptist	92%
Catholic	68
Jew	62
Woman	62
Negro	38
Atheist	18

Analysis of the survey data shows that prejudice varies greatly according to a person's age, educational attainment and the region of the country in which he lives.

Younger persons are considerably less prejudiced than older people and college-trained people are more tolerant than those who attended only grade school.

By regions of the country, the least prejudice shows up in New England, the Middle Atlantic States and the West.

Differences by men and women are very slight, the survey finds, but a person's religious faith is a factor. Persons of the Jewish faith are found to be the least prejudiced, with Catholics next, followed by Protestants.

The above figures are based on a Nation-wide sample of 3144 adults aged 21 and over. The design of the sample is that of a probability sample down to the block level in the case of urban areas and to segments of townships in the case of rural areas.

Since this sampling procedure is designed to produce a sample which approximates the adult civilian population (21 and over) living in private households in the United States, the survey results can be applied to this population for the purpose of projecting percentages into numbers of people.

The estimated adult civilian population, as of July 1958, was 103 million.

OROVILLE, CALIF.

FOR a year or more it has been known by shrewd Republican office holders in this state that the era of Republican administration in California was ending. It remained only for this to be accomplished, and during that intervening period those who would be the candidates of the Republican Party went ahead with their plans never giving the public an inkling of their disquieting thoughts.

Republicans Foresaw Loss In California

Two years ago a Republican state senator told me that both houses of the legislature would be Democratic after the next election. It was obvious that he was worried about his own future. Strangely, he got by without opposition. A member of the assembly told me the assembly, which had been Republican for many years, would be Democratic. He won reelection against a comparatively weak candidate in a heavily Democratic district by a greatly reduced majority.

* * *

DEMOCRATIC VICTORY EXPECTED BY REPUBLICANS—It is odd that whereas the Republican office holders saw what was coming, the Democrats didn't seem to. Only that can explain the fact that they didn't have a candidate against the senator and did not put up a strong candidate against the assemblyman. If they had tried prior to the primary they could have made the candidate they did have look much better. His total primary vote was 6,000 under the Republican, whereas the Republican's lead in the final election was cut in half.

The result of the June primary, which was startling evidence of a coming Democratic victory, was more of a surprise to the Democrats than to the Republicans.

The Democrats had been beaten so long in a lop-sided Democratic state that they would not have been too much surprised had they been beaten again. The Republicans, getting by so long on some sort of magic, knew that the magic had lost its spell.

But none of them, until the primary, expected such a bad beating.

GOP DEBACLE STARTED WITH DUST BOWL MIGRATIONS — There is little use trying here to compile all the components of the debacle. It began with the migrations from the dust bowls. These Democrats, largely from Oklahoma and Arkansas, always had voted the straight Democratic ticket. They were fooled for a while by the lack of party designations on the primary ballots, where cross-filing has been allowed since Hiram Johnson's day. The Republican-controlled legislature, faced with demand for an end to cross-filing, compromised by allowing party designations after the names of primary candidates. That was the beginning of the end. "Democrats can read," is a rueful joke since a few years back.

Although the Democratic candidates immediately began to gain strength, their day of victory was put off because the party continued to offer candidates for the main offices that were unacceptable to the strong independent vote in the state that, although largely Democratic in registration, is conservative.

This year the Democrats came up with two candidates at the head of the ticket who were respectable. The independent vote saw the Republicans fighting among themselves, a luxury they could ill afford under the circumstances. As a result, even the high grade incumbent of the state's constitutional offices were defeated by unknowns, although the incumbents had the endorsement of the Democratic press and some of the labor unions.

VICTORIOUS PARTY'S HOLD—I do not expect the Republicans to win another state election in California soon. They will have to wait until the Democrats fail to administer the state properly, whether through inefficiency or corruption. Their fate is that of a minority party, but the independent vote in California would not fail to throw the Democrats out if they failed.

The great migration, which started from Republican Iowa and shifted to the Democratic South—and that continues to this day—is the underlying cause of it all.

Our Opinions

The Political Outlook For 1960

Out of the welter of developments in the recent Congressional elections, there have emerged three indisputable facts: 1. that Eisenhower has lost his magic spell; 2. that liberalism is today's political gospel; and, 3. that civil rights loom as a potent factor in the 1960 presidential election.

The Republican stratagem which sought to transform Ike into a fighting, swaggering campaigner met with disaster. The President was completely out of character in the blustering role he was called upon to play in the recent Congressional election. He was pathetically unconvincing.

The disastrous results of his barnstorming tour of the West should be sufficient evidence of the President's loss of popularity. His speech in San Francisco, where he addressed a half-empty auditorium had the mournful effect of an obituary. For, the GOP ticket, in California, went down in ignominous defeat. Both Senator Knowland and Gov. Knight, two stalwart Republicans were snowed under by their Democratic rivals.

In sum, wherever Ike spoke during the campaign, he enchanced the Democratic chances for victory. His Chicago appearance had for net result a complete sweep of the Democratic ticket. Republicans lost ground in areas where they had not been defeated in nearly a quarter of a century. Gov. elect Nelson Rockefeller was wise when he kept both Ike and Nixon at arms length in his bid for governorship of New York.

There is no doubt that Republican conservatism which Mr. Eisenhower espoused is partly responsible for the party's unenviable plight. Today's accent is on liberalism; liberalism in housing legislation, in aid for depressed areas, in reclamation projects, in farm policy, in peaceful uses of the atomic energy, in education and foreign affairs.

It did not advance the Republican cause at all when the President labeled Democrats "radicals" and big spenders. A casual glimpse into the record reveals that the present Democratic - controlled Congress trimmed nearly $6,000,000,000 from the President's budget requests of the last two years. Mr. Eisenhower's memory seems to be inordinately short on that point.

A fact of considerable import is that, with the conspicuous exception of Sen. Goldwater of Arizona, all of the victors in this past elections were the candidates who had staked their future on a liberal program as against the conservatism of the opponents. It is evidently what the people want; it is the mood, the philosophy of the hour.

Though civil rights as an issue did not come in for a full-dress rehearsal, the brief but cogent reference to it in the final phase of the campaign must be taken as a warrant that this issue will occupy the center of the stage, come 1960. On it will depend the direction of the Negro and liberal votes, votes which will tip the scale in favor of the candidate with the strongest civil rights plank. It is to test the outcome of which is already quite discernible.

38 Per Cent Of Americans Would Vote For Negro For President

PRINCETON, N. J. — (ANP) George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, has disclosed that on a national scale 38 per cent of the American electorate indicated that they would vote for a Negro if he were nominated by the party of their choice.

Taking regional considerations into count, the Gallup showed that in New England 51 per cent of those queried indicated a willingness to vote for a Negro; Middle Atlantic states, 43 percent; Midwest, 35 per cent, the South, 22 per cent; the West, 47 per cent.

Other indications showed that the adherents of the Catholic and Jewish faiths tended to be more inclined to vote for a Negro for the Presidency than their Protestant brothers.

The poll also indicated that in 3144 adults questioned those who favored voting for a Negro President were under 50 years of age and had received at least a high school training.

Poll Finds Prejudice In Politics on Decline

By George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 25.—There is evidence that prejudice in the realm of politics is on the decline in America.

Comparable surveys by the Gallup Poll, spanning a period of nearly two decades, show that the number of voters who would support a Catholic for President has grown.

Nearly seven out of every ten voters, 68 per cent, say they would vote for a Catholic if he were the nominee of their party whereas the 1940 survey figure was 62 per cent.

Woman for President?

As for voting for a woman for President, the public is getting to like the idea better and better. From being flatly opposed twenty-one years ago, public opinion has shifted significantly around to the point where a majority today say they would vote for a woman for President.

In 1937, only one voter in three, 33 per cent, liked the idea of a woman for President, compared to 52 per cent today.

Trend data are not available except in these two instances. But latest survey evidence indicates that when it comes to a Presidential candidate's religion — whether he is a Catholic, Baptist, or Jew — most Americans are free of prejudice.

(Baptist was chosen for the survey because it is the most numerous Protestant group in America.)

The comment of a Verona, Pa., housewife, a Protestant herself, is typical:

"Religion should have nothing to do with it if the person is qualified in every other respect."

A Los Angeles buyer for a winery, a Protestant, had this to say:

"I don't let religion enter into my political feelings."

Even in the case of a Presidential candidate who is an atheist, nearly one voter in every five, 18 per cent, say they would support him if he were generally well-qualified.

And nearly four votes out of every ten, 38 per cent, say they would support a Negro for President if he were running as the nominee for their party.

The figures in brief:

If Candidate Were	P. C. Who Say They Would Support
Baptist	92%
Catholic	68
Jew	62
Woman	52
Negro	38
Atheist	18

Analysis of the survey data shows that prejudice varies greatly by a person's age, his level of educational attainment, and according to the region of the country in which he lives.

Younger persons are considerably less prejudiced than older people and college-trained people are more tolerant than those who attended only grade school.

Jews Least Prejudiced

By regions of the country, the least prejudice shows up in New England, the Middle-Atlantic states and in the West.

Differences by men and women are very slight, the survey finds, but a person's religious faith is a factor. Persons of the Jewish faith are found to be the least prejudiced, with Catholics next, followed by Protestants.

The figures tell the story.

POLITICAL PARTIES

A [illegible] skeleton sketch of political party history in the United States could require little space. In the [illegible] there were no po[illegible] parties. About Jackson's time, the late 1820's, the Republican Party, the party of the States and of the people, became known as the Democratic Party, and has remained as such, in name at least, to this day.

And thus ran the course of political party history of the United States, from the beginning, 1787, until the advent of the Left Liberal philosophies. Generally, there stood on one side the states and the people, and on the other the union, which the collateral issues of industry and the protective tariff working in and out of the picture with changing times and conditions.

SPLINTER PARTY

The Liberals, sitting almost firmly in the saddle of political party dominance for the past quarter of a century, hastily cast aspersions upon any proposal for independent political action on the part of the South. They seek to classify any such movement as a "splinter" party. There could be no more wilful misrepresentation. People who band themselves together to revive or recreate a major political party devoted to basic constitutional principles are certainly no "splinter" party. A splinter party in our country, and we have had some of them, represents a group of people promoting some special interest: for example, the Free Silver party and the Prohibition party. They never never had any influence whatsoever upon the political history of the nation.

There has always been, and persist today, two main or basic political philosophies in this country. The trouble is that one of these has no organized political party to expouse its cause.

The political party history of the Republic may be divided into two periods: from 1787 to the time the collectivist planners gained sufficient strength to seize power, and from the latter date to the present time. During the first period the main point of division was over the question of dominance as between the State and the Federal Governments, with current collateral issues arising from time to time. Both theories were thoroughly conformable to the Constitution and operative within its framework. During the second or current period, the struggle is between property and individual freedom on the one hand and a rising socialistic dictatorship on the other. This is a grim and desperate struggle, and the survival of the Republic hinges upon the outcome. The Populist party of the last century, the Progressives of the LaFolette era, and the Socialist Party were not "splinter" parties, but early manifestations of the socialist creed, now matured into a major political and economic force in this nation.

THE FIGHT

Few realize the true significance of the titanic struggle going on in the world today. The fight is over property or ownership. Our Constitution, our government, laws, culture and economy are based squarely upon it. Referred to as the law of property and individual freedom, it is our basic institution. Strange as it may sound, individual freedom is itself but an appendage, for if property is preserved, individual freedom will take care of itself. Such issues as racial segregation are collateral weapons, currently available to those who would confuse and break down the conservatism prevailing in one section of the nation—the South. Collateral weapons become fundamental, however, when they are efficient to accomplish the full purpose sought, and in this instance such is true of the issue of racial separation.

Our constitution is but an effort to set down in abridged form the basic principles of the law of property and individual freedom that had been wrought out of centuries of travail by our ancestors in England and America. Its very brevity attests the fact that its founders never dreamed that a society would some day arise so devilish as to seek its destruction, and so ingenious as to subvert its plain terms by construction.

Property and ownership are synonomous with liberty and freedom. The rise of communist dictatorships during the last forty years has conclusively proven this. As pointed out by Milovan Djilas, previously third ranking leader in Yugoslavia, a defected communist now in prison, there is not and cannot be any such thing as true communal or state ownership; property must be owned by people; all of the bloodshed and tyranny in the communist countries has grown out of the process of transferring the ownership, use and enjoyment of property from its true owners to what he calls in his book, "The New Class," the communist dictators; without this transfer, the dictatorships would immediately collapse; and that herein lies the root of the unspeakably tyranny and cruelties of communism.

We in America are witnessing a tragic drift in the same direction. It is being accomplished by politics and political philosophies foreign to the soil of our land. It is a political struggle, and only by political action, speedily adopted and prosecuted may it be stopped.

American ingenuity has created a new concept and technique of the socialist approach. Instead of the bold and outright seizure of property on behalf of the State, this technique prescribes the seizure of the use, management, control, and in some cases, even now, the right to alien, and contract for the alienation and sale of property—leaving what is called the "naked" legal title in the presumptive owners of property. This ingenious device enables the collectivist planners to indignantly deny that they are socialists and piously proclaim themselves Democrats and Republicans. The Socialist Party in the United States, during the present century, put up presidential electors at five or six successive presidential elections. Their vote dwindled each time. Finally, they abandoned putting up electors, the leader, Norman Thomas, stating that the two major parties had adopted and were seeking to put into effect most of the principal features of the socialist credo.

The Socialist in England followed a more forthright plan to say the least. England, too had two principal parties, each never attempted to infiltrate and take over the management of both parties. They used labor and the remnant of the old Liberal party to found their own party. Thus, was left intact the Conservatvie party which arose in 1952 and, in name at least threw them out. The socialist planners do not intend to run such a risk in our country.

FABIAN SOCIALISM?

Fabian Socialism gets it name from the Roman General, Quintus Fabius. He destroyed Hannibal's army a little at a time, never risking head-on battle. So the process of wearing down and destroying by piece-meal gave name to a policy, the Fabian policy. The socialists in England adopted the Fabian policy, and hence became known as "Fabian Socialist. "The plan worked well for them, for little by little and piece-meal they succeeded sooner than they thought in destroying constitutional government and property in England.

LEADERSHIP

It has been pointed out that the South has the key to the situation so far as political party re-alignment is concerned. It may sound like an oblique approach to say that the only practical means of obtaining the ends here sought is for the South to detach itself from the National Democratic Party and put up independent electors. The answer is that only in the South can such a movement be counted on to capture a sufficient number of electoral votes to be effective in re-activating a second major party. The conservatives over the rest of the nation can then join in the movement and carry it forward to success.

In this age, a political party without electoral votes is like an army without weapons. In 1924 it is remembered the loose coalition of Progressives and Socialists polled almost 5,000,000 votes, but no electoral votes except the Wisconsin vote carried by their standard bearer, the elder LaFolette, which were more or less complimentary. This group had to go out of business, and never again attempted to enter the field until the Wallace fiasco in 1948, when they did not get a single electoral vote. In the same year, 1948, the States Righters in our states gathered 33 electoral votes, although getting almost the same popular vote as the Progressives. As Mr. McBride said of that election, the shift of a few thousand votes in one of two states, even without the rest of the South, would have thrown the election into the House.

ROAD AHEAD

The Politico-economic Age.

The road to restoration of Constitutional Government in our country today is a difficult one indeed. The prospect of traversing it is enough to dismay the most stout-hearted.

GOP SEES FIGHT IN CALIFORNIA

Ike, Nixon, Alcorn May Be Called on to Help

By D. HAROLD OLIVER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Outwardly, Republicans are saying November will tell a different story in California.

Privately, there is speculation that even President Eisenhower may be asked to go to the aid of Sen. William F. Knowland and Gov. Goodwin J. Knight in their gubernatorial and senatorial races before the campaign is over.

As one Republican official put it in Washington: "It's going to be rough and rugged for us in California. We've got one helluva race on our hands."

POPULARITY TEST

That was his way of summing up last Tuesday's primaries in the big key state on the West Coast—primaries that permitted candidates to file on both major party ballots.

Those figures showed that with returns almost complete, Democratic State Atty. Gen. Edmund G. (Pat) Brown topped Knowland in the combined two-party vote for governor by 600,000, a big psychological advantage in the popularity test. Each won his own party's nomination handily, but Brown got more Republican votes than Knowland's Democratic tally.

In the race for nominations for the U. S. Senate seat being given up by Knowland, Democratic Rep. Clair Engle won his own party nomination easily. Gov. Knight, who switched to the Senate race to make way for Knowland, won the GOP nomination in a fairly tough race with Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco.

DEMOS ELATED, SCARED

Engle's two-party total exceeded Knight's by more than 400,000, but was short by some 160,000 of the combined Knight-Christopher totals.

Democrats were elated over the results and began talking about a 6-4 victory margin in November in both governor and Senate races. But they said they would run scared and arranged for national party figures to take part in the California campaign.

Republicans said they would call on Vice President Nixon, National Chairman Meade Alcorn, and perhaps Eisenhower to counter the oratorical battery of such figures as former president Harry S. Truman, Adlai Stevenson, National Chairman Paul Butler and Gov. Robert Meyner of New Jersey.

STATES' RIGHTS VICTORY

Other primaries during the week in Montana, South Dakota and Alabama provided few fireworks except that in Alabama there was a threat of another Democratic bolt of the 1960 national ticket.

This came about when Alabama states rights Democrats regained control of the party affairs from the party loyalists. The states righters oppose the present loyalty oath pledging candidates to support national convention nominees.

The states righters sought to minimize talk of a party bolt like the one in 1948 when Alabama's 11 Democratic presidential electors voted for the independent Thurmond - Wright presidential ticket instead of for the Truman-Barkley combination.

SOUTH CAROLINA RACE

The only primary coming up next week is a Democratic primary in South Carolina where candidates will be chosen for governor, other state offices and six U. S. House seats. Republicans are having no primary and are not likely to have a slate in the general election in this-traditionally democratic stronghold.

There's a three-man race for governor next Tuesday between Lt. Gov. Ernest F. (Fritz) Hollings, Donald S. Russell, Spartanburg lawyer who was an assistant secretary of state in Washington under South Carolina's James F. Byrnes, and William Johnston, Anderson mayor and younger brother of U. S. Sen. Olin D. Johnston (D-SC).

Gov. George Bell Timmerman Jr. is ineligible for another term.

Only one of the state's six Democratic congressmen is opposed for renomination. Rep. John J. Riley is being challenged by State Rep. Pat Lindler of Lexington.

Nixon Thinks South Needs Two Parties

System Could Aid Region, Supply Presidential Bid

ST. CATHERINES ISLAND, Ga. (AP) — The chance of the South to supply a president is practically nil without a strong two-party system in the region, in the opinion of Vice President Richard Nixon.

For instance, said the vice president, Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia might have been a strong contender for the presidency 1952 but for this handicap.

Russell, Nixon added, was one of the best qualified men among the Democrats. But because of one-party dominance, he declared the most Russell or any other outstanding Southerner could aspire to would be the vice presidency.

RUSSELL'S ASPIRATIONS

The Georgia senator has said that he does not want that office.

The vice president discussed political and other affairs in an interview with J. E. Lambright, editor of the Savannah Morning News, during a short vacation at this barely accessible Georgia sea island.

He predicted that the two-party system eventually will come to the South but only when the Republicans begin seriously building on the local level, around good candidates for sheriff and city council. Already, he reported, this is taking place on a limited scale in some districts of Florida and North Carolina.

Nixon labeled a two-party system the greatest political need of the South. But it is good for other regions also, he said, citing the Republican states of Kansas, Iowa and Maine which recently elected Democratic governors.

'NEED A CHOICE'

"The voters," he observed, "need a real choice among candidates and issues."

Business - wise, Nixon said too many stabilizing influences can now be brought to bear to fear a recurrence of the 1929 depression.

"A free economy," he commented, "cannot stay at the same level. It must have its ups and downs. But the long-range trend is always up."

Nixon and his family ended their vacation here yesterday.

Party Leaders Exchanges Vote--Wooing Charges

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Campaigning party leaders debated the country's foreign policy and economic health yesterday amid charges of "surrender" and "smear."

Former President Truman and Secretary of State Dulles of in the Formosa Strait through a policy of "blunder, bluster and brink of war."

He told newsmen in Wilmington, Del., where he later addressed a rally, that Eisenhower went to Korea in 1952 "and surrendered to the Communists."

In Chicago, the President's press secretary, James C. Hagerty, promptly fired back an assertion that Truman was doing some political rewriting of history. He said the ex-President would have a hard time selling it to the people, and added:

"I am equally confident the American people know who stopped the impossible war in Korea which, until President Eisenhower took office, was being fought on a 'can't win it' basis with a mounting toll of American lives."

Eisenhower himself, meeting accused President Eisenhower bringing about the present crisis with a group of GOP women in Chicago, proclaimed that "prosperity is certainly coming again" and to a question as to whether he thought the recession was over he replied: "Yes—a big, emphatic yes."

His optimism was matched by Vice President Nixon, who told a news conference in Hartford, Conn., that a rising economy was the greatest single factor in what he predicted may be a surprising victory for the Republicans in the Nov. 4 elections.

"If we can keep the pressure on, we are going places," Nixon said. "The President has given us momentum and the pollsters may be in for a surprise on election day."

In Washington, addressing the National Press Club, Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler blamed the recession on the Republicans and said they had created a $12 billion deficit.

He declared his party is angry over what he called smears by Nixon.

"I believe that after the campaign is over, after the tumult has died and tempers have cooled, a good many Americans of all political beliefs will share a feeling of disquiet, perhaps of shame, over the tone of the Nixon-Eisenhower campaign of 1958," Butler said.

He said the Democrats have been trying to discuss real issues such as unemployment, inflation, farm income and education.

"The response of the party which created the $12 billion deficit without providing any new programs or service to help the American people is to say that we Democrats are a bunch of radicals out to socialize America," Butler complained.

At about the same time, Eisenhower made a new attack on what he called the dominant radical wing of the Democratic Party. He told his Chicago supporters the wing operated on spendthrift principles and he called on the nation's voters to reject the wing's candidates next month.

Official and unofficial estimates are that 76,565,504 citizens are registered to vote across the nation. From the same sources, it is calculated that 48,131,226, or about 63 per cent, will cast ballots.

Daily Worker Purged

Even in placid times, when all is a semblance of harmony, the contortive dialectics of the U.S. Communist Party are beyond comprehension. When, as now, there is an intra-party squabble, the result is chaos.

Another result is that the Daily Worker which by now should be a master of trick riding, has been ceremoniously dumped.

Editor John Gates angered one wing of the party by insisting on the right to criticize Moscow. For this, he was accused by communist William Z. Foster of holding—get this—"right wing views."

The executive committee of the party has voted to discontinue publishing the Worker. But, to confuse things, it also believes Moscow should be subject to criticism.

Gates is determined to keep publishing the paper, though he is faced with sliding circulation—down to 5,574 from 7,395 the year before, and from the peak circulation of 20,000 20 years ago.

Gates probably wishes for those gay days of a couple of decades ago when communism was the pet of "intellectuals" and punk college kids, and all of them read the Worker.

Today the Worker is neither the voice of Moscow nor of a solidified U.S. Communist Party. It has the additional handicap professionally of being an extraordinarily terrible paper.

Liberals blast Ga. governor's action

MONTEAGLE, Tenn. — The distribution of 250,000 copies of a publication charging that the Labor Day 1957 weekend seminar at Highlander Folk School was communist inspired, caused four prominent Americans this week to vehemently denounce Georgia segregationist Gov. Marvin Griffin.

In a statement bearing their signatures, Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, John O'Grady and Lloyd K. Garrison charged the Georgia state head and his Commission on Education with "irresponsible demogoguery."

Denouncing Governor Griffin for "adopting the dangerous technique of charging all Southern integration leaders with being communist-inspired," the group statement assailed a four page publication distributed bearing the imprint of the Georgia Commission on Education.

THE PUBLICATION, an outgrowth of the commission, blasts the interracial Labor Day seminar at Highlander as "communist-inspired and led." The seminar attacked by Georgia was one of a series held by the school since 1953 to develop plans for peaceful and orderly integration of schools.

The group statement declared, "We deem it morally indefensible for any man or group to inflict upon such institutions as Highlander or such individuals as the respected leaders, both colored and white, the damage to reputation which may result from the wide distribution of this slanderous material.

"We hope that the vast majority of Americans irrespective of geographical location, will join us rather than Governor Griffin, in subscribing to the principles set forth in Highlander's official statement of policy."

Highlander's policy is that "democracy to us means that membership in the human family entitles all to equal opportunity to participate in the cultural life of the community and to equal access to public facilities."

* * *

MYLES HORTON, director of Highlander Folk School stated: "Although a demagogue like Governor Griffin may not comprehend the practice of brotherhood as a matter of principle, even he should understand the tremendous damage segregation is doing to our prestige abroad."

Ed Murrow's Politics

The Liberal Party in New York —a leftwing outfit—has opened a campaign for Edward R. Murrow, radio and television commentator, as a possible Democratic-Liberal candidate for the U.S. Senate. Mr. Murrow has indicated that while he won't encourage the boom he would consider the nomination if it is offered him.

Alex Rose, vice chairman of the Liberal Party, said: "Ed Murrow articulates the principles of democracy and liberalism with deep devotion. He would make a great United States Senator."

Another candidate considered by the Liberal Party was Dr. Ralph Bunche, under secretary of the United Nations. Dr. Bunche, a Negro, said he was not interested.

The applause of the Liberal Party confirms the impression of many of his listeners that Mr. Murrow in fact is more of an exponent of certain social and political views than he is an objective reporter. It is important to be familiar with the personality and political views of a man who interprets the news before mass audiences.

Loyalty Oath Would Hit South

The New Deal President caused the defeat of "old line" Democrats in the North so that since about 1940 there has been a different body of Northern Democrats who glory in stirring up the Republicans against the South.

When Eisenhower, at first, did not send troops to Little Rock, saying "we cannot legislate morals," Adlai Stevenson and Harry Truman lashed at him insisting that it was his duty as President to intervene and force integration.

The pernicious civil rights bill was recently passed in a "Democratic" Congress, a majority of every committee being "Democrats" with a "Democratic" chairman.

Though finally called the "Administration Bill" it was originally introduced by a Northern Democrat—Rep. Celler, of New York.

After its introduction Senator Hennings and Rep. Roosevelt, both Northern Democrats, made public certain letters which they wrote to Brownell in which they belittled him and Eisenhower for failing to push a Civil Rights bill. Thereafter Brownell, with Eisenhower's endorsement, wrote out some provisions for the Celler bill.

The Civil Rights bill finally passed the Senate with not a single Northern Democrat voting against the bill. Democrat Morse of Oregon was absent and paired, expressing his opposition or outside only on ground for a delay in order to get an even stronger bill against the South.

When the House Civil Rights bill had passed before going to Senate, only one Democrat outside the geographical South voted against it—Rep. Hull of Missouri. (14 Northern Republican Congressmen voted against it.)

Sixty-four votes would break the Senate's filibuster rule. Seven of the 46 Republican senators pledged themselves not to break it, but the body of 26 Northern Democratic senators emphasized that they would furnish the necessary 25 to bring about the 64, making it useless for Southern senators to filibuster.

Now our State Committees are asking for a loyalty oath and otherwise requiring loyalty to these "Northern Democrats" who control the national convention, notwithstanding their determined disloyalty to us.

In the absence of States Rights Democrats for electors, we should vote for "Independent" electors.

DR. JULIAN P. LOVE
Calls law 'childish'

Loyalty Oath Is Attacked As 'Insult'

Seminarist Here Rips Requirement of Indiana

A widely known Bible scholar recently declined to take the State of Indiana's loyalty oath and pronounced it "childish and insulting."

Dr. Julian Price Love, professor of New Testament at Louisville Presbyterian Theological Seminary, confronted the loyalty oath when he was asked to teach a course in New Testament at the Indiana University Extension Center at Jefferson-ville.

(At Bloomington, J. A. Franklin, I. U. vice-president and treasurer, said the oath is a statutory requirement "we've had for a long time." He said he had heard nothing about Dr. Love's objections to taking the oath.)

'Shocked and Surprised'

Because he thought the course was a project somebody should undertake, Dr. Love rearranged his busy schedule of writing and teaching to work it in.

He was then sent a batch of forms to fill out, requiring detailed information on himself and what he would teach.

Among the forms, he found the loyalty oath, required to be sworn to by "every professor, instructor, or teacher who shall be employed" in any Indiana school supported in whole or in part by public funds.

"I was both shocked and surprised," said Dr. Love. "I had no idea Indiana required a loyalty oath."

Oath Is Explained

The oath calls for swearing "to support the Constitution of the United States of America and the Constitution of the State of Indiana," to "by precept and example promote respect for the Flag and the institutions of the United States of America and the State of Indiana, reverence for law and order and undivided allegiance to the Government of the United States of America."

"There is nothing wrong here, of course," he commented later, "except that it assumes you haven't been a citizen all along and are suspect unless you take an oath."

Dr. Love wrote to the dean of the I. U. center, explaining that in conscience he could not sign the oath.

Called 'Childish, Insulting'

"I let no man come ahead of me in my loyalty and love for my country," he wrote, "and my life as a minister and teacher for 40 years ould be adequate testimony to at fact.

"To requi some assurance of my loyalty seems to me both childish and insulting.

"It never occurred to me that Indiana had, adopted a loyalty oath," his letter continued, "but I should have guessed that the state which would send a Jenner to the Senate, that tolerated for years the immoralities of the Ku Klux wizard, and that would turn over the Easter sunrise service in Monument Circle (Indianapolis) to the American Legion instead of the Council of Churches might develop needless anxieties over loyalty oaths."

Waiver Was Refused

Dr. Love told a reporter he could understand how a loyalty oath might be required for someone assuming a "new relationship.

"If I was taking a new job in a university I might take an oath to do my work well and if I was getting married I would take an oath of loyalty to my wife. But I have been a citizen all my life and this (loyalty oath) presupposes that I am suspect."

The extension center sought to get a waiver on the oath in Dr. Love's case because the course he was to teach was a noncredit course. The waiver was refused.

Loyalty Oath Supported By Wide Margin

Candidate Poll In Two Districts Shows Two Foes

BY CLARKE STALLWORTH

Most of the candidates for the State Democratic Executive Committee in Alabama's Seventh and Eighth Congressional Districts favor the loyalty oath of the Democratic Party.

The Birmingham Post-Herald polled all the candidates for the committee. From these two districts, there were 20 candidates who answered the poll saying they favored the oath, and only two who said they were against it.

In the Seventh District (Franklin, Marion, Winston, Cullman, Blount, Walker, Fayette, Lamar and Pickens), the score of the poll-answers was 17 to 2.

In the Eighth District (Lauderdale, Limestone, Madison, Jackson, Colbert, Lawrence, Morgan), all of the 12 candidates who answered the poll were for the oath.

Here's how the candidates line up from the Seventh:

For the oath—Robert F. Blake of Haleyville, Lowell H. Clemmons of Cullman, Robert A. (Bob) Cummings of Cordova, Elwyn Dobbs of Haleyville, Bill Fite of Hamilton, Fred C. Folsom of Cullman.

O. W. Hancock of Ethelsville, Fuller Kimbrell of Fayette, Roy Mayhall of Jasper (chairman of the State Democratic Committee), John M. Miller of Cordova, D. F. Mobley of Guin, Cliff Palmer of Cordova, John D. Petree Jr. of Jasper.

James E. Shotts Sr. of Jasper, Thomas A. Smith Jr. of Cullman, Robert G. Werner of Cullman, Benjamin Grady Wilson of Jasper.

Results from the Eighth District:

For the oath—Clyde W. Anderson of Florence, Charlie E. Carmichael Jr. of Tuscumbia, William I. Collier of Florence, Charles H. Cummings Jr. of Huntsville, Dan Davis of Florence.

Joe S. Elliott of Decatur, Wayne (Cockleburr King) Jennings of Athens, W. W. Malone, Thomas D. McDonald of Huntsville, T. E. (Pep) Morgan of Huntsville, Robert P. Schwenn of the University, and Jimmie Waddell of Tuscumbia.

Against—None.

One candidate, James Record of Huntsville, did not say "yes" or "no" to the question of whether he favored the oath. He asked that his statement be printed in full, but the statement was too lengthy for publication in its entirety.

Some of the other comments for and against:

Fred C. Folsom of Cullman (Seventh District, pro-loyalty oath)—"I believe in the principles of the Democratic Party. We in the South will have a better chance of obtaining these goals which we desire by remaining with the Democratic Party, rather than bolting for the benefit of the Republican or some third party.

"It is evident that our best chance of maintaining our Southern customs and improving our Southern economy lies with remaining a strong part of the Democratic Party."

Victor L. Pozak of Sumiton (Seventh, anti-loyalty oath)—"Being a white Democrat, I am opposed to the so-called loyalty oath gotten up by Roy Mayhall and his stooges for the national so-called Democratic Party."

James E. Shotts Jr., of Jasper (Seventh, pro-oath)—"No organization can operate without ground rules. A two or four year waiting period for candidates seems to be a very mild penalty for desertion. In the Army, the penalty for desertion in the presence of the enemy is death."

John Altman of Carrollton (Seventh, anti-oath)—"I am in favor of restoring the Democratic Party of Alabama to the white folks of Alabama."

W. W. Malone of Athens (Eighth District, pro-loyalty oath)—"The so-called Democrats who, in 1952 and 1956, voted for the Republicans, of all people, are the only ones in Alabama complaining about the loyalty oath."

William I. Collier of Florence (Eighth District, pro-oath)—". . . I know the group of men who are leading this fight against the loyalty oath. Many of them openly say they owe no loyalty to the National Democratic Party, that they owe loyalty only to the Alabama Democratic Party . . . they vote Republican or . . . give aid and comfort to the Republicans and desire to run for office under the Democratic banner.

"They have deserted the party, but at the same time they wish to be rewarded with office by the party they are knifing in the back.

"If they secure control of the committee, they will do away with the oath, they will not support or vote for the nominees for president of the national convention in 1960 . . . and right now they are against any man who is being mentioned as a probable nominee in 1960. This means that if this group controls the committee, we may see what we saw in 1948."

WILLIAM L. PATTERSON,(GENERAL MANAGER)
THE WORKER

34d 1958

Patterson Named Genernal Manager Tie Weekly Worker

William L. Patterson, this week became general manager of The Worker.

The Worker, a national weekly published in New York was founded twenty-two years ago this month, as the Sunday edition of the Daily Worker which ceased publication on January 13. For more than thirty years Patterson has been actively indentified with civil rights.

MR. PATTERSON

Patterson raised the struggle for Negro rights to its highest political level when in 1950 he appeared at the General Assembly of the United Nations in Paris with a petition entitled "We Charge Genocide: The Crime of Government Against the Negro People." The petition stressed the violation of the Charter of the UN by the United States in its treatment of Negro citizens. It created a furore in all the Asian-African countries and among the Eastern People's Republics. Patterson emphasized the government's failure to ratify the universal Declaration of Human Rights.

Patterson, born in California of a mother who had been a slave, was graduated from University of California's Hastings Law School in 1919. The young attorney immediately became involved in the efforts to advance the cause of the American Negro and the colored people internationally.

In a press release, Patterson spoke of the great potential of The Worker as a champion in the cause of Negro rights, labor and peace. As general manager, his will also be a leading voice in determining the paper's editorial policy. "I have become the Worker's general manager, following an illustrious line of men whose names are prehaps unknown to you, but whose splendid efforts lifted the circulation of the paper above the 100,000 mark. At present, after many difficulties, its circulation is about 10,000."

'Lynching' of Sherman Adams

New 'Code' Used Against Him Is Seen Pointing at Union-Elected Politicians

An innocent man went to the gallows in American politics Monday night—convicted not by "a jury of his peers" but by the political hangmen of the hour. His head was not bowed in shame. For his conscience was clear. He yielded only to the law of expediency, which enforces its cruel verdict to satisfy the passions of the mob, even in politics.

For this political "lynching" of Sherman Adams was no less an injustice because it was carried out under the "code" which demands that, in order to win elections, suspicion must be accepted as proof. The lifelong reputation of an individual for honesty and integrity must bear now the stigma of an involuntary resignation from a high post in Government, though necessarily couched in the phrases of a voluntary act.

Sometimes, however, more votes are lost by the sacrifice of a principle than are gained by a seeming display of virtue. Granted that Sherman Adams accepted gifts from a close personal friend doing business with Government agencies, and granted that he performed for him the same service in obtaining information that was given to others who were not friends, will men in public life ever again be given the benefit of the rule that a man is presumed honest until proved dishonest? Will the general public feel now that all men appointed to Government who have contributed money to campaigns really owed their appointments to merit? And will those individuals who accept campaign contributions now and are elected to office be free from suspicion that they cannot serve the public interest impartially?

For the martyrdom of Sherman Adams can become sooner or later the martyrdom of any public official who has accepted favors, large or small, from anybody outside the Government. The whole political system is adjudged now to have been "corrupted" by this practice. If the elimination of Sherman Adams means that everyone who has accepted gifts is suspect, then the candidates concerned should in all candor withdraw from the race this autumn.

Every candidate who has accepted money for his campaign from any labor-union organization or from any employer organization must disclose all the facts of and explain his voting record with reference to those interests. The new "code" sternly requires it. How many candidates for Congress will come forth to do what Sherman Adams found himself compelled to do?

It has been said on the floor of Congress this year that $700,000 was spent to elect a Democratic Senator with funds collected from labor-union members. It has been said also on the floor of Congress recently that in the last election 175 members in both Houses owed their success in part to labor-union money.

What's the difference between a few hundred dollars paid for a hotel bill or a gift coat and tens of thousands of dollars paid to insure that certain members of Congress will vote on legislation as labor shall dictate? There is none—if suspicion is the only test.

Maybe the Adams case will prove salutary. It will be small comfort to the man himself, who is the victim, though in a larger sense it could do a great deal of good. Hypocrisy, however, reigns here and in the precincts of politics. The only persons who are crucified are those who have the ill luck to be made the victims of party pressure as a result of exposure by the opposite party which happens to be in control of the investigative machinery in Congress.

The probabilities are that the Republicans will not win the election just because they think they now have divested themselves of the smears of the Democrats by bringing about the departure of Sherman Adams from the White House. On the contrary, there will be division in the Republican ranks, because of the episode, and many will voice their protest against the "lynching."

In the end, the Democrats will win Congress because they have no scruples about taking gifts or accepting millions of dollars from special interests. This pays for the propaganda that misleads the voters and for the expenses of precinct work that brings uninformed voters to the polling booth to vote as the labor bosses have told them to vote under penalty of losing their jobs in supposedly "free America."

GOP COMMITTEEWOMAN SPEAKS

Mrs. Abernethy Hits Use Of Troops

TALLADEGA (AP) — Alabama's Republican National Committeewoman Saturday said national resentment of forced school integration and the Sherman Adams case are "building a trend against" the GOP.

Mrs. Tom Abernethy, Talladega, said in the statement Saturday Adams, presidential assistant, should resign or be fired because of his acceptance of favors from Bernard Goldfine, New England industrialist.

"But I also think the party's high command should become aware of the fact that Americans don't like the sight of federal troops invading a city to force its citizens into a social revolution," she added.

"I believe resentment of troop use to enforce integration in Little Rock is nationwide, rather than being restricted to the South.

"I do not believe the reaction would be any different should federal marshals be used instead of troops. To free people pushed around by naked federal force it could make little difference whether the pushing is done by soldiers or by something too closely resembling Hitler's Gestapo for any of us to be comforted by the sight."

Referring to the civil rights investigations announced this week, she said:

"For federal snoopers to come into Alabama and other Southern states to attempt to interfere with the right of the states to govern voter qualifications is an outrage for which both major parties share the guilt."

Saying "the Republican Party cannot hope to build successfully upon radicalism," Mrs. Abernethy added that "President Eisenhower was elected and re-elected on a spokesman for states rights. In that position he became a symbol for the millions.

vember election. He is the Republican nominee against Atty. Gen. John Patterson, Democrat.

"The Republican Party in Alabama," she said, "and its candidates for state office are pledged to support segregation and constitutional government . . . for us, political independence is the only way to political influence in either major party."

Adams Quits Job With President

By MERRIMAN SMITH

WASHINGTON. — (UPI) — Sherman Adams went before a nationwide radio-television audience Monday night to announce whether he would step out as President Eisenhower's chief assistant.

Advance speculation was that he would resign. But Adams remained tight-lipped on the matter until the very last minute.

His appearance at 6:35 p.m. (E.D.T.) on a 10-minute slot provided by radio and TV networks climaxed months of speculation and a busy round of last-minute conferences with the President at the vacation White House at Newport, R.I.

Adams prepared his eight to nine minute talk as a personal answer to demands from within his own party that he leave public life. Critics said his "imprudence" threatened GOP chances in this fall's elections.

The clamor stemmed from disclosures by House influence investigators that Adams had accepted costly favors from Boston industrialist Bernard Goldfine and had made inquiries to federal agencies on Goldfine's behalf.

The nature of Adams' radio-TV remarks was kept secret by the White House up to the moment it was delivered even though a text of slightly more than 1,000 words was readied in advance.

A broadcasting industry official said the major networks gave free time to Adams because of an implication" by the White House that he would announce his resignation.

This source said the networks would have taken a different attitude about giving Adams valuable air time if they thought he was going to use it to defend himself against political critics in an effort to remain in his post.

Adams delivered his speech on a pooled basis from "broadcast house," the Washington studios of the Columbia Broadcasting System which fed the talk to the other networks.

He spent the afternoon at his White House office after arriving back in the capital from his hasty round trip to Newport. The Navy barred newsmen and photographers from getting close to him when his military plane landed at the Anacostia Naval Air Station. A shiny black White House car quickly whisked him away.

A KISS FOR EISENHOWER'S NEW AID
. . . Alabama's Persons congratulated by wife at White House ceremony

As Ike's top aid—

Persons takes over new job

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7 —(AP)— Wilton B. Persons was sworn in today as President Eisenhower's chief aid. Sherman Adams, the man he succeeds, looked on solemnly.

Adams, who resigned under fire on Sept. 22, is staying on at the White House until [illegible] what he has termed an orderly transition.

A WHITE HOUSE conference room was crowded with relatives, White House staff members and other well wishers as the 62-year-old Persons, formerly Adams' deputy, was sworn in with Eisenhower standing beside him. Atty. Gen. Rogers administered the oath.

A moment before the ceremony started Adams slipped into the back of the room and watched from there.

He left as soon as the oath had been administered and did not join the line of well wishers who shook hands with Persons and congratulated him.

Eisenhower smiled and told Persons in handing him his commission:

"WELL, JERRY, here is a new diploma. This is one of the many capacities in which we have been together."

Persons, a retired major general, was long associated with Eisenhower in the Army. He has been on the White House staff since the president took office in 1953.

James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, said he did not know how long Adams will stay on.

Adams quit his $22,500 a year job after hot criticism of his relations wi Boston Industrialist Bernar Goldfine. Some Republic ns contended Adams had become a major political liability.

As yet, Eisenhower has not named a principal deputy to Persons—the job in which Persons served under Adams.

85th Congress Records Mark As One Of Busiest

WASHINGTON (AP)—The 85th Congress neared final adjournment Saturday after racking up a record as one of the busiest and biggest spending congresses in recent history.

It won't meet again unless called into special session by President Eisenhower, but most of its members hope to return in January for the opening of the 86th Congress.

During its almost 16 months of sessions last year and this year the 85th saw man reach into space and plumb the depths of the Arctic Ocean beneath the North Pole.

So it probably was appropriate that the 85th Congress legislated in a field that ranged from admission of Alaska to statehood to a firm declaration against allergies.

It handled more big legislation than most of its peacetime predecessors and it set a peacetime appropriation record of more than 140 billion dollars.

FRUITFUL CONGRESS

Whether its net product was good, bad or indifferent will be a subject of debate for months to come, especially between now and the November elections when all 435 House seats and 34 of the Senate seats will be filled.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn (D-Tex.), who has presided over his branch of Congress longer than any other man, called the 85th "about the most fruitful Congress that I have ever served in."

House Republican Leader Joseph W. Martin Jr. of Massachusetts described it as "a fifty-fifty Congress" that he said enacted "a lot of good legislation and a lot of bad legislation, left a lot of things undone and spent so much money that we may have to increase taxes next year."

President Eisenhower didn't fare too badly, considering that both House and Senate were under the control of the Democrats, his rival political party.

BIGGEST BATTLES

Due largely to Democratic votes, the President won his biggest battles—for extension of the Reciprocal Trade Act, for continuation of the Foreign Aid Program and for reorganization of the defense department. He got most, but not all, of what he wanted on those three issues.

But Eisenhower couldn't persuade Congress to grant him his requests for general labor legislation, for government-backed health insurance, and for a minerals subsidy program, among other things. The House killed Senate-passed labor and minerals subsidy bills. Neither branch considered the health insurance proposal.

The President's feelings about the 85th Congress were expressed in two separate statements during the final week of the session.

In one, he patted Congress on the head for enacting a four year extension of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act.

LABOR LAW

In the other, he spanked it for not having enacted a general labor law to curb racketeering, corruption and abuses of trust and power in the labor-management field. Eisenhower said the Senate-passed bill killed by the House was not strong enough.

Eisenhower tossed more than a score of vetoes at Congress and made all of them stick. Only one attempt was made to override a veto and it failed in the House after succeeding in the Senate. It involved a minor bill dealing with the pay of some shipyard workers.

From the taxpayers' point of view, the 85th Congress may be remembered as the one that convened in January 1957 with high hopes of cutting taxes and adjourned after having actually boosted taxes in the social security field and increased postal rates.

A general tax cut anywhere in the near future was all but ruled out by huge appropriations for defense, for pay raises for postal employes, civil service workers and members of the Armed Forces, and by increases in the national debt limit in the face of a federal deficit expected to reach 12 billion dollars by next June.

COMBAT RECESSION

Legislation enacted to combat the recession also added to the government's spending and made a tax cut more remote.

About the only thing the 85th did to offset some of the spending it approved was to hike postal rates to the tune of more than half a billion dollars a year.

It was the first Congress in almost a century to enact civil rights legislation and it was the first in almost half a century to admit a new state to the union.

It increased social security benefits, voted pensions for former presidents, regulated employe welfare and pension funds, provided easy-to-get loans for college students, extended unemployment compensation benefits, enacted a new farm program and approved big public works and highway programs.

It took no final action on legislation dealing with federal aid for school construction, flood insurance, extension of minimum wage coverage, statehood for Hawaii, curbs on the Supreme Court, advance notification of business mergers, exemption of natural gas producers from federal control, and provision for the vice president to serve as acting president in event of a president's disability.

Its big investigations dealt with racketeering, presidential assistant Sherman Adams, and influence peddling in television station licenses.

By subjects, here is what the 85th Congress did in the way of major legislation:

National Defense and Related Programs—

Approved President's defense department reorganization plan.

Authorized $2,800,000,000 program of construction projects at military installations here and abroad.

AApropriated $73,300,000,000 to defense department, including $33,700,000,000 last year and $39,600,000,000 this year.

Continued until next July 1 suspension of two million man statutory limit on strength of the armed forces.

Increased pay of members of armed forces.

Authorized $54,600,000 program of missle base construction; $74,300,000 program of research facilities for national advisory committee for aeronautics; 100 million dollar program of naval ship conversion and construction with emphasis on nuclear-powered vessels; 800 million for atomic energy commission construction, including the building of an atomic destroyer; and $47,800,000 for construction of a new space projects center.

Extended president's authority to expediate and renegotiate defense contracts and to allocate and fix priorities for strategic materials.

Created national aeronautics and space agency to supervise space exploration programs.

International Affairs—

Continued foreign aid program and voted more than six billion dollars to finance it for the two years.

Continued for four years president's authority to make reciprocal trade agreements and to reduce tariffs.

Provided for exchange of atomic materials and information with friendly nations.

nIcreased lending authority of export-import bank.

Provided for admission of Hungarian revolution escapees into the United States.

Group In Chicago Is Interracial, Led By Notables

Hon. Frances P. Bolton, of Ohio, Mrs. Margurite Church of Ill., Allied With Mrs. Mayme Mason Higgins In Drive, Begun In Sheraton Hotel; Party Issues Given Enthusiastic Endorsement In Speeches By Prominent Members of Congress And Others

Chicago (Associated Negro Press)—Congressman Frances P. Bolton (R-Ohio 22nd District) was guest speaker today at a "Salute to Women" luncheon at noon in the Grand Ballroom of the Sheraton Hotel in Chicago. The luncheon was organized by a committee chairmaned by Mrs. Mame Mason Higgins, long prominent in civic and welfare activities in Chicago, and one of the outstanding Republican women leaders. It was planned to take place during "Race Relations Week" to bring into sharp focus the long consistent stand which the Republican Party has maintained since its inception for full human rights for all Americans.

After being introduced by the Honorable Marguerite S. Church, Member of Congress from the 13th District of Illinois, Mrs. Bolton said:

"It is especially delightful to me to have been introduced by my colleague, Marguerite Stitt Church who serves with me on the Committee on Foreign Affairs. You are fortunate to have such a representative in the Congress. We on the Hill are proud of her—we women especially.

"I do not need to tell you of her ability when she goes down into the well of the House and addresses the Congress. Nor do I need to mention the fine quality of her mind that organizes her thoughts and expresses them in clear, trenchant English. The sincerity of her remarks whenever she speaks is one of her strengths, as is her heartfulness."

Bolton Aids Meharry

Mrs. Bolton is a ranking member of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, having served as chairman of the Subcommittee on Near East and Africa. Her travels have taken her to many parts of the world. In 1953, she undertook a study mission to Africa, south of the Sahara. Her report on this African trip has received wide distribution among political and educational institutions throughout the country.

In March of 1957, Mrs. Bolton returned to Africa as one of four official U. S. delegates to the independence ceremonies of the new state of Ghana. This last fall she undertook an official trip to the Middle East where she made a study of the UN. refugee camps on behalf of the committee, stopping at Libya, Tunisia and Morocco on her return to the United States.

In addition to her interest in foreign affairs, Mrs. Bolton has long been known for her activities in support of health and education matters. She is a trustee of Meharry Medical College and Tuskegee Institute.

Following are excerpts from her speech:

Women Emancipated

"It used to be that women were not supposed to trouble themselves about matters outside their homes. How long ago that seems! For now we must carry responsibilities that reach out across the world. . . .

"As one looks around, isn't it amazing how much women really are doing. Women are playing an ever greater part in all the international organizations of the UN. The International Labor Organization—the Inter-American Commission. And our own women's organization among them was National Council of Negro Women, the National Council of Women of the U. S., and the International Council of Women of the World.

Took Husband's Place

"As you will know, I am a Republican, as was my husband before me. Until I was elected to succeed him, I had not need to examine my reasons, nod to define what the GOP stands for. In recent years one has heard on all sides: There is really no choice between the two parties . . . they want just about the same things. Then suddenly one fine day I was pulled up short, faced with some rather cold facts that painted a different picture altogether.

"World War II emergency legislation and the Korean conflict gave Washington unbelievable control of our economy, threatening to change our traditional way of life. Granted the needs for emergency action were unprecedented, but it was not until President Eisenhower came to The White House in 1953 that wartime controls were relaxed, taxes reduced and steps taken to eliminate certain governmental functions which could best be handled by private enterprise.

Lincoln Philosophy

Basically, the Republican philosophy of government was best expressed by our first Republican president, Abraham Lincoln, when he said:

'. . . legitimate object of Government is to do for a community of people whatever they need to have done, but cannot do at all or can not do so well for themselves in their separate and individual capacities. In all that the people can individually do as well of themselves, the Government ought not to interfere.' . . . .

"Then Dwight D. Eisenhower accepted the nomination. Among other fundamental points of his political creed he made it unquestionably clear that he believed 'in the equal dignity of all people, whatever their racial origin or background may be; in their equal right to freedom and opportunity and the benefits of our common citizenship.' . . .

Ike's Creed

In his inaugural address on Jan. 20, 1953, he said further, 'We reject any insinuation that one race or another, one people or another, is in any sense inferior or expendable.' He assured us all, that were he elected, he would see to it that wherever the Federal Government had jurisdiction, this principle would be activated and segregation would cease. I need not remind you that it was but a matter of months before these principles were being put into effect. . . .

"With other Republicans, I have worked for and secured the passage of various bills which had to do with the rights of minorities . . . anti-poll tax legislation, anti-lynch bills, and an FEPC measure, only to see these bills buried in the Democrat-controlled Senate.

Mr. Terrell and Dr. Jernigan

"We Republicans on the Hill and Pennsylvania Avenue have no wish or intention of taking from others the credit for every civil rights advance of these last years. Neither Democrats, nor Republicans can claim credit for the magnificent work done by Mrs. Mary Church Terrell and Rev. William Jernigan in the Thompson Restaurant case in Washington. Such courage and faith as theirs cannot be praised adequately. Nor can either political party claim credit for the results of the years of arduous work of the NAACP that won the long court fight which resulted in the School decision of May 18, 1954.

"We Want Credit"

"Ladies, we Republicans do want full credit for the following measures taken to eliminate discrimination in our capital city: opening up the theaters, hotels and other places of amusement . . . integrating the fire department, desegregation of the public schools.

NEW DISABILITY RULING SOUGHT

Amendment to Ike-Nixon Agreement Wanted

WASHINGTON, March 4 (AP)—A group of Democratic and Republican senators introduced today a constitutional amendment that would supplant the disability arrangement between President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon.

Sen. Knowland (R-Calif) said the proposal is "generally acceptable" to the Eisenhower administration. President Eisenhower called for an amendment two years ago after he suffered the first of three serious illnesses—his 1955 heart attack.

The proposed amendment fixes procedures under which the vice president would become acting president should the chief executive become disabled. Its chief sponsors were Sens. Kefauver (D-Tenn) and Dirksen (R-Ill).

Knowland said he hopes for early action by the Senate Judiciary Committee on the plan.

Kefauver told the Senate he agrees with Atty. Gen. Rogers that the Constitution now gives the vice president sole responsibility for determining whether a president is unable to carry out his duties, if the president himself does not make such a finding.

'NEED AMENDMENT'

This is the procedure to be followed under the Eisenhower-Nixon arrangement made public yesterday.

Kefauver went on to say, however, that vice presidents who served with two presidents who became incapacitated, William McKinley and Woodrow Wilson, failed to act because they had doubts about public acceptance of their action.

The Tennessee Democrat said a constitutional amendent is needed to clarify the procedure and take some of this burden off the vice president.

The amendment being offered with bipartisan backing would have the vice president and the Cabinet decide whether a president was unable to carry on.

Kefauver said the responsibility should rest with the Cabinet rather than members of Congress because Cabinet members are in constant touch with the president and, in most instances, are of the same political persuasion.

'HAPPY SOLUTION'

"There is less likelihood of political bias entering into their advice," he said, than there would be if some leaders of Congress also were dealt in on the decision.

Dirksen told the Senate he believes the proposal provides "a happy solution" to the disability question.

Kefauver announced that he and Dirksen were joined in offering the proposed amendment by Sens. Kruska (R-Neb), Hennings (D-Mo), Olin Johnston (D-SC), Langer (R-ND), Jenner (R-Ind), Watkins (R-Utah) and Butler (R-Md).

Montgomery GOP Appoint Delegates

A small but energetic Republican county mass meeting Tuesday elected 30 delegates and 30 alternates to the party's district and state conventions later this month.

They also elected a 13-member county executive committee headed by veteran chairman Howard L. Foshee.

By virtue of President Eisenhower's county majority in the last general election, Republican delegate strength here has been boosted from 26 to 30. Montgomery will have twice as many delegates to the state convention as any other county in the Second Congressional District.

Despite some protest, the 4[illegible] members attending the mass meeting decided not to nominate anyone for county office.

VOTE AS UNIT

Local attorney Perry Hooper moved that the county's 30 delegates vote as a unit at the state and district meetings, and after some lively debate, this was passed by a 38 to 3 vote.

It was resolved by the meeting that Hooper be supported for Republican district chairman at the district meeting, May 29, in Montgomery.

The membership of the executive committee was raised from 9 to 13. Tom Moody, who was nominated twice for the committee, was defeated on separate votes of 17 to 14 and 16 to 12.

Asked if he thought county and state Republican strength had declined since Little Rock, executive committee vice chairman Eugene Munger Jr. said "Definitely, we were hurt, and it's still showing."

GAINING AGAIN

Chairman Foshee added, "We lost some strength, but on the other hand, people are beginning to realize Stevenson would have done the same thing, but even quicker. We're gaining again though."

Only two Alabama counties, Winston and DeKalb, have any sort of consistent Republican voting record.

Elected to the county executive committee besides Foshee and Munger were Richard Croy, secretary-treasurer, Perry Hooper, Charles Kennamer, Owen Posey, Mrs. Ruth Johnson, W. O. Jones, Mrs. Leon Hopper, Mrs. Ann Moore, Mrs. Betty Davis, John Dale and Julian Elgin.

Delegates to the state and district meetings are Howard L. Foshee, Mrs. Howard L. Foshee, Mrs. Frank Johnson Jr., Charles Kennamer Jr., Mary Kennamer, Mrs. Seaborn Kennamer, Richard Croy, Mrs. Charles Moore, William Jones, Mrs. William Jones, Martha Foshee, Perry O. Hooper, Owen Posey and Sewell Bullard.

Others are John Dale, Howard Alexander, Mrs. Ralph Hughes, Harry English, Mrs. Hartwell Davis, James N. Johnson, C. E. Smith, Julian Elgin, V. C. Elgin, W. J. Fuller, E. M. Bingham, Eugene Munger Jr., Mrs. Ethyl Foshee, E. M. Whitten, Tom Moody and Mrs. Leon Hopper.

The alternate delegates: Mrs. Richard Croy, Mrs. Owen, Mrs. Rob Dobson, Mrs. Frank Johnson Sr., Jewell Norris, Mrs. W. A. Freeman, Mrs. O. D. Street, O. D. Street, Mrs. Jimmy Mather, Mrs. Tom Moody, Mrs. John McGuire, W. A. Freeman, Mrs. E. M. Bingham, Jimmy Mathers, Mrs. E. M. Whitten, Mrs. C. E. Smith, Mrs. Ralph Daughtry, Mrs. Terry Mizell, Mrs. John Davis, Teliz Shank, Mrs. Worth Bainer, Mrs. Julian Elgin, Charles N. Jones, Marvin F. Jones, Mrs. W. A. Freeman and Mrs. Sewell Bullard.

Gallup Poll—

GOP Strength Across Nation Still Declines

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., May 17.—GOP Congressional strength across the nation continues to ebb.

With six months of campaigning remaining before the November election, Republican support is lower than at any recorded point since 1936.

The Peters Institute reporters questioned in recent days—in all parts of the nation and from all walks of life—who stated their preferences divided as follows:

"If the election for Congress were being held today, which party would you like to see win in this state?"

DEMOCRATIC	58%
REPUBLICAN	42

The proportion of undecided was 8 per cent.

"All-important" factor in the campaign this year has been the recession. As the business slump has continued, the political tides have been running stronger and stronger for the Democrats.

If the business situation should turn up, this factor may help the Republicans. Earlier this month, for example, when the first inklings of voter optimism about the recession were discernible in their outlook on employment, President Eisenhower's personal popularity took its first sharp upswing in a number of months.

But—as the following trend of the vote shows—the GOP's Congressional vote has yet to show any such pick-up:

VOTE FOR CONGRESS NATIONWIDE

FEB., 1958	55%	45%
MARCH	56	44
TODAY	58	42

GOP losses since the first of the year have come almost entirely from the 35 states of the North and West—the "battle ground" for Congressional elections.

The vote in the solidly Democratic South has appeared to stabilize at 77 per cent for the Democrats to 23 per cent for the GOP.

Eisenhower In 1960

THE magic of the Eisenhower personal appeal to the American people has not been canceled out, as has been recklessly charged by so many. It is without question diminished and he is now fair game for the slings and arrows the same as any other President, but he continues to command an uncommon charity and restraint in the judgments of his fellow Americans. When things go sour, there is still the widespread tendency to blame the trouble on his subordinates, wherever possible, and in the case of a President or an Alabama governor, that tendency bespeaks trust and affection.

It seems to us that you find the truth of that contention displayed among Alabamians in their reactions to Little Rock and the Sherman Adams tarnish.

Alabamians were pained and alienated by the folly of the Little Rock troop drop, and Eisenhower's admirers turned his picture to the wall. But even amid the roar of indignation, there was a sense that the rash act did not truly represent the man Eisenhower. Think what would have been said had Truman fixed the Little Rock bayonet!

Sherman Adams has without doubt besmirched the administration with his callous double standard and the President has committed a Trumanesque act in tolerating it. Even so, the angry, disillusioned clamor ranged at Eisenhower is much less than Truman would have attracted.

Eisenhower's popularity is undoubtedly less by far than it was. But with nearly six of his eight years served, it is probable that Eisenhower will leave office popular and grow more so until he dies.

After the reform convulsion of the Roosevelt years, the drift and demoralization of the Truman Administrations, the kind of government Eisenhower has given was appropriate to the times and mood of the people.

If the recession continues to lift, if no cannon has been fired in a war, Eisenhower will be rated the fountainhead of eight years of restraint (with the exception of Little Rock), promotion of capitalism, fiscal sanity and goodwill. But in any event, the American people are tenaciously inclined to like and admire Eisenhower.

3 Negroes Seeking GOP Berths

MEMPHIS—After Republicans had qualified an unopposed legislative slate with the GOP primary board, Lieut. George W. Lee, Republican Old Guard leader, stated that his group will make a strong campaign in November against candidates to be nominated in the Democratic primary on Aug. 7.

Three Negro candidates are among the seven Republicans running for the lower house.

The Negro candidates are W. R. Bradford, 60, boilermaker with the Illinois-Central Railroad, who ran unsuccessfully for the lower state house two years ago.

Mrs. Florence McCleave, 68, 475 Vance Ave., wife of Dr. B. F. McCleave, who also ran unsuccessfully for the lower house two years ago. She was the first Negro to sing the ttile role of "Aida" in Italy in 1927. A well-known opera teacher in her younger life, she is now a voice teacher and was the discoverer of Marian Anderson.

Third candidate is Sam Qualls of the Qualls Funeral Home, a veteran leader of Negro Junior Chamber of Commerce activities who conducts a Christmas party each year for needy youngsters.

Republican Women Meet Mar. 16-18

Daily World Atlanta Ga.

WASHINGTON — Miss Bertha Adkins, Assistant Chairman of the Republican National Committee, said Thursday that 23 States already have sent in names of women who will be State Conference Chairmen for the Sixth Annual Republican Women's Conference in Washington, D. C., March 16-18, 1958.

"It has been only a few weeks since requests went out to the Republican National Committeewomen to decide on a head for their respective State delegations to the coming National Conference," Miss Adkins said.

"This early response, despite the rush of the Holidays, indicates to me that the Republican women are anxious to get busy early in the elections coming up in 1958," she continued.

"It would seem this is one of their New Year's Resolutions," she added.

Miss Adkins who also is Director of the Women's Division of the Republican National Committee, sponsor of the National Conference, originated the plan to get Republican women leaders together annually for an interchange of ideas and a first-hand report from key figures in the Administration.

Interracial Sports Ban Is Urged

Constitution Atlanta Ga. Thurs 1-9-58

By WILLIAM M. BATES

The influential States Rights Council Wednesday called upon the forthcoming Legislature to ban integrated athletic events—including professional baseball—in Georgia.

It approved a resolution declaring that the council "endorse, actively support and urge the passage of a bill by the General Assembly which will ban by law the mixing of the races on the teams in any athletic contest in the state of Georgia, including professional baseball teams."

The council, in effect, gave its blessings to a move to present a substitute measure at this year's legislative session for a bitterly fought measure last year that would have banned interracial social as well as sports events.

The measure cleared the Senate but ran into strong opposition in the House where it was stalled on the last day of the session. The proposed substitute would be limited expressly to athletics.

Some teams in the South Atlantic Baseball League have used Negro players in the past. Macon, Savannah, Columbus and Augusta have teams in this league. Three major league training camps in Georgia would also be affected by the bill.

The States' Rights Council resolution declared that mixed sports events are a part of the general design and conspiracy of left-wing radical groups to break down the system of segregation as successfully maintained in Georgia and the South over a long period of time in the interest of both races.

Perry Howard, Attorney, Brings Claim Suit Against United States

Atlanta Ga. 2-16-58

By LOUIS HOWARD.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NNPA)—Perry W. Howard, Republican National Committeeman for Mississippi and a former Government lawyer, has brought the biggest claim against the United States ever filed by a colored lawyer.

Government lawyers have sought to get the case thrown out of court, but Mr. Howard has succeeded in blocking their efforts, and the case is now approaching the trial stage in the United State Court of Claims.

Mr. Howard is representing Henry M. Garsson and his late brother, Murray W. Garsson.

Associated with Mr. Howard in this case is Louis R. Mehlinger, also a former Jusice Department lawyer, and John A. Shorter, Jr., a young lawyer with the firm of Cobb, Howard and Hayes.

Mr. Howard was a special assistant to the Attorney General for nine years and was assigned to the Claims Division. Mr. Mehlinger, an attorney in the Justice Department, worked with Mr. Howard unti lthe latter resigned. Mr. Mehlinger continued in the Justice Department until his retirement a few years ago.

Both Mr. Howard and Mr. Mehlinger, in their Justice Department employed, defended claims brought against the Government in the Court of Claims. In the Garsson case they now are on the side of the claimants.

Henry M. Garsson is a graduate mechanical engineer. He is a member of various professional engineering societies, including the National Society of Professional Engineers, the New York State Association of Professional Engineers, and the American Society of Tool Engineers.

From 1941 to 1946, Henry M. Garsson was a member of various "integrating committees," operating with the War Department and rendering engineering services to the Federal Government, aiding and advising Government officials, Army and Navy officers, and contractors on production, engineering and design problems.

Daily World Atlanta Ga. P-1

The petition, filed in the Court of Claims in 1954, asserts that the Garssons developed certain novel and unique designs and processes for the manufacture of war material at the request of the Government and that the Government used these developments without paying them for their use.

The Garssons claim that for 11 years prior to August, 1941, the Ordnance Bureau and the Chemical Warfare Service of the War Department failed to develop a method for producing the 4.2-inch chemical mortar shell and for that reason abandoned the manufacture of shells at the Frankfort Arsenal, Pennsylvania, and the Edgewood Arsenal, Maryland.

Between May, 1941, and January, 1942, the petition states, Henry M. Garsson developed processes and designs for the manufacture of the 4.2-inch chemical mortar shell. The Chemical Warfare Service, it is alleged, adopted the processes and designs, effecting a saving of over $14 a shell, and put the shell into mass production.

The petition claims that the Government between 1942 and 1945 produced over 12 million 4.2-inch chemical mortar shells through use of the engineering developments of the Garssons.

The Garssons are asking for judgments against the United States for $18.5 million, with interest, and leaving the amounts in four of their claims to be determined by the court.

Based upon the alleged savings to the Government in the use of the methods, processes and engineering developments of the Garssons, the petitioners are claiming $17.5 million.

The Garssons claim they designed a unique tail assembly for an incendiary bomb, known as the "fire bomb," which remedied the defects in a bomb the Government was manufacturing, so that these bombs could be safely dropped from airplanes in clusters.

Their tail assembly, they allege, made it possible for the "fire bomb" to be used effectively in the Far Eastern theater, particularly over Japan.

Based upon the number of these bombs that were manufactured, the Garssons claim that the reasonable value of their invention is at least $1 million.

3. They are asking for undetermined amounts for Government use of a powder drum, the steel bomb nose of the magnesium incendiary bomb, a method for hardening the fuse used as component part of the armor piercing 75-millimeter shell, and for the invention of a high-explosive, armor - piercing 4.2-inch 4.2-inch shell.

ALABAMA BALLOTS PREDICTED FOR NIXON

Vardaman Says Vice President Is 'Good Bet' For '60

RETURNS FROM CAPITAL

By The Associated Press

BIRMINGHAM, Jan. 26.—Alabama's Republican chairman Sunday predicted that many state voters will prefer Vice President Richard Nixon for president to the Democratic nominee in 1960.

"When the Democratic nominee for president in 1960 is named, I think Dick Nixon will look like a good bet to a lot of Alabama voters," Claude O. Vardaman asserted.

Mr. Vardaman had just returned from a trip to Washington, where he conferred with national Republican leaders and met the President briefly about what he said was a personal matter. He made his remarks on a radio and TV interview.

Out In Front

Mr. Vardaman said Mr. Nixon would make an "excellent president." He said the vice president appeared to be out front as the choice for the Republican presidential candidate in 1960, but pointed out that the nominating convention is still two years away.

The Alabama Republican leader said Mr. Eisenhower appears in good health, and he does not think the President will resign and let Mr. Nixon take over the Executive Office.

"There's a glint in his eye and he's carrying on all the duties of his office," Mr. Vardaman added. He said the President was a symbol of defense against Communist encroachment to many people in the Free World.

Questioned about the use of Federal troops in the school segregation crisis at Little Rock, Mr. Vardaman said Democratic leaders Adlai Stevenson had accused Mr. Eisenhower of waiting too long before sending soldiers.

No Names Given

Mr. Vardaman said influential persons in Little Rock are believed to have asked Mr. Eisenhower to send the troops. He did not name any of them.

Mr. Vardaman said whether or not Mr. Eisenhower will send troops to another Southern City if integration rioting develops will depend on the specific situation.

He said Alabama Republicans will have a plank in their platform endorsing racial segregation and the "Southern way of life." Democratic Party officials have asserted the Republican Party is politically dead in Alabama because of Mr. Eisenhower's use of Federal troops at Little Rock.

GOP Isn't Dead In The South

By Congressional Quarterly

Advertiser 2-11-58 Montgomery Ala.

WASHINGTON.

FIVE months after Little Rock, the "corpse" of the Republican Party in the South is very much alive and kicking.

The obituaries written for the GOP after President Eisenhower sent in federal troops to police the integration of Central High School were, it turns out, a bit premature.

Republicans are optimistic about their long-run chances in the South. This year's campaign will be essentially a holding action, designed to preserve their foothold in Dixie. But it is a holding action Republicans are confident they can win.

There are 10 GOP congressmen from the South, and even the Democrats concede it will be hard to dislodge them.

Five of the seats are in areas with substantial Republican strength. Tennessee's 1st and 2nd districts and Kentucky's 8th district—served by Republican Reps. B. Carroll Reece, Howard H. Baker and Eugene Siler—include the upland territory whose GOP traditions go back to the Civil War.

Tues. 2-11-58

REP. John M. Robison Jr. (R-Ky) comes from the Louisville district that has been Republican since 1946, and Rep. Page Belcher (R-Okla) represents Tulsa and other Republican areas in northern Oklahoma, a district that was virtually conceded to the GOP in the 1950 reapportionment.

It's worth noting that these five districts are not particularly "Southern" in their viewpoint. Reece, Siler, Robison and Belcher, for instance, voted for the civil rights bill last year.

In quite a different category are the other five Republican members from the South. They are:

Reps. Joel T. Broyhill (Va), from the Washington suburbs; Richard H. Poff (Va), from the Roanoke area; Charles Raper Jonas (NC), from Charlotte and vicinity; William C. Cramer (Fla), from Tampa-St. Petersburg; and Bruce R. Alger (Texas) of Dallas.

Their districts have no long tradition of Republicanism. Substantial GOP organizations were created in them for the first time in the Eisenhower campaign of 1952. The President swept all five, carrying with him Jonas, Broyhill and Poff—the latter two by the narrowest of margins.

In 1954, they were reelected with bigger majorities and Cramer and Alger—building on the Eisenhower organizations—joined them.

These Republican newcomers—all of whom were reelected in 1956—are in a vulnerable position in 1958, but officials of both parties give three reasons why they will be hard to beat.

¶ All five have voted as Southerners on the sensitive civil rights issue. They backed the jury trial amendment—offered on the House floor by Poff—and voted against the civil rights bill. All but Alger signed the Southern Manifesto in 1956. They are in a strong position to maintain that, at least as far as they are concerned, civil rights is not a partisan issue.

¶ After four or six years in office, Democrats concede the five are stronger than their party in their own districts. They have identified themselves with causes and projects that command broad support. Their margins of victory increased in 1956, ranging from 13,000 to 36,000 votes. They can all take some defections without defeat.

¶ All five have reputations as moderates in their districts. If the Democrats try to beat them with extreme segregationists, the Republicans stand to gain some middle-of-the-road or liberal Democratic votes.

REPUBLICAN leaders have scant hopes for 1958 beyond holding their current seats in the South. Little Rock, they report, has made it hard to build organizations or find new candidates in segregation-conscious areas.

But for 1960 and later years, they still have big plans. Their reasoning: Aside from civil rights, the Republican Party nationally is much closer to Southern conservative, states - rights thinking than the national Democratic Party.

Republicans count on the northern liberals' dominating the 1960 Democratic National Convention, and they expect the South to turn Republican again, in protest.

I. Lee Potter, head of the GOP's "Operation Dixie," told the Republican National Committee Jan. 31 he was counting on them for help. "And," he went on, "I'll let you in on a little secret. I'm also counting on Paul Butler, the National Democrat Advisory Council and the Americans for Democratic Action, too."

Poll Finds Negro Shift To Republicans Is Small

N.Y. Herald-Tribune New York

PRINCETON, N. J., May 27. —Detroit's unemployment lines have more political significance to Negro voters today than Little Rock's picket lines.

Despite Republican efforts to woo the Negro vote on the civil rights issue, survey indications are that the Negroes of the North and South are still heavily Democratic in their Congressional preferences—chiefly because they feel the Democrats have their economic interests at heart.

Wed 2-12-58

Small Shift to Republicans

There has been a small shift to the Republicans since the last off - year Congressional election in 1954.

P. 15

But, as the following comparison shows, that shift has not cut too sharply into the overwhelming support among Negroes that the Democrats have enjoyed in past years.

The survey question:

"If the elections for Congress were being held today, which party would you like to see win in this state—the Republican party or the Democratic party?"

Here is how the Negroes in the North and South expressed their preferences at present compared with their actual vote in 1954:

VOTE FOR CONGRESS

	Today	1954
Northern Negroes
Republican	27%	23%
Democratic	73	77
Southern Negroes
Republican	36	27
Democratic	64	73

Basic to the Negroes' continued allegiance to the Democratic party is their feeling that the Democrats—"the party of Roosevelt"—helped them most in the depression years of the 1930's and will continue to do the best job of looking out for them today.

"Feels More Secure"

That was the gist of a report of a special political study during the 1956 Presidential campaign when—after a "depth study" of Negroes in large metropolitan areas in the North—the team of reporters on the study concluded:

"Economically, he (the Northern Negro) feels most secure as a Democrat. Historically, Roosevelt is a lot fresher in his mind than Lincoln."

That these conclusions can be applied with equal meaning today are revealed in these findings among Negroes interviewed in recent nationwide Institute studies:

1. While over half of all homes across the country report that they have not been affected by the current business downturn in any way, a majority of Negro homes reported that the recession had already left its mark—chiefly in the form of unemployment.

2. With a general tone of optimism reported for all voters across the country about the employment outlook in the next six months, the vote among Negroes interviewed was 2-to-1 that that more people would be out of work in the months ahead.

3. The vote was 3-to-1 among Negroes that the business slump would not get better in time, but that government action would be necessary to help cure it.

4. Negroes—by ratio of 3-to-1—said that they believed the Democrats could do the better job of keeping the country prosperous.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 1—Alabama Republican and Democratic leaders clashed this week over the loyalty oath recently readopted by Democrats for candidates in the May 6 primary election.

The State Republican Executive Committee, meeting in Birmingham, adopted a resolution by Talladega's Tom Abernethy denouncing the loyalty pledge, which bars as candidates in the Democratic election those who supported the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket in 1956. Abernethy, a former Democrat, was the GOP candidate for governor in 1954.

The State Democratic Executive Committee, which again approved the oath by the lopsided vote of 56 to 2, emphasized in its resolution that the loyalty pledge affects candidates only and places no restrictions on rank and file voters.

'Political Tyranny'

But the Abernethy resolution charged the Democratic committee, of which he was once a member, with "political tyranny," asserting its action in imposing a loyalty pledge "is in direct violation of all principles of American political freedom."

ALABAMA

State Democratic Chairman Roy Mayhall, Jasper circuit court judge and one of the strongest advocates of retaining the oath, lashed back at the Republicans, declaring:

"We're not surprised at the Republicans opposing the Democratic loyalty pledge because they are the minority party in this state and because they are trying to siphon off Democrats in an attempt to build up the GOP. Since the Little Rock outrage they've lost considerable strength and prestige, which had been based largely on President Eisenhower's personal popularity before that time."

The GOP resolution invited "all Alabamians so minded to express their resentment of the State Democratic Executive Committee's outrageous attempt at dictatorship by joining the Republican Party in its labor for the freer, cleaner air of two-party politics in this great state."

Alabama Republicans nominate their candidates in a state convention, rather than in an election, as Democrats do.

Abernethy is a Talladega editor and his wife is Republican national committeewoman from Alabama.

Judge Mayhall, in rapping the sponsor of the GOP resolution, said, "Mr. Abernethy, who ran out on the Democratic Party and joined the Republicans, hurled bitter criticism at Ike and the Republicans and repudiated them after troops were sent to Little Rock.

'No Where to Go'

"But now, since the readoption of the Democratic loyalty pledge, Mr. Abernethy has no where to go except back to the Republicans."

Other actions by the Republican committee, particularly a resolution praising the Eisenhower administration for "excellent achievements of the past five years," brought more sharp comment from the state Democratic chairman.

This resolution, which was offered by Cecil R. Holliman, Jefferson County Republican chairman, lauded the Eisenhower administration for stopping the Korean war, strengthening the nation's defenses, stopping the spread of Communism and "putting an end to scandals in government."

Ike's regime also was praised by the Alabama GOPers for "balancing the budget three years in a row" and for "unprecedented prosperity."

Regarding these claims, Judge Mayhall said "the Republicans conveniently failed to mention that the Eisenhower administration has permitted this country to get woefully behind Russia in missile and satellite development.

"Also, they conveniently failed to mention the fact that several hundred thousand Alabama farmers alone have been driven from the soil by the Eisenhower-Benson farm program, with most of the farmers left in this state being on the verge of bankruptcy."

Mayhall also rapped the Republicans for high interest rates, tight money and soaring living costs.

However, the state governing bodies of the Democrats and Republicans did agree on one thing. Both adopted strongly worded resolutions for maintaining segregation.

Arthur Eisenhower, President's Brother, Dies

Ariz. Republic, Phoenix Mon. 1-27-58 P. A16

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 27 (AP).—Arthur B. Eisenhower, 71, eldest brother of President Eisenhower, died after a heart attack at his home last night. He had suffered several attacks in recent years.

A retired banker, he collapsed in the bathroom while washing his hands and was dead when found by his wife, Mrs. Louise Eisenhower, a few minutes later.

34d

President Eisenhower immediately postponed a White House dinner scheduled Thursday night for the Supreme Court justices.

There was no word from the White House whether the President would attend the funeral. Arrangements for the services are incomplete.

Started as Errand Boy

Arthur Eisenhower started with the Commerce Trust Co. in Kansas City as an errand boy at $5 a week in 1905 and by 1934 was the bank's executive vice president.

He became vice chairman of the board in 1955. He resigned that post and as president of the smaller Plaza Bank of Commerce in November, 1956. A few weeks later, he suffered a heart attack.

At the time of his death he was a director of Trans World Airlines, the Coleman Co. of Wichita, Kans., and several Kansas City firms. Mrs. Eisenhower said they had planned to attend a TWA directors meeting in New York this week.

During his banking career, Mr. Eisenhower became recognized as a national authority on flour and grain financing.

He was one of six brothers who grew up at Abilene, Kans., and was the first to strike out on his own.

Dropped Out of School

A cousin at Abilene, Mrs. Ray Etherington, recalled Arthur didn't care much for books. She said he dropped out of high school, slung a green bag over his shoulder and set out to see the world and seek his fortune. He found it in Kansas City.

A mild-mannered man of great reserve, he shunned personal publicity that arose after his brother became President.

He almost missed the President's Inaugural Ball in January, 1953, because a clerk could not make out his signature on a check for six tickets.

Besides his wife and the President, Arthur Eisenhower is survived by three other brothers; an adopted daughter, Mrs. Berton Roueche, East Hampton, Long Island, N. Y., wife of a magazine writer, and a grandson, Arthur Bradford Roueche, East Hampton.

The brothers are Edgar, Tacoma, Wash.; Milton, president of Johns Hopkins University, and Earl, a publisher at La Grange, Ill. Another brother, Roy, died at Junction City, Kans., in 1942.

Not a Surprise

Earl Eisenhower said in La Grange the news of Arthur's death was sudden but not a surprise. He said he knew his brother had an extremely bad heart condition.

Arthur Eisenhower was married in 1906 and divorced in 1924. He remarried in 1925.

Last month at Arthur Eisenhower's request a circuit court judge reduced his alimony payments to his first wife, Alida, from $350 a month to $175. His second wife, Louise, testified his only income was $500 a month from retirement annuities.

LITTLE ROCK CRISIS HASN'T KILLED GOP

Commercial Appeal

Still Optimistic About Long-Range Hopes In South

Memphis Press

SOME DISTRICTS STRONG

Special to The Commercial Appeal

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Five months after Little Rock, the "corpse" of the Republican Party in the South is very much alive and kicking.

The obituaries written for the GOP after President Eisenhower sent in Federal troops to police the integration of Central High School were, it turns out, a bit premature.

Republicans are optimistic about their long-run chances in the South. This year's campaign will be essentially a holding action, designed to preserve their foothold in Dixie. But it is a holding action Republicans are confident they can win, according to Congressional Quarterly, a private research organization.

There are 10 GOP representatives from the South, and even the Democrats concede it will be hard to dislodge them.

Five In Strong GOP Areas

Five of the seats are in areas witsh substantial Republican strength. Tennessee's First and Second Districts and Kentucky's Eighth District — served by Republican Representatives B. Carroll Reece, Howard H. Baker and Eugene Siler—include the upland territory where GOP traditions go back to the Civil War.

Representative John M. Robison Jr. (R., Ky.) comes from the Louisville district that has been Republican since 1946, and Representative Page Belcher (R., Okla.) represents Tulsa and other Republican areas in Northern Oklahoma, a district that was virtually conceded to the GOP in the 1950 reapportionment.

It's worth noting that these five districts are not particularly "Southern" in their viewpoint. Reece, Siler, Robison and Belcher, for instance, voted for the Civil Rights Bill last year.

In quite a different category are the other five Republican members from the South. They are:

Representatives Joel T. Broyhill (Va.), from the Washington suburbs; Richard H. Poff(Va.), from the Roanoke area; Charles Raper Jonas (N. C.), from Charlotte and vicinity; William C. Cramer (Fla.), from Tampa-St. Petersburg; and Bruce R. Alger (Texas) of Dallas.

No Gains Foreseen

Their districts have no long tradition of Republicanism. Substantial GOP organizations were created in them for the first time in the Eisenhower campaign of 1952. The President swept all five, carrying with him Jonas, Broyhill and Poff— the latter two by the narrowest of margins.

In 1954 they were re-elected with bigger majorities and Cramer and Alger — building on the Eisenhower organization—joined them.

These Republican newcomers —all of whom were re-elected in 1956—are in a vulnerable position in 1958, but officials of both parties think they may be hard to beat.

Republican leaders have scant hopes for 1958 beyond holding their current seats in the South. Little Rock, they report, has made it hard to build organizations or find new candidates in segregation-conscious areas.

But for 1960 and later years, they still have big plans. Their reasosning: Aside from civil rights, the Republican Party nationally is much closer to Southern conservative, states' rights thinking than the national Democratic Party.

Republicans count on the Northern liberals' dominating the 1960 Democratic national convention, and they expect the South to turn Republican again, in protest.

Almond Hits GOP Chiefs On Aid to Integration

From Wire Dispatches

Gov. J. Lindsay Almond today characterized the Republican Party leadership in Washington as "fellow travelers" of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

During a press conference he was asked if he thought Negroes would press for enrollment of their children in white schools in areas where Virginia has school segregation cases in court.

Almond replied he thought they would be urged to by "those who are leading them and the rest of us into chaos." Asked if he meant the NAACP he replied, "Principally, yes—and their fellow travelers."

Asked if he would include the Republican Party in the category of fellow travelers, Almond replied he would "certainly include the leadership of this Administration."

Almond also said he thinks a proposal to be outlined before the Charlottesville School Board for meeting desegregation problems will conform to state segregation policies.

The plan is to be put before the board by its attorney, John S. Battle Jr. It has been described as an administrative program for handling some 30 applications by Negroes for admission to white schools in the city.

"I know," Almond said, "that he (Battle) is not going to advise them (the board) on anything contrary" to the state's present policy.

On other matters, the Governor:

- Said he did not believe "we would be justified at this time in making any reductions in the utilization of" appropriations because of a lag in collection of state revenues. He said he believed the economic trend is "moving upward," and there would be an "easing of pressure" on the state's finances.
- Repeated his approval of Judge Harry Lemley's decision allowing Little Rock a 30 month suspension of integration and described it as applying "common sense and law to a tragic situation."

Text of Ike's Statement on Sending US Marines

WASHINGTON (AP)—The text of President Eisenhower's statement on sending U. S. Marines into Lebanon follows:

Yesterday morning, I received from President Chamoun of Lebanon an urgent plea that some United States forces be stationed in Lebanon to help maintain security and to evidence the concern of the United States for the integrity and independence of Lebanon. President Chamoun's appeal was made with the concurrence of all of the members of the Lebanese cabinet.

President Chamoun made clear that he considered an immediate United States response imperative if Lebanon's independence, already menaced from without, were to be preserved in the face of the grave developments which occurred yesterday in Baghdad whereby the lawful government was violently overthrown and many of its members martyred.

In response to this appeal from the government of Lebanon, the United States has dispatched a contingent of United States forces to Lebanon to protect American lives and by their presence there to encourage the Lebanese government in defense of Lebanese sovereignty and integrity.

These forces have not been sent as any act of war. They will demonstrate the concern of the United States for the independence and integrity of Lebanon, which we deem vital to the national interest and world peace. Our concern will also be shown by economic assistance. We shall act in accordance with these legitimate concerns.

The United States, this morning, will report its action to an emergency meeting of the United Nations Security Council. As the United Nations charter recognizes, there is an inherent right of collective self-defense.

In conformity with the spirit of the charter, the United States is reporting the measures taken by it to the Security Council of the United Nations, making clear that these measures will be terminated as soon as the Security Council has itself taken the measures necessary to maintain international peace and security.

The United States believes that the United Nations can and should take measures which are adequate to preserve the independence and integrity of Lebanon. It is apparent, however, that in the face of the tragic and shocking events that are occurring nearby, more will be required than the team of United Nations observers now in Lebanon.

Therefore, the United States will support in the United Nations measures which seem to be adequate to meet the new situation and which will enable the United States forces promptly to be withdrawn.

Lebanon is a small peace-loving state with which the United States has traditionally had the most friendly relations. There are in Lebanon about 2500 Americans and we cannot, consistently with our historic relations and with the principles of the United Nations, stand idly by when Lebanon appeals itself for evidence of our concern and when Lebanon may not be able to preserve internal order and to defend itself against indirect aggression.

'Got To Get to Him!' Woman Cries, Lunges at Ike; Arrested by Police

No One Hurt In Disturbance

By The Associated Press

Washington, April 24.—President Eisenhower stood dumbfounded Thursday as a hysterical, red-haired woman screamed, "I've got to get to him," and struggled to reach Eisenhower's side.

The episode occurred on the sidewalk in front of the Smithsonian Institution where the President and his wife had just viewed a group of oil paintings by Britain's Winston Churchill.

Secret Service agents and Washington police seized the woman when she was within about 6 feet of the President, and took her away in a car.

Woman Identified

Secret Service Chief U. E. Baughman later told newsmen the distraught woman told a story of not being able to collect her Army husband's monthly allotment checks.

Baughman identified the woman as Mrs. Edith Finch of Brookline, Mass.

The Secret Service chief said the woman identified her husban das Cpl. James E. Finch of Fort Knox, Ky.

About 300 persons were on hand in front of the Smithsonian as the President and Mrs. Eisenhower walked to their waiting limousine. The First Lady had just entered the car and Eisenhower was about to, when the woman—slightly built and about 5 feet tall—broke from the ranks of the onlookers toward the President.

Ike Turns In Surprise

Secret Service and police lunged for her and hauled her back. Then she screamed:

"I've got to get to him! I've got to get to him!"

Eisenhower turned in her direction in surprise. Obviously trying to figure out what was going on, the President remarked in her direction as she was pulled back:

"I'm sorry." Then he entered his limousine and drove off.

The woman struggled furiously to escape the police, but she was hauled into a car.

At that point she stuck her head out of the car and shouted to the crowd that "a New York F.B.I. man has done terrible things to me—extortion—"

Went to White House

Baughman said afterward that the woman has been in Washington for about a week. On April 16, he said, she went to the White House gate on Pennsylvania Ave. and told police there she wanted to see someone inside to complain about her husband. Baughman said he had no explanation of the woman's reference to an F.B.I. agent.

She was removed to the District of Columbia General Hospital for observation.

'Nonsense' Says Ike Of Surrender Talk

Denounces Rumors Of Study

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—President Eisenhower today described as ridiculous nonsense any thought that the United States might surrender to an enemy in the event of atomic war.

Reacting to published reports of such a study, Gen. Eisenhower authorized his press secretary, James C. Hagerty, to say:

"As far as the President is concerned all this talk about surrender is nonsense.

Set Record Straight.

"Let me set the record straight.

"There has been no public money spent to study how or when the United States might surrender.

"There will be no such money spent for such a purpose.

"Evidently the Senate feels about this as does the President. It wants to require that no appropriations be used for such a purpose. As to that, the President wants me to say this: even if we were given money for this purpose, it would not be spent.

"The whole matter is too ridiculous for any further comment."

Senators Debate.

The subject was debated heatedly in the Senate last night, with Chairman Richard B. Russell (D., Ga.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee leading a fight against voting any funds for possible surrender study purposes.

Sen. Lyndon B. Johnson (Tex.), the Senate Democratic leader, followed up the White House statement by telling reporters:

"No thinking American ever gave any credence to such a rumor. I don't believe any public money has or ever will be spent for such a purpose."

It was understood the White House had been in contact with Sen. Johnson during the morning.

The Senator's declaration was expected to clear the way for adoption of Sen. Russell's rider to a pending appropriations bill, to bar any such use of funds any time in the future.

"In the light of the rumor, the amendment of the chair-

Eisenhower described the present Far East tensions as serious, but he said:

"I believe that there is not going to be any war."

Eisenhower said the United States would neither be "lured nor frightened into appeasement" because of Red China's massive bombardments and threats to invade Quemoy and other Nationalist-held islands. He added:

"Now, I assure you that no American boy will be asked by me to fight just for Quemoy. But those who make up our armed forces—and I believe the American people as a whole—do stand ready to defend the principle that armed force shall not be used for aggressive purposes."

Eisenhower said the Red Chinese-American talks, which are expected to begin in Warsaw soon should be able to arrange a cease-fire. But if these talks

(all, he said:

"There is still the hope that the United Nations could exert a peaceful influence on the situation."

Eisenhower hinted that he has some specific proposals in mind to offer the Reds. Secretary of State Dulles had strongly hinted on Tuesday at possible concessions if the Peiping regime would halt its military operations in the Formosa Strait.

"We believe that diplomacy can and should find a way out," Eisenhower said. "There are measures that can be taken to assure that these offshore islands will not be a thorn in the side of peace.

"We believe that arrangements are urgently required to stop gunfire and to pave the way to a peaceful solution."

Eisenhower spoke to the nation from his White House office. He interrupted his Newport, R. I., vacation for this special report, and will return to Newport tomorrow.

Montgomerian In The White House

THE Montgomerian, Maj. Gen. Wilton Burton (Slick) Persons, succeeds Sherman Adams and as such, becomes something like Assistant President of the United States.

Persons has since Eisenhower's inauguration been one of the key figures in American government. He now becomes a dominant figure in the government of the United States.

THIS IS NOT to say that he becomes a more powerful man than Senator Johnson, the Democratic majority leader, or Speaker of the House Rayburn or Vice President Nixon. It is hard to say since these three men are visible and conspicuous in the exercise of their duties and powers. The functions of their offices are traditional, permanent and long observed. Further, their powers are basically legislative.

Whereas the Sherman Adams "chief of staff" post was created by Eisenhower, thus having no past and perhaps no future after Eisenhower. The office is largely walled off from public scrutiny and even remote from the probe and antennae of Washington reporters. Again, the powers of this office are both executive and legislative.

But any man who acts as a filter of matters that shall or shall not come to the attention of the most powerful man on earth, the President, is plainly a ruling figure of the Republic. The Adams office is powerful and not less so because Persons and Eisenhower have been intimate friends for years.

THE Brothers Persons represent a distinguished clan—two generals, an Episcopalian rector and a former governor. The exceptional qualities of W. B. are attested by all and best witnessed by General Marshall, a frugal man with praise. Of Persons, Marshall said during the war when Persons was wanted in North Africa to disentangle a political situation: "There are few men in the Army I consider irreplaceable, and Persons is one of them."

THERE is debate about Persons' qualities, but none about the fullness of his seasoning for this lordly position. As a professional soldier, he has been a professor at the University of Minnesota and a student in the Harvard School of Business.

The well known Democrat, Senator Lister Hill, is entitled to such satisfaction as he desires out of being the discoverer and sponsor of this Republican adversary, Persons. In 1933, Congressman Hill, member of a House Military Affairs subcommittee on appropriations, picked Persons to do liaison work between Congress and the Army.

PROBABLY no man in the history of Congress has surpassed the mastery of the Persons performance as a go-between. He was with Eisenhower in Paris when both parties sought him as a candidate and it was Persons who walked out with those who had visited Eisenhower to beg them not to say anything dumb or incautious about their interview. All the time he was urging Ike to offer himself.

He was on the train that pulled Ike about the country in the first campaign and then was placed in charge of the President's liaison with Congress. It was in 1954 that Eisenhower decided to use the traditional power levers on Congress — jobs, pressure and favors—to achieve enactment of his program, according to U.S. News & World Report (Feb. 19, 1954). Persons was commissioned to direct the application of presidential power to reward the faithful and deny the hold-outs. Persons got results, among them action on the St. Lawrence Seaway, Social Security amendments and throttling of the Bricker Amendment.

Dealing in favors for congressmen and having immense opportunities for intervention, Persons has now and again been charged with feathering his own nest. For example, Drew Pearson charged four years ago that Persons had a cousin, Navy Captain Henry S. Persons, promoted to rear admiral over 355 captains two years ahead of him at Annapolis.

THE NICKNAME "Slick" is not an advantage to a man working out of the august office of the President.

Persons has explained how he got the name: "When I went into the Army, my hair was curly. I didn't like that, so I plastered it down. They called me Slick." However innocently acquired the name, we imagine that Persons wishes he had never slicked his hair down.

Another disadvantage, a minor one perhaps, is that he is a professional soldier appointed by a professional soldier. But all in all, Eisenhower turned to the man most conspicuously qualified by experience and ability to replace Adams. We trust that before making the appointment, the President solemnly questioned Persons whether, on his Boy Scout honor, he had taken in Goldfine vicuna. For here is an area where the President simply could not afford to be a two-time loser.

FINALLY, let us Southerners have a horse laugh out of Persons' succession to great power in the White House. A Southerner can't become President due to sectional discrimination against us, but at least we have a Confederate in the White House as Assistant President.

Eisenhower Rules Out Far East Appeasement

WASHINGTON, Sept. 11 (AP)—President Eisenhower pledged tonight there would be no appeasement in the Far East crisis because he said that might lead to a major war.

At the same time, Eisenhower said, "There is some hope" that Red China will agree to negotiate a cease-fire in the Formosa Strait.

Eisenhower spoke out in a major Far Eastern policy speech carried to the people on television and radio and beamed abroad.

"man of the Senate Armed Services Committee should be acted on favorably," Sen. Johnson said.

The United States has never lost a war, and the legislators were indignant that the military should be having even the slightest thought of any American surrender.

Sen. Russell proposed tacking onto a $3,594,000,000 supplemental appropriations bill a rider that would nullify any surrender study contract and bar any payments in connection with it.

Sen. Russell said most Americans would rather die than see their country under the yoke of another power.

Mr. Hagerty said Gen. Eisenhower had ordered an immediate investigation of the reports about the surrender study.

But even as the furor raged, there was no solid confirmation that the Pentagon was undertaking any special surrender study. A spokesman would only say that it was standard military practice to consider all eventualities, even those unlikely to arise.

'Strategic Surrender.'

The rumors apparently traced back to a study begun in 1951 by the Rand Corp., an independent, non-profit organization which engages in national security research. Rand, which has a contract with the Air Force, analyzed the ways in which other countries have surrendered in the past.

The study, completed last year, was recently published in book form with the title "Strategic Surrender, the Politics of Victory and Defeat." Rand denied that the study dealt with any possible American setback.

Ike Deplores Synagogue Bombing

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower considers the bombing of a Jewish temple in Peoria, Ill., a shocking and deplorable thing. The President's reaction was reported Tuesday by White House press secretary James C. Hagerty.

He said Eisenhower is as deeply concerned about the Peoria bombing as he is about an explosion that wrecked a temple in Atlanta, Ga., Sunday.

"The President just thinks these bombings of places of worship are a shocking and deplorable thing," Hagerty added.

He noted that the FBI has been instructed to place its facilities at the disposal of police in both Peoria and Atlanta, and Eisenhower has received another written report on the Atlanta bombing from FBI chief J. Edgar Hoover.

Hagerty added that Eisenhower also has received a preliminary report on the bombing at Peoria.

He refused to give any detail regarding either of the reports.

Eisenhower In 1960

THE magic of the Eisenhower personal appeal to the American people has not been canceled out, as has been recklessly chanted by so many. It is without question diminished and he is now fair game for the slings and arrows the same as any other President, but he continues to command an uncommon charity and restraint in the judgments of his fellow Americans. When things go sour, there is still the widespread tendency to blame the trouble on his subordinates wherever possible, and in the case of a President or an Alabama governor, that tendency bespeaks trust and affection.

It seems to us that you find the truth of that contention displayed among Alabamians in their reactions to Little Rock and the Sherman Adams tarnish.

Alabamians were pained and alienated by the folly of the Little Rock troop drop, and Eisenhower's admirers turned his picture to the wall. But even amid the roar of indignation, there was a sense that the rash act did not truly represent the man Eisenhower. Think what would have been said had Truman fixed the Little Rock bayonet!

Sherman Adams has without doubt besmirched the administration with his callous double standard and the President has committed a Trumanesque act in tolerating it. Even so, the angry, disillusioned clamor ranged at Eisenhower is much less than Truman would have attracted.

Eisenhower's popularity is undoubtedly less by far than it was But with nearly six of his eight years served, it is probable that Eisenhower will leave office popular and grow more so until he dies.

After the reform convulsion of the Roosevelt years, the drift and demoralization of the Truman Administrations, the kind of government Eisenhower has given was appropriate to the times and mood of the people.

If the recession continues to lift, if no cannon has been fired in a war, Eisenhower will be rated the fountainhead of eight years of restraint (with the exception of Little Rock), promotion of capitalism, fiscal sanity and goodwill. But in any event, the American people are tenaciously inclined to like and admire Eisenhower.

NEW YORK:

Politics and 'Jim Crow'

To the profound embarrassment of both, the New York County Republican organization and the Communist Party, U.S.A., found themselves in a united front last week: They both were plugging for the re-election of Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr., the "Pied Piper of Harlem." The Communists hadn't become GOP fellow travelers or vice versa; the cliche about politics making strange bedfellows had proved true again.

Denied renomination by Tammany

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

Hall, in part because he supported President Eisenhower in 1956 (NEWSWEEK, June 2), Powell was assured of the Republican nomination by a revolt of Harlem's GOP leaders against veteran boss Thomas J. Curran. At the same time, in a long article in the official Communist Party newspaper, The Worker, former City Councilman Benjamin J. Davis, the leading Negro Communist official in the U.S., called on all party members to back Powell as "a symbol of the whole national Negro liberation movement."

Powell, who for days had been attacking both the Republican and Democratic parties as parties run by whites and dedicated to "Jim Crow," expressed gratification over the GOP endorsement (although he remained silent about the blessings that had been conferred upon him by the Communists). Meanwhile, he stepped up his campaign to win the Democratic nomination in the Aug. 12 primary in spite of Tammany.

Study in Contrasts: Picked by Tammany as its candidate for the nomination was City Councilman Earl Brown. A quiet-spoken, 55-year-old newspaperman and magazine writer Brown is the direct antithesis of the flamboyant Powell. Unlike Powell, whose political stock in trade is setting Negro against white (when Tammany denied him renomination, for example, he said: "I am being purged because obviously I am a Negro, and a Negro should stay on the plantation"), Brown, throughout his eight years in the City Council, has steadfastly avoided stirring up racial animosities, holding that "integration must be psychological as well as physical." Also unlike Powell, who talks constantly about civil rights, but on several occasions has even been absent from Washington when civil-rights bills came up for a vote, Brown has a record on the issue that appeals to his supporters: He was largely responsible for outlawing "discrimination" in private housing in New York.

Powell's reaction to Brown's designation was characteristic of the man: He called him an "Uncle Tom."

'I Need Him' President Says Of Aide

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower said today that Sherman Adams was imprudent in his relations with Bernard Goldfine but "I need him" to continue as top presidential aide.

Eisenhower made it plain at a news conference that he has no intention of firing Adams, although he did not say that in so many words.

In anticipation that the President would talk about the hottest Washington subject of the moment, newsmen were packed into the conference room.

At the outset, Eisenhower he wanted to read.

Then, reading from a typewritten large cards, Eisenhower said Adams had been imprudent, as Adams himself acknowledged in testimony Tuesday before a House investigating committee.

Despite that imprudence, Eisenhower said, he has reached these personal conclusions:

"1. I believe that the presentation made by Gov. Adams to the congressional committee Tuesday truthfully represents the pertinent facts.

"2. I personally like Gov. Adams.

"3. I admire his abilities.

"4. I respect him because of his personal and official integrity.

"5. I need him."

Eisenhower then went on to say:

"Admitting the lack of that careful prudence in this incident that Gov. Adams Tuesday referred to, I believe with my whole heart that he is an invaluable public servant, doing a difficult job efficiently, honestly and tirelessly."

Eisnehower was asked whether, in the light of the Adams-Goldfine situation, it would be proper for other government employes to do what Adams did and with Eisenhower's approval

He replied that he always has striven for the highest, implacable standards in the case of White House staff members. He said the goal is the same in the case of employes of all other agencies, but that he does not have as close contact with them as with members of his own staff.

Eisenhower also said he is not able to act directly with respect to workers in other agencies. The matter there, he said, is in the hands of Cabient members and agency heads.

During the discussion of relations between Adams, the No. 1 White House aide, and Goldfine, a Boston industrialist, a reporter said Rep. Oren Harris DArk had said that Adams violated the law in obtaining certain information from the Federal Trade Commission troubles.

The newsman asked whether Eisenhower makes any distinction between hte situation in that case and in some others which involved officials in the Truman administration.

Eisenhower said there are certain facts available which would help answer the question. But he referred his questioner to White House press secretary James C. Hagerit fo rthe answer.

In his statement, which he read solemnly and somewhat sternly, the President said intense publicity surrounding Adams made it desirable and even necessary that he start the session with an expression of his own views.

"First, as a result of this entire incident, all of us should have been made aware of one truth," Eisenhower said. "That is that a gift is not necessarily a bribe. One is evil; the other is a tangible expression of friendship."

For Powell says GOP

NEW YORK — Dumped by the Democratic Party for his 1956 support of President Eisenhower, Congressman Adam Clayton Powell Jr., received the Republican nomination this week to succeed himself.

The popular politician-minister won the nomination in a 5-1 vote of Republican leaders of the 16th Congressional District.

Casting the dissenting vote was Thomas J. Curran, New York County Republican leader. Faced with the 5-1 vote, Curran agreed to abide by the result.

Mr. Powell said Thursday night, in a statement issued through his campaign manager, J. Raymond Jones, that he would accept the Republican nomination "with a deep sense of gratitude."

He commended Mr. Curran for putting aside personal feelings to accept the views of leaders of the district.

SEVERAL LEGAL STEPS remain to make the nomination official, but these are regarded now as mere formalities.

First, a meeting of the district county committee must be held to authorize Mr. Powell, a Democrat, to enter the Republican primary on August 12.

Next, he has to win the primary, but this presents no problem as his will probably be the only name on the Republican ballot.

Earlier, Democratic voters in the district voted not to support Mr. Powell for renomination. This climaxed a rift between the fiery Harlem legislator and Tammany Hall Boss Carmine De Sapio.

The Democrats blamed the split on Powell's action in the 1956 presidential campaign. Powell, however, said it was because of his outspoken stand on racial segregation.

Powell will compete with Councilman Earl L. Brown, the Democratic nominee.

Text Of Adams' Broadcast Announcing His Resignation

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Sept. 22.—The text of Sherman Adams' radio-television broadcast Monday night:

Since last June a spirited controversy has taken place in which I, Sherman Adams, assistant to the President, have found myself cast in a principal role. This controversy has at times unfortunately displaced public consideration of much more important and far reaching problems that directly affect the welfare of our country and its people.

It is quite probable that a great many of you now listening to me have expressed some time in the course of this controversy and as private citizens your views on the matter. It seems to me that nearly everyone active in public life, in one capacity or another, has done so. I am here tonight to express mine.

Other Influence Hearings

Several months ago, a committee of the House of Representatives started hearings designed to elicit information as to whether or not any person or persons had exerted improper influence upon the regulatory agencies of the Government. In the course of those hearings, I testified before that committee.

The sworn testimony that I then gave, together with that of every responsible official of whom the committee made inquiry, clearly established that I had never influenced nor attempted to influence any agency, or any officer or employe of any agency in any case, decision or matter whatsoever.

Despite the fact that this testimony is wholly undisputed, a calculated and contrived effort has nevertheless been made to attack and discredit me. As part of this effort, the committee received completely irresponsible testimony and, without conscience, gave ear to rumor, innuendo and even unsubstantiated gossip.

A campaign of vilification by those who seek personal advantage by my removal from public life has continued up to this very moment. These efforts, it is now clear, have been intended to destroy me and in so doing to embarrass the Administration and the President of the United States.

Easy, Obvious Way

An easy and obvious way to bring such an attack to an end is to remove the target. There were those who thought I should resign because they felt I had been imprudent in not foreseeing the interpretation that could be placed upon my exchanging gifts with a friend, even of some 15 years standing.

I am sure that many of you have wondered why I have not chosen that course, why — at the very beginning of the controversy — I did not immediately resign. I would like to tell you why.

First, it is not—nor has it ever been—my nature to run in the face of adversity and, in my years of public service—nearly 20 now—I have never once done so.

Second, since I have done no wrong, my resigning could have been construed as an admission that I had, in the atmosphere which has surrounded the controversy.

Third, when a man has been afforded the privilege that has been mine of serving a great American, a great humanitarian, and a great President—when a man has come to understand the selflessness and the dedication with which that President has served all of our people, regardless of race, creed, religious or political persuasion—it poses a decision, as I am sure you can readily appreciate, difficult in the extreme to make.

Full Consideration

Against my distaste for giving any grounds whatever to the charge of retreating under fire, against my desire to complete my duty during the remaining two years of the term for which President Eisenhower was elected, I must give full consideration to the effect of my continuing presence on the public scene.

Under the circumstances and in light of the events of the past three months in which I have been made to be directly concerned, I must ask myself whether my retention in office might conceivably delay or retard, even in small degree, the achievement of those goals of President Eisenhower which yet lie ahead.

Another factor that I fel I must consider is whether the retention of my services might possibly diminish the chances which my party has of regaining control of the Congress in the November elections.

Within the past few days I have reached a decision. Early this morning I flew from Washington to the President's vacation headquarters at Newport. I conferred with him and, in the course of that conference, tendered my resignation. This he has accepted, to be effective as soon as an orderly transition can be arranged for the assumption of my duties and responsibilities.

This action of mine is final and unqualified. It is not open to reconsideration.

Serve Best Interests

It is my steadfast belief that the principles and programs for which Dwight Eisenhower stands serve the best interests of our country and, indeed, the people of the free world.

They deserve to be strengthened through the support of everyone of us. I believe that I can now best serve my President, and contribute to the support of his objectives, by the course that I have undertaken to follow.

I am now about to retire, after nearly six years, from the position in which I have served with pride and which I have given my best efforts to hold with honor.

Now nearly 20 years of public service come to a close, but I can say that it has brought a depth of satisfaction that will always be with me.

Text Of Acceptance Of Adams' Resignation

The White House released the following letter from President Eisenhower accepting Adams' resignation:

Newport, Rhode Island
September 22, 1958

Dear Sherman:

I deeply deplore the circumstances that have decided you to resign as the assistant to the President.

Your selfless and tireless devotion to the work of the White House and to me personally has been universally recognized. In discharging the responsibilities of your vitally important post, with no hope of reward other than your own satisfaction in knowing that you have served your country well, your total dedication to the nation's welfare has been on the highest possible order.

Your performance has been brilliant; the public has been the beneficiary of your unselfish work. After our six years of intimate association you have, as you have had throughout, my complete trust, confidence and respect.

I accept your resignation with sdaness. You will be sorely missed by your colleagues on the staff and by the departments and agencies of the Government, with which you have worked so efficiently.

With warm regard and highest esteem,

As ever,
Dwight D. Eisenhower.

REPUBLICAN

G. O. P. Hailed for Its Work in Civil Rights

Chatting yesterday at "Salute to Women" given by Chicago Citizens committee are Edward Moore and Mrs. Earle Benjamin Searcy (rear) and Mrs. Mame Mason Higgins (front, left) and Rep. Frances P. Bolton.

Rep. Frances P. Bolton [R., O.] said yesterday she does not understand how any Negro familiar with the Democrats' record on civil rights could ever vote for a Democrat.

Mrs. Bolton made her remarks in an address to a predominantly Republican "Salute to Women" luncheon given by the Chicago Citizens committee in the Sheraton hotel. The luncheon was tied in with Brotherhood week, which begins today.

Works on Measures

"With other Republicans," said Mrs. Bolton, "I have worked for and secured the passage of various bills which had to do with the rights of minorities—anti-poll tax legislation, anti-lynch bills, and an FEPC measure—only to see these bills buried in the Democrat controled Senate."

Democrats are attempting to claim credit for the passage of "the first civil rights legislation in 82 years under Democratic leadership," said Mrs. Bolton.

Mrs. Bolton said there were 33 test votes in the Senate and House on civil rights and related measures during the 20 years of Presidents Roosevelt and Truman, with 81 per cent of the Republicans and only 41 per cent of the Democrats voting for the measures.

Time to Get Credit

It's time for the Republicans to get credit for their work to end segregation, she said. She cited such G. O. P. accomplishments as desegregation in the military services and veterans hospitals, and setting up of a new government contract committee, resulting in higher type jobs for Negroes.

Despite the G. O. P. record, Republicans are missing votes because precinct captains and ward leaders are not getting the facts to the people, she said.

The 300 women attending the luncheon saluted Rep. Bolton and six Illinois women for their public service. The Illinois women were Rep. Marguerite Stitt Church [R., Ill.]; Mrs. Jewel Rogers, assistant United States attorney; Mrs. Earle Benjamin Searcy, clerk of the Illinois Supreme court; Mrs. Myrtle Stryker, assistant attorney general for Illinois; Judge B. Fain Tucker of Cook county Circuit court, and Miss Lucia T. Thomas, assistant state's attorney for Cook county.

Suggest 'clocking' him—

Senators resent Veep who is out more than he's in WASHINGTON, March 22 — Senators don't talk about it publicly, but privately they resent the manner in which Vice President Nixon has become an absentee presiding officer of the Senate.

Nixon's office is now costing the taxpayers more than that of any vice president in history. He has an automobile with chauffeur, plus a large staff, including a colonel, a major, and a press agent. His budget is $101,925 a year compared with $11,460 spent by Vice President Truman. Yet his absenteeism has set a record.

Congressional records show that the late Alben Barkley worked at his job about four times as much as Nixon.

In 1954, Nixon's second year, he presided only 120 hours and 31 minutes. Yet the Senate that year was in session a total of 1198 hours and 17 minutes.

PEARSON

Nixon's record in 1955 was even worse. He sat only 47 hours and 15 minutes, yet the Senate was in session 559 hours and 41 minutes.

In the first year of Nixon's term, 1957, the Senate was in session 860 hours and 44 minutes, and he sat in the presiding officer's chair 124 hours and 32 minutes.

This is why some senators are talking about putting a time clock in the Senate cloakroom for the vice president to punch when he goes to work.

Turned other cheek

AN OLD MAN died last week who refused to become bitter. He had been appointed to the highest court in the land—only to lose out on Senate confirmation by one vote.

The people who rallied the Senate votes to defeat John J. Parker's appointment to the Supreme Court back in 1930 were organized labor and Walter White of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. Instead of becoming sour, Parker became their champion. In decision after decision, he upheld the rights of Negroes and of labor as presiding judge of the Fourth Circuit Court of Appeals.

The late O. Max Gardner, governor of North Carolina, a Democrat, tried to get Parker, a Republican, appointed to the Supreme Court when other vacancies occurred. I wrote several columns urging it. After the last column I got a friendly note from Parker thanking me, but saying he had given up all thought of attaining the court to which he was barred almost 30 years ago.

Ike's golfing 'pal'

THE DEPRESSION in Western mines has knocked one of the president's most vocal boosters off the Eisenhower bandwagon.

He is Dan Thornton, the cowboy ex-governor of Colorado who used to golf with Ike during those Colorado vacation days and was a frequent vsitor to Ike.

Thornton has now become a trustee of a newly formed Colorado organization called American Metal Mine Owners, Inc., a bipartisan group aimed chiefly at criticizing the Eisenhower administration over the condition of Western mines. The group includes Joseph F. Little, former Colorado chairman of the Democratic Party; William Lloyd, former GOP state chairman, and John Metzger, former Democratic attorney general of Colorado.

In a statement recently released, Little charged that the "small American metal miner has been the victim of a deliberate campaign aimed at his extinction." Tungsten miners, Little alleged, have been double-crossed, with the government contracting to buy their Tungsten and then refusing.

Mighty strong talk

"THE SAME prospect appears in store for the small uranium miner," Little continued, "and the U. S. government is also trading its surplus farm products for cheaply mined foreign lead and zinc."

This is strong talk to be endorsed by the ex-golfing partner, ex-governor, ex-UCLA football star, ex-cowboy, and ex-Hollywood actor who was so close to Ike in the 1956 election that he was named head of the farm division of the Republican National Committee.

NOTE—Little has asked to testify at hearings regarding the depression, held March 24 by the mining subcommittee of the Senate Interior Committee. He claims that 15,000 individually owned claims have suffered because of hostile "decrees, acts, and laws" of the Eisenhower administration. Western miners also charge that the White House failed to live up to its 1952 pledge to build a healthy mining industry.

Gallup Poll—

More Farmers Turning Backs On Republicans

By GEORGE GALLUP

Director, American Institute Of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., March 25. —Although President Eisenhower has stated many times that his Administration has the best interests of the farmer at heart, the farmers themselves have yet to be convinced of this.

The most recent survey among farmers finds that for every one who says the Republicans serve his interests best, there are four who prefer the Democrats.

The evidence shows a marked shift to the Democrats among farmers since last June.

The survey also finds Republicans have lost ground among all other major occupation groups.

Institute reporters asked this question:

"As you feel today, which political party—the Democratic or Republican—do you think serves the interests of the following groups best: Farmers? White-collar workers? Business and professional people? Skilled workers? Unskilled workers?"

Here is the vote today, last June and six years ago, of each group, on the basis of the voter's own classification as to occupation:

Strange Politics

It must be considered funny politics, the nomination of Adam Clayton Powell as a Republican candidate when he had just been booted by the Democrats.

At one point, before endorsing Powell, the Republicans in Harlem had announced that any Negro who opposed Democrat Powell would be considered a traitor to his race.

Such a statement does strange things to the meaning of two-party competition. It does as much to the repeated assertion of Negroes that they want to be treated only as individuals.

Can you imagine a person of any other race being called a traitor if he opposed another of his race for a political office?

Powell apparently still intends to run as an independent Democrat in the August primary. If he loses that, he will be on the ballot in November as a Republican. Powell remains a Democrat; he will run as a Republican only as a last resort.

Even in the face of this attitude, and even with an indictment against Powell for income tax evasion, Harlem Republicans endorse him and brand as traitor any Negro who opposes him.

A man has to sit down and do some thinking and fanning to comprehend this situation.

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE BLACK DISPATCH

In your issue of May 12, 1958, there appeared an article entitled, "Republican Growth." This article reported that the first place on the Republican ticket will be "hand-picked." It further reported that at the first meeting of the Executive Committee a former Democrat was "turned down." I would like to remark on these two points: The meeting of the Executive Committee was called on April 16th for the purpose of recruiting candidates for ALL offices, and it was openly stated to members of the press who were interested enough to inquire that any and all candidates were welcome. It was not a meeting to CONSIDER candidates, but to encourage them. Further, the meeting was open to all members of the press and attendance to that meeting would have cleared up any misinterpretation you evidently have of its purpose. It has been openly stated by officers of the Republican Party that there are no special candidates in this Primary campaign, nor will there be until after the Primary, whereupon they all become special. This has been recognized by those candidates who chose to file for office.

With regard to the statement "we do not think that the place where a man was born or what he thought last month or last year has anything to do with what he thinks as of this minute," and the inference cast upon the Republican Party, I would like to point out that Senate Bill No. 1, sponsored and passed by the first Congress following admittance to statehood, was the now infamous Jim Crow Law passed in defiance of the Federal Enabling Act and passed by a House of 93 Democrats and 16 Republicans and a Senate of 39 Democrats and 5 Republicans. Have they, the Democrats, changed since that time in their attitude toward special groups?

Sincerely yours,

JOHN W. TYLER
State Chairman

He said he used the words "formal grave" for the Democrats advisedly. He added the 1960 "interment" will indeed be a formality because the party really was buried by the 1952 and 1956 election victories of President Eisenhower and Vice President Richard Nixon.

"In the latter year," Potter said, "our Republican candidates won 48 per cent of the vote in the 12 Southern and border states and carried six of those states as a warmup for our 1960 candidates."

Potter said on a recent tour of the South he was convinced of two things — that Democratic presidential candidates will never again carry a majority of the 12 states (including Tennessee and Kentucky), and that the vitality of the Republican Party of the South is felt everywhere.

South Is 'Burying' Demos, GOP Told

CHARLESTON, W. Va.—(AP)—A Republican national committee official said today the national Democratic Party in the South is dead—perhaps forever.

I. Lee Potter, special assistant to National Chairman Meade Alcorn on Southern GOP affairs, said the Democratic party in the 12 Southern and border states was killed by former President Harry Truman and Adlai Stevenson. He continued:

"The lid on its coffin is being nailed by Paul Butler (Democratic national chairman). And the formal grave is being dug by Walter Reuther (president of the United Auto Workers), Eleanor Roosevelt, Soapy Williams (governor of Michigan), Averell Harriman (governor of New York), Paul Douglas (senator from Illinois) and others in the dominant leftwing of the Democrat Party."

Potter's remarks were in a speech to a regional conference of the National Federation of Republican Women.

Nixon's Standing in GOP Unparalleled

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N.J. — Vice President Nixon's present standing with GOP voters is unparalleled during the last 20 years.

The Gallup Poll

The No. 1 choice for 1960 of nearly two out of three rank-and-file Republicans, Nixon today enjoys a lead that no potential candidate since 1936, except a president running for reelection, has had at this early stage—more than two years before the nominating conventions.

At only one point in 20 years has a candidate, other than a president, bettered Nixon's present vote at any stage of the race. That came in May, 1944, when Gov. Thomas E. Dewey—two months before the convention—was the top choice of 65 per cent of Republican voters.

In receiving a 64 per cent vote from Republicans across the country, the vice president has sharply increased the lead he had last November when 48 per cent picked him to head their ticket.

During the last four months, the vice president has also gained ground with independent voters.

Each person classifying himself as a Republican was asked this question:

"Here is a list of men who have been mentioned as possible presidential candidates in 1960 for the Republican party. Which one would you like to see nominated as the Republican candidate for President in 1960?"

The vote:

	Latest survey	November survey
Richard M. Nixon	64%	48%
Wm. F. Knowland	9	12
Harold E. Stassen	6	8
Goodwin J. Knight	4	3
Others	2	5
None of these, no opinion	11	17

Other men on the list of potential GOP candidates included Sen. Clifford E. Case, N.J., Christian A. Herter, assistant secretary of state, and Sen. Leverett E. Saltonstall, Massachusetts.

The following table gives independent choices:

	Latest survey	November survey
Nixon	40%	24%
Stassen	12	12
Knowland	9	11
Lodge	9	10
Knight	4	3
Herter	3	2
Others	1	1
None	22	34

Here are the highest votes recorded for candidates, other than Presidents running for reelection, since 1936. In each instance, they were leading the list of potential candidates for their party at the time.

1936: Roosevelt incumbent. Alfred Landon led the list with a score of 58 per cent, among GOP voters, in January, 1936—six months before the convention.

1940: Roosevelt incumbent. Wendell Wilkie, a "dark horse" candidate, was first choice of 44 per cent of Republicans just before the convention.

1944: Roosevelt incumbent. Thomas Dewey led the list with 65 per cent in May, 1944—the only other time that a candidate other than a President has bettered Nixon's present vote.

1948: Truman incumbent. Dewey's high point in this campaign—when he was top choice of 52 per cent of Republicans—came in December, 1946, 19 months before the convention.

1952: No incumbent in race. Estes Kefauver, No. 1 choice of Democrats, was preferred by 45 per cent of Democrats just before the convention. Eisenhower led the list among Republicans with 46 per cent of their vote on the eve of the GOP convention.

1956: Eisenhower incumbent. Stevenson was preferred by 61 per cent of Democrats in June, 1955, 12 months before the convention.

CONGRESS BIDS CUT BY G. O. P. IN SOUTH

Integration Issue a Facto as Only 30 Decide to Run, Compared With 49 in '56

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 (UPI —The field of Republican candidates running for Congress in the normally Democratic South has been reduced.

The Republican National Committee set up its Operation Dixie last year to try to enlarge on its recent Southern gains President Eisenhower carried four of the states in 1952 and six in 1956, but many Southerners who voted for him became hostile last year after he sent troops to Little Rock, Ark. in the school integration case.

A check at Republican headquarters showed today that the party would have about thirty candidates seeking House seats in 114 Congressional districts in the twelve states included in its Operation Dixie. This compared with forty-nine in 1956, when President Eisenhower's name was on the ballot, and forty-three in 1954, the last off-year Congressional election.

In the six Southern Senatorial contests this year, the G. O. P. will have three candidates, compared with five each in 1954 and 1956.

Some Are Discouraged

I. Lee Potter, director of the Republican Southern organizing drive, conceded that strife over school integration had discouraged some prospective candidates from making an attempt this year.

He asserted, however, that the party's Southern organizing drive was continuing unchecked with an eye on the Presidential election coming up in 1960.

"We're serious about this," he said in an interview. "We're going to make some progress."

Mr. Potter said he wanted the nine incumbent Republican House members from the South to "run scared" but that he was sure all would be reelected. The G.O.P. now holds two seats each for Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia and one apiece in Florida, North Carolina and Texas.

The director said he believed that the Republicans could enlarge their Southern contingent this year. He indicated that he thought the best chance was in the newly created twenty-second Texas District (Houston).

4 or 5 to Run in Virginia

In Virginia, where Federal court suits over school integration have reached the showdown stage, the Republican party will have four or five candidates for the House this year, compared with nine in 1956.

A rundown of the other Southern states listed one candidate in Alabama, none in Arkansas, three in Florida, one in Georgia, six in Kentucky, one in Louisiana, eight in North Carolina, none in South Carolina, two in Tennessee and three in Texas.

Republicans have nominated Leland Hyzer in Florida and Richard Clarke in North Carolina, both unsuccessful candidates for the House in 1956, for Senator in those two states.

Texas Republicans nominated Roy Whittenburg for the Senate. There have been reports from Texas, however, that he might withdraw in favor of Thad Hutcheson, Republican state chairman, who was a candidate in a special Senate election last year. Mr. Hutcheson was defeated by Senator Ralph Yarborough, Democratic nominee for re-election this year.

After attending the Texas Republican convention this week, Mr. Potter will join Meade Alcorn, Republican national chairman, to attend the G. O. P. state convention at Little Rock on Friday. Both will visit South Carolina and North Carolina Sept. 17 and 18.

IS IT A SECRET? — Facial expression of State Senator Harry A. Cole, Republican, does not reveal what State Senator Harry Phoebus might be whispering in his ear. Looking on is Senator Cole's bride, Doris. Photo was made at Saturday testimonial where over 200 persons of both parties paid $25 a plate and pledged to re-elect Senator Cole. Senator Phoebus of Somerset County told how Senator Cole refused to accept $40.00 and voted against an anti-gambling bill. His vote killed the bill.(NNPA)

Ike's Stock Rises With Voters

By GEORGE GALLUP
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N.J. — President Eisenhower's popularity has taken a sharp upswing.

From his all-time low point of 49 per cent registered in April — the first time the institute has recoreded his popularity below 50 per cent — the President's stock with voters across the land has jumped five points to a 54 per cent vote of approval.

Gallup Poll

Two months ago, Eisenhower received a vote of confidence from 52 per cent of voters for the way he was handling his job.

Today's upswing coincides with a slight upturn in the number of employed across the country and an upturn in voter confidence about the job outlook for the next six months.

IT also comes at a time when Eisenhower has made one of his most determined stands on any issue to date — the question of Pentagon reorganization.

Both of these factors — growing optimism about the economic condition of the nation and the President's stand on his Defense program—are important factors in the upswing of his popularity.

As it has done for more than 20 years now, the institute sought "grass roots" reaction to the man in the White House by asking this question:

"Do you approve or disapprove of the way Eisenhower is handling his job as President?"

The vote across the country today and in April:

	Today	April
Approve	54%	49%
Disapprove	31	35
No opinion	15	16

Previous to this survey, the general trend of Eisenhower's popularity since the beginning of his second term had been downward.

THE President started his second four years in office with a vote of confidence from 79 per cent of voters — equal to his first term high. His low point of 49 per cent one month ago represents a range of 30 points in his popularity index.

This contrasts with a range of 22 points during his first term in office — from 79 per cent in August, 1955 to 57 per cent in November, 1954.

VICE PRESIDENT NIXON
SOUTH AMERICAN TOUR

Peru Riot May Change Nixon's Europe Plans

Sunday Star
Washington D.C.
Sun 5-11-58

By JACK BELL
Associated Press Staff Writer

The Eisenhower administration may take a new look at Vice President Nixon's proposed European goodwill tour in the light of rowdy demonstrations that greeted some of his Latin American appearances.

Mr. Nixon has planned tentatively to visit European capitals on a friends-making mission late this summer. There is a likelihood his schedule would include some Iron Curtain countries, but not Russia.

However, the question now has arisen whether the goodwill he might engender abroad would outweigh the American resentment if Mr. Nixon were to be greeted with the kind of Yankee-go-home displays the Communists are said to be able to organize in some Western European countries.

Senator Mansfield, Democrat of Montana, a Senate Foreign Relations Committeeman who denounced Mr. Nixon's treatment in Latin America, said it appears to him only President Eisenhower can decide this issue.

"I have no doubt the Communists could organize hostile demonstrations in several countries," Senator Mansfield said. "The President will have to take this into account in deciding whether Nixon should undertake the trip."

Congress Reaction Possible

Senator Aiken, Republican of Vermont, also a Foreign Relations Committeeman, said in a separate interview he thinks resentment in Congress toward the treatment given Mr. Nixon is likely to be reflected in consideration of the foreign aid and reciprocal trade bills.

He and Senator Mansfield agreed that the affront was to the United States, not Mr. Nixon personally, and thus was more serious than if a lower-ranking official had been involved.

"I think he will get a better reception behind the Iron Curtain than he got in Peru and some other countries," Senator Aiken said. "I believe the people of those countries look to us as one of the hopes for freedom."

The stoning of Mr. Nixon in Peru marks the only serious incident that has bobbed up during his 108,000 miles of travel into 52 countries during the past 4½ years.

Other Unfriendly Gestures

Mr. Nixon has weathered skirmishes with agitators before. In touring Burma, Japan, Australia and the Sudan, he met a few "go-home" signs, anti-American demonstrations and pamphlets.

But he never faced anything like the shower of stones, fruit, spread and insults hurled at him by a taunting mob outside San Marcos University in Lima Thursday.

Secret Service bodyguards have long feared such trouble—and even worse. Mr. Nixon has seemed to be courting danger with his determination to meet not only with foreign leaders but to mingle with the crowds, shaking hands, swapping greetings and sometimes kissing babies.

Senator Cooper, Republican of Kentucky, a former Ambassador to India, said he isn't so sure that the hostile displays in Latin America were entirely Communist-inspired.

More Than Communist Show

"It seems to me they represent evidence of open and continuing animosity toward this country and its policies," Cooper said. "This is more than just a Communist show. I think it represents some deep-seated grievances. . . ."

In some quarters it was suggested that the stoning of Mr. Nixon in Peru may produce a full-scale review of United States policies toward Latin America.

Chairman Morgan, Democrat of Pennsylvania, of the House Foreign Affairs Committee said the Lima incident "naturally suggests a thorough review of our troubles in Latin America, the Communist situation, and so on."

Senator Green, Democrat of Rhode Island, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said he would prefer to await Mr. Nixon's return to Washington before discussing possible action by his group.

NIXON SPENDS A QUIET DAY IN ECUADOR

Finds Barber Who Toils Quietly

QUITO, Ecuador, May 10 (AP) —Reporters covering Vice President Nixon's tour of South America popped out of from the hotel.

The Vice President later went to a soccer game between two Ecuadoran teams and policemen were alerted. Extra precautions were taken because rioters stoned the Vice President in Lima, Peru, on Thursday.

Barber's Greatest Day

Nixon got a warm reception when he arrived here yesterday. Communists, who were blamed for the Lima disorders, number fewer than 3,000 among Ecuador's 600,000 voters.

The Vice President's visit here helped the business of Jose Bolivar Gusman, 41, a barber. Gusman cut hiar hair yesterday.

The newspaper El Comercio today carried an editorial cartoon shwoing Gusman at his barber shop sasying:

"I am the only one who has ever skinned Mr. Nixon."

But Nixon was not skinned. He got only a trim, and that from a barber who kept quiet as he worked.

Nixon walked into the shop at 5:30 p. m., seated himself in the chair, and ordered, "Just a trim, please." In no time a crowd gathered outside Gusman's little shop to watch the barber's finest hour in 23 years of haircutting.

No Talk of Politics

When it was over, Nixon asked, "Do you talk to people in the chair about politics?"

"No," answered the barber.

"What do you talk about?"

"I talk about social questions, like football [soccer]."

"Are you going to the game tomorrow?"

"No," said the barber as he pulled out a prayer book for Nixon to sign. Nixon signed and handed him 60 cents for the 25 cent hair cut.

Nixon is scheduled to reach Bogota, Colombia, the seventh country of his tour, tomorrow.

Quito Crowds Doff Hats and Bow to Nixon

QUITO, Ecuador, May 10 (AP). —Vice President Nixon rode through the streets of Quito today and men took off their hats and bowed. Later, 10,000 persons cheered "Viva Nixon" as he kicked off the first ball for a soccer game.

A-3

This was Mr. Nixon's second day in Ecuador and it was a far cry from the Communist-led, stone-throwing and spit riot that erupted last Thursday at Lima, Peru.

At a news conference before the soccer game, Mr. Nixon said he is taking into consideration a proposal that the United States review its policies in Latin America. He said the proposal was made by former President Galo Plaza Lasso in an 80-minute talk yesterday.

He said Mr. Plaza told him a new United States aid grant would be a mistake. Rather, Mr. Nixon said, Mr. Plaza proposed loans. Mr. Plaza also stressed that the United States bear in mind the importance of its trade policies on South American countries, Mr. Nixon said.

Referring to the Lima episode, Mr. Nixon said he has no illusions that the public reaction will permanently discourage the Communists, but it may force them to change their tactics.

Asked about Communist trade with Latin America, Mr. Nixon said there is danger that Russia will dump industrial products in given areas at a loss in an attempt to destroy normal channels of trade. He said private enterprise in the United States must do some serious thinking on the problem.

Greeted With Cheers

Mr. Nixon held the news conference at the home of United States Ambassador Christian Ravndal after laying a wreath at Ecuador's independence monument. Waving, cheering crowds greeted him on his way to and from the monument.

At the sports stadium, Mr. Nixon was greeted by more cheers and firecrackers. Police had been alerted long before to be on the watch for trouble.

Mr. Nixon cracked to the crowd that he played soccer in grammar school but gave it up because "I couldn't learn to use my head." In soccer, the players butt the ball with their heads as well as kick it.

Stripping off his jacket, Mr. Nixon butted the ball with his head a couple of times and gave it a boot to open the contest between two Ecuadorean teams.

Quito is Mr. Nixon's sixth stop on his South American tour which started at Montevideo, Uruguay, April 28. He leaves tomorrow for Bogota, Colombia. His last stop is Caracas, Venezuela, May 13 and he returns to Washington May 16.

Peru Charges 3 In Nixon Rioting

LIMA, Peru, May 11 (AP).—Charges were filed today against three persons in connection with last Thursday's rioting here against United States Vice President Richard Nixon.

Conviction could bring prison terms up to three years. The three are accused under a law forbidding "violating the immunity" of a chief of state or diplomatic agent of a friendly country, and "committing acts of contempt" against the flag of a friendly state.

34d 1958 H. MEADE ALCORN- CHAIRMAN, REPUBLICAN NATIONAL COMMITTEE

Drop Liberal Democrats, GOP Head Urges Negroes

By ETHEL PAYNE

WASHINGTON — The chairman of the Republican National Committee last week called for "Negroes in the North to help replace incumbent Democrat Senators and Congressmen with Republicans if further civil rights legislation is to be made possible."

Speaking before a dinner meeting of the Capital Press Club, H. Meade Alcorn said, "This must be done even in instances where the civil rights voting records of incumbents are good and for that reason! A vote for a Paul Douglas or a Hubert Humphrey is at the same time a vote for continued Democrat control of the Senate and the prolongation of Senator Eastland's reign as chairman of the judiciary committee."

GAPS DEMOS

Alcorn defended the Dec. 5 statement of Atty. Gen. William Rogers that the administration was not recommending any further rights legislation at this time as necessary because it was impossible under the Democratic controlled Congress to get anything done in the civil rights area.

Asked by Defender Publisher John H. Sengstacke what guarantee the party could give that Republican replacements could equal the liberal record of Sen. Paul Douglas, Alcorn said he hoped that any Republican elected would meet the standards of Republican policy on civil rights.

However, when Publisher Tom Young of the Norfolk Journal and Guide asked Alcorn what could be done by the party to discipline Southern GOP politicians who "act like jackasses" and talk the same line of reactionary Dixiecrats, Alcorn replied there was no way for the Republicans to "police every state organization and enforce our views."

DOUBTS REPORT

Alcorn said he doubted that I. Jay Potter of Arlington, Va., southern organizer for the Republican party, made a statement attributed to him by the Alexandria Gazette which quoted him on Oct. 15, 1957 as saying: "Our party stands for segregation."

The GOP chairman attacked the Dec. 19 speech of Democratic chairman Paul Butler before the same group. The 20 golden years of Roosevelt and Truman described by Butler as the era in which the climate was made for great civil rights progress were in reality "nothing more than years of Golden talk and cynical inaction in virtually every area of civil rights," Alcorn said.

He quoted from a statement made by the late Congressman Oscar DePriest in 1940 which Alcorn called a prophecy come true. Said DePriest: "When a civil rights bill is passed, a Republican president will do it. It will not be easy. When accomplished it will have to be done over strong opposition of "Demorrats — North, South, East and West. They are a smart bunch who know how to make effective deals both above and below the trouble. I know because I served with them in Congress.

SECOND PHASE

"You may laugh this off as politics, but as long as Democrats control the White House we can forget civil rights. It just won't happen. The second phase of your emancipation, your quest for first-class citizenship will come with the election of the next Republican president, whether it will be Wendell Wilkie in 1940 or some other Republican later."

Alcorn said there had been more solid progress in the field of civil rights during the five years of the Eisenhower administration than there was in all of the intervening years between the Emancipation Proclamation of 1863 and 1953.

The GOP chairman blamed the Democrats for the failure to pass a strong civil rights bill and named Walter Reuther, president of the United Auto Workers, as one of the self-styled liberals who made the decision to accept the compromise bill.

Alcorn concluded by saying, "I firmly believe the Negro vote is coming home to the only major party which stands for civil rights and has proved it."

The Press Club meeting was the largest in the club's history. Among the guests were many of the members of the National Newspaper Publisher's Association which was holding its Winter Workshop in Washington. A large delegation came from the Republican National Committee including Val Washington, the Minorities director and his assistant, Thalia Thomas, and Miss Bertha Adkins, director of Womens' Activities.

Urges voters in North to route out Democrats

WASHINGTON — Colored voters "in the North must help replace incumbent Democrat Senators and Congressmen with Republicans if further civil rights legislation is to be made possible," according to Meade Alcorn, chairman of the Republican National Committee.

"This must be done even in instances where the civil rights voting records of the incumbents are good," Mr. Alcorn said Thursday, in a prepared speech delivered before the Capital Press Club at the Phillis Wheatley YWCA.

He said that "a vote for a Paul Douglas or a Hubert Humphrey is at the same time a vote for continued Democrat control of the Senate and prolongation of Sen. Eastland's reign as chairman of the Judiciary Committee."

* * *

MR. ALCORN said he read "with considerable amazement" a speech delivered last month before the Capital Press Club by Paul M. Butler, chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

He scored Mr. Butler and the Advisory Council of the Democratic National Committee for holding President Eisenhower "responsible for the trouble at Little Rock."

Mr. Alcorn accused Northern Democrats delivering "pious words" on civil rights and the party of promoting "nothing more than years of golden talk and cynical inaction in virtually every area of civil rights."

THE FIRST major civil rights legislation in more than 80 years was enacted in 1957," Mr. Alcorn said.

He charged that Democrats weakened the administration's civil rights bill with the jury trial amendment, also united auto workers and their presidents. Walter Reuther, "self-styled friend of the common man and self-proclaimed defender of human rights."

Mr. Alcorn said that "despite 20 years of talk, executive orders, committee studies and crocodile tears, our nation's capital remained a jim-crow city throughout the new and fair deals."

* * *

ASIDE FROM cleaning up the jim-crow mess, the Republican administration has "appointed colored persons to "nearly 300 Federal positions never before occupied by members of their race," Mr. Alcorn said.

Douglas Answers Alcorn

WASHINGTON — Sen. Paul Douglas (D-Ill.) issued the following statement Saturday in reply to the speech of H. Meade Alcorn, chairman of the Republican National Committee, before the Capital Press club last week.

Alcorn singled out Sens. Douglas and Hubert Humphrey of Minnesota as examples of Democrats who had to be defeated despite their liberal records in Congress in order to give the Republicans control of the Senate and House.

Said Senator Douglas: "The success of further efforts for civil rights legislation requires the same kind of sincere bi-partisan cooperation that passed the voting rights bill in 1957.

"Mr. Alcorn's attempt as chairman of the Republican National Committee to use civil rights for partisan purposes and to defeat civil rights supporters like Senator Humphrey and me is understandable. But it doesn't particularly help our bi-partisan cooperation for future civil rights gains.

"When I voted against the selection of the present chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, no Republican voice joined mine. The adoption of a reasonable Senate anti-filibuster rule which is the key to strong civil rights legislation was [illegible] and defeated by more Republican votes, 28, than Democratic, 27. On the basis of that roll call, one could paraphrase Mr. Alcorn and with justice assert: "A citizen's vote for those Republicans is a vote for the southern leaders whom they joined in defeating our anti-filibuster rule.

"On the basis of the record, therefore, I think it is fair to say that both parties share in the blame for past failures and in the credit for recent successes. In the interest of making new civil rights gains, I hope we can with all good will unite the forward-looking people of both parties on the jobs ahead and not weaken them by partisan recrimination."

Negroes Told To Vote Out Democrats

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (AP)—Meade Alcorn, chairman of the Republican National Committee, said tonight Northern Negroes must help to replace Senate and House Democrats with Republicans next November "if further civil rights legislation is to be made possible."

This must be done even where the civil rights voting records of incumbent Democrats are good, Alcorn said. He added that a vote for any Democrat is a vote to continue control of powerful congressional committees in the hands of Southerners opposed to civil rights bills.

"It just is not possible to push stronger (civil rights) legislation through the present Democrat-controlled Congress," said the GOP leader in a speech prepared for the Capital Press Club, a Negro organization.

Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler addressed the same group Dec. 19. He said the Eisenhower-Nixon record on human rights was a "sorry one indeed" compared to what he called the deep devotion to this cause of Franklin Roosevelt and Harry Truman.

Alcorn suggested Butler must have been reading a "special edition of the Congressional Record —one in which up is down, yes is no, good is evil and North is South."

Claims Republican Congress Will Insure Continued Gain In Civil Rights Legislation

Washington, D. C., — Republican National Committee Chairman Meade Alcorn Jan. 17 called for the election of a Republican Congress in November to insure continued progress in civil rights legislation.

His remarks came in an address to the Capital Press Club, an organization of Negro newsmen working in the Nation's Capital. On hand for the occasion were more than 100 newsmen and guests, including some 20 publishers of Negro papers from throughout the country.

Civil Rights

Declaring that there would have been no civil rights legislation in 1957 had it not been for the Republicans, Mr. Alcorn urged the group to help elect a Congress which would work with the President. He said that it is not possible to push stronger legislation through the present Democrat-controlled Congress.

Replacement

"Negroes in the North must help replace incumbent Democrat Senators and Congressmen with Republicans . . . "A vote for any Democrat candidate for either the Senate or the House is a vote to continue control of most of the powerful Committees of Congress in the hands of anti-civil rights members from the South. Every individual citizen should be aware of the full implications of the decision he registers at the polling place," he added.

Rights Progress

Mr. Alcorn also took the Democrats to task for what he called their claims to responsibility for all progress in the field of human rights. "There has been more solid progress in the field of civil rights during the five years of the Eisenhower Administration than there was in all of the intervening years between the Emancipation Proclamation of 1863 and 1953," he said.

"Shameful" Record

The Committee chairman called the civil rights record of the Democrat party "shameful," declaring that during the "20 golden years of Roosevelt and Truman 33 test votes on anti-discrimination, anti-poll tax and anti-lynching bills came before the House and Senate and that none were enacted into legislation. He said the record shows that 81 per cent of the Republicans in Congress voted for these bills; while 59 per cent of the Democrats voted against them.

To Boost Civil Rights Legislation

Negroes Urged to Replace Democrats With Republicans

By ALICE A. DUNNIGAN

WASHINGTON (ANP) — Negroes of the North were urged to help replace incumbent Democratic Senators and Congressmen with Republicans if they hoped for further civil rights legislation.

This request was made by Meade Alcorn, chairman of the Republican National Committee, in an address to members of the Capital Press Club and the National Newspaper Publishers Association. Alcorn insisted that "this must be done even in instances where the civil rights voting records of the incumbents are good."

HE POINTED OUT that a vote for a Paul Douglas or a Hubert Humphrey is a vote for continued Democratic control of the Senate and the prolongation of Senator Eastland's reign as chairman of the Judiciary Committee.

The Republican chairman charged the "self-styled Democratic liberals" with running out on the Negroes of America. This group was greatly responsible for the "watering down of the President's civil rights bill," he said.

It was "such Democrat Senators as Kennedy, Morse, Magnuson, Mansfield, O'Mahoney and Murry who voted to send the House-passed civil rights bill to a gas chamber death in Senator Eastland's Judiciary Committee," recalled the GOP spokesman.

LATER, FIVE of these same six voted for a restrictive jury trial amendment which literally ripped the heart out of the measure, he continued. A weird assortment of people who, through the years, had shed tears in public about civil rights, now came riding over the hill shouting that the Senate bill, with its self-defeating jury trial amendment, was a great step forward and ought to be adopted without further fight or delay.

The group of nearly 100 newspaper publishers, reporters and others engaged in the allied fields, attending the dinner at Phyllis Wheatley YWCA, were told that more solid progress has been made in the field of civil rights during the five years of the Eisenhower Administration than in all of the intervening years between the Emancipation Proclamation of 1863 to 1953.

American Negroes overwhelmingly supported the Republican party from Lincoln's time to the mid-1930's, declared Alcorn. During the past 20 years, they have drifted toward the Democratic party but "I firmly believe that the Negro vote is coming home—returning to the banner of the only major party which stands for civil rights and has proved it."

Ike's Doctors Still Puzzled Over Stroke

Specialists Fail To Find Evidence Of Brain Injury

By Scripps-Howard Newspapers

WASHINGTON, March 4 — The question of what caused President Eisenhower's mild stroke last November remained unanswered today.

Apparently, there's no way his doctors can tell.

The specialists who checked the President last week-end reported they could find "no evidence of any damage" to his brain as a result of the stroke.

But they failed to settle the question they themselves raised when Ike suffered his "cerebral artery occlusion" 14 weeks ago.

Was the stroke caused by a blood clot or a cramp in the brain?

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty, in discussing the medical report on the President, indicated the specialists were stumped. They can't tell which happened.

If it was a blood clot, then the stroke could be blamed on the same underlying process—hardening of the arteries—which caused the President's heart attack in 1955.

In other words, the Nov. 25 seizure would amount to a slight "heart attack in the brain."

If the cause of the stroke was a cramping of a brain artery—a spasm—this would have no connection with the heart condition.

Meanwhile, a third possibility has been raised by some physicians who don't believe stroke-producing spasms occur. They contend such episodes actually are due to a temporary drop of blood flow to the brain, probably induced by a fall in blood pressure.

This viewpoint is presented in the current issue of the Journal, American Practitioner, by Dr. Gene M. Lasater of the University of Tennessee Medical School in Memphis.

In any event, the President's doctor's said they couldn't spot any damage in his brain even though they used an electroencephalograph to examine him.

This is a complex machine, nicknamed EEG, which doctors use to tune in on a person's brain.

It picks up electrical messages that are generated by the brain and cables them to an amplifier which juices up the power enough to push a pen over a sheet of paper.

The pen writes out, in wavy lines, the "beat of the brain." These lines then can be deciphered by the experts to determine whether brain damage is present—and where.

Though the EEG isn't 100 per cent reliable — it sometimes misses deep-seated injury — doctors usually are able to detect any significant damage by switching wires and by recording different halves of the brain at the same time on separate sheets of paper.

Thus, the conclusion of Ike's physicians that he has escaped permanent brain damage is based on the fact that no injury could be detected even by the most sensitive medical instruments in existence.

NIXON URGES U. S. REASSURE LATINS

Says Students and Workers Should Be Shown Nation Oppposes Dictatorships

By W. H. LAWRENCE
Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 21—Vice President Richard M. Nixon called today for a greater effort to convince Latin American students and workers that the United States does not favor dictators or making the rich richer.

He reported to a National Press Club luncheon and a nation-wide television audience on his recent South American trip.

The Vice President said it would be a mistake to describe the violence directed at him and Mrs. Nixon in Venezuela and Peru as solely the work of Communists. He said misconceptions about United States policies, both governmental and private, had been exploited by the Communists to arouse anti-American feeling.

"While it is true that Communists spearheaded the attacks, they had a lot of willing spear carriers with them," Mr. Nixon declared.

The Vice President asserted that, though his experiences had involved some personal danger, they also had convinced him that visiting Americans ought to avoid the "cocktail, white tie dinner" circle and concentrate on trying to win the friendship of students and the growing labor movement in Latin America.

He received a warm reception by the capacity Press Club audience, which included several Ambassadors from Latin America. He spoke from notes for twenty-five minutes, and then answered written questions for thirty-five minutes.

There were a few humorous references to United States politics and Mr. Nixon's role as the leading candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1960.

He called attention to the Press Club's own custom of advancing its vice president to the presidency without opposition and remarked, amid laughter, that some would consider this a good system for other organizations.

He was stumped momentarily by the final question: "would he seek a thrird term as Vice President in 1960?"

Mr. Nixon responded lightly that "Republicans always have opposed a third term."

Responding to criticism that he should not have undertaken a goodwill mission if the end result were to be violence, Mr. Nixon said that he had been warned before every long trip abroad that demonstrations might result and that there might be efforts to assassinate him.

"If we allowed a bunch of blackmailing bullies to keep officials of the United States Government from doing what needs to be done to carry out our foreign policy, we had better get of the face of the earth," he declared.

He was asked if he thought it was wise or dignified for the Vice President to debate with "radical students." He replied that he would not change any decision he had made in Latin America and that he felt that personal contacts with student groups were important.

The true measure of the success of his journey, Mr. Nixon said, will be in the policies the United States Government and people practice in the future in relation to Latin American countries. He said he hoped the trip har awakened some persons to the real danger of the Communist conspiracy and had convinced others of the importance of Latin America to the United States.

It is important to know, Mr. Nixon said, that many persons in Latin America mistakenly believe that United States policies are designed to protect the "governing élite" and that governmental loans and private investments are helping to "make the rich richer and the poor poorer."

The United States must make it clear, he said, that its policies are intended to promote economic growth, democracy, and an increased standard of living for all peoples.

Asked about his thoughts at the peak of the Caracas riots when Mrs. Nixon seemed in danger, the Vice President drew a laugh in saying that "you don't think in terms of world politics when someone is banging on your window."

Alabama GOP To Pick Slate At Convention

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Jan. 29 (AP) — Alabama Republicans will select candidates for the November general election in a convention here May 30.

The decision to hold a convention instead of a primary election came at a meeting of the state GOP executive committee today.

Alabama Republicans are entitled to hold a primary election, since the party polled more than 20 per cent of the total vote in the last general election.

The committee also adopted a resolution denouncing the loyalty oath recently adopted by Democrats, and approved another resolution urging "continued separation of the races by all legal means."

Also adopted was a resolution praising the Eisenhower administration for "excellent achievements of the past five years."

There was no reference to the Little Rock crisis last year, when federal troops were dispatched to maintain integration at Little Rock Central High School.

The segregation resolution was introduced by Milton Lanier, Huntsville, vice chairman of the committee.

The segregation resolution pointed to Alabama's "unprecendented economic advances and great social progress during the past several years."

It stressed the committee's belief in the "continued preservation of our southern traditions."

The committee accused the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee of "political tryanny" for readopting its loyalty pledge.

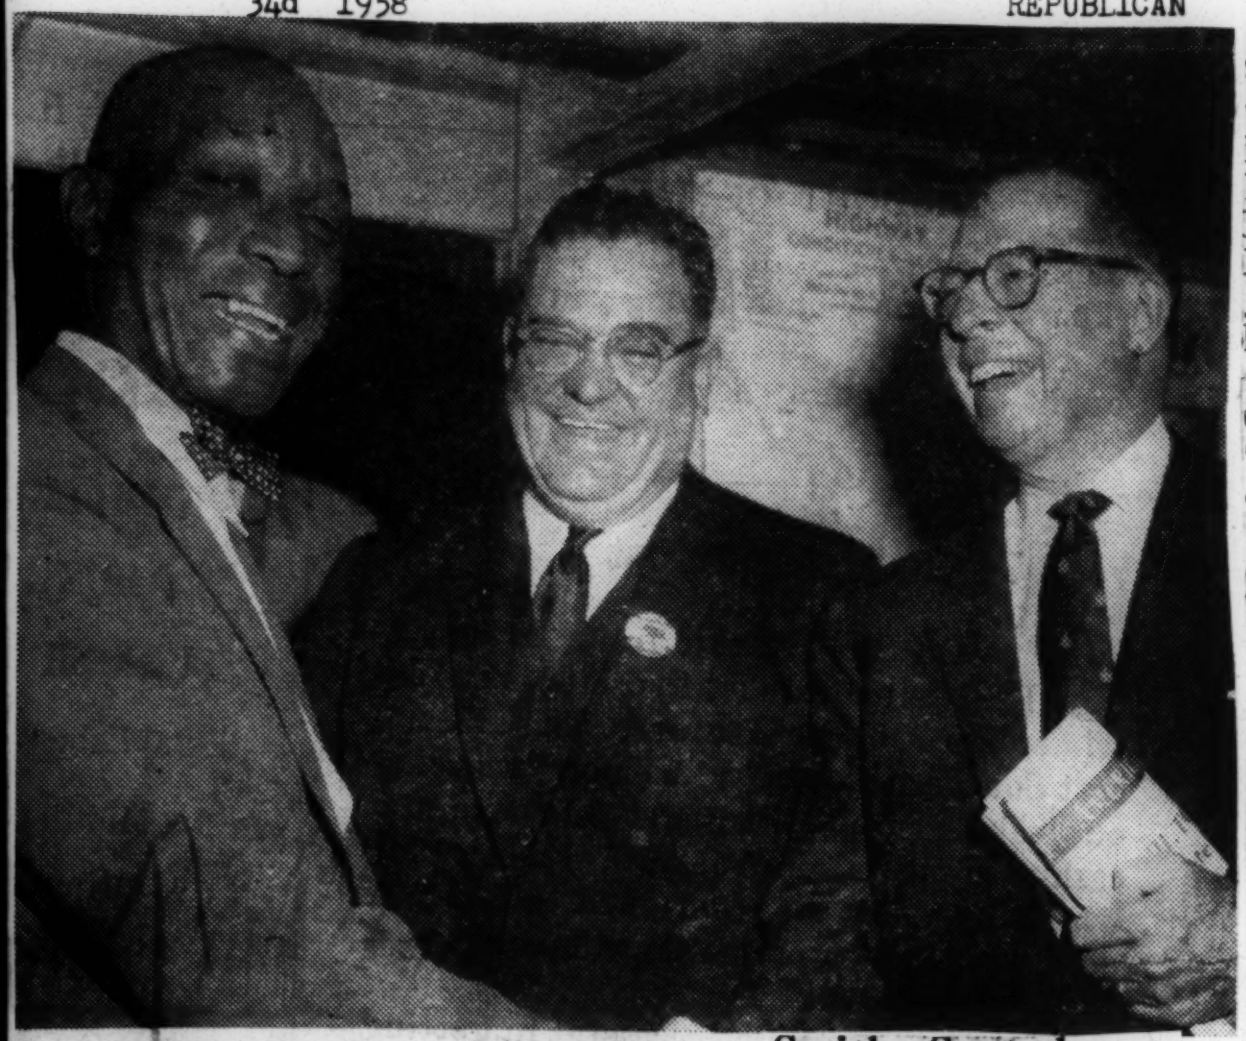
The loyalty oath provides that all Democratic candidates must swear that they did not vote for a Republican in the last general election.

The resolution adopted today said the loyalty pledge is "in direct violation of all principles of American political freedom."

It was introduced by Tom Abernethy of Talladega, unsuccessful Republican candidate for governor four years ago.

Hiram Dodd, Birmingham attorney, was chosen temporary chairman of the Republican convention in May, and Richard Emmett, Greenville, was named temporary secretary.

Alabama National Committeeman Marvin Mostellar of Mobile told the Republican leaders that "I regret to say there have been certain things that happened to cause us to lose ground in Alabama temporarily."



SPIRIT OF REPUBLICANISM

Smith, Editor of the Butler County American and a Vice-Chairman of the Butler County Republican Committee with pre-victory smiles for GOP candidates on their faces. Smith Seated As Republican Vice-Chairman Of Convention

Columbus — At the opening session of the Ohio Republican Convention Thursday among the officials introduced to the delegates was Alvin D. Smith—Editor of the Butler County American—one of the honorary permanent vice-chairmen of the Convention. He then remained on the stage throughout the session.

When the first Negro Vice-Chairman was introduced, he received hearty applause and the leading GOP County Chairman of the nation—Martin A. Coyle—let his joy and pleasure be known with a loud shout.

Ray Bliss., State GOP Chairman and Robt., A. Taft, Jr. 1st V-Chairman of the convention were the many convention officials to shake Smith's hand on the stage when the session adjourned.

In addition to County Chairman Coyle, Mrs. Edna Fath, Chairwoman, Ben S. VanGorden, County Commissioner; Tom Baird, candidate for State Representative; Verlin Pulley, Oxford; and all the delegates and visitors from Butler County commended.

Wherever Mr. Smith went, he was commended by both whites and colored who knew of the historical event.

Key speakers at convention were Vice-President Nixon, Gov. C. William O'Neill and Sen. Bricker. Opinions heard were: This was one of the finest conventions of the party in Ohio.

Mr. Smith was asked by one top GOP leader, how does he feel for being so honored? Smith replied in the words of a great Negro editor and friend of Abe Lincoln—Fred Douglas — "The Republican Party is the ship and all else the sea."

'I Don't Waste Time Getting Mad at Harry,' Ike Says

WASHINGTON — (UPI) — President Eisenhower caustically remarked Wednesday that he had too much sense to waste his time getting mad at former President Truman or anybody else.

The President made the statement at his news conference in answers to questions about Truman's remarks this week that Eisenhower had been mad at him since the 1952 campaign.

Truman told the National Press Club here Monday that Eisenhower still was angry with him because he upbraided the President for appearing on the same platform with Sen. William E. Jenner (R., Ind.) after the latter had called Gen. George C. Marshall a traitor.

While not mentioning Truman by name, Eisenhower said the former president did not give a correct account of the incident.

"To say that I have ever stood still while any man, in my presence, was reviling Gen. Marshall is not true," Eisenhower said. "In fact, he is one of the men I have met that I put in the class I call great."

Eisenhower appeared on the same platform with Jenner at a Republican rally in Indianapolis Sept. 9, 1952. Eisenhower was campaigning for president and Jenner was running for reelection to the Senate.

GOP-Dixie Coalition May Face Fight

Power Curb Move In Northern Demo

WASHINGTON (AP) — Far-reaching rules changes may be proposed to the House when Congress convenes Jan. 7 as part of a move to curb the power of a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats.

Both proposals have the backing of so-called liberals whose ranks were swelled by results of this year's congressional elections. One change is aimed at the Rules Committee, a 12-man group through which legislation normally must pass before it can be voted on by the House. The committee for years has been dominated by the coalition and has bottled up numerous bills recommended by other committees. Its chairman is Rep. Howard W. Smith (D-Va).

To break the Rules Committee bottleneck, the liberals are proposing a return to what is known as the 21-day rule, which was in effect during the 81st Congress of 1949-50.

This rule allows the Rules group to hold back bills for a maximum of 21 days, after which they may be brought to a House vote by the legislative committee which originally approved them. The Rules Committee is not a legislative committee. Its main function is to serve as traffic cop for bills approved by legislative committees.

The 21-day rule was adopted originally by a vote of 275-142 on Jan. 3, 1949. It was junked two years later by a vote of 244-149.

The second change proposed for the next Congress would reduce the number of signers necessary on petitions to force House action on bills bottled up by legislative committees, many of which are headed by Southern Democrats.

The existing rule provides that 218 signatures can bring any measure to a House vote. Prior to 1933, only 145 signatures were required.

Backers of this proposal have agreed on no fixed figure. Some have proposed that the number of signatures required be reduced to 100.

ARTHUR WILSON SEES HOPE FOR NEGRO IN G. O. P

Accountant Active for Years in Politics

BY ROI OTTLEY

Arthur J. Wilson, who in 1923 became the first Negro certified accountant in Chicago and now makes a specialty of tax problems, heads one of the strongest Republican organizations in the city.

Wilson

Wilson, who represented Joe Louis in his tax settlement with the government, believes "there is a growing attitude among Negroes that the Republican party, under the progressive leadership of President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon, is the hope of the Negro."

This feeling, he reports, was reflected in the 1956 elections when his district, which embraces 63d to 73d sts. between Stony Island av. and State st., elected Elwood Graham to the state legislature.

In Politics Since 1924

Wilson, committeeman of the 6th ward, entered political activities in 1924 and has served as an auditor for the state department of revenue. He assumed a prominent political role in 1948, when he was elected a delegate to the national convention. He was elected as a delegate again in 1952.

His father, Maynard L. Wilson, was leader of the Negro population in Omaha, and served 18 years as secretary to Omaha's Mayor Dahlmann.

From 1923 to 1932, Arthur Wilson was the cashier of the Douglas National bank, which until its failure in 1932, was one of the largest Negro banks in the United States. He has also conducted a private practice as an accountant.

Native of Omaha

He was born in Omaha Oct. 30, 1900, one of two children. He attended Howard Kennedy grade school in Omaha. After his graduation his mother, Mrs. Dora McDermon, who had remarried, settled the family in Chicago.

Wilson enrolled at Wendell Phillips High school, graduating in 1918. He entered the University of Chicago, then transferred to the University of Illinois. He received a B. Knowland For Nixon in '60 If He Doesn't Run Himself

But Senator Asserts He Hopes to Serve Four Years as Governor

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23 — Senator William F. Knowland said today that if he were not a candidate for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1960 he would support Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

The Senate Republican leader is a candidate for Governor of California in this fall's election.

He has said repeatedly that he hoped to serve a full four-year term in that office, but today he would not make any statement foreclosing the possibility that he might be a candidate for the Presidential nomination in 1960.

Mr. Knowland gave his views today in interviews and on a radio program.

Mr. Nixon is generally considered the leading contender for the nomination and is expected to make an active campaign in the primaries and in the convention.

Mr. Nixon and his associates in California are supporting Senator Knowland in his attempt to win the Governorship from the Democratic candidate, State Attorney General Edmund G. Brown.

Senator William F. Knowland

Mr. Nixon was one of those most instrumental in persuading the incumbent Republican governor, Goodwin J. Knight, to abandon his plans to seek re-election and run instead for Senator Knowland's seat in the Senate.

Party Fight Avoided

This avoided a bruising intra party fight between the Senator and the Governor and cleared the way for Mr. Knowland in the primary.

Today Senator Knowland told interviewers that if elected Governor "I expect to serve out a four year term—possibly two four-year terms."

"Assuming that I do serve out the first four-year term," he said, "I think Nixon would be the nominee of the party for President."

On the American Broadcasting Corporation radio program "College Press Conference" the Senator stated his position in slightly more positive fashion, saying that if he served out his term as Governor he would support Mr. Nixon for the Presidency.

Senator Knowland added to interviewers that he was "not making any Sherman statement and I am not foreclosing myself against any of the developments that might occur."

His reference was to the statement Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman after the Civil War, when there was talk he might be offered the Republican nomination.

General Sherman declared that if nominated he would not run and if elected he would not serve.

His classic disavowal has had very few echoes among American politicians.

Sees Nixon in Lead

Senator Knowland indicated that he shared the general impression that Mr. Nixon was far ahead of the field in the race for the 1960 G. O. P. nomination. But he made it clear tha this statement today was intended to allow for eventualities if for some reason Mr. Nixon should be out of the race.

Before Governor Knight withdrew as a candidate for re-election, Mr. Nixon said that in a contest between the Governor and the Senator he would support Mr. Knowland. The Senator said then, and repeated today, that there had been no deal between him and the Vice President with regard to either the gubernational contest or 1960.

The Senator said that as matters stand now he does not intend to enter any Presidential primaries in 1960 if he is elected governor. This would free Mr. Nixon from the possibility that he might have competition from a fellow Californian in the primary contests.

1960 Ambition Seen

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23—Senator Knowland's bid for the Governorship of California has been widely presumed to be part of a plan aimed at possible Presidential competition in 1960.

Such conjecture has been met by the Senator with a rejoinder variously appraised by critics and supporters as equivocal and candid.

On the one hand he has insisted that he seeks the full four-year Gubernatorial term without reservations, qualifications, or "commitments."

On the other hand, in response to pointed questions about 1960, he has repeatedly stuck to the statement that "no one has a crystal ball." This has been generally construed as maintenance of a large Knowland-shaped foot in the Presidential doorway.

Senator Knowland's preoccupations in Congress have precluded much personal attention to the campaign he launched last October. Meanwhile his opponent, Mr. Brown, has been campaigning vigorously.

In the Senatorial contest the Republicans have formidable opposition in the candidacy of Representative Clair Engle and they still have an intra party fight on their hands.

Governor Knight is being opposed for the Republican Senatorial nomination by Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco. Some knowland supporters have been active in trying to thwart Governor Knight's candidacy.

Accordingly, Mr. Nixon devoted a considerable portion of a five-day visit here last week to soft-pedaling animosities between the factions and to canvassing possibilities for galvanizing the Knowland campaign.

South's GOP 'Effective,' Alcorn Says

BIRMINGHAM (AP)—Republican Chairman Meade Alcorn said Friday night that many Democrats don't seem to realize the Republican Party is effective in the South "and is here to stay."

He told a GOP fund-raising dinner in Birmingham Alabama Republicans must work harder "to build a responsible two-party system in the South."

Alcorn called Republican gains in the 1956 general election especially significant. Republicans carried Birmingham and Mobile in supporting Eisenhower.

He said "archaic election laws" block Republican efforts in many Southern states.

He said "an incident such as Little Rock will never lead thinking voters to turn their backs on the accomplishments of the Republican administration and embrace the left-wing policies and programs of the present national Democratic leadership."

Alcorn said many Democrats "don't yet seem to realize the Republican Party is already an effective instrument in the South and is here to stay."

Earlier he said in an interview that the GOP "was and is" on the rise in the South, and the Little Rock incident only "momentarily interrupted that progress."

He referred to the use of federal troops in the school segregation issue at Little Rock.

'Little Rock' May Throw Negro Vote To GOP's

New York City--(ANP)-- In spite of the Democratic Party's success in the off-year election in New York and New Jersey, "there is every reason to suppose that Little Rock - given Republican Party willingness to exploit it to the utmost - could throw the Negro vote, nationally, to the Republican," the magazine Monthly Review declares in its December issue.

The importance of Little Rock cannot be overestimated, is the feeling of editors Leo Huberman and Paul M. Sweezy. "To a Negro there can be no more satisfying or reassuring picture than that of United Soldiers accompanying Negro children to school in a Southern city. Here, for the first time in the lives of most Negroes living today, is concrete, irrefutable evidence that the law is on their side and that it can protect as well as oppress them.

"'ronically enough," the editors write, "Eisenhower and the Republican Party wanted nothing so much as not to have to provide the Negroes with that evidence. But the deed is done, and if the Republicans are prepared to maintain the advantage thus unwillingly gained, then Little Rock could be made to have a profound effect on every Negro citizen in the country."

The magazine says the Republicans won their advantage without seeking it, thanks to Governor Orval Faubus.

"Faubus is not only a narrow minded bigot but also a very stupid man," the editors commented. "He deliberately backed Eisenhower into a corner from which the only escape was an honorable one. If Eisenhower had refused to act, every state in the south would have 'interposed': the south would have reversed the verdict of the Civil War without so much as firing a shot.

"Faubus, in short, violated the first rule of war and politics which says at all costs to avoid a showdown with a stronger opponent. In so doing, he made a man of Eisenhower, at least for a brief moment, and opened up for the Republican Party a political oilfield of vast but as yet unmeasured dimensions."

The idea that everthing in the south will soon return to normal is a pipe dream, the editors declare. Three major forces are listed as changing the situation:

1. Industrialization which "shakes a society to its foundations and sets all of its parts in motion." The traditional pattern of excluding Negroes from most industrial jobs and consigning them to cotton cultivation and domestic service is changing: "corporate capital is interested in profits, not in the availability of a servant class. It needs wage labor and it tends to hire by skills and pay scales, not by skin color."

2. The new determination of Negroes to achieve first-class citizenship.

3. The urgent need of the American ruling class to win friends and allies in a predominantly colored world.

The crux of everything, the magazine says, is the right to vote. "When the southern Negro has the right to vote, the American political scene will really change and the stage will be set for the next step forward, which can only be the organization of a genuine labor party, embracing both black and white, both north and south."

Two Party System Advocated For South By GOP Spokesman

Lt. George W. Lee Urges Abraham Lincoln Club To Build Strong Party

BY MARCEL HOPSON

Lt. George W. Lee, of Memphis, Tenn., guest-speaking at the fifth annual banquet of the Abraham Lincoln Club, Thursday night, March 20, vividly suggested that "a strong two party system can save the South from destruction and for the good of the Nation".

Speaking before an estimated attendance of 450 at O. J.'s Half Acre Club, Mr. Lee, grand commissioner of education, I. B. P. O. E. W., Elks of the World, in making that suggestion highly praised the works, growth and statewide influence of the host ALRC group. He commended them for their major part in "helping to establish a strong and influential Republican Party segment throughout the state of Alabama."

He praised them for a membership of some 500 and suggested that they "keep up the good work and do not stop until the number is 5,000 or more members."

In most of his hour-long recital-like address, Mr. Lee cited the "impressive record of achievement" of the Republican Party over a 100-year period, from Abraham Lincoln's signing of the Emancipation Proclamation, setting slaves free, to President Dwight D. Eisenhower's signing the executive order which sent federal troops to the Little Rock, Arkansas School scene.

He named the five greatest men on earth who "played their part in shaping humanity as Jesus Christ, the "Saviour of Mankind"; Aristotle, Greek philosopher and naturalist; Abraham Lincoln, the great Emanicipator; Booker T. Washington, educator and founder of Tuskegee Institute; and President D. D. Eisenhower, "the man whise wisdom and guidance the world depended upon as "commander-in-chief" of the allied forces during World War II, and presently as the president of the United States.

He complimented "any person who has the audacious idea of something within him, capable of overcoming circumstances, such as Abraham Lincoln."

Among other praises, he lauded President Eisenhower for "putting an end to the 40-million dollar gravy train (New Deal and Fair Deal) which former Presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt and Harry S. Truman stated".

He concluded his address, challenging Negro citizens" to produce their own leaders and not depend upon others to do it."

Among telegrams read to the audience were greetings from U. S. Vice President Richard M. Nixon and Val J. Washington, chairman of Minorities Division, National Republican Party, Washington, D. C.

W. C. Patton, president and coordinator of the Alabama State Coordinating Association for Registration and Voting, Inc., in his remarks pointed out that "Our organization's primary goal is to get every citizen registered and qualified to vote. Then they may join either party they desire."

Mrs. Mabel L. Neely, president of the Alabama Association of Women's Clubs related her" joyful experience and impressions" during her trip to the Nation's Capitol to take part in the President's Minority Community Resources Conference, January 15. In concluding her remarks, she declared "I have been a Democrat all my life. I believe in following the best man in the country; not the party."

The program included the singing of the national anthem by Mrs. Savannah Crews Jones invocation by the Rev. John W. Rice, Jr., pastor, Westminister Presbyterian Church; singing of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic", led by Mrs. Maggie Zeigler; club achievement related by Frank Hunter ALRC public relations director; remarks by John J. Drew, manager of Alexander and Company Insurance Agency, business and professional; Mrs. Lucille Harmon Patterson, ALRC corresponding secretary, education; William Parker banquet chairman; and Thomas L. Hunt, program chairman, who pinch-hit for Attorney Oscar W. Adams, Jr., ALCR chairman, in introducing Charles J. Greene, Birmingham district manager, Atlanta Life Insurance Company, who in turn introduced Lt. Lee, the guest speaker; instrumental solo by Forest Holman, Jr; greetings from Club Eisenhower in Fairfield, expressed by Miss Annie Lue Alexander; and the benediction by the the Rev. B. Washington Coates, pastor, Greater Tabernacle Baptist Church.

E. T. Swift, chairman, ALRC executive committee, served as master of ceremonies; and Mrs. Alexinia Y. Baldwin, pianist.

Other ALRC officers are T. L. Hurt, vice-chairman; Mrs. Helen H. Willis, secretary; Mrs. Louise Hunter, assistant secretary; and J. C. Crosby, treasurer.

Negro Flays GOP Policy

DETROIT (AP) — Declaring that "Republicans in Michigan don't want intelligent Negroes in their political organization," George A. Isabell resigned today as secretary of the Wayne (Detroit) County Republican Committee. Isabell is a Negro.

"Postmaster General (Arthur B.) Summerfield, Isabell said, "still runs Republican politics in Michigan and Senator Potter (R-Mich) just says amen!"

He voiced disapproval of GOP patronage handling, but said he had not been rejected for any appointment within Republican scope.

In quitting as secretary, Isabell said he was not leaving the Republican party, adding: "I'm too old to become a carpetbagger."

Isabell told Mrs. Louis M. Nair, Republican County chairman, in a letter of resignation:

"People who have done absolutely no work, fought the party and have been afraid to be publicly known as Republicans, received all of the honors and the jobs."

U.S. Goodwill Envoy Talks With Panama's Leaders —Streets Cleared

PANAMA CITY, July 13.—Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower was whisked without incident Sunday through narrow Panama City streets cleared by police to prevent any outbursts such as the ones that marred Vice President Richard M. Nixon's South American visit.

Eisenhower, president of Johns Hopkins University, was sent on a 21-day goodwill tour of Central America three months after Mr. Nixon's turbulent visit, during which his car was stoned and he was threatened with violence.

Encounters No Violence

On the first full day of his tour, the educator encountered no violence.

Panamanian student leaders said Saturday night they would take action if Dr. Eisenhower refused to visit them at the Panamanian University. He replied by inviting them to meet him Monday night at the United States Embassy residence.

Dr. Eisenhower, accompanied by his daughter, arrived here Saturday on a combination good-will and fact-finding tour as his brother's official representative. He drew moderate applause Sunday morning as he sped through streets lined with crowds out to buy lottery tickets rather than to salute the President's brother. His itinerary was not made public, as a precaution against disturbances.

Pay Courtesy Calls

Eisenhower and Roy R. Rubottom, assistant secretary of state for interAmerican affairs, one of his traveling companions, paid courtesy calls on President Ernesto de la Guardia Jr., Canal Zone Gov. William E. Potter, Maj. Gen. Ridgley Gaither, commander in chief of the United States Caribbean Command.

Later this morning calls, the President gave a lunch for Dr. Eisenhower attended by the cabinet and was followed by a business session with cabinet members and other government officials.

Dr. Eisenhower will remain here until Wednesday, when he is due to go to Tegucigalpa, Honduras.

BALBOA, Canal Zone, July 14 (AP). — Milton Eisenhower embarked on a tour of the Panama Canal today after hearing Panama's proposals for economic aid and a plea for recognition of her sovereignty over the vital waterway.

It was the third day of the friendly and thus far uneventful fact-finding mission by the President's brother.

Later he goes to Honduras, Costa Rica, Nicaragua, Puerto Rico, El Salvador and Guatemala, in that order. The zig-zag itinerary was planned in advance and announced only today to foil any violent leftist demonstrations of the type that greeted Vice President Nixon on his South American tour.

Washington Post

If any similar anti-American sentiment exists in Panama, it did not show itself over the week end. Dr. Eisenhower was shielded by strict security measures and whisked around Panama City so rapidly that the inhabitants of the capital hardly were aware of his presence. His daily schedule was not published.

Panama Flag in Zone

President Ernesto De La Guardia, jr., told the visitor that flying the Panamanian flag over the Canal Zone and using Spanish officially inside the 10-mile-wide strip would help bring the people of Panama and the United States closer together.

The United States controls the Canal Zone under an agreement with Panama. The question of mineral rights and Panamanian sovereignty over the zone recently has become a hot political issue which De La Guardia's opposition has been quick to exploit.

Mr. De La Guardia also outlined ways in which the United States could aid Panama financially. He pointed out that the nation's population is growing but it lacks capital with which to increase production.

The purpose of the trip by Dr. Eisenhower, president of Johns Hopkins University, is to study the background for a possible revision of United States policies toward Latin America.

To Meet With Nixon

While some here viewed the trip as only another goodwill mission of dubious value, Dr. Eisenhower told newsmen that the tour would help give the United States "a continual perspective on all things involved in United States policy."

On his return to Washington Dr. Eisenhower is expected to meet with Vice President Nixon to draw up recommendations to President Eisenhower on a solution of Latin America's problems.

This is Dr. Eisenhower's itinerary: Tegucigalpa, Honduras, July 16; San Jose, Costa Rica, July 18; Managua, Nicaragua, July 21; San Jose, Peurto Rico, July 24; San Salvador, El Salvador, July 27; Guatemala, July 30. The Guatemala visit was timed to avoid the July 26 anniversary of the assassination of President Carlos Castillo Armas, who swept the Communist regime out of power in 1954.

BCA Editor Named At Columbus GOP Meet'g

The Committee on Permanent Organization—meeting Thursday in Columbus—for the Ohio Republican Convention voted and named Alvin D. Smith, Editor of the Butler County American, one of the ten permanent honorary Vice-Chairmen of the State GOP Convention which meets in Columbus Oct. 9. Mr Smith is the only Negro Vice-Chairman—a first.

Credit for this goes to Tom Baird of of Middletown—a delegate on the Committee. After the meeting, Mr. Baird called to congratulate Smith. He said the color of skin made no difference with Republicans and they voted for you. Smith has received confirmation from GOP headquarters in Columbus.

Mr. Baird did not say so, but Smith said, "I later learned from another delegate that it was the idea of delegate Tom Baird and candidate for State Representative in Butler County. This, once more shows that Mr. Baird acts without racial or religious prejudice as he has always done.

Smith further said, "Baird deserves to be elected, not only because he is fully qualified, but because he acts on merit and not color."

In receiving this honor, Smith said he was mindful of what the Republican Party was expressing—Equality and Justice for All Americans regardless of color, race or creed.

Republican Party Due To Vanish

From the outcome of the election last Tuesday, the letters GOP no longer means Grand Old Party; now means Going Out Party.

The Republican Party will only be a name in our history books as are the Federalist, the Know Nothing, the Whigs, the Barn Burners, the Constitutional Union, the Peoples, the Greenback, the Populist, the Free Silver, the Bull-Moose, the Progressive and many others.

The Republican Party met the same death as the Whigs. The Whigs couldn't elect anyone president except an Army general. They couldn't elect Henry Clay or Daniel Webster, but they did elect General Harrison and General Taylor, and General Taylor like General Eisenhower did not carry Congress. That is General Eisenhower's second term he did not have a Republican Congress.

The Whigs tried again in 1852 to elect another general, but the American people wouldn't fall for it again. They didn't elect General Scott.

In 1856 the die-hards from the Whig Party along with the leftovers from the other minor parties met in Jackson, Mich., and organized a new party. They copied the name that Thomas Jefferson used for the Democrat Party. He called the Democrat Party the Republican Party, so they used his name and the Republican Party was born.

In 1860, the Democrat Party split between Stephen Douglass and John C. Breckinridge, so the Republicans went in with Abraham Lincoln. This put them in office for 68 years until 1932, although Grover Cleveland and Woodrow Wilson each served eight years.

In 1930 the Republicans lost Congress and in 1932 they almost died but they came back. In 1946, after 16 years, they elected a Congress, but that only lasted for two years. Then in 1952, as did the Whigs in 1840 and 1848, they found a general, and again the American people elected him and he carried Congress. They ran him again in 1956 and this time, like General Taylor, General Eisenhower did not carry Congress; and last Tuesday, they died altogether.

Talmadge Accuses GOP Of NAACP 'Surrender'

FORT PAYNE, Oct. 8 (AP)—Sen. Herman E. Talmadge (D., Ga.) tonight accused the Republican Administration of surrendering its dignity to the NAACP and of repeatedly failing the nation.

Referring to Supreme Court rulings against racial segregation and administration measures to enforce the decrees, he declared:

"This administration has delivered the worst blow to constitutional government in the entire 182-year history of our republic."

The Georgian was a speaker for a big Democratic rally here.

Touching further on the racial issue, he said in his prepared address:

"Only recently, we have seen the Republican Chief Justice and members of the Supreme Court fly back from their vacations merely to satisfy the demands of NAACP lawyers. We have seen the Attorney General of the United States, the Solicitor General—and even the President — surrender their dignity, their logic and their reasoning powers upon the prodding of these NAACP lawyers."

In a general denunciation of the Republican leadership, he said:

"This administration has been one of waste, extravagance, special privilege, high interest rates, high taxes, runaway inflation, tight money and ever-mounting debt."

It has failed the nation, he asserted, in national defense, on the economic front, in aid to farmers and in other vital respects.

Talmadge also took a verbal shot at the national leadership of his own Democrat party. He declared that neither it nor the GOP has demonstrated "that brand of two-fisted, hard-hitting, honest leadership we must have to save our country."

Invited to the party rally were such top-flight Alabama leaders as Sen. John J. Sparkman, Gov. James Folsom and Rep. Albert Rains.

Secretary Weeks Quits; Strauss His Successor

WASHINGTON (AP)—A change of command at the Commerce Department was announced by the White House Friday.

Secretary of Commerce Sinclair Weeks has resigned, and President Eisenhower has appointed Adm. Lewis L. Strauss, former chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, to succeed him.

Weeks, 65, was a Boston industrialist before entering the Cabinet at the beginning of the Eisenhower administration in 1953. Strauss, 59, is said to be a Wall Street investment banker.

The Commerce Department was created in 1913 to foster and develop the foreign and domestic commerce of the United States, including its mining, manufacturing, shipping and fishing industries and its trasportatio facilities.

The Weather Bureau, Patent Office, Coast and Geodetic Survey, Maritime Administration, National Bureau of Standards, Bureau of Public Roads, and Census Bureau are all divisions of the commerce department.

Weeks will leave his post not later than Nov. 10. In an Oct. 22 letter to Eisenhower, he said he was resigning reluctantly "and only because of pressing business, personal and family considerations, which seem to me to make it imperative that I return to Boston and my interests there.

"Please be sure, both during your remaining two years as President as well as thereafter, that if I can serve you in any way, you have only to call upon me," Weeks added.

The President expressed regret at Weeks' departure.

"Dear Sinny:" he wrote in an Oct. 23 letter made public by the White House. "I am indeed sorry that your departure . . . is now so imminent, but I appreciate that you have already put off this unhappy event for quite some time, much to my benefit and the administration's."

Eisenhower then called on Strauss to carry on the job. He gave Strauss a recess appointment which will enable him to take over as soon as Weeks leaves. When Congress convenes in January the Senate will be asked to confirm the appointment.

Strauss may run into some opposition there, although he probably will be confirmed. He was often a center of controversy as AEC chairman. He made many friends in Congress while heading the AEC but also some powerful enemies. For a time he feuded with Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D-NM), vice chairman of the Joint Committee of Atomic Energy, over the issue of clean vs. dirty bombs.

He also got into hot water with some Congress members during the Dixon-Yates controversy. This involved an AEC contract with private interests to build an electric power plant at West Memphis, Ark. The government later canceled the contract.

POWELL SAYS G.O.P. TRIED TO 'BUY' HIM

Tells Ministers Bid to Gain His Backing Was Made by 'National Figure'

Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. charged yesterday that the Republican party had attempted to purchase his endorsement of the Republican state ticket.

"An effort was made through a national Republican figure, so I could be pretty well off if I chose to," he told a meeting of Baptist ministers.

Powell, who is also a Baptist minister, addressed the annual meeting of the Greater New York Baptist Ministers Conference at his own Abyssinian Baptist Church, 138th Street near Seventh Avenue. Representative Kenneth B. Keating, Republican candidate for United States Senator, had also been invited to address the group. He left the hall before Mr. Powell entered.

'I Will Name Names'

The Representative made the charge in an aside from his prepared speech. "If they deny it," he said, "I will name the names and dates where they sent people to me."

Mr. Powell described the national Republican Administration as "immoral, unjust and a travesty upon our American way of life" for having moved swiftly in the recent bombing of a synagogue in Atlanta but having done "nothing concerning the bombing of seven churches" in Montgomery, Ala.

Mr. Powell also accused the Republican party in New York of issuing a leaflet in Spanish that promised Puerto Rican voters welfare relief "within twenty-four hours upon arrival in New York City." The leaflet also promises, he said, a subway fare lowered to 10 cents and no eviction by a landlord when tenants are behind in their rent without "two months' rent free."

He said the promises were in direct opposition to statements in English by the Republican candidates.

Mr. Powell, who has both the Republican and Democratic nominations, also briefly swiveled his political shotgun in the Democratic direction during his talk.

In another aside, he told how, since becoming associate campaign manager for the Harriman ticket, he had removed a "discriminatory" condition at Democratic campaign headqaurters in the Shelton Towers Hotel. He abolished the terms "Negro division" and "Puerto Rican division," Mr. Powell said.

"Now," he said, "names of the men in the office appear," but that is all. He added that there was now full integration on the campaign staff.

Weeks Resigns Commerce Post

Strauss Named To Cabinet Spot

WASHINGTON, Oct. 24 (UPI) —Commerce Secretary Sinclair Weeks resigned today for business and family reasons. President Eisenhower immediately named former Chairman Lewis L. Strauss of the Atomic Energy Commission to succeed him.

STRAUSS

Weeks, 65, stepped down with "great reluctance," effective not later than Nov. 10. He said it was imperative that he return to his Boston business interests. The President, in a "Dear Sinny" letter, accepted the resignation with "keen regret" but full understanding.

Strauss, one-time secretary to former President Hoover, was one of the nation's leading investment bankers prior to World War II service in the Navy and his first appointment to the AEC in 1947. A Republican, he retired last June 30 after a five-year term as AEC chairman.

Strauss' nomination may draw some fire in Congress. He bowed out of the atomic commission after prolonged wrangling with such Democrats as Sen. Clinton P. Anderson (D., N. M.). The Democrats accused him of not pushing construction of atomic power fast enough.

Strauss, who has been serving as the President's special assistant on atoms-for-peace affairs, will take over the Commerce post on an interim appointment until his nomination is considered by the Senate Commerce Committee, now headed by Sen. Warren Magnuson (D., Wash.).

Weeks' resignation left only three members of the original Eisenhower cabinet which took office with the President in 1953. They are Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, Agricultural Secretary Exra T. Benson and Postmaster General Arthur E. Summerfield.

Adams to Quit Soon, Capital Sources Hint

Job in Industry Believed in View For Ike's Aid

BY CHARLES LUCEY.
Star-Howard Staff Writer.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—The status of Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams was seen by informed sources here today as shifting toward increased likelihood he soon will leave the government.

A job in private industry was believed a possible next step for the New Hampshire ex-governor who has been at Gen. Eisenhower's side since he took the Presidency neary six years ago.

The reason for his departure would be chiefly political.

Between now and Nov. 4 election day, Republican Senate and House candidates all over the U.S. will have to take a stand on the issue of Mr. Adams' relationship with Boston industrialist, Bernard Goldfine.

Many GOP office-seekers will repudiate Mr. Adams. Some, such as Sen. William F. Knowland, now seeking the California governorship, already have urged that he resign.

Difficulty Foreseen.

If Mr. Adams remains in the White House it would be increasingly embarrassing and difficult next year for him to do business with some GOP leaders who have said he should get out.

After disclosure in early summer of the extent of the Goldfine generosities to Mr. Adams, the belief was widespread among Republican leaders, including some most friendly to the President, that the hard facts of politics would force out the so-called "assistant President."

Gen. Eisenhower stood staunchly by his right-hand man, acknowledging maybe he had been "imprudent" but winding up by insisting he needed him in the White House.

Weeks passed and there was growing belief the President and the ex-governor had decided it would be possible to ride out the storm. Mr. Adams was keeping his own counsel, characteristic of him, and apparently sought no advice from outsiders.

Another Post Doubted.

But the matter has been revived in recent days. Those who should know say the chief executive now may be less convinced than formerly of his aid's indispensability.

For Mr. Adams to take another significant government job would not solve much of anything politically. Presumably, top Republicans still have sufficient connections in the business world to see to it that Mr. Adams—if he goes quietly—will be well placed. Ironically, before the storm broke six months ago the quiet little New Englander virtually could have named his own salary if he had chosen to enter private business. Perhaps he still can.

There is speculation now that if Mr. Adams goes his job will be split between two persons. The role Mr. Adams has played has been rated one of the most powerful ever filled by a nonelective official.

3 Mentioned.

Three most prominent in speculation as his successor are United Nations Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, Secretary of Interior Fred Seaton and Maj. Gen. Wilton B. Persons, long a key White House figure and for years before that an Eisenhower military friend and aid.

There could be a clue in the U.S. Senate election in Maine on Monday as to the real political strength of the Goldfine issue. U.S. Sen. Frederic Payne, Republican seeking re-election, also is an old Goldfine friend. He is opposed by Democratic Governor Ed Muskie and the Goldfine issue has been one of the unknown factors in the campaign.

But some professing to know say the Adams decision does not depend on this.

Text of President's Speech at Baltimore

BALTIMORE, Oct. 31 (AP)—Following is the prepared text of President Eisenhower's address at the Fifth Regiment Armory here tonight:

Fellow Americans:

We are now in the last days of a political campaign that will—among other things—determine the complexion of the Congress for the next two years.

This campaign is a continuation of the effort that we undertook six years ago in the cause of good government.

I pledged then that if elected, Republicanism would bring sane, progressive and honest government to America.

We have done exactly that.

But our work is not complete.

That's why I'm here tonight.

I want to talk to you here and to other thoughtful citizens across the nation about good government—and how to keep it.

Here, in Maryland, this means re-electing your able Senator, Glenn Beall, who has steadfastly supported this Administration—it means electing your courageous soldier statesman Jim Devereux—it means re-electing Congressmen Ted Miller and Dewitt Hyde—it means electing a Republican team here and across the nation.

End of Term Cited

Now, many have wondered why I have been traveling across America these past weeks urging the election of Republicans, knowing that my own official responsibilities will, in two years, come to an end.

It is because of my deep belief that America needs the honest, efficient and progressive kind of government that for six years has given us a sound, expanding economy—a national defense—modern and strong—and above all, a nation at peace and steadily striving to bring a just and lasting peace to the world.

If we are to continue sound and forward-looking government, I believe there is only one way to do it.

That is through the Republican party.

I am convinced that it is the only political instrument thatt can give us sensible, united and progressive leadership in America.

Here are some of my reasons. First, the record.

Do you remember back six years? Just recall these important circumstances of those times:

Our troops were fighting in Korea.

Our economy was shackled with odious price controls.

During the prior administration, the cost of living had gone up 50 per cent.

Peace Since '53 Noted

With respect to these things, we can now happily say:

"Since 1953 Americans have fought nowhere in the world.

"We promptly eliminated the stifling Federal controls over our economy.

standstill the rapid dilution of

"We fought to a practical our dollar and have since held the rise in living costs to an average of less than 1½ per cent a year."

Continuing the record:

In the 1952 campaign I spoke of the need for a sound, expanding economy—an economy based on peace-time prosperity, not war-inspired. Today personal income is at an all-time high—wages are higher and their purchasing power greater—housing is booming—and all in peacetime.

Here is a telegram just received from the Secretary of Commerce. In part, he says, "I have just received the most recent figures on new construction activity. They make it clear that October sets an all-time high and that the construction industry will reach the $50,000,000,000 mark in 1958."

In 1952 we promised to do something about giving every American citizen an equal right to register and vote his convictions in elections. For many years this subject had been talked about—nothing was done!

Points to Civil Rights Law

Today a law to that effect is on the satute books—the first major piece of civil rights legislation in eighty-two years. We are steadily moving toward the goal of equality of opportunity in our country.

We have reorganized and modernized our defense establishment. Our defenses are the most powerful in history.

We are busily engaged in the construction of a gigantic road system which will build more than 40,000 miles of superhighways.

We gave the American people the largest tax cut in history.

We created a new Department of Health, Education and Welfare—a new space agency. A new air safety agency, which will be born tomorrow.

Small business has been encouraged and helped.

More than 250,000 excess positions have been eliminated from the Federal payroll—an annual saving to the taxpayer of $1,000,000,000 a year.

Social security and unemployment insurance have been expanded.

These are but a few of the achievements of the past six years—of a Republican administration.

Over that period we have experienced remarkable advances in prosperity.

Downturn Is Recalled

Of course, none of us will forget that we had a downturn in the economy a year ago.

Such pauses in economic progress are inevitable in the operation of a free economy. But the job before all of us, and particularly upon government, is to make certain that their effect is minimized both as to intensity and duration.

Now what did the political free spenders, of whom we see so many in one wing of the opposition, have to offer on this downturn?

First they tried to frighten all of us—including themselves.

They said we are plunging dangerously into a depression.

One Senator of this radical persuasion said last winter that the recession was "rapidly growing into a full-fledged depression."

But he didn't frighten a Government that kept its eyes glued on the good of all Americans.

One "gloom-doggler" — a Senator—actually said that the recession was—and I am quoting exactly — "planned, premeditated and predesigned [by] this Administration."

My friends — to such a statement here is my personal reply.

I never have—and never will—be guilty of the crime of preplanning, premeditating or predesigning the misery of my fellow Americans.

Apparently these men of little faith thought that the Administration would panic. It did not.

Sees Sensible Programs

We instituted practical, sensible programs. Previously in this compaign I have detailed what these helpful programs were and how rapidly and effectively they worked. They were programs designed to give a timely assist to those in need and to give a helpful hand to the economy until recovery could take hold.

The extremists, on the other hand, wanted to indulge in wholesale reckless Federal spending.

Their extravagant expenditure programs would have undermined the economy and thus endangered the jobs of 64,000,000 Americans already employed. Happily much of this effort was blocked both by sturdy Republican opposition and by my vetoes.

Today every economic indicator proves that our Republican faith in the economy was right.

We are moving ahead. Recovery is on the march. All across America things are good. They get better every day.

Of course the free spenders hoped to make a popular political issue out of last winter's recession. How miserably they failed!

Problem on Farms

Then, the opposition thought they had another issue—the farm issue.

But here, too, they ran into a bit of a problem.

The trouble here was that the farm economy has prospered and that standards of living on America's farms are at an all-time high. The faces of farmers look happier than they have in years.

So, my friends, once more the opposition fell flat on its face.

Then the opposition thought it had a sputnik issue. Again they tried the tactics of fright. They said that our technology and our missile programs lagged woefully behind the Soviets.

One opposition Senator spoke mournfully about the chances of "our isolation, submission or destruction."

Again the political charge broke up on a fortress of facts. The American people were not to be fooled.

This is what happened. For eight years between the end of World War II and the start of this Republican Administration not more than $1,000,000 was spent in any one year on the long-range ballistic missile program.

When the Administration was first inaugurated, we found that, in this crucial area, practically nothing had been done.

Started Missile Study

One of my first acts was to start an exhaustive study by some of the country's leading scientists on this subject. Some months later this study was completed and on the basis of scientific recommendations we gave missile research and development the nation's highest priority.

Thus, more than two years before the word 'sputnik' was even mentioned, the Defense department was applying maximum effort on such programs, in talent, in time and in money.

Today—not merely $1,000,000—but hundreds of millions go into missile programs annually.

Today America — and all the world—knows that in less than four years we are rapidly closing the gap that we inherited. In satellites, sputniks have been matched by Explorers, Vanguards and Pioneers.

In another important area—civil rights—the opposition party found itself hopelessly without an issue.

In this area, the Democrats have been too busy battling with each other to have any time left for the rest of the nation.

Sees Civil Rights Split

Here I refer specifically to the sharp and publicized disagreement over civil rights between the chairman of their own National Committee and the chairman of their Senate Campaign Committee.

In sharp contrast to this stalemate stands the constructive and reasonable Republican record in providing equality of opportunity to all citizens.

Actually—what does the opposition party really offer you?

The answer—both sides of every issue.

Their spokesmen stand squarely on both extremes of almost every important question in America:

States rights against centralization in Washington.

Fiscal conservatism against radical spending.

Pro-civil rights against anti-civil rights.

And so down the line.

The Democrats are split down the middle. Their gyrations to overcome the hopelessness of their position reminds me of an old verse that goes something like this:

"To promise, pause, prepare, postpone;

And end by letting things alone."

Fellow citizens, for progressive and effective government—we need Republican control of both the Congressional and Executive Branches of our Government. This need is underlined by the evidence that in the opposition party the spending wing is seeking desperately to dominate the American political scene.

Now I've said this before—and most of you Republicans, discerning Democrats, and thoughtful independents have probably said it too.

But I say again that we need to stage a persistent and aggressive fight against reckless spending and inflation.

Effects on Inflation

Never forget — inflation hurst everybody. It strikes most cruelly at the aged, the retired and the white-collar workers whose salaries rarely keep up with hte cost of living.

Labor, business and Government must all work in harness to curb the wage-price spiral and oppose useless Government spending, both of which create inflation. And inflation, we never forget, eats away our savings and shrinks the values of our pensions and insurance policies.

In this fight Republicans will never rest.

Beyond this—many things remain to be done.

America is prosperous: the economic record of the past six years is unparalelled. The recent recession is rapidly fading into history. But so long as men and women who are willing to work—especially those with families to support—remain unemployed, we must never cease striving to eliminate the causes.

We must deal with this problem both directly and indirectly.

Every man re-employed helps to build the general prosperity.

'Must Oppose Duplication'

Since a worker out of a job is hurt, not helped by further diluting the dollar, which jeopardizes the employment of 64,000,000 other workers in the United States, we must oppose inflation and all of its causes.

Looking ahead, we will continue to seek equality of opportunity for all citizens, irrespective of race, color, creed or geography.

We will continue to practice efficiency, economy and integrity in Government.

We will:

Push reasonable legislation to redevelop economically impaired areas.

Undertake needed tax reforms.

Stand for sound fiscal management.

Help our working men and women drive racketeers and hoodlums out of the American labor movement.

In this we must have, and welcome, the help of labor and business leaders, the rank and file of unions, and civic-minded citizens everywhere.

shall press for legislation to make this possible.

And, finally, with all other Americans, we will continue to strive to bring a just and lasting peace to the world.

And now, with the election just four days off—a final thought.

Self-Portrait of Nation

Remember, each election results in a kind of self-portrait of America.

We want a portrait that will reflect the hopes and aspirations of all thoughtfull Americans for sound, sensible and progressive government—a government ever ready to surmount any crisis and meen any test of spirit.

My friends, if this is what you want—and I believe that Republicans, independents and like-minded Democrats do—then, do not blur the result.

Within each Congressional district, of course, some issues will tend to be of greater local concern than others. This is inevitable in America, where diversity is one of our sources of strength.

But I emphasize that the conflict of local interest must not be allowed to blunt the force of vigorous and sound leadership, at all levels of government, in the national interest.

Our party is a national—not a sectional, not a class, not a special interest, but an all-interest party.

Keep it that way by making crtain first:

Urges All to Vote

That you, yourself, vote on Nov. 4.

And next, by devoting your time, your efforts, your self, both before and after the election, in winning support for this cause.

And now to the women of America I want to make a special appeal. In most places, voting day is still a working day. This means that normally women will have a greater opportunity than men to carry on activities that will bring maximum support to their candidates. Relying on the proven dedication of American women to good government, I look to them confidently for their vigorous help at the polls.

The goals before us are:

Full security for our nation.

Good government for America.

Prosperity and opportunity for all our people.

And a just peace in the world.

President Attacks 'Confederate' Slur

Special to World-Telegram and Sun.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 15.—President Eisenhower today led off angry condemnation of synagogue bombings by characterizing those responsible as hoodlums of the Al Capone and Babyface Nelson type.

Speaking out vigorously at his news conference against the Peoria, Ill., and Atlanta synagogue blasts, the President said he would make certain that facilities of the federal government were available when requested by state and local law officials.

Gen. Eisenhower also assailed anti-Semitic terrorists who have identified themselves in anonymous phone calls as members of a "Confederate Underground." He said it was an insult that they should describe themselves as part of the Civil War Confederacy, which the President said he had been taught from babyhood to revere.

The President spoke after Bernard Kennedy, Peoria police chief, had ruled out anti-Semitism as the cause of yesterday's bombing of the Anshai Emeth Temple. Chief Kennedy said the blast was the work of a mentally deranged person.

In New York a spokesman for the Anti-Defamation League said today that the synagogue bombings shattered a long peaceful period during which there have been few incidents growing out of organized anti-Semitism.

"At the moment we don't see any real connection betwen the Atlanta and Peoria incidents as we did see between the Atlanta and Peoria bombings in Nashville, Jacksonville and Miami," spokesman for the educational arm of B'nai B'rith, the worldwide Jewish service organization, said. "There were four bombings in all plus three abortive attempts at this sort of violence.

"This latest (Peoria) one looks like the work of a crackpot who has been reading accounts of the previous bombings. There have been no past actions in Peoria which would lead anyone to expect that incident.

"We believe that during the past 10 years organized anti-Semitism, which leads to this sort of thing, has been at its lowest ebb since the days of Hitler. This (the bombings) is a revival of such feelings, which you can expect when you get a tension situation like that in the South. That is the cover for these fellows," the ADL official said.

The connection between the bombings and the school integration disputes in the South were spelled out by Henry Edward Schultz, ADF chairman. He said that extremists were taking advantage of the "tension situation" growing out of integration moves to launch a wave of violence against southern Jewish communities many of which have "lived peacefully in the South since colonial times."

"None of the rabbis of the bombed temples have been identified with the integration movement," Mr. Schultz said. "So it can hardly be argued that these are spite bombings connected with integration activities. The segregation issue just provides an excellent cover."

President Puts More Work on '59 Program

Polishes Message After Seeing In New Year at Farm

By GARNETT D. HORNER
Star Staff Writer

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Jan. 1. —President Eisenhower began the New Year today with some more work on the "Top priority" program he will urge on Congress next week for action to strengthen America against the menace of growing Soviet power.

The President plans to outline the program in a streamlined state-of-the-Union message he will deliver personally before a joint session of the Senate and House a week from tomorrow.

He has been working on the message off and on since he came to his country home near here last Friday afternoon. He is expected to return to Washington tomorrow afternoon.

This was a relatively quiet New Year's Day for the President, described as feeling fine and in good spirits after five days away from his White House desk.

He and Mrs. Eisenhower saw the New Year in at midnight with a group of friends they had to dinner at their farm home.

Message to Be Short

White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty said there was no other work on the President's schedule today except polishing of the state-of-the-Union message.

This message will be much shorter than usual. Mr. Hagerty said it probably would take no more than half an hour to deliver. In the past such messages usually have run an hour or more.

It is being abbreviated this year, Mr. Hagerty said, in order to stress matters that Mr. Eisenhower considers "top priority" for immediate action by Congress.

The usual detailed outline of the bulk of the President's legislative program in the domestic field will be reserved for the budget message, scheduled to go to Congress January 13, he added.

To Review U. S. Strength

He explained that the state-of-the-Union message will concentrate on an analysis of America's strength in the world today and recommendations for action to increase that strength.

Proposed boosts in military spending, primarily on a stepped-up missile program, are expected to bring the 1959 fiscal year budget to a record peacetime high of about $74 billion.

But Mr. Hagerty said the President expects the budget to be in balance and hopes for a "slight surplus," with taxes continuing at present rates.

Mr. Eisenhower gave "tentative final" approval to the budget yesterday in a conference at his farm home, Mr. Hagerty said. He reserved final decision on two or three matters, pending further conferences in Washington Friday with Secretary of Defense McElroy.

Ask $18 Millions

By LOUIS LAUTIER

WASHINGTON (NNPA) —In one of the biggest claims ever filed by a colored lawyer against the United States, Perry W. Howard is seeking to win some $18.5 million for his clients.

The GOP national committeeman from Mississippi and former government lawyer is representing Henry M. Garson and his late brother, Murray V. Garsson.

In a petition filed in the Court of Claims in 1954, the Garssons assert that they developed certain novel and unique designs and processes for the manufacture of war material.

The petition adds that the designs and processes were developed at the Government's request and that the Government used the devlopements without paying for their use.

BESIDES SEEKING a judgment of $18.5 million, with interest, the petition asks judgments in four other claims with the amounts to be determined by the courts.

Based upon alleged savings to the Government in the use of the methods, processes and engineering developments of the Garssons, the petitioners are claiming $17.5 million.

The brothers claim they designed a unique tail assembly for the "fire bomb," so that these bombs could be safely dropped from airplanes in clusters.

They allege that the tail assembly made it possible for the "fire bombs" to be used effectively in the Far Eastern theater, particularly over Japan.

BASED UPON the number of these bombs that were manufactured, the Garssons claim that the reasonable value of their invention is at least $1 million.

They are also asking for undetermined amounts for Government use of a powder drum, the steel bomb nose of the magnesium incendiary bomb.

A method for hardening the fuse used as a component part of the armor piercing 75 millimeter shell, and for the invention of a high-explosive, armor-piercing 4.2-inch shell.

BETWEEN MAY, 1941, and Jan., 1942, the petition states that Henry M. Garsson developed processes and designs for the manufacture of the 4.2-inch chemical moter shell.

The Chemical Warfare Service, it is alleged, adopted the processes and designs, effecting a saving of over $14, a shell, and put the shell into mass production.

It is further claimed in the petition that the Government produced over 12 million 4.2-inch chemical morter shells between 1941 and 1942 through the use of the engineering developments.

* * *

HENRY M. GARSSON is a mechanical enginnering graduate and is a member of various professional engineering socetes, including the National Society of Professional Engineers.

Also he is a member of the New York State Association of Professional Engineers and the American Society of Tool Engineers.

From 1941 to 1946, he was a member of various "integrating committees," operating with the War Department and rendering engineering services to the Federal Government.

Associated with Mr. Howard in the case are Louis R. Mehlinger and John A. Shorter Jr.

ILL WITH HEART AILMENT

President's Older Brother Dies at 71

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 26 (AP)—Arthur B. Eisenhower, 71, older brother of President Eisenhower, died at his home late today.

He had been in ill health with a heart ailment for some time since his retirement from a post with a Kansas City bank.

Arthur Eisenhower was vice chairman of the board of the Commerce Trust Co. when he retired in 1956. He later suffered a heart attack.

During his banking career he gained a national reputation in flour and grain finances.

He formerly was a director of Trans World Airlines, the Coleman Co. of Wichita and a number of corporations.

Eisenhower joined the Commerce Trust Co. 53 years ago and in 1934 became its executive vice president and a director.

In Washington the presidential press secretary, James C. Hagerty, said President Eisenhower had been informed by the family of Arthur's death.

Hagerty said there would be no word from the White House tonight on whether the President would attend the funeral, nor would there be any statement from the President. The Chief Executive is four years younger than the deceased.

Arthur was most recently in the news in connection with a legal battle with his first wife, Alida, over alimony.

Arthur and Alida were married in 1906 and divorced in 1924. In 1925 Arthur remarried. Mrs. Louise Eisenhower survives.

Last December, Arthur's alimony payments to his first wife were reduced by court order from $350 a month to $175.

At the hearing on his request for a reduction, Mrs. Louise Eisenhower, his present wife, testified that his income was only $500 a month from retirement annuities. She said she took care of him and managed their affairs. She also testified she owned their six-room home in a Kansis City suburb.

Truman Lays 'Hate' Violence To Weak Leadership by Ike

BOSTON (AP)—Harry S. Truman said Thursday night that President Eisenhower sidestepped his "moral responsibility" to back the Supreme Court's school integration decision and permitted a wave of violence by "crackpots and extremists."

The former President cut loose at his Republican successor in the White House for what he described as failure to exert "the proper leadership" at the "proper time" in the last four years.

"The President has never told the nation that he believed the Supreme Court's decision was morally right," Truman said in an address prepared for delivery at a Democratic fund-raising dinner.

"He has carefully avoided stating his views on the subject.

"For three years, the administration stood aside, while the opposition in some parts of the country gathered its strength. Only when there was outright defiance of the courts by a sovereign state did the President move into action. That was too late. The opposition to law had solidified and the poison of hate had already spread."

INTEGRATION ISSUE

The 74-year-old Democratic warhorse wound up his national campaigning for party nominees for Senate and House with a firm declaration of his own "unequivocable" position that the Supreme Court decision is not only the law but that "it is morally right."

Truman spoke out in the face of bitter difference within his own party and the threat of a Democratic revolt in some Southern states over the issue which has closed some Little Rock, Ark., and other Southern schools.

He said it was not enough for Eisenhower to "deplore" the "83 instances of bombings of schools, homes and religious institutions traceable to the desegregation conflict."

"MORAL RESPONSIBILITY"

The President, Truman added, "has a moral responsiblity in this matter" and "must exercise active, affirmative leadership."

Truman said Eisenhower exercised that kind of leadership and "won his fight" when he got a four-year extension of the reciprocal trade agreements program through education of the public and effective persuasion of Congress.

"If he had fought as hard for civil rights," Truman added, "we would have a lot less trouble today."

The occasion for the address was a testimonial dinner for 35-year-old Edward McCormack, a nephew of Rep. John McCormick (D-Mass), House majority leader. The young McCormack, now serving as interim state attorney general, is a candidate for election to that post.

CRASH MIXUP CORRECTED

Perry Howard Still Has Washington Pull

Daily News 12-17-58

By HOWARD SUTTLE
Daily News Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Two automobiles, their drivers obviously in a hurry, collided with a crash in Washington, a few days ago.

Amiably enough, the driver of one — a Cadillac — expressed his regret to the driver of a smaller car which figured in the mishap.

The two men exchanged business cards. They agreed that the matter should be ironed out and the minor damage to both cars should be settled between their respective insurance companies.

The owner of the Cadillac suggested the other driver telephone him the following day to complete arrangements for a conference with insurance adjusters.

And on the following day, Col. James Norcross, owner of the smaller car, took from his wallet the business card that had been handed him by the driver of the Cadillac. The card read:

"Sam Pryor, vice president, Pan-American World Airways."

Norcross telephoned Pan-American, asked for Pryor.

"Mr. Pryor is in Europe," the colonel was advised.

"He must have been called away suddenly?" queried Norcross.

"Why, no," came the answer "He's been away about two weeks.

The colonel, who had recorded the license tag number of the Cadillac, then checked with the District of Colombia auto license division.

Sam Pryor, the Pan-Am executive, was not the registrant.

The owner of the Cadillac was listed as Perry W. Howard, the Negro who holds the nominal title of Republican National Committeeman for Mississippi, but who has no voice in federal patronage in the Magonolia State.

Colonel Norcross telephoned Howard. Perry, of course, apilogized. It was "all a mistake."

It developed that the veteran Negro GOP leader had earlier received a card from Pryor, and had inadverdently placed it in his own card case.

When the crash occurred, Howard, obviously without looking at the Pryor card, passed it on to Norcross. It was apparent that Howard thought he had given the colonel one of his own business cards.

The mistake was corrected, and the case was settled amicably.

Although Perry has little power over Republican politics in Mississippi, it was obvious he still has "pull" in Washington.

His license tag carries one of the "low numbers," usually issued to persons on the D. C. "VIP" list. The tag number on Howard's Cadillac is 263.

Negroes Asked To Vote Against Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) Val Nash, [illegible] Republican National Committee, said today a Democratic Congress has nothing to offer Negro voters.

Washington, a Negro, said in a statement that a vote for a Democratic candidate for the Senate and House in the coming election is a vote to return segregationist Southern Democrats to positions of power as committee chairmen.

Noting that Southern Democrats hold the chairmanships of eight important Senate committees and 13 of 19 House committees, the committee official said:

"This Southern domination of a Democrat Congress means that Negro voters are voting against themselves and their vital interests when they case a vote for any Democrat congressman or senator.

"Because of the seniority rule if Negroes help elect a Democrat—even in the North—they are helping the Southern Democrats keep a stranglehold on committees which control what happens in Congress."

Washington said if Republicans control the next Congress it will make small potatoes of such Southern Democratic senators as Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, James O. Eastland of Mississippi, Richard Russell and Herman Talmadge of Georgia and what he called their "wrecking crews."

on this issue. Mr. [Paul M.] Butler [Democratic National Chairman] may hand the Southern Governors their walking papers, but it seems obvious that Southern Senators and Congressmen are not going to walk away from control of Congressional committees which deal with the integration problem.

The aim of the Eisenhower Administration is a positive one: To open the full doors of opportunity to all and to assure good schooling, job opportunities and rising standards of living for all our citizens.

We do not recognize first-class citizenship and second-class citizenship. We do not want rights and privileges for some and only burdens and discrimination for others.

The people of New York can further the realization of this objective by electing Ken Keating to the United States Senate. The cause of civil rights had no more effective champion in the House of Representatives than Ken Keating. The team of Ken Keating and Jack Javits will not be surpassed by any two Senators from any state of the Union in the articulate, devoted and effective work they will be able to do in behalf of the great objective of equality of opportunity for all Americans.

Civil Rights Query Sparks Nixon Ire

FLINT, Mich., Oct. 27 (AP)—Vice President Nixon angrily rejected today a suggestion that the Eisenwhoer administration is not moving forward on civil rights.

Nixon campaigned across Michigan for hard pressed Republican candidates after a blowup at a Minneapolis, Minn., news conference in which he covered a broad range of political issues.

The vice president was asked by a reporter why the administration had not responded to demands made by a youth march group in Washington for civil rights action.

Nixon flared back, eyes flashing and chin jutting:

"I am not going to stand here and take an insinuation that I have refused to discuss civil rights in this campaign. I have made the same speeches in the South that I have in the North.

'Little Job'

"If the Democrats do a little job with (Gov. Orval) Faubus of Arkansas and Gov. (Marvin) Griffin of Georgia, it would be better for all concerned."

The youth marchers, who failed to see President Eisenhower, asked the withholding of federal funds from states which resist the Supreme Court's integration decision, an end to Senate filibusters, federal funds to keep open integrated schools, and a law making dynamiting of public bildings a federal offense.

Nixon dismissed the news conference with an emphatic "thank you, gentlemen, that is all," without mentioning these demands.

In a much more affable mood, the vice president asnwered questions on this broad range of topics:

GOP control—He was not consulted about a statement of Rep. Patrick J. Hillings (R-Calif), an old friend, that Nixon will take over control of the Republican party immediately after the November election.

New Leaders

He doesn't subscribe to tha idea, Nixon said. He believes it development of new leaders—an obvious reference to Nelson Rockefeller, GOP new-face candidate for governor of New York.

Knowland-Knight — Mrs. Helen Knowland's letter saying that Gov. Goodwin J. Knight ducked out of a contest with Sen. William Knowland for the GOP California gubernatorial nomination because of a "macaroni spine" represents only a wife's deep affection for her husband.

Election day — Polls which indicate a Democratic landslide is imminent represent a "dangerous measure" of voting prospects "because they are based on conditions 10 days ago and not now."

Radical Democrats — He and Eisenhower will continue to use that term in attacking opposition candidates. Nixon said the "radical" description is used only in contrast to the conservative label applied by Democrats to Republicans.

NIXON IS ANGERED BY RIGHTS QUERY

Denies He Has Not 'Spelled Out' His Stand—Makes a Swing Across Michigan

By RICHARD E. MOONEY
Special to The New York Times

FLINT, Mich., Oct. 26—Vice President Richard M. Nixon campaigned across Michigan today in the second day of a swing through eleven states in the East and the Midwest.

In answer to a question at a a press conference before leaving Minneapolis this morning, he angrily denied that he had not "spelled out" his position on civil rights.

The Vice President declared that he had presented his views on civil rights many times, even in the South, so much that newspapers often did not report them "because it is no longer news."

He then challenged the Democratic party to "do a little job with "Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas and Marvin Griffin of Georgia, both foes of integration, and said, with visible anger:

"I will not stand here before this fine group of newspapermen and take an insinuation that I have refused to discuss civil rights. That is all, gentlemen. Thank you very much."

Appears on Television

His day had started two and a half hours earlier with an appearance on a N. B. C. television program, when he was told a network survey showed the Democrats would sweep the Senate.

He went from the studio to a Republican breakfast.

The press conference followed. Before the civil rights question there were several based on points of friction within the Republican party.

He was asked about the recent letter by Mrs. William F. Knowland, wife of California's Republican gubernatorial candidate, in which she attacked the state's Republican Governor, Goodwin J. Knight, who is running for the Senate.

He said this represented only a wife's deep affection for her husband.

He was asked about the statement by his close friend, Representative Patrick J. Hillings Republican of California, who said that Mr. Nixon would assume the mantle of leadership of the party on the day after election.

Mr. Nixon said he had not been consulted on Mr. Hilling's statement and did not subscribe to the idea.

He was reminded of the words—socialization and nationalization," which Republican leaders used in a statement three weeks ago to describe the threat of a Democratic victory, and was asked if he were going to continue to call the opposition "radical Democrats."

He said he would continue to use the term "radical."

Speaks at College

Mr. Nixon flew from Minneapolis to Battle Creek, where he spoke at a rally in the Western Michigan University gymnasium. This evening he spoke at a fund-raising dinner speech in Flint, and followed this with a half-hour television and radio talk over a state network.

At Battle Creek, he chatted about baseball and football with students who crowded around him and shook hands through the window of his car as it drove through the campus.

Battle Creek and Flint were scheduled to bolster the re-election bid of Senator Charles E Potter, who is running against strong labor opposition in a state hit hard by the recession.

Mr. Nixon said that the Michigan races "present one of the most clear-cut examples in the nation of the choice which confronts the voters."

He said: "In Michigan, the Democratic party has become a captive of the radical wing of that party."

In his speeches, he discussed labor, politics and rackets.

He said that labor leaders had the same rights as business and other leaders to participate in politics, "but labor leaders and business leaders are one thing; labor and business dictators are another."

Of labor rackets, he said: "I have found that no group in the country is more interested in cleaning the racketeers and chiselers out of the labor movement than union members themselves."

Mr. Nixon also said that Michigan "has not shared as it should in the unprecedented progress and prosperity which the nation has enjoyed in the six years of the Eisenhower Administration."

He said that Michigan rated fortieth among the forty-eight states "in new manufacturing job gains since 1949."

The difficulty is that the state government, which is Democratic, "is driving jobs out faster than Potter can bring them in," he said.

BROWNELL BACKS DISABILITY PLAN

In Speech Here, He Urges Measure to Provide for an Acting President

By RUSSELL PORTER

Herbert Brownell Jr., former United States Attorney General, urged the bench and bar yesterday to support prompt Congressional action on Presidential disability.

He endorsed President Eisenhower's proposal for a constitutional amendment under which the Vice President would become acting President upon a declaration by the President or his Cabinet of the President's inability to perform his duties.

Mr. Brownell spoke at a luncheon meeting of the judicial section of the State Bar Association at the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. He said the question of Presidential disability was the country's most serious constitutional gap.

Under the Eisenhower plan, he went on, if the President declared his inability in writing, the Vice President would become acting President for the period of inability. Thereafter, whenever the President declared his ability to act, he would resume his duties. Mr. Brownell said this procedure would probably cover most cases of inability.

If the President were unable or unwilling to declare his inability, the Vice President could become acting President on written approval of a majority of the Cabinet, according to the plan. The President could reassume his duties whenever he declared in writing that his disability had ended.

Impeachment Possible

"In extreme cases where a President might endeavor to act although clearly unable to do so," said Mr. Brownell, "the present constitutional provisions for impeachment appear to be adequate."

Mr. Brownell opposed a proposal that the decision on a President's inability be made by an executive-legislative-judicial commission with medical advisers. He also opposed a proposal to handle the problem by means of a concurrent resolution or act of Congress without a constitutional amendment.

In a speech prepared for a dinner of the association at the same hotel last night, Gen. Maxwell D. Taylor, Army Chief of Staff, predicted an increase in Soviet "truculence." He said this would result from the exploitation of recent Soviet successes with missiles and satellites.

"We will be called upon to show a cool steadfastness in the face of the missile blackmail and tough diplomacy we may expect to encounter," General Taylor said.

However, he expressed the view that the most probable military threats could be expected in "peripheral" situations short of general warfare. In these situations, he said, the use of long-range missiles and nuclear weapons would not be likely.

'More Likely to Need Pistol'

"The international military policeman is more likely to need his pistol than his nuclear weapon," he said.

General Taylor urged the public not to become excited about the possibility of atomic catastrophe, but to have faith in this nation's power to deter general warfare.

He also warned the nation not to "bankrupt ourselves on excessive expenditures for long-range strategic weapons, continental air defense, dispersion of cities and industry, civil defense measures and population shelters."

"Such a course," he said, "would result in diversion of essential resources which should be provided our deterrent forces to be sure that deterrence will not fail."

Edmund H. Lewis of Syracuse received the association's gold medal award for distinguished service to the bar. The award was presented at the dinner by Clarence R. Runals of Niagara Falls, retiring president of the association. Mr. Lewis was formerly chief judge of the State Court of Appeals.

The dinner ended the association's eighty-first annual meeting.

District Attorney T. Paul Kane of Schoharie County was elected president of the State District Attorneys Association yesterday at a meeting at the Association of the Bar of the City of New York.

Republican Women Will Be Briefed On Domestic Affairs

Henry Cabot Lodge, U. S. Ambassador to the United Nations, and key figures in the Eisenhower Administration will bring a nationwide gathering of Republican women leaders up-to-minute on international and domestic developments.

Ambassador Lodge and Republican Women's National Conference in Washington, D. C., March 16 - 18, Miss Bertha S. Adkins, Assistant Chairman of the Republican National Committee, announced today.

Miss Adkins, who will preside at the Conference, said the plan is to keep the program tied in closely with developments on the international and domestic scene. The sessions will be held at the Statler Hotel.

This will include discussion of Adminsitration proposals to maintain peace and lessen world tension, improve educational opportunities and cope with the problems of changing economic conditions.

Also, the women representatives of Republican Party organizations, Republican Clubs and Young Republicans as well as volunteer workers will be given "short-courses" in campaign techniques to sharpen their effectiveness in working for Republican victories in November.

Negro Outlook

Val J. Washington, director of minority groups for the Republican National Committee, said in a Lincoln Day speech in Indianapolis that many Negroes have turned Republican because of Little Rock and the Civil Rights Bills. At the same time he warned these gains could be wiped out by unemployment, because "a Negro is the first fired and the last hired."

SO . . . This Is Washington

The perennial violet of home rule came up again last week, with chances of its getting to full bloom very little better than in other years when the Southerners on both the House and Senate District committees have killed it.

Nevertheless, the noise made over the Administration proposed bill got perferred news treatment after Sen. Wayne Morse, the intrepid Oregon maverick made a slashing attack on the bill as "unworkable."

He was in complete disagreement with his colleague, Sen. Joseph Clark, chairman of the Senate District committee, who favored the measure as "half a loaf being better than none."

Under the provisions, there would be a territorial form of government with a governor appointed by the President and an elected legislative assembly. The President would have veto right over legislation passed by the assembly if he felt it affected Federal interests.

Morse's principal contention against the present bill is its failure to provide for an elected mayor. In the past three Congresses, the Senate has passed a bill with a mayor provision, but this has been blocked in the House where the District Committee is loaded with Southerners. Morse submitted his own proposal which would have a mayor, a city council, and no presidential veto.

Said he. "There can be no home rule nor democracy in the Capital unless the supreme power of government is in the hands of the people. There is no justification either in principle, fact, or history al rule of the District."

committee will report out one or the other of the bills as soon as possible according to Senator Clark.

Last March when Busia made a speech in Parliament the day before independence was proclaimed in which he praised the British for intelligent guidance of the country towards freedom, he received warm praise from Vice President Nixon for his analysis of enlightened colonialism.

Coincidentally, the Vice President mentioned this again at a press conference in Entebbe Uganda at the government house.

Ike Signs Postal Pay, Rate Hikes

Record Wage Raise Retroactive; New Stamps Out Aug. 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower Tuesday signed into law the biggest postal rate increases ever voted by Congress.

The bill also carries the biggest postal pay increase ever voted. Most postal workers will get approximately a 10 per cent raise, retroactive to last Jan. 1.

Effective Aug. 1, first class letters will require a 4-cent stamp, instead of 3. Airmail will go up from the present 6 cents to 7, post cards from 2 to 3.

OTHER INCREASES

Raises of various size will apply to newspapers, magazines and advertising circulars.

The administration had favored higher rates than Congress voted, and not so large a pay increase.

The Post Office Department operates chronically at a deficit. Eisenhower had asked $700 million more in revenue a year; he got $5 million. He had asked a 6 per cent wage increase costing about $160 million; Congress voted 10 per cent generally, at a cost of $265 million a year.

DISTORTION SEEN

One of Eisenhower's complaints about the postal bill was that while it provides liberal increases for non-supervisory employes, it greatly distorts the pay structure by giving proportionately lower benefits to the high-level post masters, supervisor and technica and professional personnel.

Eisenhower said in a statemen he was pleased to note the bil expresses approval of the depart ment's "badly needed" moderni zation program.

But he expresse regret that Congress did not provide additional revenues the administration requested, to finance that program. He said he hopes Congress will promptly reconsider that matter, so that the modernization program can go forward.

Christmas Card Postage To Rise

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postage on unsealed Christmas cards will be three cents instead of the present two cents under the postal rate hike bill signed Tuesday by President Eisenhower. The change will be effective Aug. 1 for all unsealed third class mail.

Nixon Asks Exchanges With Latin Americans

LA PAZ, Bolivia, May 7 (AP).—Vice President Nixon says he has found on his South American tour "a woeful lack of understanding" of United States economic problems.

Government officials know the score but "we must reach the people," Mr. Nixon told a news conference last night. He advocated increasing exchanges of students and specialists between the United States and Latin America and tailoring United States information programs to clear up misunderstandings which commented on the first half of his 16-day trip before flying today to Lima, Peru. He is scheduled to return to Washington May 15 after stops in Ecuador, Colombia and Panama. He already has visited Uruguay, Argentina, Chile and Bolivia.

There is a feeling in many places that United States aid programs and aid programs have not given as much assistance proportionally to Latin America as they should," Mr. Nixon said.

No Limit on Aid

The feeling exists, he continued, that there should be no limit on what Washington does for Latin America in the way of loans and stabilization of commercial prices. Mr. Nixon said United States officials should "step up across-the-table discussions so that the realities of the situation are laid on the table."

This should include pointing out United States budget limitations on meeting worldwide obligations, the Vice President said.

Many Latin Americans feel United States insistence that private capital must play a leading part in economic development is unrealistic and unworkable, Mr. Nixon continued. The United States is not trying to force its system on other governments, he explained, but there is a sincere United States belief that this is the only effective way the economic resources of those countries can be developed."

Know the Realities

Latin-American government leaders generally know the realities of the situation, Mr. Nixon said, but "I have found a woeful lack of understanding in various important areas." He mentioned university communities, trade union groups and press and radio.

"I would suggest that our exchange persons program be stepped up in the areas I mentioned and our information program must be designed to correct this attitude that does exist," Mr. Nixon declared.

. Government officials in some countries may be willing to seek the most effective means of developing national resources, Mr. Nixon added, but cannot go through with them for lack of popular support. The Vice President apparently referred to nationalist opposition in some nations to allowing foreign companies to develop resources where local capital is insufficient.

VICE PRESIDENT NIXON—SOUTH AMERICAN TOUR
MARINES AND PARATROOPERS DISPATCHED TO CARIBBEAN BASES BY PRESIDENT EISENHOWER

Angry Ike Dispatches Chutists and Marines

By RUSSELL BAKER
(Copyright 1958 by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON—President Eisenhower sent four companies of Marines and paratroopers to Caribbean bases Tuesday night to back up White House demands that Venezuela guarantee the safety of Vice President Nixon.

While the troops were still airborne, White House Press Secretary Hagerty said telephone reports from Caracas indicated that the situation down there has gotten into much better shape" after the mob attacks Tuesday on Nixon, his wife and traveling party.

(Later reports from Venezuela, however, told of continuing anti-American demonstrations.)

A statement by the Department of Defense said the combat-ready troops were being moved "as a precautionary measure" to be used "if requested" in connection with the movement of troop and Dulles had been particularly disturbed by reports from Caracas that when the mob surrounded Nixon's car the security police evaporated from the scene.

This, it was said, was the reason for Dulles' questioning whether Venezuela had "any lack of will or capacity" to protect the party.

Before the President's message was even relayed to the government in Caracas, however, Washington had telephoned assurances that the Venezuelans that it would provide adequate protection, State Department sources said.

FROM MEXICO

In support of the theory that the mob was largely a Communist-led mob, officials noted that the Communists have entered Venezuela many of them from Mexico since the dictatorial regime of Marcos Perez Jimenez was overthrown a few months ago.

At present the Communists are gaining power in the labor unions and in the student segment of the movements climaxed a hectic afternoon of extraordinarily swift and sharp responses to the mob attack in Caracas. All bore the personal imprint of the President, described by some as angered and by Hagerty as "considerably concerned" over the assault on Nixon.

The order to move troops into the Caribbean flowed from the White House after consultations among the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the State Department.

SHARP STATEMENT

It followed a sharply pointed statement to the Caracas government that this country expected Venezuela to guarantee the vice president's safety and wanted "to know about it quickly" if Caracas felt "any lack of will or capacity" to do so.

Scattered congressional reaction to the troop movements Tuesday night was reserved and cautious. Sen. Styles Bridges (R-NH) said, "If these governments can't give protection, the only thing left is to send in America troops to cooperate."

But Sen. Kefauver (D-Tenn) said it only "makes matters worse." He added, "This only hardens positions and gives the Communists a lot to talk about."

CALLED WORST THING

Sen. Smathers (D-Fla) said sending American troops to Latin America was "the worst thing" this government could do.

Latin-American diplomats here were as shocked by the announcement of troop movements as by the reports of the Caracas incidents. The image of Marine intervention in the affairs of Latin America, they said, was one of the favorite propaganda devices of anti-U.S. elements.

Among several diplomats interviewed, all agreed that the move would be widely exploited for propaganda purposes by the Communists.

Chairman Richard Russell (D-Ga.) of the Senate Armed Services Committee told reporters:

"To my mind this shows the failure of our present foreign policy which is predicated on dollar aid. I assume Secretary of State Dulles now will use it to ask for increases in the hope that we will be able to buy friends who respect our flag and our citizens."

The troop elements involved are two companies of the 101st Airborne Division from Ft. Campbell, Ky., and two companies of Marines from Camp Lejeune, N. C. Altogether they total about 1,000 men.

To move the paratroopers — soldiers from the same division that was thrown into Little Rock, Ark., last fall during the school integration difficulty — the Air Force used its new high-speed C130 turboprop transports, which fly at 330 miles per hour.

(The C130 Hercules is produced at the Marietta plant of the Lockheed Aircraft Corp.)

The Marines were being flown south by the Navy. The Defense Department at first refused to announce their destinations. Later it said the airborne troops were flown to Ramey Air Force Base in Puerto Rico, and the Marines to the American naval base at Guantanamo, Cuba.

OFFICIAL STATEMENT

The official statement said:

"As a precautionary measure, two companies of airborne infantry and two companies of Marines are being moved to certain United States bases in the Carribbean area. The movement is being undertaken so that these troops will be in a position to cooperate with the Venezuelan government if assistance is requested.

State Department sources made it clear, however, that the Venezuelan government had not been given advance notice of the movements or consulted on whether they felt the need for armed assistance from the United States.

Late Tuesday afternoon, after the troops were en route, Hagerty said the White House had reports from Caracas that "there was quick action" after this morning's violence "and that there were heavy security forces placed in the vicinity of the embassy."

The day's events made it certain that a major reappraisal of U.S. policies toward Latin America will take place when Nixon returns.

While there is general acceptance here of the explanation that Communists have been active in the demonstrations that have marked Nixon's tour, there is also considerable support for the argument that Latin America has some valid complaints against Washington.

AWARE OF FEELINGS

Before the Nixon trip, the government was aware that feelings were running high against U.S. policies in the area, and some thought was given to sending Secretary of State Dulles on a similar goodwill tour.

The violence to which Nixon has been subjected has evidently dramatized the trend, however, and made this capital more conscious than it has been in years of the urgent problems in its own hemisphere.

Ironically for the administration, the mob attacks occurred on the very eve of the House of Representatives vote on President Eisenhower's foreign aid authorization bill.

Critics of the foreign aid program cited Tuesday's news dispatches on the House floor to argue that the program had not only failed to win friends for this country but had failed to stop a deterioration in its international position.

ROCKS AND BOOKS

A typical comment came from Rep. Howard W. Smith (D-Va) who observed, "We send our goodwill ambassadors and they throw rocks at them; we send them our books and they burn our libraries."

President Eisenhower and Dulles were lunching at the White House with the prime ministers of Finland, Denmark and Norway when the President received first reports of the Caracas incident.

After the meal he drew Dulles aside and the two talked about 20 minutes.

Shortly afterwards Dulles called Venezuela's ranking diplomatic representative here—Enrique Tarchetti, counselor of embassy—to the State Department.

All that followed, Hagerty made explicitly clear, was at the President's direction.

Tarchetti arrived at the department at 3:30 p.m. The ambassador, Hector Santaella, was in Venezuela for the Nixon visit. Tarchetti was closeted 25 minutes with William P. Snow, acting assistant secretary for Latin American affairs.

Then Dulles joined them for about five minutes. When he emerged, he stated:

"I said, speaking on behalf of the President, that the United States expects authorities in Venezuela to take every possible measure to give the protection to the vice president which is appropriate to a person of his stature, who is an invited guest of the government.

WANT TO KNOW

"If there is any lack of will or capacity to give that, we would like to know about it quickly." Tarchettia apologized personally to the secretary and said the incidents did not reflect the Venezuelan national attitude toward the United States.

State Department officials said ruling junta, these sources report.

Officials also noted that an organized attack of this sort against a foreign visitor was virtually unknown in Latin America, where punctiliousness and propriety are esteemed above all.

TROOP MOVEMENT

The public dispatch of 1,000 marines and paratroopers to Caribbean bases in reply to the outrageous attack in Venezuela on Vice President and Mrs. Nixon could not do anyone any good and seems certain to do the United States harm.

Naturally the instantaneous American reaction to the cowardly and inexcusable assault on Mr. and Mrs. Nixon is one of anger and resentment at the gross humiliation and physical danger to which these representatives of our country were subjected in the streets of Caracas. But emotional impulses are no guiding lines for the conduct of a great nation's foreign policy; and the well-advertised airborne troop movement Tuesday afternoon had all the earmarks of just such a response.

President Eisenhower explained the decision at his press conference: "We knew nothing of the facts. We could get no reports from the outside, * * * and not knowing what was happening, and not knowing whether the [Venezuelan] Government might not want some aid from us, we simply put it at places where it would be available in reasonable amounts and in bases that were well within the American zone. * * * The idea was only in the case they [the Venezuelans] would want to ask it."

This is a reasonable statement, but it ignores the psychological and historical context in which our relations with Latin America must be conducted. News of United States troops moving southward conjures up in every Latin mind instant recollections of the bad old days of "intervention" and of "dollar diplomacy," the very things we have labored so hard for so many years to erase from Latin-American memories. The marines—shades of Nicaragua and Haiti!—and paratroops were not going to intervene except at request of the Venezuelan Government; they did not intervene; they remained in American bases; and their whole mission was as far removed from colonialist interventionism or dollar diplomacy as it could possibly be.

These are the facts, but will the world—particularly the Latin-American world—recognize them? The Communist and other anti-American propaganda mills will never cease pointing to this incident as an example of alleged American militarism and military-mindedness. Long before the troops reached the Caribbean the Nixons were safely inside the American Embassy in Caracas. If something even more serious had occurred in the streets, the soldiers would have got there too late to be of any use. In any event, if they were to be sent to the bases, they should have been sent quietly.

The Venezuelan Government was extremely remiss in failing to provide adequate protection for the Nixons, who were its guests; but the United States did not add to its prestige by making this publicly threatening and futile gesture.

VICE PRESIDENT NIXON

Ike Lauds Nixon's 'Courage'

Has 'Brought You New Respect'—Message

By WILMOT HERCHER

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Eisenhower gave Vice President Nixon a long-distance pat on the back Friday for the way he faced a howling mob in Lima, Peru.

In a personal message to Nixon, the President said "your courage, patience and calmness in the demonstration against you by radical agitators have brought you new respect and admiration in our country."

The State Department assured Peru the United States "does not intend to let these Communist-inspired incidents impair the friendly relations between our two countries."

PERU VOICES REGRET

The statement was issued after Miguel Grau, minister-counselor in charge of the Peruvian Embassy here, called at the State Department with a note expressing profound regrets.

On both sides there appeared to be an effort to put as good a face on the incident as possible.

Students stoned and spat on Nixon and his American party when they appeared at San Marcos University in Lima. One stone grazed Nixon's neck and another struck a U.S. Secret Service man in the mouth.

In his message to Nixon, forwarded to Quito, Ecuador, Eisenhower treated the whole matter with restraint.

NO U. S. PROTEST

Lincoln White, State Department press chief, told newsmen that U.S. Ambassador Theodore C. Achilles had called at the Peruvian Foreign Office in Lima. White said Achilles had no instructions to lodge a protest but would handle the situation as he saw fit.

White noted, however, that official regret had already been volunteered by Grau in Washington and by the Peruvian government to Nixon while he was still in Peru.

At a formal meeting with Wilson P. Snow, acting assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, Grau said the disorder, during which a floral representation of the American flag was desecrated, was caused by Communists directed from abroad.

BLAMES COMMUNISTS

He saw the incident as an attempt to upset relations between the United States and Peru and to create an international as well as a domestic problem.

Grau said the Communist party in Peru is small but has been quite active recently.

"American public opinion may rest assured that this most unfortunate incident is no indication of the real feelings of the Peruvian people toward the United States of America and the noble cause she is striving for, Grau said.

There was one discordant note amid the day's diplomatic exchanges. Some one deposited a paper bag at the door of the Peruvian chancery. Inside was a rock and a note in Spanish suggesting it ought to be used on Nixon.

SENATOR'S COMMENT

Sen. John Sparkman (D-Ala) commented that the treatment accorded Nixon in South America illustrates how badly U.S. relations with the nations there have deteriorated. He said it was regrettable that Nixon had to experience it.

"It indicates that communism is beginning to gain a substantial foothold in several South American countries," Sparkman said.

In another statement from the Senate, Sen. Mike Mansfield of Montana, the Democratic whip, commented Nixon for his courage and dignity.

He called the Lima incident outrageous but said "the net result may be a strengthening of the already firm ties of friendship between our two countries and between this country and Latin America as a whole."

U.S. Expects to Take New Look at Nixon Europe Trip

Any Discourtesy Might Engender Ill Will

By JACK BELL

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Eisenhower administration may take a new look at Vice President Nixon's proposed European goodwill tour in the light of rowdy demonstrations that greeted some of his Latin American appearances.

Nixon has planned tentatively to visit European capitals on a friends-making mission late this summer. There is a likelihood his schedule would include some iron curtain countries, but not the Soviet Union.

However, the question now has arisen whether the good will he might engender abroad would outweigh the American resentment if Nixon were greeted with the kind of Yankee-Go-Home displays the Communists are said to be able to organize in some Western European countries.

UP TO PRESIDENT

Sen. Mike Mansfield (D-Mont), a Senate Foreign Relations committeeman who denounced Nixon's treatment in Latin America, said it appears to him only President Eisenhower can decide this issue.

"I have no doubt the Communists could organize hostile demonstrations in several countries," Mansfield said. "The President will have to take this into account in deciding whether Nixon should undertake the trip."

Sen. George D. Aiken (R-Vt), also a Foreign Relations committeeman, said in a separate interview he thinks resentment in Congress toward the treatment given Nixon is likely to be reflected in consideration of the foreign aid and reciprocal trade bills.

HELD AFFRONT TO U. S.

He and Mansfield agreed that the affront was to the United States, not Nixon personally, and thus was more serious than if a lower-ranking official had been involved.

However, Aiken said he believes Nixon would be less likely to meet hostile treatment in Europe, and it might be interpreted as a sign of weakness if the European trip were called off.

"I think he will get a better reception behind the Iron Curtain than he got in Peru and some other countries," Aiken said. "I believe the people of those countries look to us as one of the hopes for freedom.

"On the other hand, the Western European countries certainly ought to be better equipped than some of our Latin American neighbors seem to have been to cope with Communist demonstrations."

GRIEVANCE SEEN

Sen. John Sherman Cooper (R-Ky), a former ambassador to India, said he isn't so sure that the hostile displays in Latin America were entirely Communist-inspired.

"It seems to me they represent evidence of open and continuing animosity toward this country and its policies," Cooper said. "This is more than just a Communist show. I think it represents some deep-seated grievances.

"Perhaps the Latin American countries feel that we have been too preoccupied with Europe and Asia and have forgotten our closest friends. They undoubtedly resent some of our policies.

"These demonstrations certainly point up the imperative necessity of passage of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act without all of the restrictions that have been proposed to it."

The U. S. At Fault, Not Nixon

Vice President Nixon acted with courage, intelligence and dignity in Lima, Peru, on Thursday when he faced a mob of shouting, stone throwing students. And every American should understand that neither the shouts nor the stones were aimed at Nixon personally but rather at the United States which he represents.

Perhaps, as the United Press intimated in its story of the ruckus in Lima "Communist students" pricipitated the trouble at ancient San Marcos University in Peru. Clearly, however, if Communists stirred the trouble, American failure to continue in understanding action its Good Neighbor policy in this hemisphere made the atmosphere in which the stone-throwing occurred.

Indeed, four days before this trouble occurred a conservative Republican editor, John S. Knight, wrote in The Detroit Free Press of the situation in Peru in an article on Nixon's task to secure "a wiser Latin American policy." And he added:

Pedro Beltran, publisher of Lima's La Prensa, told me recently that Peru has two submarines and is negotiating with the United States to get two more.

"What we need," said Beltran, "is not submaries, but housing."

But instead of assistance for housing, the U. S. sends Peru a new consignment of jet fighters. The jets are being furnished under a common defense pact.

No one in Washington can explain just what common enemy Peru is supposed to ward off.

Now it is apparent that instead of warding off any enemies with the aid of Peru and other Latin American nations, we are making enemies there.

The fault is not Nixon's. This is his second trip to South America. It is reported that after earlier trips both he and the President's brother, Dr. Milton Eisenhower, suggested sensible policies to serve our nearest neighbors. They have been disregarded. Now come the shouts and stones.

Vice President Nixon behaved admirably in Lima but no visitor from the U. S. can effectively help this country in Latin America unless it is ready to serve and serve intelligently our closest neighbors, who even in this time, are our most necessary friends.

Nixon Finds New Protests In Colombia

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — Vice President Richard Nixon ran into another flurry of anti U.S. demonstrations Sunday on the next-to-last stop of his South American tour.

There was a rousing welcome from thousands of Colombians when Nixon's plane landed in Bogota, but police cavalry charges were required later to break up two protest demonstrations.

The first incident occurred outside Nixon's hotel. Police headed off an apparent student plan to pelt him with coffee beans, but about 200 students in a crowd of 2,000 managed to jeer and hoot. They were driven off by mounted police with drawn sabers.

The second incident erupted later as Nixon was about to place a wreath at the foot of a statue of South American liberator Simon Bolivar. While a military band was playing the Star Spangled Banner and the Colombian national anthem, one part of the crowd began shouting: "Nixon, No! Out with Nixon!" and "Down with Yankee imperialism."

Mounted police charged again. hTere were no casualties.

A crowd of about 1,000 persons was on hand for the ceremony in the plaza. It was estimated the anti-Nixon faction was made up of about 80 youths, some in their early teens. Their leader, seized by police, was a man of about 40.

The large majority of the crowd countered with shouts of "Viva Nixon" and "Viva the United States."

Nixon remained unperturbed and smiling during the incident.

Shortly before Nixon reached the plaza, officials rubbed off an "Out with Nixon" slogan that had been lettered with lipstick on the base of the Bolivar statue. Police said 10 persons were arrested in front of Nixon's hotel and two were taken into custody at the plaza.

Nixon later met for more than an hour with President-elect Alberto Lleras Camargo at Lleras' home.

Nixon congratulated Lleras on the new period of political stability he said Colombia is entering. He added he is sure the country will enjoy superb leadership in the coming years.

Nixon recalled Colombia's participation in the Korean War, and said the United States feels a special friendship for this country.

A crowd applauded when Nixon and Lleras shook hands as the vice president was leaving.

Nixon Is Greeted Warmly In Quito

Ecuadorians Ask Loans Amid Talk Of S. American Red Net

QUITO, Ecuador (AP)—Vice President Richard Nixon got a warm and orderly reception here Friday. He also received a list of proposals involving U. S. loans or grants ranging up to three million dollars said.

Ecuador's Vice President Francisco Illingworth, Quito's Mayor Carlos Andrade Marin, and commanders of Ecuador's armed forces officiated at military honors for Nixon on his arrival by plane from Peru.

U. S. Ambassador Christian Ravndal was among those who greeted Nixon on the sixth stop of his South American good will tour.

Prior to his arrival, a scheduled roundtable conference with Ecuadorean students and labor leaders was cancelled. The cancellation followed the demonstration in Lima Thursday when stones and spit greeted Nixon at San Marcos, Peru's oldest university.

The Peruvian students had kept up a running series of demonstrations ever since Nixon's arrival Wednesday.

Sources close to Nixon said he might abandon his custom of visiting leading universities to talk with students in countries he visited.

Soon after arrival Nixon saw Ecuador's President Camilo Ponce Enriquez and Federico Intriago, minister of economic development.

The minister gave Nixon a list of projects proposed for U. S. Aid. This country has been much less severely hit by inflation than most of South America. Intriago said his projects will help Ecuador work for a sane and stable economy.

Ponce told a news conference after his talk with Nixon that two Iron Curtain nations recently offered to build match plants here and exchange industrial goods for Ecuador's farm products.

Ponce said Communist country missions are ranging the continent with economic aid offers. One unidentified country was reported to have received a Soviet offer of a 100-million-dollar loan "at an unbelievable rate of interest," Ponce said.

The President said "An incredible number of Communist agents use passports of friendly nations to travel around South America. I believe there exists . . . a secret postal system, a network, to deliver instructions and considerable amounts of money to Communist party members."

Ponce warned that the United States must act to eliminate the possibility of the Soviet Union moving in on South America.

He said if the Soviet Union establishes a beachhead in Latin America the United States would suffer a gigantic blow.

Nixon's Girls Plan To Enter Private School

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President Nixon's two daughters, Patricia and Julie, are going to a private school here this year instead of returning to public school. Like the District of Columbia schools, it enrolls Negro students.

Patricia, 12, graduated last June from the Horace Mann public elementary school, where Julie, 10, also was a student. It has been open to Negroes since the Supreme Court's school integration decision but none was enrolled there last year.

Sidwell Friends, the private school in which the Nixon girls have been enrolled, also admits Negro students.

A spokesman for the Nixons said he assumed they had decided to send Patricia and Julie to Sidwell Friends because they thought it would give the girls the schooling they wanted them to have.

He also noted that Nixon is a Quaker and said he supposed this had something to do with the choice of Sidwell Friends, a Quaker school.

DAVID LAWRENCE Says:

Moscow Is Building Up Kind of World Anarchy

Courier-Journal

WASHINGTON—A different kind of "world war III" than has been heretofore visualized is sweeping four continents—South America, Asia, Europe and Africa.

The Communists have supplied ammunition for the fighting in the Middle East, in Indonesia and in Algeria. They have taken over Egypt and Syria and are threatening to take Lebanon. They now have stirred up spectacular disorders in Latin America.

The Soviet Government is taking advantage of the paralysis of fear and the psychology of self-restraint which prevails in the free world. The net result is that a sort of international anarchy is developing in which small countries as well as big ones are either the victims of revolts engineered by Moscow or parliamentary frustration—as in France—brought about by active and aggressive Communist parties.

Free-World Error

Most of the countries of the free world are not dealing firmly with subversion. Full political rights and privileges are, for instance, granted to organizations which ostensibly are political parties but which have as their basic aim the overthrow of free governments everywhere.

In Venezuela, for example, where Vice-President Nixon and the American flag were subjected to indignities, there is a Communist sympathizer at the head of the Cabinet department which is supposed to direct the police to preserve law and order. The Venezuelan anti-Communists have openly accused him of Communist sympathies.

The whole story of what is happening inside Venezuela has not yet been exposed. A dictator was expelled, and a military junta that included a Communist sympathizer assumed governmental power. It is significant that, after Vice-President Nixon was stoned and hostile demonstrations occurred, the Venezuelan newspapers carried articles telling what happened but for some reason omitted editorial comment. Did this mean that the press was afraid to denounce the disgraceful conduct of the Communists and the Communist sympathizers?

Answer In Moscow

There is nothing to be gained by taking any reprisals against the people of Venezuela or of any other Latin American country where demonstrations hostile to the Vice-President of the United States occurred. The answer to the problem isn't in Venezuela or in Lebanon, where outspoken enmity to the United States has lately been stimulated by the Communists. The answer is to be found in only one place—Moscow—where the orders to stir up the trouble are issued.

What can the United States do in the circumstances? Nobody, of course, wants a nuclear war, and yet the United States cannot engage in appeasement or assume an attitude of indifference. Such a policy usually breeds the very incidents that lead to a shooting war.

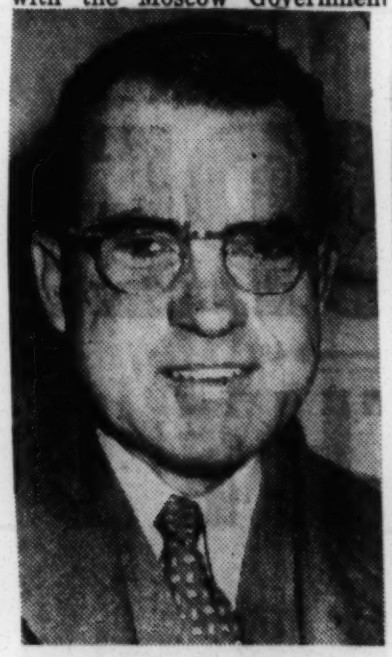
The alternative is for the United States Government to speak out frankly and fearlessly against the Communist conspiracy which is boldly defying the free world. The Moscow Government should be warned that it will be held accountable by free men everywhere for its tactics in promoting internal disorders in other countries and in its planned insults to governments that stand for individual freedom.

Exposure Essential

An essential part of any countermove is full exposure of the wrongdoing of the Moscow Government. There is plenty of information—available through official sources—concerning the infiltration that has been steadily carried on by the Soviet Government in Latin America and in the Middle East. There is no need to use military force, especially since the great and influential weapons of moral force are available.

For one thing, the United States could announce that it sees little reason now to consider any plan for participation in summit meetings with the head of a government that utters promises of peace but clandestinely engages in subversion throughout the world.

The United States could, if it wished to act alone, announce that it is considering a severance of diplomatic relations with the Moscow Government



RICHARD NIXON
Reds led hostility to him

until such time as it is assured that hostile acts aimed at the United States Government are terminated.

There is also the possibility that the United Nations General Assembly might be convened in special session to consider the expulsion of the Soviet Government from that body on the ground that it has violated the letter and the spirit of the U.N. charter, which binds the member nations to maintain a "peace-loving" attitude toward one another. Surely the presence in the U.N. of a nation engaged in a war of subversion against the free nations warrants in itself action of some kind.

All these measures look toward the use of reason rather than military force. The adoption of such an approach would convince the peoples of the whole world—including the peoples behind the Iron Curtain—that they can be assured of an era of peace only if the disturbers of the peace are effectively restrained.

PROBE OF NIXON ATTACK TO OPEN

Senate Group to Try to Find Where Blame Lies

By WILMOT HERCHER

WASHINGTON (AP)—Who was to blame for Vice President Nixon and his wife being stoned and spat upon in South America? A Senate group will try to find out starting Friday.

Sen. Wayne Morse (D-Ore) said his Foreign Relations subcommittee will open hearings to determine, among other things, whether U.S. officials were "ignorant or knowingly undertaking a gamble" in sending Nixon on a good-will tour in the Southern Hemisphere.

Sen. Joseph S. Clark (D-Pa) said he also wanted to know whether it was wise for Nixon to debate issues with students or the tour.

Morse said he thought the United States had suffered a major foreign policy setback in Latin America.

'UNWISE, INADEQUATE'

"What started out as a good-will tour ended in near disaster," he said in a statement.

"The riots crystallized what should have been apparent long before this—our basic policies in Latin America have been unwise and inadequate."

Morse said he proposed to call State Department and Central Intelligence Agency witnesses and ask them what they knew of "the potential for the outbreaks of violence and anti-Americanism" before Nixon started south.

Later on, Morse said, his subcommittee will make a study of "Latin - American discontent with U.S. economic, military and political policies."

"As these countries throw off dictatorships, our relations should improve," he said. "Instead our relations with these countries have degenerated."

VICE PRESIDENT NIXON
SOUTH AMERICA TOUR

The Rock Throwers

To say the least, it is irritating to read of the reception accorded Vice President Nixon by a crowd of Communist-inspired lardheads in Lima, Peru. Mr. Nixon is in Peru on a good will mission as an official representative of our own Government. He is entitled to adequate police protection from the rock throwers, and the Peruvian authorities should see that he gets it.

At the same time, this incident should be kept in some perspective. For we have our own lunatic fringe. Remember the picture of Wendell Willkie after he had been hit with an egg thrown by some American heckler during the 1940 campaign?

Mr. Nixon knew he was taking a calculated risk of a sort in trying to talk to the students at Lima's 400-year-old San Marcos University. Apparently he had been advised by the Peruvian authorities to stay away. But this was not an easy choice. Would it have been better for the Vice President of the United States to have taken the timid course? Or was it better to try to talk to a hostile student body and a dozen or so rock throwers, who did their work from the rear ranks? All things considered, Mr. Nixon, we think, made the right decision. At least, he is not going to be laughed out of Peru.

Of course, there remains a question as to whether this demonstration in Lima reflects the attitude of the majority of Peruvians, who fear the prospect of higher American tariff duties or tighter quotas on the importation of lead, zinc and copper. If so, someone should tell them that throwing rocks at the Vice President is not the best way to win friends in the United States and favorably influence the American Congress. We prefer to believe, however, that this is not the case—that most Peruvians are like most Americans, and that they have at least as much contempt for the hoodlum element. If this is so, Mr. Nixon's mission, and the manner in which he has handled himself, may yet bear good fruit.

Tremendous Word For Nixon Greeting

Democrats And Republicans Line Red Carpet To Greet Veep, Wife

By ARTHUR EDSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nothing quite like this ever happened here before. For this is a town that can take dignitaries, and especially vice presidents, in stride. Historically, the vice-president has been a governmental nonenity, free both from harm and applause.

But Vice President Nixon and Mrs. Nixon returned from a disturbing, unexpectedly hazardous South American tour. And the reception he got can be summed up in a word: Tremendous.

It wasn't simply that the crowd at the airport was large, or that the road to the White House was well - lined with spectators. It wasn't that the President and the Cabinet officers were there. After all, top - flight Republicans might be expected to show solidarity at a moment like this.

But the Democrats were out in full force, too, and far more senators were lining the red carpet than you'll ever see, except on the hottest issue, in the Senate chamber.

But the picture probably can best be drawn chronologically. Let's look at notes jotted down while waiting for Nixon's plane to arrive.

Got there a full hour before the big moment. Crowd already milling about. Spotted three college boys, Don Turbidy, Pete Healet and Harvey Fry, busily unloading banners and placards from station wagon.

Turbridy said the idea was, if South American students can demonstrate, why can't we?

Turbidy seemed especially pleased with this placard: "Bien dicho, bien hecho, Nixon." Shows the value of a college education, he said. Translation: "Well said, well done, Nixon."

J. Edgar Hoover of the FBI arrived. Bad news for scofflaws, if any. Sight of Hoover a reminder to look around for Secret Service men. Spotted several. Remembered the old days when vice presidents could walk abroad unguarded.

Less than 10 years ago Vice President Barkley said he didn't want any Secret Service man to protect him. And Thomas R. Marshall, Wilson's vice president, told a cop watching over him: "Your labor is in vain, nobody ever was crazy enough to shoot at a vice president."

Senators began arriving. Noticed one important difference between this and other airport ceremonies. This one far more impromptu.

The Air Force plane pulled up. Usually there's some fussing around inside before alighting. Nixons hurried down the ramp. President and Nixon girls both raced in to meet the travelers. It was close, but neutral observers agreed this was one race Eisenhower didn't win.

Only one political note in the whole performance. As the parade went down Constitution Ave. an onlooker waved this placard:

"Sticks and stones won't hurt Dick, but a Democrat will."

Ike Fails To Get Kiss; 'Fears' Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Dick still carries a wallop," President Eisenhower chuckled in shying away from a congresman's suggestion that he collect a kiss from Vice President Nixon's wife.

The suggestion came from Rep. James Fulton (R-Pa) as Nixon and his wife, Pat, arrived Thursday at the airport from South America.

As Eisenhower and the Nixons made their way through the crowd, Fulton called to Mrs. Nixon: "How about a kiss for the President, Pat?"

Eisenhower grinned, looked at the vice president's wife beside him, then remarked to Fulton with reference to the vice president: "Dick is here and Dick still carries a wallop."

So—no kiss.

Nixon May Call For Shuttle In Latin American Diplomacy

By The United Press

WASHINGTON, May 17. — Vice President Richard M. Nixon, fresh from mob violence in Latin America, feels United States diplomats there have been spending too much time in the drawing rooms of rulers and the socially elite, and not enough with the ordinary people, it was disclosed Saturday.

It can be reported on high authority he returned from his trip convinced the United States must start devoting more attention to aspirations of the masses if it is to stave off growing communist influence south of the border.

Contact With Workers

One of his major recommendations when he reports to President Eisenhower will be that United States diplomats increase their contacts with students, labor leaders, teachers and intellectuals.

In too many countries, the Vice President has told friends, United States diplomacy is still geared to the old idea of dealing with ruling groups and mingling with the wealthy.

The time has come, he feels, to get diplomatic contact work by the State Department, the United States Information Agency and other American representatives out of the social echelon and into the work rooms and the classrooms.

He believes Latin America is a top priority objective of the communists and they are concentrating mainly on wooing labor leaders and the so-called intelligentsia. But he feels the communists have not yet made major inroads among the Latin American masses.

Support Anti-Reds

The Vice President also was reported greatly concerned about the thorny issue of United States dealings with Latin American dictatorships.

He believes this country must support effective anti-communist regimes — which in some cases are those of "strong men" —but at the same time must not appear to be trying to keep or to put dictators in power.

Mr. Nixon, in a public report expected in about two weeks, will suggest moves to counter the Red threat.

Big Welcome Awaits Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP)—Vice President Nixon flew homeward from his riot-racked tour of South America today to receive a hero's welcome.

President Eisenhower, members of the Cabinet and Congress, government workers and plain citizens arranged to greet him at the National Airport.

Thousands more had a chance to extend their welcome, along a motorcade route from the airport to the White House, to the man who was stoned in Lima, Peru, and attacked by mobsters in Caracas, Venezuela, during an official good will tour.

Eisenhower sounded the keynote of the welcoming ceremonies when he told his news conference Wednesday that "because of my admiration for his calmness and fortitude and his courage in very trying circumstances, I would like to make some special gesture."

Senate Democratic Leader Lyndon B. Johnson of Texas announced he would be on hand to greet the vice president along with other members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

5,000 'INVITED'

Arrangements were made for 10 buses to take members of Congress and congressional staff employes to the airport. The Republican committee for the District of Columbia issued invitations to 5,000 Republicans to turn out.

Since Nixon had particularly been the target of student attacks during his turbulent visit to Latin countries, a motorcade of buses and cars from Washington area universities was organized to go to the airport.

Eisenhower also authorized federal departments to release government workers so they could go to the airport or line up along the parade route.

Even before Nixon's arrival, the House unanimously adopted a resolution commending him for his "courageous and dignified conduct," during the series of South American incidents.

Nixon left Venezuela Wednesday night—about eight hours ahead of schedule. He arranged a stopover at San Juan, Puerto Rico and dinner with Gov. Luis Munoz Marin.

His departure from Caracas, kept secret, was uneventful after troops cleared the streets of traffic and bystanders.

Ike to Meet 4 Negro Leaders

Wash. Post
Wash. D.C.

United Press International

President Eisenhower will meet with four Negro leaders at the White House Monday to discuss school integration problems, the White House said yesterday.

Press Secretary James C. Hagerty reported on arrangements for the meeting after Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-N.Y.) scooped him on the announcement and said the meeting was "my idea."

Hagerty, however, said the meeting had been requested by the Rev. Martin Luther King, president of the Montgomery (Ala.) Improvement Association. King, who led the Negro boycott of Montgomery buses because of seating segregation, is scheduled to attend the White House meeting.

Powell, who is under indictment for income tax evasion, was not among those scheduled to meet with the President. A "tentative" date for them to get together has not been kept since the President made it last September.

Powell's office listed Monday's participants as King; A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters; Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Lester Granger, executive secretary of the National Urban League.

Hagerty said the meeting would be attended by Attorney General William P. Rogers and White House staff members Fred Morrow and Rocco Siciliano. Morrow, a Negro, is an administrative officer. Siciliano deals with minority groups and civil service problems.

Powell said he and the three other Negroes in Congress would send a letter to the participants suggesting "points that must be considered at this conference in addition to those which the Negro leaders will broach."

Ike Silent On Negroes' Racial Plea

Little Rock Ruling Called 'Green Light' To Lawless Defiance'

WASHINGTON (AP)—Four Negro leaders took word to President Eisenhower Monday that a court order delaying school integration in Little Rock, Ark., outraged their race. They said they got a sympathetic reception but no promises.

The spokesmen told Eisenhower that Saturday's ruling by U. S. Dist. Judge Harry Lemley, postponing integration 2½ years, "is being construed rightly or wrongly, as a green light to lawless elements in their defiance of federal authority."

Specifically, they urged Eisenhower to direct the Justice Department to file a brief against the decision when it is appealed.

OTHER REQUESTS

The four also laid before Eisenhower other requests for action in the fields of integration and civil rights. Neither on the Little Rock ruling, nor on any of the other points, they said, did Eisenhower make any pledges or commitments.

But they said that out of their 45-minute conference with the President grew a little bit better understanding of Eisenhower's position and a bit better understanding of their position on his part.

"I should say," A. Philip Randolph of New York, told reporters "that the conference has put a new hope into the hearts of Negroes throughout the country."

IKE 'GRACIOUS'

Randolph, president of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and a vice president of the AFL-CIO, called this the most important accomplishment of the meeting.

Randolph said Eisenhower was "gracious, friendly, kindly, cooperative and sympathetic," even though he made no comment whatever on Judge Lemley's order deferring integration and took no positive stand on the various requests put to him.

Lester B. Granger, executive secretary of The National Urban League, said the program presented to the President was not something on which he should reach his decisions in a brief conference. He said it would have been injudicious had Eisenhower said immediately that "I will do this or that."

The others present were Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, and the Rev. Martin Luther King, who led a Negro boycott of Montgomery, Ala., buses.

So they urged:

ASKS PROCLAMATION

1. That Eisenhower proclaim to the nation, before schools open in September, "that the law will be vigorously upheld with the total resources at his command."

2. That a White House conference be called to discuss methods of obtaining peaceful compliance with court integration rulings.

3. That government agencies supply information, resources and advice to all communities and officials seeking to solve school integration problems.

4. That the President appeal to both political parties to support civil rights legislation which would include a provision, rejected last year, to spell out more power for the U. S. attorney general to enforce all civil rights. Foes said the section would permit use of troops for enforcement.

5. That a presidential directive go to the Justice Department to file a brief as a friend of the court in an appeal from the Lemley ruling and to provide "all legal assistance possible."

6. That Eisenhower also order the department to "protect the right of citizens to register and vote," so that thousands of Negroes will not be denied the right to cast a ballot in the 1958 election."

7. That he issue a third presidential order to the department to act against "murderous brutality directed against Negro citizens in Dawson, Ga., and other communities" and against a "wave of bombings of churches, synagogues homes and community centers."

8. That Eisenhower recommend that Congress extend the life of the new Civil Rights Commission from two to three years to "counteract the deliberate hamstringing" of its activities.

9. That the President make clear by statement and act that he believes federal money should not be used to underwrite segregation, in the fields of education, hospitals, housing or any other federal grants to states and communities.

At the request of King, the meeting was set up last Thursday, two days before Judge Lemley's ruling.

Actually, the conference had been in the making since last September, when mob violence broke out in Little Rock and Eisenhower sent in federal troops to protect Negro students.

Eisenhower apparently wanted some of the heat to disappear before talking with Negro leaders.

Negroes, Ike Will Discuss School Strife

Jackson News
Jackson, Mississippi

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Negro leaders meeting with President Eisenhower at the White House Monday likely will discuss the possibility of violence when more integrated schools open this fall, an informed source said today.

Presumably they will ask the President what he plans to do if violence similar to that at Central High School in Little Rock, Ark., last fall occurs again.

Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D-N.Y.) late Thursday revealed plans for the conference. White House Press Secretary James C. Hagerty later confirmed it.

Four Negro leaders were invited. Powell, who is under indictment for income tax evasion, was not among them. Hagerty said the meeting had been requested by the Rev. Martin Luther King, president of the Montgomery, Ala. Improvement Assn.

Powell said the meeting was "my idea."

A source close to civil rights matters told United Press International the Negro leaders also probably will press for a speed-up in government action in civil rights matters, specifically intensive investigations by the new Civil Rights Commission and Justice Department prosecution in vote denial cases.

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER MEETS WITH NEGRO LEADERS

At The White House

YESTERDAY the President of the United States received a deputation of Negro leaders in the White House, among these being Dr. King. The audience was remarkable in that there are perhaps only six or seven white Alabamians who could hope to get an appointment with the President.

We speculate that probably our two United States senators, Hill and Sparkman, could without doubt see the President and without much delay. Those Alabama congressmen who are committee chairmen or perhaps subcommittee chairmen would have a chance to gain an audience. Other of our congressmen would have to wait a long time. The governor could doubtless win access if he could wait a while.

That, we should say, about exhausts the list. We do not believe that any university president, any judge, editor or minister would have a chance to see the President about race matters despite the fact that they would represent two-thirds of the people of Alabama and about 40,000,000 Southern whites.

We can imagine the President and his colored visitors sagely shaking their heads over what people in other countries think of Little Rock and suchlike. It won't matter what the Southern whites are thinking of the federal government, that the Southern white still pays most of the freight for the colored population and that Southern tax dollars support countries whose citizens want to mind our business.

But apart from these strange circumstances and the vexations, probably the thing that had most meaning in reports on the Eisenhower conference was the fact that the President listened and committed himself not at all.

The President made a grievous blunder at Little Rock, but time and time again his statements have shown that he clearly understands that force and compulsion will not change the Southern white. There are many signs that the country is becoming a little bored with the race tumult and hence more temperate in its attitude towards the South.

Highlights of Eisenhower's Message to Congress

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13 (AP).—Highlights of President Eisenhower's message to Congress today presenting the Federal budget for fiscal 1959, starting next July 1:

Promise and Peril

The time in which we live . . . is clearly a time of growing opportunity. Science, technology and science almost daily open wholly new vistas to all mankind. Yet it is also a time of growing danger.

Red Challenge

The progress of the Soviets in long-range missiles and other offensive weapons, together with their continuing reject of a workable disarmament, compels us to increase some of our defense activities which we have only recently expanded many fold.

"Adequate" Budget

I believe that this budget adequately provides for our Federal responsibilities in the year ahead.

U. S. Still Ahead

Today we possess military superiority over any potential aggressor or aggressors . . . our concern is for the future . . .

Arms Cost

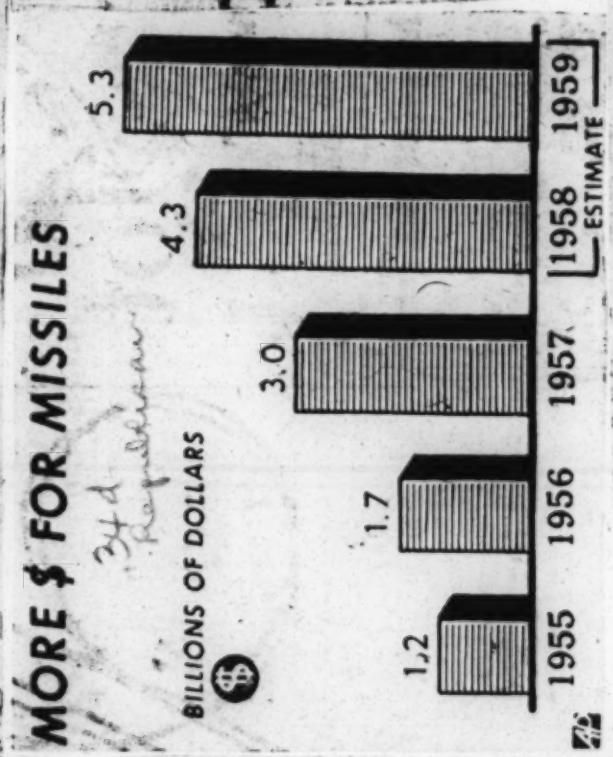
Spending for military functions of the Department of Defense in 1959 is estimated to total $39,800,000,000.

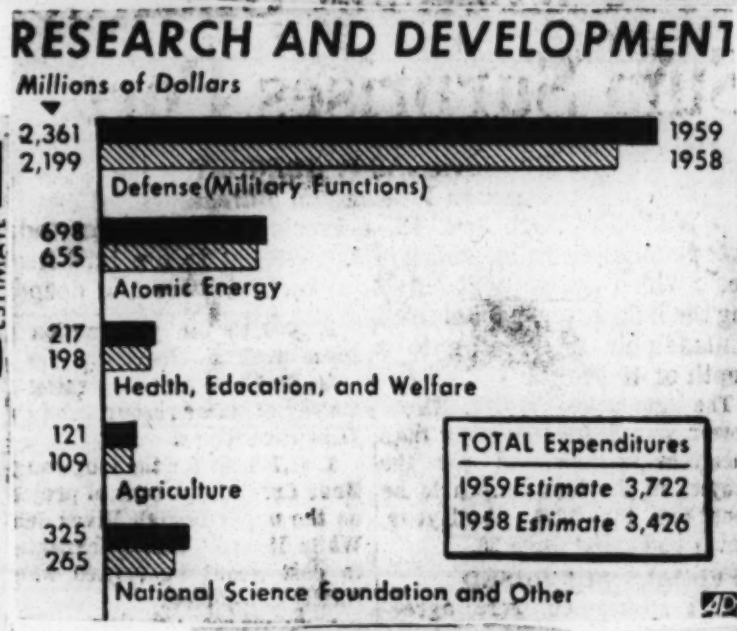
Missiles

The total expenditures for missile research, development and procurement, for guided missile bases, and for missile-related construction will be $4,300,000,000 in 1958 and $5,300,000,000 in 1959, compared with $3,000,000,000 in 1957.

Falling Revenue

The current estimate of receipts for the fiscal year 1958 is somewhat smaller than earlier expectations . . . it now appears that 1958 budget receipts will not exceed $72,400,000,000.





Red Ink Now

A combination of increased defense expenditures and decreased receipts in the revised estimates for the current fiscal year results in an estimated budget deficit of $400,000,000.

Upturn Ahead

There are strong grounds to support my confidence that the expansion of our economy will soon be resumed, bringing higher levels of receipts with present tax rates.

Black Ink in '59

Our best estimate at this time of budget receipts for 1959 is $74,400,000,000. This would produce a balanced budget with a surplus of $500,000,000 in 1959.

No Tax Increase

I believe that we shall be able to do what is required for our defense efforts and meet the basic needs of our domestic programs without an increase in tax rates. To maintain present rates, I recommend that tax rates on corporation income and certain excises, which under existing law are scheduled for reduction next July 1, be extended for another year.

"Breakthrough" Fund

It is essential that we be able promptly to modify and accelerate programs when and as important discoveries or technological developments in weapons indicate such action to be desirable. To accomplish this end, the budget includes a contingency reserve of $500 million dollars for defense purposes only.

Transfer Power

It also proposes that the Congress authorize the President to transfer up to $2,000,000 between appropriations available for military functions of the Department of Defense. This transfer authority is important and I will not hesitate to use it.

Pay Increase

The technical proficiency demanded of military personnel has increased tremendously. Personnel trained at great expense . . . must have greater incentives to remain in service. For present and long-range efficiency and for greater equity, the military pay system must be recast.

Atomic

Expenditures by the Atomic Energy Commission in the fiscal year 1959 will increase to $2,550,000,000, 250 million more than estimated for 1958 . . . These increases reflect our determination both to increase the tempo of progress in achieving a greater nuclear military capability and to press ahead in our successful development of the peaceful applications of atomic energy.

Debt Ceiling

The present limit of $275,000,000,000 (on the Federal debt) is too restrictive in view of rising defense expenditures . . . I will recommend that the present debt limit be revised upward temporarily through the fiscal year 1959.

Tariffs

The Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act should be extended for five years beyond its expiration date of June 30, 1958, with President to negotiate gradu and selective tariff reductions.

Science Training

Instead of general aid for construction of schoolrooms, I am now recommending a broad temporary program of aid to education which is largely science-oriented.

Cost-Cutting

I am also making recommendations to reduce some programs, to curtail expansion in others, and to transfer greater responsibility from the Federal Government to State and local governments.

Housing

I shall recommend legislation to revise ceiling on (mortgage) interest rates and to remove discount controls which now discourage private financing . . . To make the liberal terms of insured mortgages available for for larger and better houses, the maximum mortgage amount on owner-occupied housing should be increased to $30,000.

Closing Bases

As the Department of Defense continues to adopt modern weapons and revised organizations, some (U. S. military installations and basis) will become unnecessary. On the other hand, dispersal of the retaliatory forces will require some additional bases and increased costs.

Foreign Aid

Soviet Ambition poses a threat to the free countries that takes several forms: open armed attack, internal subversion, and economic domination. Mutual security helps to meet all forms of this threat . . . I am recommending . . . expenditures estimated to be $3,686,000,000.

Backlog Of Public Projects Mentioned By Californian Is Designed To Provide Jobs If Needed

By JACK BELL
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Feb. 9.—Senator William Knowland (R., Calif.) said Sunday the Eisenhower Administration is ready to throw a public works program into gear if the business recession widens.

Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) said the time to do it is now.

Knowland, the Senate Republican leader, said he does not expect any Administration pro-goals to increase Government spending unless the economy fails to turn upward by mid-year.

"What is done will depend on developments within the next few months," he said. "The feeling of the Administration is that business will pick up in the mid-year period. But before Congress adjourns the situation will have to be reviewed.

"We have a backlog of public works and reclamation projects that can be used for the purpose of combatting unemployment without resorting to the WPA type of organization."

Branded Boondoggling

The Works Progress Administration under Franklin D. Roosevelt was designed primarily to provide jobs. Some of its projects were criticized as "boondoggling," with little permanent value.

In contrast to this, Senator Knowland said the Administration is keeping tabs on a number of projects that have been approved by the Army Engineers, authorized by Congress and on which preliminary work has been done. He said all that would be needed would be a grant of funds by Congress.

"These are all projects that would add considerable to the health of the nation," he said.

Senator Humphrey, who said he regards the economic situation as likely to become the chief issue in next fall's congressional elections, said the Administration" in [illegible] by [illegible] is the time to move [illegible] he said. "One of the great [illegible] of this Administration is that it always does too little too late. We saw it in rockets, missiles and Sputniks. Now we are seeing it in the economy.

"The President's budget completely ignores the fact of an existing recession. The Administration's budget, high credit and high interest policies have brought the economy to a standstill and threaten to throw it into a depression.

"There are at least five things that could be done immediately: 1. Speed up road building. 2. Pry loose the flood control, reclamation power projects the Administration has blocked. 3. Get on with school construction. 4. Prevent any lowering of farm income supports, and, 5, reverse the credit policies that still are aimed at checking inflation."

McKeldin to Address Harlem Republicans

Gov. Theodore R. McKeldin, R., Md., will address the third annual Lincoln Day dinner sponsored by the United Young Republican Club, a Harlem political group, Thomas G. Weaver, president of the club, announced yesterday. The dinner will be held the evening of Feb. 11 at the Hotel Theresa, Seventh Ave. and 125th St. Among other speakers will be the Rev. Dr. Richard Allen Hildebrand, pastor of the Bethel African Methodist Church. Mr. Weaver, who has headed the club since its establishment in 1956, is head of the Civil Rights Bureau in the New York State Department of Law. The bureau was established in November by State Attorney General Louis J. Lefkowitz. Mr. Weaver said yesterday that Gov. McKeldin was invited because "he has demonstrated a forthrightness on the integration issue in sharp contrast to the narrow, demagogic approach of Democratic spokesmen in the South." Samuel P. Singletary and Hart Fessenden are co-chairmen of the dinner.

PRESIDENT HELD FIRM FOR BENSON

Reported to Be Unmoved by New Efforts in G.O.P. to Oust Secretary

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22 — President Eisenhower will not bow to new demands by Midwestern Republicans that Ezra Taft Benson must step out of the Cabinet to help save their political futures.

This word was passed today in authoritative administrative circles. The President was pictured as standing firm behind his Secretary of Agriculture, and generally viewed new G. O. P. demands as another passing phase in the long fight to unseat Mr. Benson.

These high sources commented that the projected visit of a Midwestern Corn Belt delegation of House Republicans to the White House to put their views on Mr. Benson before the President would be a "useless exercise."

They also called attention to the President's statement Jan. 31 to a meeting here of the Republican National Committee. At that time, the President departed from his prepared text to interpolate that all of his Cabinet members were doing a fine job and he had no idea of replacing any of them.

Republicans took this as an answer to party criticism of Mr. Benson. Party leaders fear that the Republicans will lose from ten to twenty-five Midwestern seats in the House because of Mr. Benson's farm policies.

The latest demands that Mr. Benson move aside for a "new face" to placate farmer unrest were sparked by the close special election this week in Minnesota's First District. The sixty-five-year G. O. P. hold on the district in southeastern Minnesota was maintained only by about 650 votes, the closest margin in years.

Alfred Quie won the special contest caused by the death of Representative August H. Andresen, ranking Republican of the House Agriculture Committee, who had opposed Mr. Benson on farm policy. Mr. Quie also opposed the Secretary's program but not so adamantly as did his Democratic opponent, Eugene Foley.

The anti-Benson Republicans contend that the Minnesota election was symptomatic of spreading farmer unrest and forebodes a drubbing for party candidates in the Congressional elections in November.

They attributed the sizable Democratic gains to Mr. Benson's recent slash of Federal dairy price supports to the lowest level permitted under farm law. The cut becomes effective April 1, but Midwestern Republicans assert that the effect of the announcement already is being felt in the big dairy states such as Minnesota and Iowa, another traditional Republican stronghold.

Message to Vice President Now in Quito, Says He Won New Respect at Home

By WILLIAM M. BLAIR

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9—President Eisenhower told Vice President Richard M. Nixon today that his "courage, patience and calmness" in the demonstration against him in Peru yesterday by "radical agitators" had brought him new respect and admiration at home.

In a personal message telegraphed to the Vice President, General Eisenhower asserted that he was certain a vast majority of Peruvians and United States citizens deplored the incident in Lima. He praised Mr. Nixon's conduct in the face of the mob that stoned him and spat at him.

5-10-58

The State Department, the Peruvian Government and political leaders on Capitol Hill called the Lima incident as "Communist-inspired" and calculated to upset relations between the two countries.

The State Department assured Peru that "the United States does not intend to let the Communist-inspired incidents impair the friendly relations between our two countries."

Miguel Grau, Minister-Counselor in charge of the Peruvian Embassy, delivered to the State Department his Government's note expressing "profound regret" over the "deplorable" incidents. The note asserted that the anti-Nixon demonstration had been directed from abroad.

Decline in Stature Seen

Senator Mike Mansfield of Montana, Democratic whip, labeled the "sadistic exhibition" as essentially an attack on the people of the United States rather than on Mr. Nixon as an individual. Democratic member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Senator John J. Sparkman of Alabama said the demonstration illustrated "how our stature in other nations has deteriorated in the last few years."

Señor Grau told reporters that, "as unfortunate as was the incident, it will serve to make us open our eyes to the Communist infiltration in Latin America."

President Eisenhower's message, which was read to the Vice President via radiotelephone, said:

"Dear Dick:

"Your courage, patience and calmness in the demonstration directed against you by radical agitators have brought you new respect and admiration in our country. I am certain that the vast majorities of citizens both in Peru and in the United States deplore the incident caused bya few. I note with satisfaction that the Peruvian Government has already expressed to you its regret. Indeed, I feel that every participant in the mob will finally come to feel a sense of guilt and embarrassment because of his failure to show toward a friendly visitor the ordinary measure of courtesy and hospitality.

"Give my love to Pat, and warm regard to yourself.

"As ever,

"D. E."

Ecuadoreans Are Friendly

By TAD SZULC

Special to The New York Times.

QUITO, Eduador, May 9—Vice President Nixon had a friendly and colorful reception here today.

The Government had taken all precautions to prevent a repetition of the Communist-inspired demonstrations that occurred in Lima, Peru, yesterday.

5-10-58

President Camilo Ponce Enriquez said a few minutes after Mr. Nixon paid a formal call that he had taken measures to prevent "barbarian acts."

"If anything happens, I shall use full powers," he added. "In this country there is no freedom for savage acts."

Plans for Mr. Nixon to debate with students at the University of Quito and with labor leaders had been canceled. A spokesman for the Nixon party said it had been done because the schedule was heavy and there was a desire to have the Vice President from getting too tired.

Actually, the meeting with the students was called off after the Lima disturbances, and it is believed the Ecuadoran Government indicated it would be happier if Mr. Nixon gave up the debate. In Lima, Communist leaders organized a demonstration to keep him from holding such a session with students.

While Mr. Nixon was virtually assured of physical quiet during his two days in Quito, he may receive from Ecuadoran officials suggestions that unless the United States gives their country more economic aid it may give attention to trade and aid proposals from the Soviet bloc. This was hinted by President Ponce, who said in an interview that Ecuador was constantly receiving offers from Communist states.

He singled out recent proposals for factory construction and the exchange of tropical agricultural products for industrial products.

Challenge to the U. S.

Dr. Ponce declared that the Soviet Union was challenging the United States' position as supplier of aid to Latin America. He added that while Ecuador was cooperating with the United States, "she needs corresponding economic aid to be able to maintain her internal and external positions."

Dr. Ponce acknowledged that Communist activity had increased prior to Mr. Nixon's arrival.

CLOTHED WITH GOODWILL: Vice President Nixon as he received gifts earlier this week in La Paz, Bolivia. They were presented by Antonio N. Lavarez, Indian leader.

When the Nixon motorcade drove into town a few minutes before noon, the vice president stood in his convertible almost all the way from the airport, waving to the many persons who cheered him from the sidewalks and windows. He and Mrs. Nixon got out twice to talk with groups of school-children.

There were a few isolated whistles, the Latin American equivalent of catcalls, and two or three youths were led away by policemen.

Quito newspapers did not publish today, by their own decision, news dispatches from Lima on yesterday's disturbances, but those in the port city of Guayaquil on sale here did so.

Loan Debate Opens

Special to The New York Times.

CARACAS, Venezuela, May 9—Newspapers and political parties began discussion today of a Government suggestion that it borrow $200,000,000 to meet its immediate obligations and debts incurred by the ousted regime of Gen. Marcas Pérez Jiménez.

The suggestion was made by Dr. Arturo Sosa, the Minister of Finance, who said such a loan would permit the continuation of the present rhythm of expenditures without touching the reserves.

The raid here came on the heels of a statement yesterday by Rear Adm. Wolfgang Larrazabal that the Communist party will not be outlawed by him. It also came as the newspaper La Religion, official daily of the Roman Catholic Church, demanded the immediate application by the government of the anti-Communist resolution adopted by the 10th Inter-American Conference here four yars ago.

The police said among the documents captured were calls for Communist meetings signed by Armando Leoni, whom they identified as a Red.

LIMA, Peru—U.S. Vice President Nixon was spat upon, grazed on the neck by a stone, shoved and booed as, ignoring all pleas for caution, he marched on two occasions Thursday morning into mobs of Communist-led demonstrators who shouted, "Go home, Nixon!"

But despite his determination to keep a date at San Marcos University here to debate political issues with Peruvian students, he was in the end forced to give up an attempt to enter the building when hundreds of jeering, fist-shaking youths and adults blocked the door, and stones, bottles and eggs began flying through the air.

STANDS HIS GROUND

Pale with anger, Nixon stood his ground for four minutes encircled by screaming demonstrators challenging them to agree to debate with him. Near him there were only Lt. Col. Vernon Walters, his interpreter, U.S. Ambassador Theodore Achilles and several Secret Service men who probably would have been unable to protect him physically if the need arose.

Turning to Nixon, shaking his own fist, he shouted at the students:

"What's the matter? Are you afraid to talk to me? Are you afraid of the truth? A big man in front," Col. Walters, hoarsely giving Spanish translation of Mr. Nixon's remarks at the crowd.

Then one demonstrator shouted in English "Go home, Nixon," and the vice president shot back, "Sure, I'll go home but first you want the truth first?"

Thus the eight-nation tour of South America Mr. Nixon considers clarifying U.S. policies through debates with various groups as one of his outstanding

He believes there is shocking misunderstanding of U.S. policies in this region. Hence his insistence on Thursday's debate with students despite warnings by Peruvian authorities Wednesday night that the Communists would use violence to prevent him from speaking.

One stone nicked him on the neck and hit John T. Sherwood, head of the secret service detail accompanying the vice president on his South American tour, in the face, chipping one of his front teeth. Nixon had just reentered his red and white convertible to depart from the University Plaza when this stone was hurled at him.

Seconds before Nixon had leaped atop the convertible's trunk, holding his hands above his head in the prizefighter's gesture, shouting several times: "Cowards, you are cowards, you are afraid of the truth!"

This was one of many displays by Nixon Thursday of his physical courage when he appeared to be virtually courting harm.

The main body of tightly packed demonstrators was made up of an estimated 2,000 persons, most of them hard-eyed youths though there were many older men who may have been workers in the midst of the crowd. They held up signs reading "Go Home Nixon" and "Nixon Is a Viper."

The riot at San Marcos University occurred at 10:40 a.m. and about an hour later Nixon faced again the same mob as he returned to his hotel from Lima's Catholic University, where he held an improvised debate with dozens of students to compensate for his inability to talk at the first school.

The vice presidential motorcade was prevented by the crowd—the hard core of the demonstrators numbered about 1,000 at most but it was swelled by several thou-

MR. NIXON'S DAY

The first reaction to the return of Vice President and Mrs. Nixon to Washington must be thankfulness that they are back safe and unharmed. The reception that they received in Washington yesterday was a well-earned tribute to courage, persistence and good humor in the face of great provocations.

Such a day is not one on which to engage in searching arguments about the political aspects of the trip, the way it was conducted or the features of United States and Latin-American policies that made the voyage both dramatic and historic. It is a time to say: "Welcome home and we are happy to see you both back safe and sound."

The post-mortems will be long and they should be salutary. Mr. Nixon is a man of considerable intelligence and acumen. His reactions to what he went through have been admirable in all his public utterances. It took statesmanship and understanding to say as he did after his ordeal in Caracas:

"We have a situation where the Communists were able to gain great support from students in this country because of what has happened here over the last ten years. What we are seeing is a terrible legacy of the dictatorship of Pérez Jiménez."

These are words of wisdom which need to be thought about at the State Department above all places. However, no brief comment can suffice to draw the lessons that have been learned in the last eighteen days. They will be mulled over and—it is hoped—profited by in the coming months.

Mr. Nixon had an experience unique in the history of our Vice Presidency. It was a stern and completely unexpected challenge and the popular welcome he received in Washington yesterday was proof that his fellow citizens and his colleagues in government felt he had met the test courageously and well. For eighteen days he was the scapegoat for all the sins, real or imagined, that Latin Americans felt the United States had committed. It was an ungrateful role as well as a difficult one. The applause that came yesterday should have been a real consolation.

Eisenhower Action Decried by 3 Political Leaders—Governor Quits Post

Special to The New York Times.

CARACAS, Venezuela, May 16—Venezuela's three chief political parties condemned today President Eisenhower's sending of troops to the Caribbean area. The leftist Democratic Action and Democratic Republican Union parties, led respectively by Dr. Romulo Betancourt and

Dr. Jovito Villalba, issued strong protests. Dr. Rafael Caldera, leader of the Catholic Socialist party, called the action "lamentable" and said "the debarking of troops would have found all Venezuelans ready as one man to defend the country."

As a result of Tuesday's mob attacks on Vice President Richard M. Nixon, Col. Miguel de la Rosa, Governor of the Federal District of Caracas, resigned last night. Local police heads were also replaced.

Articles in all Caracas newspapers today protested President Eisenhower's action. The conservative El Universal called the measure "inadmissible."

Say U. S. Curbed Precautions

Preparations for Mr. Nixon's arrival proved inadequate because the United States Federal Bureau of Investigation did not want strong military measures the newspaper La Esfera said in a front-page article. La Esfera said that Colonel de la Rosa wanted to take strong precautionary measures but that the F. B. I., following Mr. Nixon's wishes, insisted on preventing them.

Mr. Nixon did not want armed soldiers in evidence around him, the newspaper said, despite the wishes of the authorities; he had wanted to be able to mix with the crowds as much as possible. He had even requested an open car, but the authorities insisted on a closed limousine, the newspaper said. Warnings of possible incidents went unheeded, it added.

Other reliable sources confirmed that Mr. Nixon had expressed a desire to be close to the people.

The decision of Pablo Casals not to come to Venezuela because of the Nixon incidents has caused considerable consternation here. The noted 81-year-old 'cellist had planned to arrive last night for a five-day stay to pay homage to the people of Venezuela for having overthrown the dictator, Gen. Marcos Peréz Jiménez. He changed his plans as a protest against the attack on the Vice President.

The newspapers insisted that Señor Casals should not cancel his visit because of incidents caused by irresponsible people. The university authorities who had invited the 'cellist said they would try to persuade him to come next week. The Venezuelan consul in San Juan, Puerto Rico, has been instructed to explain to Señor Casals that the Nixon incidents did not represent the will of the Venezuelan people.

'Adequate' Measures Sought

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 16—The United States Secret Service received assurances from the Venezuelan authorities that "adequate" security measures would be taken during Vice President Nixon's visit in Caracas.

A spokesman for the Vice President had said in Caracas that the Secret Service did not attempt to specify in detail for the Venezuelans what these precautions should be, accepting the Government's promise that all necessary steps would be taken.

Contrary to Caracas reports, the F. B. I. took no part in the arrangements. A Secret-Service agent arrived in Caracas about a week before the Vice President's visit and remained in close touch with the Venezuelan officials responsible for the security measures.

According to information available in United States quarters in Caracas on Tuesday, Mr. Nixon did not want an exaggerated show of force surrounding his presence, such as the use of large numbers of soldiers to guard him. But it does not appear accurate that the Vice President had protested "strong" measures.

REPUBLICAN CLUB FACES VOTE FIGHT

Queens Man Seeks to Bar 5th Term to Riesner as Head of National Group Here

By DOUGLAS DALES

A fight for proxies among the 1,500 members of the National Republican Club is in progress as a result of a challenge to the re-election of Daniel J. Reisner for a fifth term as president.

The challenger is George T. Reilly, an insurance man of Flushing, Queens. He has been a vice president for eight years and has been waiting almost that long to be tapped for the top spot.

The club, now in its eightieth year, is at 54 West Fortieth Street. Its past presidents have included Theodore Roosevelt and Chauncey Depew. Vice President Richard M. Nixon is a member and President Eisenhower an honorary life member.

Mr. Reilly decided to contest the election after a nominating committee proposed Mr. Reisner's re-election and Mr. Reilly's as a vice president. As a result of his action Mr. Reilly has been dropped from the slate and the name of Kenneth R. Leach of Syracuse has been added. The election will be April 22.

In a statement yesterday Mr. Reilly charged that the club had been used by a few top officials solely to promote their personal political ambitions at the expense of the club."

Fears Club Will Be Ruined

"Asserting that a continuation of present "dictatorial tactics" would ruin the club, he said:

"It is unseemly for one man to ride roughshod over the wishes of the vast majority of the members by trying to elect himself president for a fifth term. We have been extremely patient, but our patience is at an end because we frankly fear that the incumbent wants this office for life."

Mr. Reilly said he felt he had the support of business men members. He is counting on the support also, he said, of 600 persons he had brought into the club in his capacity as chairman of the membership committee for ten years.

Mr. Riesner said that his opponent had every right to run for president, but that his contention that he represented the sentiment of the majority was "pathetically ridiculous."

Defending his stewardship Mr. Riesner said that improvements costing $250,000 had been completed during his terms and would be paid for within three years.

"I haven't a single political ambition," he said, "except to continue what I am doing."

A lawyer, Mr. Riesner is secretary of the New York County Republican Committee, which has its offices in the National Republican Club. Until this year, he had been assistant clerk of the State Assembly for many years.

Nixon awarded service plaque

WASHINGTON (ANP) — Vice President Richard M. Nixon received a plaque last week from the Georgia YMCA in appreciation for his outstanding contribution to youth.

The presentation was made in the vice president's office in the capital by Miss Frankie N. Golden, chairman of youth work at West Broad Street YMCA in Savannah, Ga.

In absence of Mr. Nixon, the plaque was received by his administrative assistant.

AMONG THE group present at the presentation were Robert Simmons, who was selected "Mr. YMCA" of 1958 in Savannah and Miss Yvonne Luten, "Miss YMCA." These youn people were accompanied by Mrs. Sadie Luten, mother of Yvonne, and Mrs. Carrie Moody, grandmother of Robert Simmons.

Others included winners in a popularity contest for the benefit of world service. They were Joyce Walker, first runner-up for girls, and John Lang, first for boys. Mr. and Mrs. Benjamine Lewis, chairman of the YMCA membership drive and J. R. Jenkins, executive secretary of the Savannah YMCA.

From the Ninth Street Branch in Augusta, Ga., were Veleda Lewis "Miss YMCA" and Tom Ketch Jr., "Mr. YMCA." They were accompanied by club advisers Mrs. Eleanor Hatney and Mrs. Bennie M. Williams.

A Pledge Unfulfilled

While a candidate for his first term in 1952, General Dwight D. Eisenhower made a solemn pledge, if elected, to appoint men to District Federal judiciary without regard to color.

Now nearing the third year of his second term with the exception of Scovel Richardson's appointment to the customs court, the pledge has not been made good.

New York Republicans last year put up the name of City Court Justice Francis E. Rivers, who is completing his 15th year on the bench.

A graduate with honors from Yale University and Columbia and Harvard law schools, there was no question about his knowledge of the law as there was none about his experience and judicial temperament.

Moreover, he was a Republican.

But the appointment of Judge Rivers was never forthcoming, because the White House said, he was 63 years of age.

The other week the Senate confirmed the appointment by President Eisenhower of Axel J. Beck as a United States district judge in South Dakota.

Mr. Beck is 63. He's also a Republican. But more importantly, he's white.

GOP GAINS HELD LIKELY IN SOUTH

Possible If More Demos Challenged—Alcorn

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Meade Alcorn predicted Friday night that despite the Little Rock flareup over school integration, Republicans can make net gains in Congress this year in the South if more GOP candidates will challenge incumbent Democrats.

The chairman of the Republican national committee also asserted that a strong two-party system in the South is important not only to the South but to the nation as a whole.

"This," Alcorn said in a speech prepared for a Republican fund-raising dinner, "would put a damper on the Soapy Williamses, the Hubert Humphreys and the Walter Reuthers who now seem to believe that the South will remain 'safe territory' no matter how far to the left they pull the Democrat party nationally."

Alcorn said he did not agree with those who say the Republicans today cannot duplicate their 1956 successes in the South. He referred to President Eisenhower's capture of five Southern states and GOP vote margins in such major Southern cities as Birmingham, Mobile, New Orleans, Savannah, and Houston.

He then reiterated a prediction that his party could increase its present House membership of 9 out of 114 seats in the South and border states if it did not let the Democrats win by default in so many districts.

"It is my firm belief," he added, "that an incident such as Little Rock will never lead thinking voters to turn their backs on the great overriding accomplishments of this Republican administration and embrace the left-wing policies and programs of the present national Democrat leadership.

"There is much more involved than the single question of civil rights. The voter who supports most of the policies and objectives of this administration will certainly weigh carefully the alternative of returning to power a Democrat administration which would be almost completely out of step with his personal views."

Negro Quits, Hits GOP in Michigan

DETROIT, April 16 (AP)—Declaring that "Republicans in Michigan don't want intelligent Negroes in their political organization," George A. Isabell resigned today as secretary of the Wayne (Detroit) County Republican committee. Isabell is a Negro.

"Postmaster General (Arthur B.) Summerfield," Isabell said, "still runs Republican politics in Michigan and Sen. Potter (R-Mich) just says amen!"

He voiced disapproval of GOP patronage handling, but said he had not been rejected for any appointment within Republican scope.

In quitting as secretary, Isabell said he was not leaving the Republican party, adding: "I'm too old to become a carpetbagger."

Nixon on Move Again

Vice President Racks Up Record as Traveler

By BEM PRICE
Associated Press Newsfeature Writer

Richard M. Nixon in the last five years has become the most widely traveled vice president in United States history—and the end is not in sight.

Nixon, accompanied by his willowy wife, leaves today for an eight-nation tour of South America.

By the time he returns to this country May 15 Nixon will have visited 54 nations, some of them twice, since he took office in January, 1953.

This trip will take him to Uruguay, Argentina, Paraguay, Bolivia, Peru, Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela.

NIXON WILL REPRESENT President Eisenhower at the inauguration in Buenos Aires on May 1 of Argentina's president-elect Arturo Frondizi.

Since Nixon represented the United States during Brazil's presidential inauguration in 1956, his visit to Argentina is almost a diplomatic must.

Nixon told a news conference that the fact he was making such a journey while Congress was in session (he is the nominal presiding officer of the Senate) "demonstrates the great importance the United States places on maintaining close relations with the countries in this hemisphere."

During the trip, Nixon said, he will talk to the top officials of each nation visited, though he will engage in no negotiations as the President's representative. The vice president said he will give the views of these leaders on the problems that confront their countries and the United States to President Eisenhower.

THE FIRST FOREIGN trip Nixon took was in October, November and December of 1953 when he traveled through 21 countries of the Far East from the Indian subcontinent to Australia and Japan.

In 1955 he made a swing through 12 Central American countries. The following year he traveled from Spain's Balearic Islands to Formosa. He visited six nations on the way, and in the same year he went to Brazil, Austria, Germany and Iceland.

Last year Nixon and his wife made their triumphal African tour, visiting officially eight countries and returning home by way of Italy.

The African tour probably was Nixon's most successful. On this trip he represented the United States at the independence ceremonies marking the founding of the African Gold Coast Republic of Ghana. Nixon was greeted on his arrival by 10,000 Africans shouting "Freedom! Freedom!"

CAPITAL SETS BIG WELCOME FOR NIXON RETURN TODAY; CARACAS VISIT CUT SHORT

PRESIDENT LEADS

Will Go to the Airport For Greeting—Plans White House Lunch

By E. W. KENWORTHY
Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 14—The Capital will turn out tomorrow to give Vice President Richard M. Nixon a triumphant "welcome home" from his trip to eight Latin-American countries.

The plan for the gala welcome for the Vice President and Mrs. Nixon grew almost spontaneously today as a demonstration of national unity and purpose after the indignities they had suffered, culminating in yesterday's mob attack in Caracas, Venezuela.

The White House announced that President Eisenhower would go out to the Washington National Airport to meet the Vice President and bring him back to the White House for a private luncheon.

The President will be joined at the airport welcome by Secretary of State Dulles, the majority and minority leaders in Congress and the members of the Senate Foreign Relations and House Foreign Affairs Committees.

Latins to Go to Airport

It was understood also that the Latin-American diplomatic corps here was planning to turn out in strength.

James C. Hagerty, White House Press Secretary, said that it was "within the discretion" of the departmental heads to dismiss employes so they could welcome Mr. Nixon. Long before he made the announcement, heads of many bureaus circulated statements granting time off and urging their employes to go to the airport.

Despite the welcome for the Vice President, there was a realization in Washington today that his trip, planned as a "goodwill" tour, had not been a triumph for United States policy south of the border.

There was no disposition here to criticize Mr. Nixon, in fact, there was nothing but praise for the way he had comported himself under the most trying circumstances.

Nevertheless, there was a widespread feeling that something was awry with United States relations in Latin America.

Morse Plans Investigation

In Congress, expression of shock and anger at the treatment accorded to Mr. Nixon interspersed with remarks betraying deep concern over United States policy and demands for a re-evaluation of that policy. Senator Wayne L. Morse, Democrat of Oregon, announced an investigation by a foreign relations subcommittee.

Meanwhile these other developments arose from the attack on Mr. Nixon yesterday.

¶The Venezuelan Charge d'Affaires called at the State Department to express "the most sincere apologies" for yesterday's events, and to give assurances that "all the measures necessary" for guaranteeing Mr. Nixon's safety had been taken by his Government.

¶At his news conference, President Eisenhower said that he thought the demonstrations against Mr. Nixon could be attributed in large part to "economic difficulties" Latin-American countries had been experiencing. But the President did not doubt that the Communists had tried to exploit this economic unrest. (See questions 1, 6, 8 on page 14).

¶The Defense Department announced that two companies of paratroopers and two of marines, numbering in all about 1,000 troops, arrived at their destinations at Ramey Air Force base in Puerto Rico, and Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, during the morning.

¶It was reported that Latin-American ambassadors in Washington were planning a testimonial dinner for Mr. Nixon.

The first question at the President's news conference this morning was whether he attributed the wave of demonstrations against Mr. Nixon to Communist inspiration or to genuine resentments against United States policies.

The President plainly indicated that he thought the underlying causes were economic. He cited the difficulties of various Latin-American countries dependent upon exports of raw materials, the prices of which have fallen in the world market. (Question No. 1.)

He said Communists had a habit of exploiting such troubles, as they had demonstrated in Burma and Indonesia. Nevertheless, this is a case of "a lot of smoke" where there is "probably some fire," he remarked.

He said the incidents pointed up to the critical importance of the United States aid-and-trade programs to the nation's security.

Troop Dispatch Defended

The President made it plain, however, that he could not agree with a number of legislators and diplomats who strongly questioned the wisdom of dispatching troops into an area where the United States marines are still associated with "Yanqui imperialism." He called the decision to dispatch the troops the simplest kind of precautionary measure. (Question 2.)

"We could get no reports from the outside, other than telephone calls from the Embassy; and not knowing what was happening, and not knowing whether the Venezuelan Government might not want some aid from us, we simply put it at places where it would be available, in reasonable amounts, and in bases that were well within the American zone; and that is all there was to it," the President explained.

The President said that the possibility of demonstrations had been discussed before Mr. Nixon left, "but no thought was given to concelling" his visits. On the other hand, the violence—and particularly yesterday's riot—had not been anticipated and everybody there was caught by surprise, he said. (Question 3.)

Johnson Urges Review

On Capitol Hill, Senator Lyndon Johnson, the majority leader, said that while the immediate concern was for the safety of Mr. and Mrs. Nixon, "this will not blind us to the long-term concern and to the necessity for a careful examination of all the factors which brought this situation about."

Senator Johnson said he would be at the airport tomorrow, "but there is more involved here than a demonstration of unity," he added. "There is also a need for careful, thoughtful, united reappraisal of our position in this world."

Senator Theodore Francis Green, Democrat of Rhode Island and Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, said he was "not satisfied with explanations which put all the blame on the Communists." Senator Leverett Saltonstall, Massachusetts Republican and chairman of the Senate Republican Conference, joined Senators Johnson and Green in a call for a searching explanation of the incidents and a re-evaluation of United States policy in Latin America.

Late in the afternoon Secretary of State Dulles briefed a group of Senators from the Foreign Relations Committee on the three major trouble spots—South America, Algeria and Lebanon. Later Senator Green said that the situation seems to be "very serious."

On the House side, a resolution commending Vice President Nixon for his "courageous and dignified conduct" was approved without debate or objection.

PERU'S RECEPTION OF NIXON IS COOL

Anti-U. S. Groups, Including Reds, Call for Hostile Demonstration Today

By TAD SZULC
Special to The New York Times.

LIMA, Peru, May 7—Vice President Richard M. Nixon was greeted with considerable public coolness and a minor display of hostility on his arrival today.

This hostility may increase in scope tomorrow when anti-United States groups, particularly Communists, are to stage a "go home Nixon" rally in front of San Marcos University, where the Vice President is scheduled to hold a round-table debate with students.

An organization calling itself "the Anti-Imperialistic Popular Committee," believed to be directed by the Communist party, circulated leaflets today urging "workers, employes and students" to attend the mass meeting to "shout with all your strength: 'Out Nixon, death to Yankee imperialism.'"

There were reports that the demonstrators planned to pelt Mr. Nixon with eggs and tomatoes.

Protest Move Afoot

A movement was afoot within the University Federation of San Marcos to protest the Vice President's presence in Peru. Debates with students have been part of Mr. Nixon's program in Uruguay, Argentina and Bolivia. In each of these countries the Vice President encountered a number of hostile or loaded questions pertaining to United States policies. He also made a point of always replying to questions and accusations.

There were sporadic acts of hostility toward Mr. Nixon in the four nations he visited earlier in his South American tour but this was the first time that an attempt had been made to organize a formal demonstration against him. The hostility was unexpected because Peru had not been considered a country with particularly strong anti-United States sentiments.

A wave of resentment swept Peru last year when the United States Tariff Commission began studies on whether to raise tariffs on imported lead and zinc, important Peruvian export commodities. However, this feeling has abated.

The Communists have been extremely active in Peru, especially in the south, which is suffering from catastrophic droughts and unemployment.

U. S. Attitudes Criticized

Indications that the feeling against the United States may go beyond the Communists, however, were spelled out in an editorial in the newspaper La Tribuna, the official organ of the American Popular Revolutionary Alliance. The strongest political party in the country, the Alliance is anti-Communist but Leftist.

Noting Peru's and the Alliance's traditional friendship for the United States, the newspaper said that while Latin American opposition to the United States was fomented by "the Communist fifth column" much was due to the "frustration and bitterness that United States attitudes have created among genuinely democratic groups friendly to the United States people, such as ourselves."

The newspaper listed alleged United States support for Latin American dictatorships and unilateral economic policies injurious to this region among these attitudes.

Mr. Nixon was met by shouts "Go home!" from a small group of youths when he left his hotel shortly after his arrival in the city. There was a brief disturbance as policemen chased the youths across the Plaza San Marcos to arrest them.

In the afternoon, the Vice President was cheered by a crowd of about 200 after visiting the headquarters of the Peruvian-American Cultural Institute where he announced the grant of 1,615,00 soles (about $73,000) toward the construction of a new building for the center.

ANTI-NIXON RIOTS STIR U.S. REVIEWS OF TIES TO LATINS

Full Study Is Seen After Vic President's Return—Role of the Reds Is Minimized

By JACK RAYMOND
Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 10—The demonstrations against Vice President Richard M. Nixon during his current tour of Latin America are prompting a new assessment here of United States relations with nations in that area.

Official sources said they expected a review to begin after Mr. Nixon's return to Washington May 15. By that time, it is believed, the State Department will have completed its studies of the riots.

The reassessment is expected to deal with the following major considerations:

¶The long-held dissatisfaction in South America with the United States' preoccupation with affairs outside the Western Hemisphere while the Latin-American countries seem to be taken for granted.

¶The charges within Administration circles that the United States has failed to make its policies in South America convincing despite substantial efforts in the fields of trade and aid.

Reappraisal Is Urged

At the Capitol, statements were made calling for a reappraisal of Latin-American relations. Senator John Sherman Cooper, a former Ambassador to India, said he doubted that the hostile displays could be attributed simply to Communist tactics.

"It seems to me they represent evidence of open and continuing animosity toward this country and its policies," the Kentucky Republican declared. "This is more than just a Communist show. I think it represents some deep-seated grievances. Perhaps the Latin-American countries feel that we have been too preoccupied with Europe and Asia and have forgotten our closest friends."

Senator Cooper said that the riots "certainly point up the imperative necessity of passage of the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act without all of the restrictions that have been proposed to it."

Another Republican Senator, George D. Aiken of Vermont, took another tack. He thought Congress might express resentment over the treatment given Mr. Nixon by adopting an even more severe reciprocal trade law.

Disparity on Red Strength

Representative Thomas E. Morgan, Democrat of Pennsylvania, who is chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said the violence against Vice President Nixon in Lima, Peru, "naturally suggests a thorough review of our troubles in Latin America, the Communist situations, and so on."

"In one area alone what has happened to Mr. Nixon does not seem to coincide with what Congress has been told about the Communist menace in Latin America," he added.

Senator Theodore F. Green, Democrat of Rhode Island, said he would wait until the Vice President returned before discussing action by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee of which he is chairman.

One United States source commented that the Government undoubtedly would review its relations with South America, particularly with respect to public information activities there.

"There is a feeling that we are not getting our story across there and that we have got to do more field work with local organizations," this source said.

However, another official asserted that while the United States would reconsider its Latin-American relations, it probably would do nothing about them.

"We have had shockers before," he said, "but after the initial impact is gone we fall back into our old habit of taking South America for granted."

The renewed discussion here of United States relations with South America coincided with an announcement at the White House today that President Eisenhower would confer Monday with the military representatives of the twenty-one American republics on the Inter-American Defense Board.

Board a Permanent Body

The board is a permanent body, established in March, 1942, and made a part of the Organization of American States.

The President's invitation to the military officials was sent a few days ago, but an official source emphasized that it had been planned for some time. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd Jr., former Marine Corps commandant, arranged the meeting with President Eisenhower.

An official source said the board "is currently engaged in planning and recommending measures relative to the defense of the Hemisphere against external aggression and, in particular, against the international Communist conspiracy."

Questions were raised here whether Vice President Nixon ought to go ahead with a European trip. Senator Mike Mansfield, Democrat of Montana, said the President would have to take into account whether European Communists might not seek to duplicate the anti-United States demonstrations of their Latin-American comrades.

Most officials rejected the idea that Mr. Nixon should cancel any European trip in fear of possible Red-inspired demonstrations there.

Nixon Notes Soviet Threat

By TAD SZULC
Special to The New York Times.

QUITO, Ecuador, May 10—Vice President Nixon said today that there was a danger that the Soviet Union might dump industrial products in key Latin American areas to disrupt the region's trade pattern.

This appeared to be one of the most important conclusions of his eight-nation South American trip during which he devoting special attention to economic questions.

Mr. Nixon, who in four of the six countries already visited—Uurugay, Argentina, Bolivia and Ecuador—found evidence of highly stepped up trade infiltration by the Soviet bloc, said that the United States Government ankd private enterprise "must do some very serious thinking in the months head."

The Soviet Government's control of export prices facilitates its efforts, the Vice President declared, so that United States goods may be unable to compete with "dumping on a loss-leader basis."

In all the capitals Mr. Nixon has been told by business and Governmental leaders that because foreign-exchange earnings have been dropping as a result of the United States recession, they are finding it increasingly difficult to afford United States goods.

Mr. Nixon said his trip "may be useful in alerting the United States public to the importance of Latin America and to some of the very serious problems that exist here."

Russia Touring Area

While Mr. Nixon is traveling through South America to see how the United States can help the region, Soviet First Deputy Foreign Minister, Vasily Kuznetsov, is doing some touring of his own. After visits in Argentina and Uruguay he is reported to be going to Chile next week.

Mr. Nixon's schedule today was relatively light, partly because some events had been canceled. He explained that a meeting with unionists had been called off because the Ecuadoran Government "was unable arrange it with representative labor leaders."

Organized labor here is directed by the Confederation of Workers of Ecuador, headed by Pedro Saad, described as a top Communist leader in this region.

There also was no round-table debate with students although in midafteroon the Vice President paid a brief visit to the University of Quito. The university is strongly infiltrated by Communists and some United States and Ecuadoran offiicals thought a formal visit could set off incidents similar to those in Lima, Thursday.

The Ecuadorans, who are on bad terms with Peru because of a long-standing border dispute, are going out of their way to make Mr. Nixon's visit as pleasant as possible. He has been heavily guarded everywhere.

Prior to a luncheon offered by the city of Quito, Mr. Nixon spent an hour at a stadium watching a soccer game. Shedding his jacket before the game, he practiced head shots in the middle of the field.

He evoked daughter when he said, "I was never good at soccer in school because I did not know how to use my head."

Peru Reds Accused

Special to The New York Times.

LIMA, Peru, May 10—The Government ordered yesterday the opening of proceedings against the Revolutionary Labor party, a small but vocal Communist movement. It was accused of responsibility for insults and attacks directed against Mr. Nixon Thursday.

A party member, Ismael Frias Torrico, was held directly responsible for the incidents. He addressed a mob in the Plaza San Martin immediately before the outbursts there.

Mrs. Nixon Is Grabbed By Rioter

6 Americans Hurt; U.S. Flags Torn

By MORRIS ROSENBERG

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP)—Jeering, spitting Venezuelan mobs battered cars of Vice President and Mrs. Nixon with sticks, stones and eggs Tuesday. President Eisenhower in Washington reacted quickly to bring a U.S. show of military force in the Caribbean.

Authorities said the violence was Communist-inspired.

ONLY BY LUCK

Only by luck did the vice president and his wife escape injury in this most furious anti-United States demonstration of the South American tour intended to promote good will.

A demonstrator grabbed Mrs. Nixon.

Six Americans of their entourage were hurt, chiefly by flying glass from smashed car windows. U.S. flags were torn by the demonstrators who subsequently stoned cars of their own government's leaders under the mistaken impression, one reported, that Nixon was with them.

1,000 RIFLEMEN

Aroused by the mobbing of the Nixons, President Eisenhower rushed about 1,000 riflemen—parachute troopers and Marines—by air to Cuban and Puerto Rican bases within three hours flying time of Caracas.

Venezuelan security forces, apparently unable to stem the disorders on the Nixons' arrival for this last stop of their tour, were out in strength Tuesday night.

About 250 uniformed men—troops in battle dress and police—were posted in a three-block radius around the U.S. Embassy residence sheltering the Nixons.

ABANDONS PROGRAM

Nixon abandoned the official program of his two-day visit to this oil-rich nation of six million but refused to cut his stay. The party is scheduled to leave by air for Washington at 12:30 a.m. Thursday.

"I expect to arrive safely in Washington at 10 a.m. day after tomorrow," Nixon said.

But, he added sternly, "If a situation like that we saw today is allowed to go unchecked there will come to the hemisphere a dictatorship worse than that of Perez Jimenez."

Gen. Marcos Perez Jimenez is the dictator Venezuelans ousted in a January revolt. He is living in exile in Miami Beach, Fla. Many Venezuelans have criticizezd the United States for admitting him.

MUST TAKE STEPS

Commenting on a remark of a Venezuelan political leader that followers of the dictator were trying to cause trouble here, Nixon said that whether the agitators belong to Perez Jimenez or Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev, measures must be taken to control them.

The government junta, headed by Rear Adm. Wolfgang Larrazabal, called on Nixon at the embassy and expressed profound apologies for the violence. This substituted for a call Nixon was scheduled to have paid on the junta at the government palace.

On their return from this meeting the government leaders ran into mob trouble of their own. Demonstrators stoned their cars and windows of one were smashed. Soldiers fired into the air and used tear gas to disperse the mob.

The Nixons would have been in graver trouble had they been in open cars instead of limousines.

The vice president's machine was badly dented and its windows were broken by kicks and blows from sticks and lead pipes. Stones and eggs rattled against Mrs. Nixon's car.

The U. S. flags on both cars were ripped from their standards.

Lt. Col. Vernon Walters, a translator riding with Nixon, was hit by glass from a broken window, and his mouth cut. Nixon was hit by glass but was unhurt.

Secret serviceman John T. Sherwood, who suffered a chipped tooth in the stoning at Lima last Thursday, twice pulled his gun, but did not use it.

Venezuela's foreign minister, himself hurt by splintered glass from the windows of Nixon's car, apologized for the outburst on the spot.

Mrs. Nixon sat looking straight ahead as her car was dented with stones and its windows smeared with eggs and spit.

"She was as brave as any man I've ever seen," an aide said.

Other vehicles were beaten and scratched, including those of U.S. Ambassador Edward Sparks and Asst. Secretary of State Roy R. Rubottom.

The uncontrolled youths for finally sent helter-skelter by a special troop detachment which showered them with tear gas.

Security police and reporters directly behind the Nixon car got whiffs of the gas which exploded only 25 feet away.

Nixon, after being rushed to the medical center to see if anyone was injured, stepped out of his car unperturbed.

"I'm all right," he said. "They cannot frighten me."

The car was plastered with spit and eggs.

He canceled a trip to the Venezuelan Pantheon to honor liberator Simon Bolivar when told that a mob was waiting where he had planned to place a wreath.

Some of the demonstrators who beat on Nixon's car appeared to be middle-aged. This helped substantiate the belief that this was no mere student outburst.

In the traffic jam, some members of the mob threw themselves at the wheels of Nixon's car to keep him stalled.

Informed sources said Nixon was dropping the rest of his officially outlined activity, but probably would remain in Caracas through Wednesday as scheduled.

At the Bolivar tomb, a mob estimated at 1,000 had gathered long before the scheduled ceremony.

They roughed up Lt. Cmdr. Louis Scliris, naval aide at the U.S. Embassy, and a sergeant when the two arrived with Nixon's wreath in a station wagon. The wreath was destroyed.

"We were lucky to get away," Scliris said.

The first demonstration was at the airport. A yelling youth grabbed Mrs. Nixon by the hand and shouted: "Little Rock! Little Rock!" apparently referring to school integration troubles there.

She remained composed and attempted to smile. An aide helped her into a car.

The violence of the demonstration surprised Venezuelan officials. They had announced that maximum security precautions would be in effect during Nixon's stay because of rumors that an assassination attempt would be made on him.

"We could never have expected anything like this," said one official.

Foreign Minister Oscar Garcia Velutini was livid with fury. He and other Venezuelan officials also were spat upon.

The vice president and Mrs. Nixon flew here from Bogota, Colombia, where he received a friendly reception after being spat upon and stoned by students at San Marcos University in Lima, Peru, last week.

Arriving at the airport at about noon, Nixon listened quietly to official greetings. A band played the national anthems of the United States and Venezuela.

Demonstrators on a balcony and along the sidelines jeered during the proceedings. There were only a few friendly cries.

Then Nixon walked over to a group of aircraft mechanics who had been watching. He shook hands with them.

This action released a howl of fury from the hostile crowd, which appeared to be mostly of high school and college age. Police who lined an exit to waiting automobiles could not restrain the crowd. It broke through.

The vice president and Mrs. Nixon had to fight their way to the caravan.

It was at this point that Mrs. Nixon was grabbed.

Another man, a Negro, shouted at the vice president: "Democracy! You didn't like Negroes there."

Other youths shook their fists and cried: "Get out! Get out!"

Alerted on Assassination Move in Venezuela

WASHINGTON (AP)—Vice President Nixon's bodyguards have been warned to watch out for a possible assassination attempt when Nixon arrives in Venezuela Tuesday.

U. E. Baughman, chief of the U.S. Secret Service, said Monday he had an unverified report that an attempt might be made on Nixon's life. Baughman's assessment of the situation, however, was that there is "nothing to alarm anyone."

He told newsmen that Nixon's U.S. bodyguard would not be increased but that undoubtedly Venezuela police would take extra precautions. Baughman would not say how many Secret Service men are traveling with Nixon, but it is understood there are a dozen.

LAST STOP ON TOUR

Nixon was in Bogota, Colombia Monday, discussing coffee marketing with Colombia's foreign minister, Carlos Sanz de Santa Maria. He is scheduled to arrive in Caracas, the Venezuelan capital, Tuesday and remain there until Thursday. It is the last stop on his Latin American good-will tour.

Baughman refused to say when he received the information about the possible assassination attempt or when he alerted Nixon's bodyguard.

At first he said the Secret Service had received the report from Jack Barry, a former agent who was a member of the White House Secret Service detail during the Truman administration.

ROUNDABOUT TIP

Later Baughman said the information came from Barry but in a roundabout fashion. He said he didn't know the original source of the report.

It is understood that the Secret Service was told the Communists might try to hire a Venezuelan student to take a shot at Nixon in Caracas.

The Secret Service chief said Nixon's security officers have been alerted to possible trouble at several stops during his tour. He said tips have been received from numerous sources and that many of them proved unfounded.

Nixon was stoned in Lima, Peru, last week in a demonstration believed to have been Communist-inspired. One stone grazed his neck and another struck a Secret Service man in the mouth.

The White House said today President Eisenhower has given no thought to possible cancellation of Nixon's proposed European goodwill tour because of unfriendly incidents in South America.

Dulles Blames Reds For Anti-U.S. Rows

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State Dulles Monday indirectly blamed the Communists for anti-American demonstrations in Lebanon and in Peru.

"Anti-American feeling is being cultivated by sources which we can all imagine," Dulles said. "I won't identify them."

"But with sufficient propaganda and money anyone can stir up a demonstration. You might even be able to do it here," he said.

Dulles spoke with reporters at the airport. He was asked about the demonstrations last week in Peru during the visit there of Vice President Nixon and about the sacking and burning of a second U. S. Information Agency library in Lebanon.

Nixon's Bodyguards Warned To Watch For Assassination Try In Venezuela

Secret Service Not Alarmed

By The Associated Press

Washington, May 12. — Vice-President Nixon's bodyguards have been warned to watch out for a possible assassination attempt when Nixon arrives in Venezuela Tuesday.

U. E. Baughman, chief of the United States Secret Service, said Monday he had an unverified report that an attempt might be made on the Vice-President's life. Baughman's assessment of the situation, however, was that there is "nothing to alarm anyone."

He told newsmen that Nixon's U. S. bodyguard would not be increased, but that undoubtedly Venezuela police would take extra precautions. Baughman would not say how many Secret Service men are traveling with the Vice-President, but it is understood there are a dozen.

Baughman refused to say when he received the information about the possible assassination attempt or when he alerted Nixon's bodyguards.

At first he said the Secret Service had received the report from Frank Barry, a former agent who was a member of the White House Secret Service detail during the Truman Administration. Later Baughman said the information came from Barry, but in a roundabout fashion. He said he didn't know the original source of the report.

It is understood that the Secret Service was told the Communists might try to hire a Venezuelan student to take a shot at Nixon in Caracas.

Several Warnings Issued

The Secret Service chief said Nixon's security officers have been alerted to possible trouble at several stops during his tour. He said tips have been received from numerous sources and that many of them proved unfounded.

Nixon was stoned in Lima, Peru, last week in a demonstration believed to have been Communist-inspired. One stone grazed his neck and another struck a Secret Service man in the mouth.

The White House said Monday that President Eisenhower has given no thought to possible cancellation of Nixon's proposed European good-will tour because of unfriendly incidents in South America.

Bogota's Cheers Hail Nixon, But Jeers Feared In Caracas

BOGOTA, Columbia, May 12. — School children enthusiastically cheered Vice President Richard M. Nixon and tossed flowers at him Monday during visits in the capital area. There was no sign of the anti-American outbursts which marred his arrival Sunday.

But reports from Caracas, Venezuela, where Nixon will go Tuesday to close his South American goodwill tour, said authorities there feared he faced a possible repetition of the jeering, stone-throwing communist-led mob scenes which disrupted his visit in Lima, Peru, last week.

Venezuelan authorities ordered extreme security precautions in effect for Nixon's two-day stay and ruled out plans for a visit to the National University, Caracas, said. Nationalist, leftist, and communist minority feeling was running high against the United States and the ruling military junta called on all Venezuelans to receive the Vice President with courtesy.

In Washington, the Secret Service said it had advance warning Vice President Nixon would be pelted with eggs and rotten vegetables during his current South American tour.

Assassination Threat

Secret Service Chief U. E. Baughman said he had also received unconfirmed reports there would be a communist attempt to shoot the Vice President in the capital of Venezuela Tuesday. The report was passed on to the Vice President even though there was no confirmation. This would prevent Nixon's Secret Service guard from being caught napping.

He is understood to have about a dozen agents with him.

When Nixon and his wife, Pat, arrived Monday morning at the town of Fontibon, a village outside Bogota, all the school children from kindergarten to high school turned out to give him a warm welcome.

Nixon also toured the blighted slum district in Bogota and again found himself in the midst of friendly children and adults. The children waved flags and some tossed flowers toward him. He visited a workers' cafeteria, one of 300 operated for the city's poor workers, and had lunch at a child center established by Colombia's National Federation of Manufacturers for workers' children.

Confer On Coffee Prices

He and his wife stretched out their hands to touch and shake those of workers waiting for them as the car moved through the district.

Earlier, Nixon held an hour-long conference with Foreign Minister Carlos Sanz de Santa Maria who explained a 14-cent drop in coffee export prices in the past year had cost Colombia 100 million dollars in foreign exchange.

Bogota Hails Nixon; Red Moves Fizzle

BOGOTA, Colombia, May 11 — Communists were outnumbered and outshouted by pro-United States crowds here today. It all added up to the best and warmest reception Vice President Richard M. Nixon has had on his South American trip.

On two occasions groups of vociferous youths undertook to stage "Go Home, Nixon" demonstrations, but both times they fizzled out. Communist cheerleaders could not get crowds interested in joining them in anti-Yankee chants.

In front of the Hotel Tequendama shortly after noon as Mr. Nixon arrived from the airport and at the statue of Simon Bolivar, South America's liberator, in the afternoon, the Communist effort was confined to between 100 and 200 persons.

Mr. Nixon said later that at least three persons had spat in his direction. Discussing the noontime episode, he said, "The Communists seem to be a little confused and don't know what to do." He remarked that those who had gathered to demonstrate against him showed "hatred, pure unadulterated hatred." The Vice President estimated that noontime crowds friendly to him outnumbered his foes by about ten to one. In the afternoon the ratio appeared to be even greater.

Demonstrators broke out in jeers and cries of "Nixon, No!" when a martial band of the Presidential Guard, resplendent in red-and-blue Independence War uniforms, played at a wreath-laying ceremony at Bolivar's statue. The rest of the crowd called for silence and shouted "Long Live Nixon, Long Live the United States."

Policemen quietly and unostentatiously detained several leaders of the demonstrators.

Wherever he went today the Vice President was cheered lustily and on three occasions was virtually mobbed by persons who wanted to shake his hand or get an autograph.

Driving from the airport into the city, Mr. Nixon stood up all the way in a convertible waving at crowds of children and adults along the streets. He stopped the car twice to chat with students.

U. S. Officials Surprised

The warm reception for Mr. Nixon pleasantly surprised United States authorities. Anti-Nixion demonstrations of substantial size had been anticipated for Bogota after the riots in Lima, Peru, on Thursday, when demonstrators stoned the Vice President and pelted him with eggs and oranges.

President-elect Alberto Lleras Camargo of Colombia unexpectedly came to the airport to greet Mr. Nixon. Tonight the Vice President paid a formal call on Señor Lleras. On Aug. 7 he is to be inaugurated as Colombia's first freely chosen President in a decade. He is known to be a strong partisan of the United States.

In an airport speech the Vice President expressed satisfaction that some of the army units forming an honor guard were veterans of the Korean War. Colombia was the only Latin American nation to send troops to Korea.

Communist agitators spread leaflets charging that 250,000 Colombians had been "murdered" with United States arms. This apparently was an allusion to years of guerrilla warfare here and Colombian purchases of arms in the United States. The leaflets also contended that Colombians were starving because of a drop in coffee prices.

During the flight from Quito, Ecuador, this morning Mr. Nixon talked by radiotelephone with his brother, Don Nixon in Whittier, Calif., who told the Vice President that his braving of anti-American mobs in Lima had impressed Californians. The Vice President had wanted to speak to his mother on Mother's Day but she could not be reached.

Venezuelans Ask Dignity

Special to The New York Times.

CARACAS, Venezuela, May 11 —Vice President Nixon should be greeted with "serenity" and not with violent demonstrations on his arrival here Tuesday, Venezuelan newspapers said today. Almost all papers published articles asking for "dignity" and "maturity."

President Wolfgang Larrazabal said yesterday that "expression of opinion in Venezuela is absolutely free" but that tomatoes and potatoes do not constitute freedom of speech."

VICE PRESIDENT NIXON
SOUTH AMERICAN TOUR - ARGENTINA

ANTI-NIXON DRIVES FOUND CONCERTED

Coordinated Red Campaign to Weaken U. S. Ties With Hemisphere Discerned

By JUAN de ONIS
Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, May 9—The student agitation against Vice President Richard M. Nixon during his South American tour is considered here to be part of a coordinated Communist campaign to hurt the United States hemisphere relations.

Mr. Nixon was warned before he left that he would meet hostility from students in several of the eight South American countries he was to visit.

The Vice President was heckled by students in Uruguay, shouted down during a meeting with the Buenos Aires University Federation in Argentina and stoned and spat upon in Peru.

A Pattern Discerned

Further trouble is expected on Mr. Nixon's remaining stops in Ecuador, Colombia and Venezuela if he adheres to his announced plan of discussing problems with all comers.

There has been a pattern in the student agitation in the South American countries.

Leaflets attacking Mr. Nixon and blaming the United States for economic problems that bedevil nearly all Latin-American countries were distributed before each of his scheduled university appearances.

Student agitators mingled with the crowds and shouted insults as Mr. Nixon passed through four of the capitals he has visited. At his meetings with students he has encountered abuse as well as reasonable questions. In Lima he was unable to enter San Marcos University.

This suggests to observers here an organized effort to embarrass Mr. Nixon and, through him, to discredit the United States. The Communists, who have been active in Latin-American student groups for many years, are considered to be the only element with the organization and experience to execute such a campaign.

Many Media Used

Latin-American student groups are numerically strong, politically active and experienced in street demonstrations. The students can cause the greatest disturbances with maximum impunity because the police often are reluctant to act with as much energy against adolescents as against older agitators.

The campaign to whip up anti-United States feeling in Latin America goes on at many levels and through many media. This campaign is aided by the economic problems that many countries find in their relations with the United States and the frustration caused by internal economic difficulties.

Coupled with their efforts to blame the United States for economic problems, the Communists are seeking to promote the idea of turning to trade with the Soviet bloc and Communist China as the solution for trade and aid difficulties.

At the same time the Communists are uniformly advocating the formation of "popular front" governments, in which they would join with all "democratic" parties.

Their program is based on slogans of anti-imperialism, industrialization and land reform. They denounce the hemisphere reciprocal defense pact and the Inter-American Defense Board. They support nationalization of petroleum, electric energy and transportation facilities.

Conservative estimates put Communist party membership in Latin America at 425,000. The largest parties are in Argentina (80,000 members), Brazil (40,000), Chile (25,000), Cuba and Venezuela (9,000 each) Peru (6,000), and Colombia and Mexico (5,000 each).

The party is legal in Argentina, Colombia, Ecuador, Mexico and Uruguay. In Chile, Peru, Brazil and Venezuela the Communists, operating just on the edge of the law, are politically influential.

The Chilean Chamber of Deputies is believed to be about to lift legal restrictions on the party. In Venezuela, since the overthrow of Gen. Marcos Pérez Jiménez earlier this year, the Communists have reorganized and thousands of exiled members are reported to have returned.

There are more than eighty Communist publications widely distributed in the majority of the twenty Latin-American republics. Through these publications the Communists carry on a relentless campaign against the United States and call for increased economic and cultural relations with the Communist countries.

The front organization is a favorite device in Latin America. In Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay more than twenty have been identified, including labor, cultural, artistic, professional, feminist and "peace" groups. Through them, thousands of Latin Americans have been taken on visits to Iron Curtain countries.

Ike 'missed boat' in snub of youth group, clerics say

By EDWARD PEEKS

WASHINGTON

Local ministers say the President "missed the boat" when the White House snubbed a delegation Saturday from the Youth March for Integrated Schools.

"It is another indication of his lack of wisdom in handling the whole problem," said the Rev. C. Shelby Rooks, chairman of the committee on local arrangements.

"He missed the boat. Perhaps it is his way to rely on his Attorney General and work behind the scenes.

"The problem which faces America needs something more than behind-the-scenes leadership," he added.

* * *

OTHER ministers took a similar view toward the treatment given the interracial delegation led by Singer Harry Belafonte and Harlon Joye, New York student from South Carolina.

The group left a statement for Mr. Eisenhower with a guard after they were turned down for a conference with the President or one of his representatives.

"I greatly regret the poor advice the President received in not giving the students an audience," said the Rev. Robert P. Johnson, member of the local committee.

"He lost an opportunity, it seems to me, to reflect a certain moral stature that we have become accustomed to thinking of him as President."

THE REV. E. Franklin Jackson, another committee member, said, "The President was approached properly. Due and proper notice was sent to him. He hadn't at the time of the march even acknowledged receipt of the notice.

"Somebody really muffed the ball. If they didn't agree with the march, there could at least have been a White House representative to greet the delegation. They represented too large a group to be ignored."

About 10,000 students took part in the march that was climaxed with a rally at Lincoln Memorial.

* * *

"SOMEONE AT the White House should've spoken to the group," said the Rev. S. E. Guiles, president of the Interdenominational Ministers Alliance.

His comment was supported by the Rev. S. P. Manning, minister of East Calvary Methodist Church.

"Despite the White House attitude, this march was a fine thing," said the Rev. Mr. Manning.

Young people from his church and 14 others took part in the march and helped serve dinner to about 5,000 of the visitors.

* * *

LOCAL CHURCHES were supported by the Cafeteria Workers Union and the Hod Carriers Union.

Some 200 buses came mainly from along the Eastern Seaboard with colored and white youths representing colleges and labor unions.

About 60 of the buses were furnished by churches in New York City and others in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia.

MRS. ANN WALKER of Arlington chaperoned a group from Lomax AME Zion Church, the Rev. Henry H. Sink, pastor.

Bishop W. W. Matthews, retired AMEZ prelate, and Mrs. Matthews were hosts to seven students from Cleveland at their Logan Circle residence.

"The youth showed the world what God is thinking," Bishop Matthews said.

The Rev. Mr. Rooks said that in spite of the White House snub, "everything went off fine."

He described the march as the beginning of "an educative process among students across the nation" to bring home to Americans the need of action

Ike Shocked by Soviet's Reaction to Pasternak

34d Republican

Associa

President Eisenhower said yesterday he would like to see and talk to Soviet author Boris Pasternak if Pasternak should visit the United States.

Mr. Eisenhower told a news conference he was shocked that the Soviet Government would tell the Nobel Prize writer that he must either write what the ruled leaders say or not write at all.

The President declared emphatically that if Pasternak came here he would like to see him and talk to him.

The President also made these other points on foreign affairs in his post-election news conference:

• Basic U. S. foreign policy will continue unchanged in spite of Democratic gains in control of Congress. He said he feels that every responsible Democrat wants to maintain established principles of policy.

• This country's China policies will continue unchanged so long the the Chinese Communists continue to do things that Americans cannot possibly stomach. Mr. Eisenhower specifically mentioned prolonged imprisonment of many Americans in Red China.

• Despite a need for economies in Government, the United States must continue to spend the money needed to carry out effective foreign aid and trade programs.

• The United States is clinging to its traditional policy of nonintervention in the civil strife in Cuba even though Americans have been kidnaped by the Cuban rebels.

The Pasternak case came up when a questioner said the Soviet was trying to force its most famous author out of Russia. The President first said that he had not officially considered the question or come to any conclusion about what the U. S. policy should be on offering or granting asylum.

State Department officials have said privately that they were certain that Pasternak would be given asylum if he wanted to come here. But they said they thought it evident that he did not want to leave the Soviet Union. If compelled to do so, they continued, he might prefer to stay in some European country. The President said he was amazed that Soviet leaders would condemn an author because some things he wrote did not quite square with their political views.

THE SOUTH

All the way across the South, the feeling is close to unanimous: The President has made a botch of the integration issue. Oddly enough, embattled Arkansas reveals a relatively temperate attitude on both sides of the question; segregationists feel that Mr. Eisenhower "treated the state unfairly"; those favoring gradual integration think he has been "timid and vacillating" in failing to take a more forthright stand. Conversely, North Carolina, where token integration is quietly proceeding, reveals bitter criticism of the President, from "terribly ill-advised" to "the most miscast man we've ever had in high office." In Georgia, an avowed "moderate" said: "Eisenhower has brought us to the brink of the worst interracial conflict this country has ever seen."

In most of the Solid South, of course, Republicans had little or no chance in November, anyway, regardless of dissatisfaction with the Administration. But in those states that Mr. Eisenhower carried in '56—Tennessee, Kentucky, Florida, and Virginia—Republicans see their stock going down. In Virginia, "Republican candidates for Congress are avoiding identification with Ike's Administration as agilely as they once leaped for his coat-tails."

Dr. J. S. Benn Stands Out at Republican $100-Plate Banquet Held in Philadelphia

By WILDA ROBINSON-SMITH

The attention of the American public is turned, and rightfully so on the approaching elections in which many will participate on Nov. 4.

The African Methodist Episcopal Church, in past years has been in the fore-front in espousing the cause of candidates whose record revealed the practice of Christianity, and fairplay for all of God's children, everywhere. (And it is needless to say, almost, except that there are those who don't believe it — that everybody is claimed by the heavenly Father as His child.)

It seems that we don't hear as much from AME pulpits on political candidates as in yester-year. I still feel that people accept ministers as their leaders, hundreds or thousands look to hear what their pastor thinks of this or that candidate regardless to professional political orators.

This thought was refreshed in my own mind, last week when I attended a "$100-per-Plate" banquet, in Philadelphia, (a "Victory" banquet to raise campaign funds), and listened to an African Methodist Episcopal minister present Pennsylvania's candidate of that party for office of Lieutenant Governor.

I felt mighty proud as I sat there enjoying the sumptuous dinner, in the Bellevue Stratford Hotel, for which $100 had been received "from or for" everybody dining! My pride was due to the fact that an African Methodist Episcopal minister occupied a place on the magnificently decorated, and brilliantly lighted three-tiered platform, with Vice President of the United States; retiring Senator Martin who distinguished himself by long years of public service; and other dignitaries of the Republican Party.

He is the Rev. James S. Benn, Jr., veteran pastor and presiding elder of the Philadelphia Conference, and connectionally known figure—and an aspirant for episcopal honors.

Dr. Benn's contribution to the program was unique in as much as he injected a witty story that was far from pointless, and was grasped readily by the more than 1400 persons.

The veteran minister captured the attention of young Richard Nixon, who without solicitation engaged Dr. Benn in conversation at close of the event—and of course the "Civil Rights" matter was not missed.

I watched, from a distance, and could observe that Dr. Benn seemed as much at ease, as did the young vice president—and I was happy: as an American; as a Negro, but certainly as an African Methodist.

ONE OF PHILADELPHIA'S prominent Baptist clergymen offered the invocation, and he invoked God's blessings in fervent, reverent tones. I appreciated his place on the program, too.

It occurred to me that it might be enheartening to African Methodists to know these two facts—and to see a picture of our own Dr. Benn, clasping hands with the Vice President of these United States, in a picture that was absolutely not "posed."

If we can talk more about some such things, instead of a lot of other rumored happenings, dispatched from "under-ground" headquarters by cowards who scatter malicious scandal, anonymously, admitting they "cannot yet" reveal their identity — may I say with emphasis that IF we can talk more about such happenings as exemplified by Dr Benn, and others like him who represent the Church and race well, we will begin to gain some lost ground!!

Civil Rights Query Rouses Nixon's Ire

By JACK BELL

FLINT, Mich. (AP)—Vice President Nixon angrily rejected Monday a suggestion that the Eisenhower administration is not moving forward on civil rights.

Nixon campaigned across Michigan for hard pressed Republican candidates after a blowup at a Minneapolis, Minn., news conference in which he covered a broad range of political issues.

Asked by a reporter (Philip Potter, Baltimore Sun) why the administration had not responded to demands made by a youth march group in Washington for civil rights action, Nixon flared back, eyes flashing and chin jutting.

"I am not going to stand here and take an insinuation that I have refused to discuss civil rights in this campaign. I have made the same speeches in the South that I have in the North.

"If the Democrats do a little job with (Gov. Orval) Faubus of Arkansas and Gov. (Marvin) Griffin of Georgia it would be better for all concerned."

The youth marchers, who failed to see President Eisenhower, asked the withholding of federal funds from states which flaunt the Supreme Court's integration decision, an end to Senate filibusters, federal funds to keep open integrated schools and a law making dynamiting of public buildings a federal offense.

Nixon dismissed the news conference with an emphatic "thank you, gentlemen, that is all," without mentioning these demands.

Hill's Editorial on Rockefeller

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Ma 4.—Following is the text of a signed editorial by William H Hill, Broome County Republican chairman and dean of the state's Republican county leaders, which will appear tomorrow morning in "The Binghamton Sun," of which he is publisher:

Over the past several months our Democratic friends have been assiduously cultivating the idea that the Republican prospects in the fall election are hopeless. In particular, we are being told that the party cannot hope to recapture the governorship.

We in the Republican party certainly should not underestimate our difficulties—especially the problem of defeating an incumbent Governor who has spent the past four years campaigning for re-election.

But our prospects are not hopeless. They are good. With hard work, a united party and the right man at the head of the ticket, we can win.

The right man is Nelson Rockefeller.

With each passing day, it is becoming more and more apparent that the Republicans can win in November with Nelson Rockefeller as their candidate for Governor. His new, fresh, vigorous leadership has caught the imagination of the people. Each successive poll confirms his widespread and constantly growing popular support. In nominating him for Governor, the Republican convention would be confirming a popular mandate.

This is no ordinary star we have seen rising on the political horizon and the public has been quick to sense it.

The combination of vision and leadership that he has been giving the country—coming as it does from a private citizen—is one the most dramatic things we have seen in this country for a long while.

At a time when we as a nation are faced with difficult problems, he has reminded us of our great strength and potential, pointed the way to their full realization and restored our self-confidence, our sense of national purpose, resolve and destiny.

This is leadership aat the highest order, the kind of leadership that the people want, and need, in Albany.

In saying all this I am not unmindful of the many other fine possibilities that the Republican party has for its Gubernatorial candidate. It has men who have served it with the greatest devotion and distinction in the state and in the nation. They have substantial claims upon its loyalty. But the fact is that, with the people, Nelson Rockefeller's lack of partisan political background is one of his greatest assets. A partisan political view of all issues is the Democratic candidate's greatest handicap. Our problems are serious: people are worried. They have a Governor who is thinking not in terms of party alone, but in terms of the state and the nation. Nelson Rockefeller is thinking in those terms.

No one who has followed his career of dedicated service to the people of this country, the concern he is showing with our current problems, the vigorous attacks he is making upon them and the dramatic leadership he is giving in solving them, can doubt that he will accept the nomination if it is offered to him by a united party. I believe that he will accept if nominated and that he will lead the ticket to victory in November by substantial majorities.

Those who have been watching Rockefeller on television have been able to judge for themselves the appeal he would have as a candidate. He has personality—one of the warmest we have seen. He has brains. He has tireless energy. He has the broadest human sympathies. He has had wide and varied experience in government, gained under three Presidents.

He is a winner, a rising star of the first magnitude.

It is the function of political parties to give the people candidates that they want. The Republican party owes it to the people of the state—and to itself—to nominate Nelson Rockefeller for Governor.

Rep. Powell 'Adopted' By Harlem GOP

NEW YORK (AP)—Rep. Adam Clayton Powell Jr. (D-NY), dropped by his own party, has gained the Republican nomination for re-election to Congress from his Harlem district.

New York County GOP leaders endorsed Powell's nomination Thursday by a 6-1 vote. County Chairman Thomas Curran opposed the naming of Powell, but said he would abide by the majority decision.

The county committee of Powell's 16th Congressional District is expected to ratify the selection within a week.

Powell has said he is running in the August primary as an independent Democrat. In a statement Thursday night the Negro congressman said he would accept the Republican nomination "with a deep sense of gratitude."

Powell crossed party lines in 1956 and supported President Eisenhower for re-election. He gave the segregation issue as his reason for the switch. Tammany Hall leaders recently voted not to support Powell and chose as his successor City Councilman Earl Brown, also a Negro.

Powell currently is under indictment on federal income tax charges. He has pleaded innocent.

G.O.P. VOTES TO PUT POWELL ON TICKET

Democrat Accepts Harlem Bid—Curran Opposed

BY LEO EGAN

For all practical purposes Representative Adam Clayton Powell Jr. received the Republican nomination yesterday to succeed himself. However, the step was taken over the objection of Thomas E. Curran, New York County Republican leader.

Faced with a 6-to-1 vote in Mr. Powell's favor by the Republican leaders of the Sixteenth Congressional District, Mr. Curran agreed to abide by the result. But he said afterward that he still regarded the Harlem Representative as an opportunist and was opposed to him.

Democratic leaders in the district have voted not to support Mr. Powell for renomination.

The Republican vote was taken at a meeting with Mr. Curran of the Republican leaders of the Assembly districts within Mr. Powell's Congressional district. The session was held at Republican County headquarters, 54 West Fortieth Street. It lasted two and a quarter hours.

Seven of the eight district leaders within the Congressional district were present. One, William Whyman of the Thirteenth Assembly District, South, refrained from voting. Vincent J Velella of the Sixteenth, North was absent, but voted for Mr. Powell by proxy. William Mertens of the Seventh, South, cast the only negative vote.

Also present was Mrs. Preston Davie, county vice chairman. She endorsed Mr. Curran's position entirely.

"This issue is a local one and must be decided by the leaders and members of the county committee living in the Congressional district," Mr. Curran said afterward. "I do not intend to dictate to them."

Several legal steps remain to make the nomination official, but these are regarded now as mere formalities. First a meeting of the district county committee must be held to authorize Mr. Powell, a Democrat, to enter the Republican primary on Aug. 12. Next he has to win the primary, but this presents no problem as his will probably be the only name on the Republican ballot.

Harold C. Burton, the district leader who acted as spokesman for those favoring Mr. Powell, said that no effort had been made to obtain a promise from Mr. Powell to support the Republican candidate for Governor this year or to vote with Republicans to organize the House of Representatives if he is returned to Congress.

Powell Accepts Nomination

Mr. Powell said last night, in a statement issued through his campaign manager, J. Raymond Jones, that he would accept the Republican nomination "with a deep sense of gratitude." He commended Mr. Curran for putting aside personal feelings to accept the views of the leaders of the district. And he had a special word of thanks for Mr Burton.

The Representative will compete with Councilman Earl L. Brown for the Democratic nomination. Mr. Brown was chosen to run in the primary by the regular Democratic organization of the district after it had been decided by Democratic district leaders that Mr. Powell had forfeited any claim to party support by backing President Eisenhower in 1956.

The Powell vote was the second setback Mr. Curran received yesterday. Earlier he had been informed that the New York Young Republican Club had voted 65 to 56 to support John V. Lindsay, the insurgent candidate, for the Republican Congressional nomination in the Seventeenth District. Elliott H. Goodwin is the choice of a majority of the Republican leaders in the district for the seat now held by Representative Frederick R. Coudert Jr.

Both Mr. Lindsay and Mr. Goodwin are former Young Republican Club presidents.

Washington Calls For Racial Initiative In Rights Drive

By WILLIAM A. FOWLKES
(WORLD Managing Editor)

The Negro was called upon Wednesday to stick together, make friends, depend upon themselves and quit expecting so much from others.

The admonition came from Val Washington, Director of Minorities, Republican National Committee, in a speech to the [illegible] Street Y.M.C.A. forum. He spoke to the largest assembly of the current Hungry Club series.

"The spirit of the times calls us to sleep on the [illegible] of first-class citizenship," the top Republican [illegible] can only be done through our own initiative. The greater part of it must come from [illegible] in the South where the main trouble is."

Pointing out that the United States is a troubled nation in a troubled world, Mr. Washington said that "a small, determined [illegible] of the nearly 180 million citizens who live within the United States have decided to defy the Supreme Court and practice anarchy in this great country." He then have become a lawless element which would deny 17,000,000 Negroes their constitutional rights by closing down public schools, outlawing the NAACP, bombing churches and synagogues and in general making life miserable for those who dare to speak out for their constitutional rights. They do this by threatening to dismiss members of boards who do not comply with law and order.

"In an observation of the habits and attitudes of American Negroes, Mr. Washington warned:

"We must stand together and develop the leadership necessary to attain first class citizenship and at the same time not destroy our faith in the ideals upon which this nation was founded. If we do not achieve this by some means, this generation of ours will fall under the charge of lawlessness just as the [illegible] before us have.

REJECT

"We must go the limit ourselves in the use of concerted action, using all lawful means to gain the respect of our neighbors, both at home and abroad if we are to have the full measure cooperation of freedom-loving people the world over. This will make intelligent planning and hard work; free of emotion, demagogery and self-aggrandizement."

Mr. Washington quoted freely from a treatise on the Negro in the United States prepared by foreign political science students after months of observation. While saying many flattering and gratifying things about general attitudes of the race, the foreign students noted many things they declared they did not understand about the United States Negro. A portion of Mr. Washington's quote from their observations follows:

"The Negro is an unusual person. He has made tremendous progress, exactly how is a great mystery. He seems to follow no fixed plan or pattern, but gets there just the same. Many of them, no matter what their station in life, are extreme exhibitionists. There is no telling to what heights he might ascend if he would apply himself and become serious about his future. He seems to do everything off key and unpredictable.

INDIVIDUAL EFFORT

"Much of his progress has come in spite of himself and is the result of individual, not mass effort. He gets unusual results when he works at it, but does not seem to have the necessary confidence and drive to make him accomplish that of which he is capable. . . .

"The NAACP is the only semblance of an organization fighting for his rights, but has fewer than 400,000 paid members out of over 17,000,000.

"Even in the North and borderline states where he can vote, not over 50 per cent of them are registered and only about 70 per cent of that number vote.

"Though the fight against integration is being led by Faubus, Almond and other Democrats, he will vote Democratic. He can see little good in President Eisenhower, Attorney General Brownell and other Republicans though history will show that they have done more to make him a first-class citizen than all the other administrations in the past 75 years.

SHIRKS RESPONSIBILITY

"While he needs education badly he is usually the first to quit school. He will buy an automobile whether he needs it or not before he will buy a home . . . . He has a tendency to leave important matters to someone else and shirks responsibility. . . . He fights and kills his own, knowing that it reflects on the whole race. Yet he does not organize against the Ku Klux Klan and White Citizens Council."

Mr. Washington gave a fine example of his slave-born, illiterate grandfather, who left an estate of $26,000, though never making over $15 per week. He said his forebear accomplished much by "planning his work . . . and working his plan" during a lifetime of industry, thrift and guts. The will of this man provided for education of his children and any left over "to encourage Negro voting and all other activities designed for his general progress and advancement."

The speaker's address was based on the 1958-59 Hungry Club theme, "The South's Potential and Responsibility for National and World Leadership." During the interesting and heated discussion period, there were many observations on politics of which the speaker is a Republican Party specialist. Mr. Washington noted:

1. The burden is on the majority Democratic Congress to prove their sincerity towards Civil Rights legislation, restoration of Part III to the Civil Rights Bill passed by the Eisenhower Administration, etc.

2. J. Ernest Wilkins resigned as Assistant Secretary of Labor because of differences with Secretary Mitchell.

34d 1957 REPUBLICAN PRESIDENT EISENHOWER

'Apologies for What Was Done'

Ham 'N' Egg Breakfast With Ike Soothes Ghana's Rebuffed Official

Washington Post 10-11-57 P.1.

Associated Press

President Eisenhower smoothed over an international incident today with a breakfast of ham and eggs.

Mr. Eisenhower's guest at the White House meal was K. A. Gbedemah, finance minister of Ghana, who was refused service at a Dover (Del.) Howard Johnson restaurant Monday evening because he is a Negro.

Gbedemah told reporters after having breakfast with Mr. Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon:

"The President expressed personal apologies over all that was done in Delaware."

Gbedemah added Mr. Eisenhower was "a little worried" about the snub. He went on to say that the invitation to breakfast "makes up for what happened." The official of the new African Negro republic said Mr. Eisenhower told him there are "little things like that all over the place and you don't know where they're going to blow up, or when."

Picture on Page A12

The White House added nothing to the statement made after the breakfast and a tour of the lower floor of the Executive Mansion with the President acting as guide.

Gbedemah then flew to New York where he planned to take off later in the day for London.

Nixon was invited to the White House breakfast because Gbedemah had entertained the Vice President in his Ghana home last March when the former British Gold Coast colony celebrated its independence. Last month Nixon entertained Gbedemah in his home here.

The 44-year-old Gbedemah was dressed in his native costume—a robe of gold cloth and sandals. He told reporters in excellent English that he enjoyed the bacon-and-egg breakfast.

When he was asked whether he was served orange juice—which the Dover restaurant declined to let him drink on the premises—he laughed and said that probably orange juice was left off the White House menu on purpose.

Washington Post 9-12-57

Gbedemah's personal secretary, Bill Sutherland, told newsmen that Howard Johnson, owner of the restaurant chain of which the Dover establishment is a franchise operation, had called on Gbedemah at his New York hotel last night and apologized for the incident.

(Victor Nelson, vice president and general manager of the Howard D. Johnson Co., told The Washington Post yesterday he personally contacted owners of the Dover restaurant franchise about the Gbedemah incident.

(A spokesman for Jack and Harry Cooke, owners of the Dover eating place, said Howard D. Johnson Co. policy is to serve whoever enters a restaurant and that policy will be followed in the future.

(The Cookes operate their restaurant on a franchise from the company based in Wollaston, Mass. Each private operator agrees to build, furnish and equip a restaurant according to company plans and to buy certain products from the company.

(Nelson said he does not know whether a general letter will be sent out to all franchise operators informing them of company policy. "It shouldn't be necessary after all this publicity," Nelson said.

(Slightly less than half of the 550 Howard Johnson restaurants are franchises and not company owned, Nelson explained. He said the contract with each operator does not include any provision in regard to who shall be served in the restaurant.

(Nelson said the company's legal staff is now studying the problem. He said he does not know whether a franchise could be revoked if an operator refused to serve would-be customers because of color.)

Presidents' Statement On Veto of Pay Raise

Post & Times Herald Sun. 9-8-57

Washington D.C.

The text of President Eisenhower's statement explaining his pocket veto of pay raises for classified Federal employes and postal workers follows: P. 3-B

I am withholding approval of H. R. 2462 and H. R. 2474, bills providing increases in salary rates scheduled under the Classification Act of 1949, as amended and the Postal Field Service Compensation Act of 1955, as amended, and providing salary increases for other Federal employees.

H. R. 2462 would increase salaries, under the Classification Act by about 11 per cent, and would make the increases applicable to all except the most responsible jobs. H. R. 2474 would increase salaries in the Postal Field Service by $546. The increases would range downward from about 19 per cent for the less responsible jobs to about 3.5 per cent for the most responsible jobs.

I cannot approve these bills because: (1) they are not justified by considerations of equity; (2) they would materially accentuate existing disparities in the pay scales; (3) they would increase total Federal expenditures so as to make large supplemental appropriations necessary; (4) they would increase the rate of Federal expenditure so as to require in all probability an increase in the statutory debt limit; and (5) they would contribute unnecessarily to existing and incipient inflationary pressures in our national economy.

First, the claims that the increases provided for in these bills are justified by increases in the cost of living have not been sustained. From July of 1951, the effective date of the 1951 pay increases, to March of 1955, the effective date of the 1955 pay increases, the cost of living increased by slightly more than 3 per cent. Yet the 1955 pay increases amounted to an average of about 8 per cent for postal employees and about 7.5 per cent for classified employees. Since March of 1955 the cost of living has gone up a little over 5½ per cent, or a total increase since July of 1951 of about 8.9 per cent. Against this increase of 8.9 per cent in the cost of living, approval of these bills would result in there having been granted since 1951 to postal employees increases in pay averaging about 20.6 per cent and to classified employees increases in pay averaging about 18.5 per cent. During this same period, fringe benefits have grown substantially; low cost of life insurance, unemployment compensation, liberalized retirement and survivor benefits. By no standard do the equities of the situation justify the increases provided for in these bills.

Second, Federal employees have the right to expect fair and equitable wage treatment in relation to each other and in relation to employees in private business. These bills disregard that fundamental principle. Both would widen existing pay discrepancies within the Federal establishment and ties, and it has not been demonstrated that generally the present conditions of Federal employment are out of line with those of the millions of other citizens working in private industry.

Third, in the absence of any compelling justification on the merits, great weight must be given to the serious fiscal and economic implications of these bills. The bills would increase annual expenditures by about $850 million for increased base pay and increased benefits computed on base pay. To meet these increased costs, either drastic curtailment of postal services and programs covered by the Classification Act, or large supplemental appropriations would be necessary, notwithstanding our firm efforts to operate these Federal programs within existing resources.

Fourth, the bills, by increasing the rate of Federal expenditures in relation to receipts, would press the public debt upwards to a point so dangerously close to the statutory debt limit that an increase in the limit would appear unavoidable. The undesirable economic consequences of such action are apparent.

Fifth, these increased expenditures and the threat of increased public debt which they pose would have the effect of adding to the upward pressures on the prices of things Americans buy. I am firmly convinced that our people want orderly economic growth with reasonable price stability. The attainment of this gold lays heavy obligations upon us all. Of the Federal government it demands fiscal integrity, however hard the choices such a course may impose. There can be no doubt, moreover, that the health of our economy and the defense of the dollar require economic statesmanship of employers and workers, public and private alike, in determining how much we as a nation pay ourselves for the work we do. Government cannot in good conscience ask private business and labor leadership to negotiate wage adjustments with full regard to the whole nation's interest in price stability while at the same time approving the enactment of these wholesale salary increase bills.

My decision to withold approval of these bills is made with firm belief that the Government's salary position must support recruitment and retention of able employees in the thousands of different occupations essential to our Federal operations. An inquiry into the need for adjustments in the structure of Executive Branch pay systems has been undertaken at my direction. In the event this inquiry demonstrates the need for logical, fair and discriminating adjustment, recommendations for appropriate action will be made early in the next session of the Congress.

New Yorker To Return to Law Practice

By ANTHONY LEWIS

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23—Herbert Brownell Jr., an original member of the Eisenhower cabinet, resigned today as attorney general. He will be succeeded by his deputy, William P. Rogers.

President Eisenhower accepted the resignation in a letter addressed "Dear Herb" and expressing "very deep regret." Brownell said he would return to private law practice with the New York firm with which he was associated for 25 years, Lord, Day & Lord.

The President will give Rogers a recess appointment, with the formal nomination going up to the Senate for confirmation at the start of the new session next January. He is to take over as attorney general in about two weeks.

NO CHANGE

Rogers has been deputy attorney general during Brownell's entire term of office, since 1953. There has been no hint of disagreement between them. Nevertheless, the change is of great potential importance—at least politically.

The political significance lies in the fact that Rogers is an intimate friend of Vice President Nixon. It was to Rogers' home that Nixon went the night President Eisenhower suffered his heart attack, Sept. 24, 1955.

Rogers will almost certainly be a leading strategist in the anticipated Nixon campaign for the Republican presidential nomination in 1960. Rogers' status as attorney general can hardly hurt Nixon's already excellent chance for the nomination.

In personality Brownell and Rogers are entirely different.

BEHIND THE SCENES

Brownell, 53 years old, has the cautious approach traditionally ascribed to lawyers. He is introspective, at his best behind the scenes, at his least comfortable in congressional hearings or press conferences.

At 44, Rogers is a friendly extrovert, at ease in the rough and tumble of congressional investigations and extremely popular with the press. He has blonde hair and is youthful in appearance.

While Brownell's relations with [illegible] nominee and is credited with helping Nixon draft the famous "Checkers" speech of that campaign.

Eisenhower subsequently named Rogers deputy attorney general to help Brownell.

Earlier, Rogers had won prominence as chief counsel for the old Senate war investigating committee and later helped fasten the labels of deep freezers and five per center deals upon the Democratic regime of Harry S. Truman.

It is generally understood that Brownell handpicked Rogers for deputy attorney general when Eisenhower designated Brownell as top power in the Justice Department prior to the 1953 inauguration.

Rogers' blond hair, quick wit and equally quick smile are well known in official Washington, where he is on a hail-fellow-well-met basis with many people. He has been kicking around the nation's capital for 10 years, primarily as counsel for congressional committees.

When World War II broke out, Rogers joined the Navy and served on the aircraft carrier Intrepid, taking part in the attacks on Japan and the occupation of Okinawa. His ship was twice hit by Nipponese suicide planes but he escaped unscathed.

The new attorney general was educated in public schools in Norfolk and Canton, N.Y., and later attended Colgate and Cornell law school where he received his law degree in 1937. While still a student, he married Adele Langston of Wenonah, N.J., in 1936. They have one daughter and three sons, two of whom attend a private Quaker school in Washington, another a public school.

Will Discuss 'Rights' With Rep. Powell

Matter Of Troop 'Federalization'

Booted About

NEWPORT, R. I., Sept. 18 (AP) — President Eisenhower today agreed to talk over school integration problems with Negro Rep. Adam Clayton Powell (D., N. Y.), who bolted his party in the 1956 presidential race to support Eisenhower.

The President decided to arrange a meeting with Powell after the congressman noted that Eisenhower already has conferred with Gov. Orval Faubus of Arkansas and Sen. Richard B. Russell, [illegible] tion and civil rights generally.

In his wire to the President yesterday, Powell, a Harlem clergyman, said with respect to school integration:

". . . I feel now that in the light of the growing crisis, it would be very helpful for you to get the Negroes' point of view directly."

No specific time or place has been set yet for the Eisenhower session with Powell. The President wired him:

". . . I shall arrange a meeting with you and have directed my staff in Washington confer with you for this purpose."

Powell has suggested that he be accompanied by other Negro leaders, but Eisenhower in his reply took no note of that. Indications at the Newport White House were that the President intends to meet alone with Powell.

In agreeing to meet with the congressman, Eisenhower set forth his first public praise of the civil rights bill he signed into law Sept. 9. The bill fell short of what the administration had sought in the civil rights field.

Eisenhower said the new law "protects the right of every citizen to vote without intimidation or coercion." He added:

"This legislation marks one more step forward in assuring security to every individual in the exercise and enjoyment of his constitutional rights."

Meanwhile, the Newport White House bucked to the Justice Department in Washington—for the second day in a row—the question whether the President has authority to federalize the Arkansas National Guard in the Little Rock school integration case.

Faubus has used the Guard there to block court-ordered admittance of Negroes to Central High School there.

The question was brought up at a news conference at the vacation White House yesterday in connection with New York Gov. Averell Harriman's suggestion that Eisenhower could end the Little Rock controversy by federalizing the National Guard unit there and ordering it out of town.

Wayne Hawks, acting presidential press secretary, said then he did not know whether Eisenhower has such authority. He suggested the question be put to the Justice Department in Washington.

The department shuffled the question back to Newport, saying "This whole guard situation is a White House matter and we're not making any comment on it."

The next step was to put the question up to James C. Hagerty, White House press secretary, today. Hagerty at first said he would "try to get a legal answer" and report it.

Later in the day he said he had conferred by telephone with Atty. Gen. Brownell, who was in Washington. The press secretary added he found the entire matter "quite a complex legal question," and that he had decided not to attempt to answer it.

Hagerty called it a hypothetical question dealing with "a "hypothetical situation," and suggested that newsmen again try the Justice Dept. for an answer.

Asked whether Eisenhower is considering federalizing the Arkansas National Guard, Hagerty's reply was the same as it has been every time that question has been put to him: "No comment."

Powell, in his telegram to Eisenhower, said that in Europe —from which he had just returned—"American prestige is at its lowest ebb," partly as a result of school integration troubles in the U. S.

In bolting the Democratic ranks in the 1956 presidential race to support Eisenhower for re-election, Powell said he preferred Eisenhower's position on civil rights.

In granting Powell's request for a conference, the President said he already has "conferred long and earnestly with leaders in and out of government, including some of the people whose lives are directly and personally affected "by the new civil rights law."

The President said further:

"It is my conviction now, as it has always been, that progress must steadily be made in assuring to all citizens equality under our Constitution and under the laws.

"Moreover, I have repeatedly stated my conviction that it is not in laws alone that rapid achievement of this purpose will be found, but rather that citizens will more readily respond to the dictates of fair and just laws if explanation, understanding and moderation as well as firmness of purpose are used by officials of government at every level."

St. Paul's throng acclaims Robeson

LONDON, Eng. — Upward of 4,000 persons lingered for hours Monday night to besiege singer Paul Robeson as he left historic St. Paul's Cathedral at the conclusion of his concert of spirituals.

Hundreds of policemen—uniformed and in plain clothes—who had been detailed to the affair, had to rescue the famed but controversial artist from autograph hunters, music lovers and the curious.

It was the latest of a series of demonstrations which have acclaimed Robeson throughout a tour that began five weeks ago and still has not reached its halfway point.

TYPICAL of the response to the artist, who for so long was denied passport privileges by the U. S. government, are the comments which have been made by music critics of newspapers and radio and television networks.

Andrew Smith of the Daily Herald wrote, following Robeson's appearance at the Palladium: "His is a voice that seems to grow deeper and richer with the years."

CLIFFORD DAVIS, one of the country's top TV personalities, declared: "Paul Robeson, now 60, jus' keeps rollin' along. His voice, alas, can never be what it was. But his personality remains. This is what television gave its audience when it presented the great artist. It gave Robeson— the man."

Among other comments in the British press are the following extracts:

LONDON DAILY MIRROR. Oct. 13. "More than 4,000 people heard Robeson sing spirituals during the evening service at St. Paul's . . .They also heard his thrilling bass voice read the Lesson. . .In the vestry afterwards he told me with shining eyes: 'This has been one of the great honors of my life . . .' "

MANCHESTER GUARDIAN, Oct. 13. "More than 4,000 people crowded into St. Paul's Cathedral last night, when Paul Robeson took part in Evensong and sang Negro spirituals . . . During the service a collection and Aid Fund were established by Christian Action to assist the accused and their families in the South African Treason Trials. . . ."

U. S. IS ROBESON'S HOME

Eslanda Flies Here, Rejoins Paul Nov. 28

NEW YORK — Mrs. Paul Robeson flew from London, last week, to arrange affairs at home.

She will be in two weeks at the United Nations and return to London on the Queen Mary Nov. 28.

Mrs. Robeson will be the guest of Ghana Government at an all Africa Peoples Conference in Accra Dec. 9.

MR. ROBESON, on a concert tour of England, will be unable to attend.

"This conference," Mrs. Robeson says "is thrilling and exciting because so many persons we have known over the years in Africa and at the UN as petitioners are now members of governments."

THE ROBESONS visit India in January as the guests of Paul Robeson all India—Birthday Committee.

Mrs. Robeson says her singer husband is making his headquarters in London and will remain in England for a time.

"He is keeping his New York home and will be travelling back and forth."

She added "a man may live and work in many countries, but a man's home is where his family is, where his people are and where his roots are.

"All these for Paul are in the U.S."

THE YORKSHIRE and Leeds Mercury said of the last week's Robeson concert:

"It began at 8:30 and was still continuing some two hours later.

"As far as the audience was concerned it might have gone on forever, for there is no limit to the pleasures Robeson can give.

"The program he gave us, one would hardly refer to it as a recital in the term's accepted sense.

"THE SPLENDID voice seems quite untouched by the passing of the years, always deeper than one had imagined.

"Robeson is an enchanter through sheer force of personality.

"No other singer would pass a whole evening with the music offered by Robeson; he would not dare and he would not have the artistic ability to do so."

* * *

"DURING THE year of exile in his own land he has discovered the international languages of folk songs — the strange fact that certain songs from China to the Hebrides have certain features in common.

"He sings in Chinese and in Russian. He regaled last night's audience with demonstrations in German, Yiddish, French and African dialects besides his Gaelic and English songs.

"All this plus a miniature lecture on African spirituals.

"He also broke off to treat us with the 'I have done the State some service' speech from Othello.

"He has an intensity of expression and an emotional range quite beyond the range of any singer of our day.

"He is a most remarkable artist, a great personality and a lovable man."

AT FUNERAL SERVICE — American singer Paul Robeson leaves London's Westminster Abbey following the funeral service of Dr. Ralph Vaughn Williams, composer. Currently touring Europe, Mr. Robeson announced: "I have decided to live in London. I will still travel the world and whenever I go back to America, it will be for a short stay." While in Europe, he was made an honorary professor

Robeson never doubted he'd travel again, but others did

Afro American P-2d

By EDWARD PEEKS

WASHINGTON

Paul Robeson kept the faith and fought the good fight in his eight - year hassle with the State Department for a passport.

That's the way his many admirers here and abroad regard the return of his passport to travel and sing again in distant lands.

This turn of events says much about the character of the man, aside from his political convictions, which are not the question of this piece.

His chances of ever going abroad again looked about as good as a penny with a hole in it to almost everybody but him a few years ago.

* * *

"I WILL resume my career," he said before concert halls closed to him at home and from what others called "the State Department Cold-storage."

The passport division had him "on ice in the cold war," they said.

He repeated his faith and determination last year in an AFRO interview at the Prayer Pilgrimage before the Lincoln Memorial.

* * *

"I SHALL begin a series of concerts soon, starting in Los Angeles," he said.

He was a different Robeson in appearance from the thundering, overweight figure of a few years before.

Robeson was a cool and majestic pilgrim on the grounds of the Lincoln Memorial as he gave autographs to admirers, young and old, white and colored.

HE HAD lost excess weight and his trim figure made him look 15 years younger than his real age of 59. A sparkle showed in his eyes. His awesome bass voice was full of music when he spoke.

"I'm here today with my people," he said. "I am a member of Mother Zion Church in New York City. This is a great day for all our people, because it shows unity."

His charm registered in marked contrast to the thunder of an angry man at Midwest meetings and political rallies between 1950 and 1953.

A SMALL fraternal group of us university students always made it a point to hear Robeson when he came to Chicago.

We were not only interested in what he had to say, but in seeing whether, "Is he showing signs of breaking under the strain?" We wanted to know in other words, "Is he freezing up in the political cold-storage?"

It should be said that as a group we were also interested in Sen. Joseph McCarthy, who then had almost everybody looking for those "209 card - carrying Communists."

WE NEVER detected any sign that Robeson was tired, giving up or just plain down-in-the-mouth about his personal plight. He spoke often of friends who he said had lost jobs and positions because of "Fascists."

One student especially appreciated the vigorous intonation that Robeson gave the word.

"I couldn't say that word the way he does without spitting all over everybody to save my life," he would say.

We were pleased to hear Robeson sing and we always expected him to regardless of the nature of the meeting.

HOPE FOR the future would roll out of his rich voice like the message of Christmas Carols pealing from chimes.

He always kept his faith shining in public, even while he rumbled about the deeds of "Facists."

Robeson was first to sue the State Department in 1953 on grounds that his constitutional rights were violated.

The Federal District Court and the Court of Appeals upheld the government in the case.

THE Supreme Court turned down the singer's request for a review of the case. The lower court held that the State Department could refuse him a passport if he didn't sign an affidavit denying Communist membership and affiliation.

Lately, the high court ruled in a similar case that Congress never gave the department such authority, thus opening the way for Robeson and others to travel abroad.

He denied in 1946 under oath in California that he was a Communist, but refused since then as a matter of principle, Robeson said.

'I got my passport,' says jubilant Robeson

Afro-American Baltimore Md.

NEW YORK CITY — "One of the happiest things has happened to me—I got my passport."

This was what Paul Robeson told the AFRO, Thursday, marking a victorious end of the long fight with the State Department.

His voice literally bubbling with happiness, Robeson said:

* * *

"I JUST went down to my lawyer's office and I have it (the passport) in my pocket."

He added, "I thought that if I should call anybody, I should call the AFRO and thank you so much for your kindness and understanding over these years."

The world-famous singer also stated that already he has had a number of radio and television bookings in London.

He said he will be going abroad soon.

* * *

A RECENT Supreme Court decision, to the effect that the State Department could not deny passports to citizens because of their beliefs and associations, laid the groundwork for the famed baritone to regain his travel rights.

The Court ruled five to four in favor of Rockwell Kent, artist; Dr. Walter Briehl, psychiatrist, and Weldon Dayton, physicist, that:

"We must remember that we are dealing with citizens who have neither been accused of crimes or found guilty.

* * *

"THEY ARE BEING denied solely because of their refusal to be subjected to inquiry into their beliefs and associations.

"They do not seek to escape the law or to violate it."

Mr. Robeson's attorney immediately re-applied to the State Department on the basis of this ruling.

A re - application was also made last week on behalf of William Worthy, AFRO - AMERICAN correspondent. Mr. Worthy's passport was revoked following his defiance of a state department ban on travel to Red China.

* * *

MR. ROBESON has had no passport since Aug. 1, 1950 when then Secretary of State Dean Acheson revoked the one he had.

He has fought to get it back since Jan. 30, 1953.

During his lengthy battle, he said that his passport was lifted because of his political beliefs and associations and his refusal to answer the question of whether or not he had ever been a member of the Communist Party.

In his suit, he was represented by Leonard B. Bouden of New York and David Rein, Washington.

He named Secretary of State John Foster Dulles as defendant.

HE SAID in denying him a passport, Mr. Dulles violated his Constitutional rights, including the right to travel outside the United States.

Mr. Robeson said further that Mr. Dulles was interfering with his liberty and property without the due process of law.

He asked the court to declare the Secretary of State's interference illegal and to further declare that the State Department's passport regulation for a number of years awful, and invalid."

* * *

IN MAY, 1957, Mr. Dulles told Mr. Robeson that his passport application had been denied for the following reasons:

1. Mr. Robeson's "close, continuing and sympathetic" association for a number of years with leading Communist Party functionaries in the United States and abroad;

2. His participation in the Council of African Affairs, the American Peace Crusade, the Civil Rights Congress, the Jefferson School of Social Science, the United May - Day Committee, the National Council of American - Soviet Friendship and a number of organizations listed by the Attorney General as subversive;

3. Mr. Robeson's 1948 address at the World Peace Congress in Paris, sponsored by the Communist Party, in which he said colored Americans would never fight against the Soviet Union.

4. His 1949 Moscow address at the Communist Party-sponsored Continental Congress of Peace in which he said he loved the Soviet Union more than any other country;

1. His message to the Afro-Asian Conference at Bandung, Indonesia which pointed to Russia, Eastern Europe and Communist China as examples of social progress, and,

6. His singing of communist anthems on a concert tour abroad and criticism of treatment of colored persons in America.

The restrictions on Mr. Robeson's passport were lifted in 1956 to allow him to travel in the Western Hemisphere. Canada, however, refused to allow him to enter the country.

Paul Robeson Gets Ovation Word From Britons

LONDON — (UPI)— Singer Paul Robeson arrived here Friday on his first overseas trip since his passport was withdrawn eight years ago. He refused to condemn American for barring his travel.

He sang "Waterboy" and "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" instead.

Several hundred Britons cheered him at London [illegible]. The welcoming crowd included Laborite peer Viscount Stansgate, leftist British Guiana politician Cheddi Jagan, and artists and musicians.

The Negro singer had long been denied a passport in connection with his alleged Communist affiliations. He got the travel document when the Supreme Court early this month denied the State Department the right to withhold passports on the basis of the applicant's political opinions.

Rather than discuss politics Robeson turned a crowded news conference into a music lecturer, singing snatches of various tunes to illustrate it.

BACK IN RUSSIA, ROBESON DOES AS RUSSIANS DO

Speaks Their Language and Claps as a Slav

MOSCOW, Aug. 15 [Reuters] — Paul Robeson, American singer, received a wildly enthusiastic welcome upon his arrival here Friday for a two week visit.

Scores of Russian admirers surrounded the baritone, 60, who visited Russia nine years ago shortly before the state department lifted his passport because of his leftist sympathies. It was returned to him in June as the result of a Supreme court ruling.

A Russian jet air liner brought Robeson and his wife from Brussels, Belgium. Fifty newsreel cameras ground away as he emerged from the plane.

"Friends, Greetings"

He spoke spoke Russian into a forest of microphones, saying: "Greetings friends greetings. I am very happy to be here again."

The crowd began to clap and Robeson dropped his two suitcases and hat to clap his hands in time with the welcomers, a Slavic custom.

Officials at the bottom of the steps were pushed aside as Robeson stepped down. In 15 minutes, he was only able to progress about 10 yards. Officials finally elbowed a path for him to an auto.

Say It with Bouquets

Admirers waving gladioli tried to push their way to Robeson to present their bouquets.

Radio reporters with microphones swept the singer away from his wife and photographers took pictures.

Robeson is expected to give his first concert Sunday at Moscow's Palace of Sports which seats 14,000. He will fly to Paris after two weeks and return for a tour of Russian cities.

Moscow Crowd Hails Paul Robeson's Return

By Vincent Buist
Reuters

MOSCOW, Aug. 15—American singer Paul Robeson today received a wildly-enthusiastic welcome upon his arrival by air for a two-week visit.

Scores of Soviet admirers engulfed the 60-year-old baritone who last visited Russia nine years ago, shortly before the State Department lifted his passport because of his leftist sympathies. It was returned to him in June as the result of a Supreme Court ruling.

Smiling and undisturbed by the swaying crowd at the foot of the Soviet jet airliner which brought him from Brussels, Robeson spoke a few words of Russian into a forest of microphones.

He said: "Greetings friends . . . greetings . . . am very happy to be here again."

Culture Minister N. A. Mikhailov, chief Soviet greeter, tried desperately to clear a path for Robeson and his wife from the plane to a waiting limousine. The exuberant admirers waved large bunches of gladioli and tried to push their way through to Robeson to present their bouquets in person.

Soviet and foreign radio reporters, waving microphones, swept the 6-foot singer away from his wife Eslanda. Photographers clambered onto the wings of the TU-104 and the landing stairs for more pictures.

Among the official and unofficial greeters were singers from the Bolshoi Theater, poets, composers and other representatives of Soviet cultural life.

As Robeson stepped out of the airliner, 50 newsreel cameras began grinding away.

After the crowd began to clap, Robeson dropped his two suitcases and hat to clap his hands in time with the welcomers—a Slavic custom.

Robeson is expected to give his first concert on Sunday at Moscow's Palace of Sports, which seats 14,000. He will fly to Paris after two weeks of engagements but is expected to return later for a tour of Soviet cities.

Robeson and Lamont Passports Received After 7-Year Fight

Both Are Picked Up at Lawyer's Office Here—Singer Plans London Trip for Series of Engagements in 2 Weeks

By DAVID ANDERSON

Paul Robeson and Corliss Lamont received passports yesterday after struggles that had been going on since 1950 and 1951.

Mr. Robeson went to the office of Leonard B. Boudin, attorney for both, to pick up the little green book issued by the State Department the day before in Washington. The singer said he would fly to London in about two weeks for a series of stage, television and radio engagements.

Mr. Lamont's wife Margaret performed the same errand for her husband, who will lecture in the fall term at Columbia University on the philosophy of naturalistic humanism. Mr. Lamont plans to take a trip around the world next year, concentrating on the Near and Far East.

The Government had originally denied passports to the two men, among a number of others, on the ground that a denial was in "the interests of the United States.

Emphasis Was Changed

Later the emphasis was changed to stress their refusal to answer questions with "respect to Communist party membership."

Mr. Lamont, unlike Mr. Robeson, was at liberty to travel throughout this hemisphere where passports are not required. Movement of any kind outside the United States was denied to Mr. Robeson from 1950 until last April, when the hemisphere restriction was lifted. On June 16 the Supreme Court ruled that passports could not be withheld because of a citizen's "beliefs or associations."

Mr. Robeson said:

"I wish to thank Mr. Boudin, and, of course, the Supreme Court for what has happened, but also the thousands and thousands of people of all races and creeds who have been my well-wishers all these years in the struggle for a passport."

Mr. Lamont, the 56-year-old son of the late Thomas W. Lamont, a partner in J. P. Morgan & Co., has long been a crusader for left-wing causes.

Lamont's Statement

"I am happy that my court battle has been vindicated by the Supreme Court decision. This will give a new sense of freedom to millions of Americans," he said. "On the dark side there still remains Secretary Dulles' ban on travel to Communist China. We must now break down this final bureaucratic barrier so that reporters and ordinary citizens can find out first-hand what is going on among one-fourth of the world's people."

Mr. Robeson has not appeared before the British public since 1936, though he lived in England from 1927 to 1939.

The two passports were routine in every respect, including the warning:

"This passport is not valid for travel to the following areas under control of authorities with which the United States does not have diplomatic relations: Albania, Bulgaria and those portions of China, Korea and Vietnam under Communist control."

Stamped below was a further admonition: "This passport is not valid for travel in Hungary."

ROBESON APPEALS PASSPORT DENIAL

Seeks Document Limited to England to Take Role in 'Pericles' at Stratford

BY ARTHUR GELB

Paul Robeson has asked the State Department for a "limited" passport to appear in the summer with one of England's most celebrated companies—the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre at Stratford-on-Avon.

The actor and singer, whose last stage appearance in London was in 1936 in a play called "Toussaint L'Ouverture," was recently denied passport to travel abroad since 1950. The Government's denial was based on the ground that it was in "the best interests of the United States" and later because Mr. Robeson had refused to answer questions with respect to membership in the Communist party.

It was learned yesterday that the Shakespeare theatre, whose patron is Queen Elizabeth, invited Mr. Robeson last December to appear as Gower, the great storyteller, in "Pericles." It will run in repertory with four other plays from July 8 to Nov. 29.

Glen Byam Shaw, director of the theatre, said he extended the invitation because he and Tony Richardson, who will stage "Pericles," felt that "the ideal casting" for the play would be Mr. Robeson. The part, he added, requires "a compelling power of personality, the feeling of deep understanding of humanity and, of course, a wonderful voice with which to tell his story."

Mr. Shaw wrote to Mr. Robeson that "it would indeed be sad if there was any difficulty" in his obtaining a passoprt. "I would try to help from this end," he added, "though, naturally, I cannot tell if I could succeed, and I feel pretty sure that it is better that nothing should be done from this end until you let me know what the situation is."

Seeks Limited Permit

The situation, according to Mr. Robeson's attorney, Leonard B. Boudin, is that the actor has asked the State Department to issue a passport that "in terms of duration, geographical limitations and purpose is restricted to his [Mr. Robeson's] trip to rehearse and play in 'Pericles.'" In a letter to Miss Frances G. Knight, director of the Department's Passport Office, Mr. Boudin wrote last Dec. 10 that "Mr. Robeson would not travel to any country other than England."

Asked yesterday whether he had assured the Passport Office that Mr. Robeson would not engage in political activities while abroad, Mr. Boudin said: "He has no intention to do so. He only wants to carry out his entertainment enaggements."

Miss Knight informed Mr. Boudin on Jan. 17 that the Department deemed it necessary that Mr. Robeson "answer the questions with respect to Communist party membership before consideration can be given to his request for passport facilities."

Since Mr. Boudin wrote to Miss Knight, Robeson has also received offers from England to appear at the London Palladium and on a television program in the spring. On Friday, Mr. Boudin wrote to Loy W. Henderson, Deputy Under Secretary of State for Administration, asking that the Department reconsider its position.

The lawyer added in his letter that "the validity of the Department's standards and procedure" was now the subject of litigation that may be resolved in the Supreme Court this term. This was a reference to passport cases that Mr. Boudin will argue in the Supreme Court early in April on behalf of Rockwell Kent, artist, and Dr. Walter Briehl, a Los Angeles psychiatrist. The court will then decide whether the State Department can lawfully deny passports to citizens who refuse to sign non-Communist affidavits.

Mr. Boudin's letter to Mr. Henderson also said that while a decision was being awaited in the Supreme Court cases "it would be most unafir" to "deprive" Mr. Robeson of a limited passport.

Robeson Again Seeks Passport

Paul Robeson asked District Court yesterday to order the State Department to grant him a passport immediately.

He said he had engagements to sing and act in Czechoslovakia and England later this year, including an appearance at the Shakespearean Memorial Theater at Stratford-on-Avon in June in the play "Pericles."

Robeson's passport was revoked by the Secretary of State in August, 1950. Since 1953, Robeson has applied without success for a new passport. The denials have been based on his refusal to answer two questions on the passport application: Are you a member of the Communist Party and have you ever been a member of the Communist Party?

In a complaint filed yesterday, Robeson said that questions about his political views and associations infringe upon his constitutional rights and had no relation to his request for a passport.

WHAT MAKES HIM TICK?

Paul Robeson

This article is reprinted from the AFRO on March 1, 1950, at the time he was traveling around the country in support of Henry Wallace's campaign for President on the Progressive Party ticket.

By CARL MURPHY

Paul Robeson is, next to Henry Wallace, the top leader of the Progressive Party.

Just being seen at his meetings or talking with him can cause the loyalty of Government workers to be questioned to question. Then they are in danger of losing their jobs.

The Progressives polled a million votes in the last election. There was not the slightest chance of electing their candidates to national office.

So why was the Progressive campaign pressed so zealously?

Why were Robeson and Wallace able to tour the country and draw crowds everywhere nearly as large as those attracted to the Dewey and Truman meetings?

Shakespeare's "Othello" and the show grossed a million dollars on Broadway and another million dollars on the road.

In Europe he is the same big attraction he is here. The reason is that he is a good natured giant, an intellectual with an attractive personality, and he possesses one of the truly great singing and speaking voices of this generation.

Critics are agreed that Paul Robeson has the ability, personality, and the will to succeed in any career he puts his mind to.

How does it happen that political parties like the Democrats and Republicans have nothing to offer him?

Why is Robeson willing to desert one of the best money-making jobs in America and devote his life to the Progressive cause?

PHYSICALLY AND mentally, Paul Robeson is one of the nation's first citizens.

He reminds me of Boss Kelly and Sonny Mahon. He is such good company, it doesn't make any difference what he talks about. You enjoy listening, whether he talks or sings.

And you recall that the people in show business average a higher IQ than any other group.

At Rutgers College, Mr. Robeson was All-American in football and Phi Beta Kappa in his classes.

He was among the top four concert singers who regularly commanded $3,000 for a single performance.

Robeson renews plea for passport to sing in Europe

WASHINGTON CONTENDING THAT questions about his political views are an infringement of his constitutional rights, Paul Robeson, Friday again asked District Court here to grant him a passport.

THE SINGER has been denied a passport previously because he refused to answer questions as to whether he was a member of the Communist Party.

IN ASKING for the visa, Mr. Robeson said he had engagements in Europe he wanted to meet, including an appearance in England's Shakespearean Memorial Theatre.

Robeson Sues For Passport

WASHINGTON Paul Robeson, the singer, has filed a suit in U. S. District Court seeking to force the State Department to give him a passport. His attorney said Robeson wants to go to England to act in a play and appear on television.

The department refused last year to issue Robeson a passport. He had declined at a hearing to answer questions as to alleged associations with organizations cited by the attorney general as subversive.

He can be as silent on politics and the question of racial equality as they. Why isn't he?

That's what I asked Paul Robeson, Saturday.

What makes you tick?

What gives the Progressive party its zeal, its stubbornness, its unbending demands for an end to segregation now, not next week or next year; its absolute contempt for the Uncle Toms, who counsel "patience," and for the gradualists, who say "let's go slowly?"

• • •

THE CONVERSION of Paul Robeson to the Progressive cause was as dramatic as that of St. Paul to Christianity.

Here he was in 1947 ranking among the first four as a singer or as an actor, with 86 concerts scheduled which would average between $2,600 and $3,000 per concert.

Then he came to himself.

He was being exploited as a symbol of a racial equality in the United States which doesn't actually exist.

That's exactly what's being done to Jackie Robinson and Joe Louis today.

HERE IS A singer more colorful than Marian Anderson or Roland Hayes—more versatile, more intelligent, a tremendous human being.

"See," white Americans say, "we treat the colored people right. Look at Paul, Jackie and Joe — full equality — no jim crow."

• • •

SO PAUL ROBESON said he must quit kidding himself.

He wouldn't sing before segregated audiences.

He would say at every opportunity that American democracy does not exist for the common people who happen to be colored.

He would advocate racial equality for all the little people, not just for Paul and Jackie and Joe.

He would be a crusader for the kind of human dignity that would enable black people to be men, too.

ROBESON'S manager howled. His friends pleaded; but he wouldn't recant. Of 86 concerts booked, 86 were canceled.

Money isn't everything.

Says Mr. Robeson:

"I am willing to make a sacrifice for my people, because I cannot be happy otherwise.

"I feel that I have to speak out against injustice as I see it.

"The zest, the earnestness, the persistent crusading spirit of the Progressive Party is as American as the Abolitionist Party of 1850.

"We know we are in the minority.

"But we also know that on the question of human dignity and human equality, we are right."

IN A NUTSHELL

- Paul Robeson arrives in Chicago on April 9 for a week of joyful celebration on his 60th birthday.
- He sends greetings to the people of India thanking them for their celebration of his birthday.
- He tells their Prime Minister Nehru "soon I hope to stand on the soil of beloved India and sing for you."

CHICAGO — "Recent concerts have been warmly received at last in this country of my birth, and I am proudly nurtured in the bosom of my closest kin — the American colored people."

These were the words included in a cablegram from Paul Robeson to the people of India this morning on the occasion of that nation's celebration of his 60th birthday.

Mr. Robeson arrived in Chicago in the midst of arrangements that include six days of speaking engagements, concert appearances, and receptions planned by various groups in his honor, starting with his birthday on April 9. The complete cablegram reads as follows:

"MY WARMEST and heartfelt greetings to the people of all India. May I express my gratitude to, and profound respect for, your beloved guide and father, Jawaharlal Nehru; and may I send sincerest thanks and warmest greeting to his daughter, Mrs. Indira Ghandi, and to his whole family.

"You all know of my closeness to your struggle, and my unbounded admiration for your vast achievements. You are building anew a great nation, and continuing, as you have through so many centuries, your priceless contributions to the achievements of all human kind.

"You will be happy to know that I am in robust health; that recent concerts have been warmly received at long last in this country of my birth; and that I am proudly nurtured in the bosom of my closest kin, the American colored people.

"Soon I hope to stand on the soil of beloved India, to sing for you—and for you to sing with me. All the best from my family. Your devoted friend, Paul Robeson."

MR. ROBESON'S itinerary while in Chicago begins with a celebration given in his honor by the American-Soviet Friendship Council. Simultaneously, far from the shores of Lake Michigan, people in other countries like France, England, Russia as well as India will pay tribute to this black man who is known the world over for his artistry, dignity and humane endeavors.

Prime Minister Nehru, in imploring all of India to join in observing Mr. Robeson's birthday has declared, "this occasion deserves celebration because he (Mr. Robeson) has represented and suffered for a cause which should be dear to all of us—the cause of human dignity."

Chicago's colored community will close its arms around Mr. Robeson, the man who before a Congressional Committee, shook his hands in the face of Mississippi's white-supremacist Eastland and lectured him on discrimination and the rights of colored people.

LATE SATURDAY evening he will be guest of honor at the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity of which he is a member.

Sunday at 11 a.m. he will appear on a Men's Day program at the 38th and Dearborn Greater Walters AME Zion Church, his and his preacher-father's denomination.

Climaxing his stay in Chicago will be a free public reception by the Chicago colored community, 8 p.m. Sunday evening at the Parkway Ball Room.

Coming Next Week

Beginning next week, the AFRO Magazine Section will print a series of four articles from Paul Robeson's new book "Here I Stand."

A revealing insight into what has happened to Mr. Robeson after eight years. Little known facts about the man who became one of America's most controversial figures.

Don't miss a single chapter.

Big Hit in Pittsburgh

TV Ban on Robeson

NEW YORK—Singer Paul Robeson prepared for a momentous return to the stage of Carnegie Hall on May 9 amid shouts of acclamation in Chicago, Pittsburgh and on the West Coast which served to drown out a rebuff handed him by an ABC-TV station in Chicago.

The TV snub handed Robeson was hardly noticed as he met with unprecedented acceptance in all of his appearances along his triumphant coast to coast journey.

Still the possessor of magnificent voice and stage presence, Mr. Robeson's popularity seemed to be zooming to even greater heights throughout both the United States and the entire world.

Robeson's New York appearance will be a key stop along his comeback campaign, which has only been marred in two spots.

In Pittsburgh, Robeson was forced to sing before 2,000 avid listeners in the Central Baptist Church and met with unprecedented acclaim from the audience after he had been denied the use the Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Hall.

IN CHICAGO, Mr. Robeson sang before two capacity audiences at Mandel Hall on the University of Chicago campus, in addition to being feted by Alpha Phi Alpha chapters in both Chicago and Pittsburgh.

On the West Coast, Mr. Robeson sang before full houses in the Oakland-San Francisco area.

He told the Courier that he is currently receiving the "largest royalties" in his career from Victor recordings made many years ago and currently being sold abroad in England. In addition, his book, "Here I Stand," has sold over 100,000 copies.

MR. ROBESON plans to undertake a tour of the western hemisphere following his New York concert and a subsequent vacation.

He said, "We feel confident that the Supreme Court will act favorably upon our passport request at its next session after the Rockwell Kent decision is handed down."

The popularity of Mr. Robeson overseas was marked by a tremendous outpouring of support in his behalf in both the so-called Communist and the non-Communist world upon the occasion of his 60th birthday.

IN NEW DELHI, India, a full house at Sapru House attended a tribute to Mr. Robeson which was addressed by many prominent Indians and, in addition, Prime Minister Nehru hailed Mr. Robeson as a fighter for freedom. In England; Canada, France, Eastern Germany, Soviet Russia, P. R. C. and Ghana, observances of Robeson's birthday were held.

All of this popularity was reflected in a report made by Dr. A. C. Clark to the AME Council of Bishops, in which the executive secretary of the AME missionary department noted that the Little Rock school crisis and the denial of Mr. Robeson's passport have been constant sources of anti-Americanism among Africans. Dr. Clark said hundreds of Africans asked him about Mr. Robeson's status.

And yet a scheduled appearance of Mr. Robeson on ABC-TV Chicago station, WBKB, was cancelled by Vice President Sterling Quinlan.

In a statement which many critics called "outright and arbitrary censorship," Quinlan stated "Robeson is a free citizen. Let him hire a hall if he wants to make a speech. But I'll have no part of it."

Mr. Robeson's new book, now selling for $1, can be ordered from Othello Associates, Box 283, Manhattanville Station, New York 27, N. Y.

ROBESON TO LEAVE FOR BRITAIN SOON

Passport Ruling Will Permit Him to Fill Commitments—Comedy Signs Emhardt

By LOUIS CALTA

Paul Robeson, who for the last eight years has been denied a passport, will be able to leave for London within a fortnight to fulfill stage, concert and television commitments there.

News of the actor-singer's imminent departure was made known yesterday by his lawyer, Leonard B. Boudin. Mr. Boudin said that officials of the Passport Office of the State Department in Washington informed him yesterday morning that the document would be "issued to Mr. Robeson as quickly as possible or in about five days."

Mr. Robeson's plans include discussions with British producers about a London presentation of "Othello," with himself in the title role, and conferences with Harold Davison, Ltd., a theatrical, band and concert agency. He last appeared on the London stage in 1936 in a play called "Toussaint L'Ouverture."

There is a possbility that the performer also will appear at the Shakespearer Memorial Theatre in Stratford-on-Avon. Last February Mr. Robeson had sought a "limited" passport to appear at the celebrated theatre as Gower in "Pericles."

However, the State Department refused to process Mr. Robeson's application. A recent Supreme Court decision voided State Department regulations denying passports to persons of allegedly doubtful loyalty. On Tuesday the State Department announced that the performer, among other rejected applicants, would shortly receive his passport.

The Facts Of Robeson Vs. Dulles

Robeson's Stand

Paul Robeson, singer and actor, has filed another suit to compel the State Department to issue him a passport to travel abroad.

He named Secretary of State John Foster Dulles as the defendant.

Mr. Robeson claims that Mr. Dulles is violating his constitutional rights, including his right to travel outside the U.S., and is interfering with his liberty and property without due process of law.

He wants the court to declare that he is entitled to a passport and that Dulles' interference with his rights is illegal.

He also wants the passport regulations declared unauthorized, unlawful and invalid and the Secretary of State enjoined from continuing to refuse him a visa.

* * *

ATTACHED TO his complaint was a letter from the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre, Stratford-on-Avon, of which Queen Elizabeth is the patroness, inviting him to appear in a production of Shakespeare's "Pericles" in June.

Also attached is an offer of two engagements on major British TV shows, one on April 6 and the other on April 12.

Mr. Robeson has had no passport since Aug. 1, 1950, when former Secretary of State Dean Acheson revoked the one he held. Since Jan. 30, 1953, he has fought unsuccessfully to gain another passport.

In his suit, Mr. Robeson says the denial of passport to him is based on political beliefs and associations attributed to him, and upon his refusal to answer questions as to whether he is or has ever been a member of the Communist Party.

On March 21, 1957 and again on Aug. 9, 1957, the singer was refused a passport by the State Department.

HE WAS advised by Miss Frances Knight, director of the Passport Office, in August that a restriction had been lifted on his travel to countries in the Western Hemisphere.

Mr. Robeson contends that at an informal hearing last May, the State Department relied upon "confidential" material not disclosed to him, upon the testimony of witnesses before Congressional committees and upon newspaper stories to ban his passport.

The Department, he asserts, relied specifically upon allegations that he had associated with organizations cited by the Attorney General and the House Un-American Activities Committee as Communist or Communist-front groups.

* * *

IN ADDITION TO the two major British TV appearances, Mr. Robeson has been invited to give a concert at Royal

PAUL ROBESON

Festival Hall, the new concert hall in London.

The singer is represented in the suit by Leonard B. Boudin, a New York attorney and David Rein, a Washington lawyer.

Dulles' Position

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles has failed to comment on the suit filed against him by Paul Robeson.

But the department policy regarding passports obviously is determined by the Secretary of State.

The State Department last May 27 informed Robesin, according to one of the exhibits in his suit, that his passport had been denied on the following grounds:

1. He was a member of the son, according to one of the extended period and had "close, continuing and sympathetic" association for a number of years with leading Communist Party functionaries in the U.S. and abroad.

2. He had actively participated in the Council of African Affairs, the American Peace Crusade, the Civil Rights Congress;

The Jefferson School of Social Science, the United May-Day Committee; the National Council of American - Soviet Friendship and a number of other organizations listed by the Attorney General as subversive.

3. In 1949 he delivered a speech at the Communist-sponsored World Peace Congress in Paris, in which he stated that colored Americans would never fight against the Soviet Union.

4. In Moscow in 1949, as a member of the Communist-sponsored Continental Congress for Peace, he stated that the Soviet Union was the country he loved more than all others.

5. In May, 1955, he sent a message to the Afro - Asian Conference at Bandung, Indonesia, pointing to the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe and Communist China as examples of social progress.

JOHN F. DULLES

6. During a concert tour in foreign countries, he sang Communist anthems and repeatedly criticized the condition of colored people in the U.S., making invidious comparisons between the treatment accorded them in America and that accorded minority groups in Russia.

The State Department's Board of Appeals has refused to act on the Department's decision banning Mr. Robeson's passport until he swears in writing that he never was and never has been a Communist Party member.

In July, 1955, the State Department lifted the restriction on Mr. Robeson's travel to Canada, but it was informed in 1956 that the Canadian Government had refused to permit him to enter Canada.

Singer Robeson Lauded by Nehru

Reuters

NEW DELHI, April 8 Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru today lauded Paul Robeson, American Negro singer, denied a passport by the U. S. State Department because of suspected Communist sympathies.

In a message on Robeson's 60th birthday, he described the bass singer as one of the great artists of this generation, whose anniversary was a reminder that "art and human dignity are above differences of race, nationality and color."

He added: "I send all my good wishes to Paul Robeson on this occasion and I trust that he will have many long years before him to enrich the world with his great art."

Robeson Society

BERLIN — A Paul Robeson Society has been founded in East Germany, according to a report by Neues Deutschland, East German Communist newspaper. The aim of the group is to help the singer get a passport.

India Plans to Honor Robeson at 60; Nehru Cites 'Cause of Human Dignity

Special to The New York Times.

NEW DELHI, India, March 20—Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru and his daughter are giving warm support to a nation-wide campaign to honor Paul Robeson, American singer to whom a passport has been denied by the State Department because he refuses to state whether he has been a Communist.

Plans are being made to hold meetings and concerts in India's four major cities on April 9, Mr. Robeson's sixtieth birthday.

The Prime Minister, in backing the campaign, has termed Mr. Robeson a sufferer in "the cause of human dignity." Mr. Nehru's daugher, Mrs. Indira Ghandi, is urging many of her friends to take a public part in the celebrations.

Indians prominent in the arts, science and Government have lent their names to the move. So have some Indians who habitually act as patrons for Communist-front organizations.

The case of Mr. Robeson is used frequently and widely by Indian Communists in efforts to sustain their allegations that the United States suppresses civil liberties and mistreats Negroes. It is an important fact that Mr. Robeson is a hero to most Indian intellectuals.

These intellectuals may have only vague ideas about Mr. Robeson's political opinions, but are attracted by his voice and personality and are convinced he is a man of high ideals. This sympathy is heightened by Mr. Robeson's being a Negro.

The planned celebrations, therefore, have attracted some Indians who would be astonished at any idea that they were helping the Communists.

The Prime Minister in a letter to the all-India committee organizing the celebrations, wrote:

"This is an occasion which deserves celebration not only because Mr. Robeson is one of the greatest artists of our generation, but also because he has represented and suffered for a cause which should be dear to all of us—the cause of human dignity. Celebration of his birthday is something more than a tribute to a great individual. It is also a tribute to that cause for which he has stood and suffered."

Limited Passport Denied

Mr. Robeson, whose passport troubles date back to 1950, applied in January for a "limited" passport good only for travel to Britain. The State Department, denying the request, noted his failure to "answer questions with respect to Communist party membership." Three weeks ago he turned again to the United States District Court in Washington with a brief arguing that his constitutional rights had been violated.

The former concert singer and college athlete, who arrived from New York, addressed the gathering of several hundred persons and sang several songs.

Travel Ban on Robeson Eased; U. S. Allows Hemisphere Trips

By ANTHONY LEWIS

Special to The N

WASHINGTON, April 19—The State Department has relaxed its restrictions on foreign travel by Paul Robeson.

It has informed the singer and actor that he is free to travel in the Western Hemisphere, where no passport is required. But he is still unable to go to Europe or elsewhere because he cannot obtain a passport.

The partial lifting of controls was made known to Mr. Robeson in a letter to him last Aug. 9 from Miss Frances G. Knight, head of the Passport Office. The letter was made public in the course of new legal proceedings that Mr. Robeson started recently to obtain a passport.

"The department has determined," Miss Knight wrote, "that the restraint on your travel to countries in the Western Hemisphere for which a passport is not generally required should be lifted."

Miss Knight said that the Customs Bureau and the Immigration and Naturalization Service had been advised of the change. Presumably this was done so that officers of the two agencies would not stop Mr. Robeson if he attempted to leave for hemisphere travel.

The action in Mr. Robeson's case calls attention to the complex network of legal restraints that may now inhibit Americans' travel. Most of these provisions are currently under challenge in the courts.

First, it is now a Federal crime to leave the United States for travel outside the Western Hemisphere without a passport. A 1952 statute invokes this provision in time of national emergency—and a Presidentially declared emergency now exists.

Second, beyond this criminal provision, there are practical noncriminal restraints to the same effect. No international ship or plane will allow an American to board without a passport. Customs and immigration officials may check outgoing passengers for passports.

Acheson Imposed Flat Ban

Third, even as to hemisphere travel for which passports are not ordinarily needed, the Secretary of State has broad authority. He can flatly prohibit a person's leaving the United States at all.

This last provision was invoked in Mr. Robeson's case in 1950. Dean Acheson, then Secretary of State, revoked Mr. Robeson's passport after a world tour in which he had denounced the United States and prohibited travel by Mr. Robeson in the Western Hemisphere as well.

Since then Mr. Robeson has repeatedly tried to get a passport, but without success. The State Department has refused to process his application because he will not answer the question of whether he is a member or supporter of the Communist party.

In a previous suit the courts refused to grant Mr. Robeson any relief on the ground that he had not completed administrative requirements. The Supreme Court refused to review the case.

Has Offer From Britain

Mr. Robeson has an offer to play several parts next summer at the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre in Stratford-on-Avon, England. He wants the passport so he can take the offer, but the State Department has again demanded that he sign a non-Communist affidavit.

The whole travel problem is now before the Supreme Court in two major passport cases. They raise the questions of whether the State Department may deny passports to persons who will not make a non-Communist affidavit and whether denials may be based on secret information.

Somewhat different legal questions are raised in another passport case just taken to the United States Court of Appeals here—that of Corliss Lamont, lecturer and philosopher.

In 1956 the State Department included on the regular passport form for the first time three questions about Communist party membership. When Dr. Lamont filled out his application, he left these spaces blank. Although he had previously denied party membership, he said it would violate his principles to answer such questions.

His lawyer, Leonard B. Boudin of New York, argues that there is no statutory or constitutional authority for a "general inquisition" into the beliefs of the 600,000 Americans who get passports each year.

Mr. Boudin also says that some persons have refused to answer the new questions on the passport form for religious reasons and have nonetheless received passports. Not to do the same for Mr. Lamont, he argues, is discrimination.

Robeson Thanks Chinese

HONG KONG, April 19 (Reuters)—Mr. Robeson has sent a message to the Chinese people saying "one day I hope to greet you on Chinese soil," the New China news agency reported today.

The message thanked the Chinese people for celebrating Mr. Robeson's sixtieth birthday and continued: "And thanks be to your brave leaders and to all the Chinese people for their Socialist contribution and their defense of peace."

Robeson Career Revival Stirs U. S. Foreign Press

NEW YORK—The long dormant career of singer Paul Robeson has become a matter of international interest in recent months as the famed singer has re-entered the field of public entertainment.

In the past week, announcement has been made that the U. S. State Department has given Robeson limited freedom to travel outside the country. Although his request for a passport to travel in Europe has been denied again, he will be allowed to travel to South American countries.

Meanwhile, in India, Russia and Germany, the occasion of his 60th birthday provided opportunities for the expression of anti-American sentiments by a variety of groups.

In East Berlin, for example, the chairman of the local Robeson committee told an audience of 3,000 celebrating the singer's birthday, "Dulles won't congratulate Robeson on his 60th birthday, but we do it herewith." Other speakers referred to the U. S. with great sarcasm as "The land of liberty."

The singer's birthday was also noted officially in Moscow with greetings being sent publicly from high placed personages in the Kremlin. A birthday celebration was also held in New Delhi, India, which brought a letter of greeting from Prime Minister Nehru.

Meanwhile, Robeson is continuing his concertizing in the United States. He will give a concert in New York's Carnegie Hall early in May, according to current plans.

Segregation Party must hold meeting to select candidate

MONTGOMERY, Ala., March 22—(AP)—Atty. Gen. John Patterson's office has ruled that the Segregationist Party in Alabama must hold a nominating convention if it plans to enter candidates in the general election in November.

The secretary of state's office requested the ruling after John F. Duggar III of Montgomery listed his name there as the party's gubernatorial candidate.

Candidates must be nominated by a party meeting "held at or in the immediate vicinity of the voting place of the respective precinct or voting district on the first Tuesday in May on even-numbered years," under Alabama's code of 1940.

The Oath's History

Birmingham Post-Herald

FOR MANY YEARS Alabama has had a loyalty oath but it has applied only to "nominees" of the party. This meant it applied only to local and state races, since national convention delegates, the party presidential electors, and members of the state committee, are not nominated but actually elected in the primary.

Nobody had any particular objection to this oath.

After the States' Rights revolt of 1948, however, a new oath was required of all candidates for office. They were obliged—in effect—to swear that they had been loyal to the Democratic Presidential nominee in the last election and that they would be loyal in the election to come.

This is the oath in issue today. What makes it such an issue is that, unlike any oath we have ever had before and unlike anything in other Southern states, it undertakes to bind this largely one-party state to the national nominee of the party in a time of such bitter division that the nominee can quite possibly be unbearably alien to our people. Thus bound we are powerless against his nomination and against his election.

States Rights Movement Would Aid Southland

Take note of the great prestige and influence of Southern democracy, even in the North, during the days of the States Rights movement, and how that prestige and influence has been lost since that movement was killed in 1952.

During the Civil Rights Battle in Congress of 1957, the Southern senator chosen to lead our battle wrote me: "We are fighting with our backs to the wall." Not a single Northern senator voted with the South, and Northern Democratic senators kept prodding Republican senators so that an agreement was reached between them to set aside the filibuster rule, and bring in an even worse bill, if Southerners should further resist.

There was an inconsistency in asking for help from the North when Southern Democratic committees were all set to unconditionally back any radical nominee of Democratic convention in raising an "issue" against any Northerner who might assist us.

Southern Democratic leaders, thus shunned and opposed in the Congress of 1957, were at the same time generally snubbed in the press of the North. Also, since 1952, Southern Democrats, losing confidence in the national Democratic set-up, have shunned the Democratic Party so that six Southern States (counting Oklahoma) actually went into the Republican column in 1956.

When we had the States Rights movement the withholding of electoral votes in four Southern states penalized Northern Democrats so that they could not so effectively raise anti-Southern issues as against Republicans, and the Republicans at Washington, under leadership of Taft, even had a coalition with Southern senators defeating or sidetracking all FEPC bills and furnishing a huge vote to keep the filibuster.

The States' Rights movement was looked on at the time as a great balance wheel in our political machinery, and Southern Democrats, having confidence in the fight being thus made within the Party, voted Democratic—not a single Southern State going into the Republican column.

The fight then made within the Democratic Party for States' Rights encouraged a spirit for States' Rights within the Republican Party. Robert Taft, candidate for Republican presidential nomination, publicly stated in early part of 1952: "I would be willing to have a States' Righter for vice president." But after the States' Rights movement was killed, Northern newspapers turned against us, so did the Republican leaders, and Northern Democrats became worse than ever.

The consistent and courageous fight for the freedom of the states inspires the hearts of true Americans from ocean to ocean and from the Canadian border to tthe Gulf. But the inconsistent utterances of Southern Democratic committeemen—"We will back Northern Democrats who fight us, we are only against Republicans"—inspire no true citizens, and can only make enemies for our Southland.

If we can genuinely revive the States' Rights movement, Southern Democracy, now shunned and even prostrate in its inertia, will then arise, as from the dead, to a newness of life, teeming with vigor, glory and honor.

Alabama States Righters Lead Committee Races

Constitution Atlanta, Ga. 5-8-58 P. 2

Patterson Far Ahead but Faces Runoff in Gubernatorial Primary

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP)—Candidates who fought what they called outside racial agitation held widening leads Wednesday for governor and for control of Democratic party machinery in Alabama.

Atty. Gen. John Patterson ran well ahead of 13 opponents for governor but faced a runoff election June 3 against Circuit Judge George Wallace.

Returns from Tuesday's Democratic primary also showed States Rights candidates for the state Democratic committee leading in 35 of 72 committee races. They campaigned against retention of the loyalty oath aimed at keeping Alabama in the Democratic party.

Unofficial returns from 2,903 of 3,313 boxes in the governor's race showed: Patterson 161,025; Wallace 133,987; former State Sen. Jimmy Faulkner 76,515.

The other 11 candidates were far behind.

Wallace, saying he had achieved his immediate goal of getting into the runoff, predicted victory on June 3. But Patterson said he is confident he can hold the margin in the runoff.

The attorney general, son of the slain crusader A. L. Patterson, filed a court suit two years ago which resulted in an injunction to put the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People out of business in Alabama.

VICE ELEMENT

Patterson referred to the NAACP suit repeatedly during the gubernatorial campaign. He also charged that gangsters and racketeers, whose grip on Phenix City was broken by a vice cleanup after the murder of his father, were campaigning against him.

Wallace threatened to jail any federal agent caught investigating complaints of jury discrimination in his circuit, and later announced he was closing the records of his court to the new federal Civil Rights Commission.

Both Patterson and Wallace promised to close any school threatened with integration.

STRONG LEAD

Sen. Albert Boutwell of Birmingham maintained a strong lead over four opponents for lieutenant governor, another race with a distinct segregation flavor. But he was forced into a runoff with Sen. E. W. Skidmore of Tuscaloosa.

Alabama Political Control Is Split

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP)—States righters and party regulars gained an even split in last Tuesday's Democratic primary and left control of party machinery in Alabama to be settled in a runoff June 3.

Official returns from the first election, canvassed Tuesday, showed states rights candidates won 29 seats and national party loyalists won 23 places on the State Democratic Executive Committee.

The remaining 20 seats on the party governing body which will set Alabama's course in the 1960 presidential election were left to be determined in the runoff. Two candidates will compete for each place.

But the loyalists are sure of winning at least seven more because all 14 candidates seekng those seats are party regulars. That assures the loyalist faction of at least 30 places on the 72-member committee.

By the same token, the states righters who oppose retention of the present party loyalty oath are certain to pick up at least one more seat for lack of opposition in the runoff. That will give them 30 seats.

The outcome in the 12 contested races will determine which faction wins control of the committee, dominated the past eight years by the party regulars.

If the states righters regain control, they are pledged to rescind the controversial loyalty oath which requires candidates running in the primaries to pledge their support to the Democratic nominees in the general election.

Without the loyalty pledge, candidates for presidential elector would be free again, as they were 10 years ago, to go outside the party and support independent canddates for President.

On the other hand, if the loyalists stay in command and keep the loyalty oath in force, candidates for electors will have to swear allegiance to the Democratic presidential ticket no matter who the nominees might be.

The oath was adopted in 1952 to prevent a recurrence of the 1948 party revolt. Alabama's 11 presidential electors that year voted for the Thurmond - Wright ticket instead of Democratic Nominee Harry Truman because they disliked his racial policies.

Foes Of Oath 4 Seats Shy Of Majority

States righters in Alabama, who might bolt the national party again in 1960, are only four seats shy of an assured majority on the incoming State Democratic Executive Committee.

An official recanvass of election returns confirmed Thursday that the states rights faction which wants to junk the controversial party loyalty oath won 32 of the 72 committee seats in the May 6 Democratic primary.

Party regulars who advocate unquestioned allegiance to the national party in presidential election years won 23 seats in last week's election.

17 UNDECIDED

Of the 17 committee places left to be decided in a June runoff primary, the states righters are assured of winning one more in the Ninth Congressional District. Three seats are still open there and only two loyalists are running against four loyalty oath opponents. The loyalists could win only two of the three.

On the other hand, the party regulars are certain to pick up seven more places in the runoff because of the absence of states rights opposition in the Seventh and Eighth district.

That gives the states righters an assurance of 33 seats and the loyalists 30, with control of the state committee resting on the outcome of the contest for the other nine places. It takes 37 votes to control the party governing body.

The recanvass of the May 6 returns was necessary because Party Chairman Roy Mayhall said he discovered that the votes in the Fourth District used in the first official tabulation Tuesday were only partial returns. They showed three states righters elected in that district, or a total of 29 statewide.

When the complete returns from Calhoun County, in the Fourth District, were substituted for the partial vote, they gave the states righters enough to elect six of their number instead of three in that district.

Since each of the nine congressional districts elects eight members of the state committee, two seats must be decided in the Fourth District in the runoff, with four candidates running. Two are states righters, two are loyalists.

Five committee seats will be filled in the Second District in the runoff, six will be elected in the Seventh District, one in the Eighth and three in the Ninth.

The outcome of the factional fight for control of the party machinery will largely determine Alabama's course in the 1960 presidential election because the new state committee will be in office then and will set rules for the election.

2 Parties Betray South, States Righter Charges

A States' Rights party leader said Wednesday that the South has been totally betrayed and humiliated by the two national parties which are the same in almost everything but name."

The charge came from Ben Casanas Toledano, acting chairman of the States' Rights party in Orleans parish. Toledano said local States' Rights committees and expect to have candidates in the 1960 election.

"It is unfortunate that southern Democratic and Republican leaders don't have the courage to speak what they know to be the truth," he said. His statement continued:

"The long obvious has now been confirmed by official sources. The people of the South are without a political party which will defend and fight for the conservative principles upon which our great constitutional republic was founded.

"First, a Republican administration used federal troops to force integration in Little Rock. Now, the Democratic party's national chairman has finally forced a showdown with Southerners who oppose the dictates of the national Democratic party.

"The bitter truth is that the South has been totally betrayed and humiliated by the two national parties which are the same in almost everything but name.

"People will suffer in silence just so long, and then they will be heard.

"The only hope for the South and for conservatives throughout the United States is the formation of a political party which will, in fact, fight to preserve the constitutional rights of each of the sovereign states.

"The natural tendency of most of us Americans is to delegate to others the duties of preserving our great rights and privileges. Unless each one of us is willing to work and fight for his own principles here and now, there will soon be nothing worth fighting for."

States Rights Stand Urged By Virginian

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP)—The North Carolina Defenders of States' Rights, Inc., newest anti-integration group in the state, was asked Saturday to fight in "the most titanic struggle the world has ever seen."

The call came from William J. Storey, superintendent of city schools of south Norfolk, Va., at the group's first formal meeting here.

The Rev. James P. Dees, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church at Statesville and a director of the new organization, presided at the luncheon and three-hour meeting that followed. About 65 persons attended.

The meeting included a closed session, an open meeting during which Storey spoke, and a board of directors meeting at which officers were elected. Dees said the directors voted not to release the names of the officers until directors who could not be present were notified. There are 15 directors.

INTEGRATION 'EVIL'

Storey, a football coach at Davidson College in the late 1940s, told the group, "integration is an evil and ugly thing."

He went on to say that "integration was conceived in the minds of Karl Marx and other Communists, and if white and colored blood are mixed the white race is lost."

In another action, the group endorsed a resolution commending Gov. J. Lindsay Almond of Virginia, where a number of schools have been closed in the face of integration decisions.

The resolution stated that "it is our prayer that the Virginians will continue 'standing like a stone wall.' It is our purpose to make it clear to all that the people of North Carolina stand at the side of Virginia in this struggle."

Anti-loyalists squeak through—

Righters win control, Patterson asks unity

Birmingham, Ala. Wed. 6-4-58 P. 1

States Righters won control of Democratic Party affairs in Alabama today and apparently insured repeal of the loyalty oath which binds Alabama to the national party.

Complete returns from Clay County, which held the balance of power overnight until they were tabulated this morning, cut into the States Righters' earlier lead in the Fourth Congressional District.

But it wasn't enough to keep them from winning the two seats on the State Democratic Executive Committee at stake in that district.

THE TWO PLACES in the Fourth District, plus three others in the Ninth and 32 seats won in the first primary May 6 assured the anti-loyalty oath candidates of 37 seats on the 82-member committee.

National party Loyalists held an overnight lead for all five places at stake in the Second District, but late returns from Escambia and Baldwin Counties put States Righters in front for two of the seats.

That gave the loyalty oath opponents a possible 39 votes on the state committee.

Loyalists held a slimmer lead for all five committee seats at stake in the Second District.

But States Righters won two contested places in the Ninth District plus another they picked up by default for lack of loyalist opposition in that district. Only two party regulars were running for three places there.

WITH THE 32 seats they won in the first primary May 6, the States Rights Democrats were sure of 35 places on the new 72-member state committee. It takes 37 for a majority on the committee.

Loyalist candidates got 23 last month and added seven yesterday with opposition for an assured total of 30.

Six seats were filled in the Seventh District and one in the Eighth, but all the runoff candidates were Loyalists.

Seventeen places in all were at stake, but with the Loyalists winning seven and the loyalty oath opponents picking up one by default, control of the committe depended on five contested races in the Second District and two each in the Fourth and Ninth.

State Rights candidates were pledged to repeal the loyalty oath which requires candidates running in the party primaries to bind themselves to the Democratic nominees in the general election.

In a presidential election year, that means candidates for presidential elector must agree in advance to support whichever candidate the national party nominates.

The oath also disqualifies any prospective candidate who voted Republican in 1956.

WITHOUT THE pledge, electors would be free to support someone else as they did in 1948 when Alabama's electoral votes, cast by Democrats, went to the Thurmond-Wright States Rights ticket.

Here is the vote in the nine contested races on which control of the state committee rested, and the candidates' designations:

SECOND DISTRICT—(393 boxes of 440)—J. E. Brantley (L), 28,388; John F. Britton (L), 26,869; Charles W. Eiland (L), 26,368; Howard Haygood (L), 27,428; Henry Heller (SR), 25,338; Clifford A. Herren (SR), 24,807; W. M. Hodgson (L), 25,807; C. G. Kettler (SR), 25,375; J. B. Nix Jr. (SR), 25,386; Albert L. Roemer (SR), 24,253.

FOURTH DISTRICT (273 boxes of 302)—Robert M. Alton Jr. (SR), 22,582; Travis L. Arnold (L), 19,772; Tom Cooley (L), 17,285; Albert J. Winfield (SR), 22,470.

NINTH DISTRICT (Complete)—Barron Bethea (SR), 48,621; T O. Ellis (L), 37,687; Lawrence McNeil (SR), 52,832; John Golden (SR), 48,471; Raymond Weeks (L), 36,901.

FOURTH DISTRICT (299 boxes of 302)—Alton (SR) 24,004; Arnold (L), 21,550; Cooley (L), 19,395; Winfield (SR) 24,086.

State Rights Group Wins In Alabama

34d

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — States Rights Democrats demanding independence from the national leadership regained control of party affairs in Alabama Wednesday and opened the door for a possible bolt again in 1960.

Complete returns from Tuesday's Democratic runoff primary gave the States Righters 39 seats on the incoming State Democratic Executive Committee. It takes 37 votes on the 72-member committee for a majority.

The States Righters' return to power after eight years of national party loyalist domination gave them the votes to repeal the rigid loyalty oath which has bound Alabama to the national party in the past two presidential elections.

Meanwhile, Atty. Gen. John Patterson in his first statewide political campaign piled up an unprecedented vote in winning the Democratic nomination for governor.

Returns from 3,181 boxes of 3,212 in the state gave the 36-year-old attorney general a record 312,457 votes to 247,509 for Circuit Judge George Wallace, his runoff opponent.

The voters also nominated veteran State Sen. Albert Boutwell of Birmingham for lieutenant governor and Mrs. Bettye Frink of Leeds for secretary of state.

State Righters now control Demo Party

Alabama States Righters were returned to power in Tuesday's runoff primary election after eight years of national party loyalist domination.

Results give the States Righters enough votes to repeal the rigid loyalty oath which has bound Alabama to the national party in the past two presidential elections.

Result of Tuesday's election also opens the door for a possible bolt in Alabama again in 1960.

Late returns assure the States Righters of at least 37 seats on the 72-member state executive committee. States Righters hold a narrow lead in the battle for two more places which would give them a total of 39 seats.

ATTY. GEN. John Patterson, who won the Democratic nomination for governor with a record vote, said he plans a brief rest before plunging into the business of organizing his administration.

With all but six boxes reported, Patterson showed a 64,386-vote lead over Circuit Judge George C. Wallace.

In unoffocial returns, with 3202 boxes reported, Patterson polled 312,347 to 247,959 votes for Wallace.

The official state canvass will be in Montgomery June 10.

Patterson was pledged the support of State Sen. Albert Boutwell of Jefferson County, who defeated State Sen. E. W. Skidmore of Tuscaloosa for the lieutenant governor's nomination.

BOUTWELL SAID he would sit down with Patterson to talk over his problems.

"I expect to have his advice. Mr. Patterson is entitled to that. We expect to work very harmoniously together," Boutwell said.

Boutwell received 310,400 votes and Skidmore received 199,696 votes.

A red-haired Birmingham housewife, Mrs. Bettye Frink, received 253,858 votes to win the nomination as secretary of state against 236,749 for Rep. Pete Mathews of Clay County. This was the count from 3185 boxes.

Meanwhile, a veteran party leader who never gave up trying to scuttle the loyalty oath may be chairman of the new Democratic Executive Committee.

Frank Mizell Jr., a Montgomery attorney, has the support of strong elements to succeed Roy Mayhall of Jasper as committee chairman.

Mizell, elected to his fourth term on the party governing body, fought in vain against the rigid new loyalty oath imposed in 1952 after national party loyalists won control of the state committee.

THE PLEDGE was written into party rules to prevent a recurrence of the 1948 rebellion.

The oath binds candidates to the Democratic nominees in the general election.

The 25-year-old blonde housewife thus preserved a tradition of feminine superiority in Alabama politics. No male candidate has ever been elected to statewide office when opposed by a feminine contender.

States Rights spokesmen sought to minimize talk of a new party revolt like the one in 1948 when Alabama's 11 presidential electors, all Democrats, voted for the independent Thurmond - Wright presidential ticket.

The States Righters said their immediate goal is to make Eisenhower Democrats eligible to seek office again in the Democratic primaries. Under the existing loyalty oath, they were barred from the party elections this year because they voted Republican in 1956.

JOHN PATTERSON, winner in the Alabama primary runoff for the Democratic nomination for governor, launched his political career after his father was slain.

Engelhardt Seeking Party Post, Trio Say

MOBILE, Dec. 7 (AP) — Three States Rights members of the newly elected State Democratic Executive Committee today claimed former State Sen. Sam Engelhardt was permitting his name to be used as a candidate for the committee chairmanship.

The statement said Engelhardt's reported action was in direct contradiction of specific engagements entered into by caucus" at Montgomery Sept. 3.

At that caucus, 39 States Rights members pledged themselves to repeal the Democratic Party loyalty oath and to support Frank Mizell of Montgomery for the chairmanship at the committee's organizational meeting in January.

The statement claimed that Circuit Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, outgoing chairman and Loyalist leader, is actively supporting Engelhardt for the post. It added that this indicated the Loyalist group was still fighting to retain the oath.

At Montgomery, Engelhardt said earlier today he would rather not comment on a report that a movement was under way to elect him chairman.

The statement was by three committeemen from the third district, W. H. Garner, Union Springs; and S. Foy Williams and Dan R. Morgan, Dothan.

It was issued by Gessner T. McCorvey, Mobile, former chairman of the State Committee and longtime States Rights leader.

The oath as advocated by the Loyalist group requires candidates to bind themselves to support national party candidates in the general election. The States Rights group would require only that the candidates pledge support of the candidates named in the state primary.

Main goal: To junk pledge—

Third party not anti oath candidates' aim, says Lona

BY FRED TAYLOR
News staff writer

Formation of a third party is not the aim of those who want to repeal the loyalty oath for candidates in Alabama Democratic primaries so they won't have to pledge to support national party nominess for president and vice president.

This was emphasized Saturday by Coleman Long of Uniontown, who helped lead the 1948 States' Rights revolt and who was one of the anti-loyalty oath candidates elected to the State Democratic Executive Committee in the May 6 Democratic primary.

Long said he and other States' Righters "wish to stay with the National Democratic Party" in 1960.

But he proposed to submit the question of national party loyalty to a statewide vote in Alabama, if the 1960 Democratic National Convention adopts a platform "hostile" to the South or nominates a "radical" candidate for president. He mentioned "Soapy" Williams, (Michigan Gov. G. Mennen Williams), as such a candidate who might be chosen.

While Long said he and other antiloyalist candidates are willing to "make reasonable concessions as to the platform and choice of a presidential candidate," he declared that "we are free men and will fight for our Southern way of life."

CONCERNING speculation that Alabama might help lead a third party movement in 1960, Long said "That is not the wish or aim of any one of the oath repeal candidates with whom I have discussed it."

In advocating a statewide referendum on the question, if a strong antisegregation plank is placed in the 1960 Democratic national platform, Long added:

"In the unhappy event of a hostile platform and a radical candidate, I shall advocate submitting the decision to the voters of Alabama as to the course we should take.

"Many of our group are completely familiar with the procedures, under our election laws, for insuring that our electors carry out the will of the people. To me this is the only reasonable, democratic and morally right course to pursue."

LONG ALSO took some pokes at Judge Roy Mayhall of Jasper, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, who also was re-elected to the committee in the May 6 primary, and other Democratic loyalists for advocating retention of the loyalty oath for candidates.

Chairman Mayhall has warned that repeal of the loyalty oath would "destroy" the Democratic Party in Alabama.

Judge Mayhall, who asserted he wouldn't support national Democratic Party nominees for president and vice president, "if they crossed the color line" and placed a Negro on the ticket in 1960, stressed that "the loyalty oath has nothing to do with segregation. We are all for segregation."

Mayhall asserted that anti-loyalty oath backers won't be satisifed with any candidate the national party nominates for president. He added that to set up a "splinters" party would make it easier for the Republicans to stay in power.

BOTH LONG and another antiloyalist — Frank J. Mizell of Montgomery, who was re-elected to the state committee May 6—declared their immediate goal is to get the loyalty pledge repealed.

This would permit "Eisenhower Democrats" to seek office in Democratic primary elections again in Alabama.

The Associated Press reported Mizell as saying that a return of party machinery in Alabama to control of the States' Righters who oppose the loyalty oath would restore to the disqualified "Eisenhower Democrats a free man's right to be a candidate in his own party."

Mizell, Montgomery attorney, pointed out that 195,000 voters who supported President Eisenhower in 1956 are ineligible to run in the Democratic primaries under the present rules.

While many of these were old-line Republicans, Mizell estimated that 150,000 of the Eisenhower votes came from Democrats who wouldn't support the party's national ticket.

Collins Says South Requires New States' Rights Concept

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Gov. Leroy Collins said Friday night the South faces a bright future and needs to adopt a matching conception of states' rights.

"The most meaningful thing we can do to assure the exercise of states' rights is to improve state competence," Collins said.

"It is my firm conviction that our best hope for the future is for the states to concentrate on accepting responsibility for new emerging needs as they develop—rather than to seek to unravel programs heretofore established and to return these to exclusive state jurisdiction."

Collins' speech was prepared for the Southern Regional Conference of the Council of State Governments.

"In the past 20 years we have performed what is perhaps the greatest 'bootstrap operation' in the history of our nation," Collins said.

"In the past decade, the Gulf Coast of the South alone has experienced industrial construction six times the value of all industry built in New England in the same period.

"Industrial growth has drawn people to our cities. The South, two-thirds rural in 1930, is now half urban and will be three-fifths urban by 1975."

By the same date, Collins said, "Southerners for the first time since the Civil War will be earning incomes equal to the national average."

The conference elected L. G. Merritt of South Carolina its chairman for the coming year and named John E. Sheffield Jr. of Georgia vice chairman.

Alabama urged to lead—

Boutwell sounds call for restoring of rights to states

BY FRED TAYLOR, News staff writer

Alabama's incoming lieutenant governor today called for this state to take the lead in a nation-wide program aimed at restoring "many rights to the states which have been usurped by the federal government."

State Sen. Albert Boutwell of Jefferson, lieutenant governor nominate and segregation leader, said he would elaborate on his plan in an address to a meeting being sponsored by the Dallas County Citizens Council tonight in Selma's Memorial Stadium.

BOUTWELL

Dallas State Sen. Walter Givhan of Safford, executive secretary of that council and temporary chairman of Alabama Citizens Councils, announced the rally for 8 p.m.

Sen. Boutwell, chief sponsor of the "freedom of choice" amendment and one of the leaders in pushing through the Alabama School Placement Act, declared:

"I think Alabama should take the lead in a nationwide program to restore the many rights to the states to handle local problems and stop further federal usurpation of these rights, which the U. S. Constitution actually guarantees to the states."

BOUTWELL, chairman of a 14-member House-Senate screening committee to study segregation legislation (this committee was carried forward by joint resolution adopted by the Legislature last year), also has urged that a new group be set up by the incoming Legislature.

The present committee, which functioned as a clearing house for racial measures during the 1957 session, will expire with expiration of terms of members after the November general election. Some of them were renominated in the recent Democratic primary elections.

The Jefferson senator said the work of this screening committee had convinced him of the need for some form of a special segregation committee on a continuing basis.

He emphasized that one of the most vital functions of such a committee is to screen all racial measures to make certain that some bill doesn't slip through to jeopardize measures already enacted to help maintain segregation.

SEN. BOUTWELL said immediately after his nomination as lieutenant governor that "I will work with Atty. Gen. John Patterson and the Legislature for a constructive program in Alabama."

He added he would "work for a return to Alabama and other states their rights which have been usurped by the federal government!"

"And these rights include many matters other than segregation," he said.

Boutwell stressed the need for a broad educational program to help enlist the aid of other states in the fight.

Sen. Givhan has urged a big turnout for tonight's meeting in the Selma stadium, indicating Boutwell's speech would give a preview of the state's segregation policies.

"SEN. BOUTWELL knows what has already been done and what we still need to do," added the Dallas senator, who said Citizens Council members and other leaders from over the state are expected to attend.

This meeting follows recent announcement of transfer of state headquarters of Alabama Citizens Councils from Montgomery to Selma.

Sen. Givhan was designated as temporary chairman of the state organization until a permanent executive secretary is named. It has been without a secretary since resignation of State Sen. Sam Engelhardt Jr., of Macon, when he became a candidate for lieutenant governor.

Sen Boutwell went to Montgomery early today to attend a meeting of the legislative interim cotton study committee, of which he is a member.

Railroad labor leaders call for states riahts

BY ELLISON W. SMITH
News staff writer

The battle cry for "states rights" is reverberating beyond the political arena and into the structure of one of the country's largest industries.

A railroad labor leader said today at a meeting in the Tutwiler "We cannot subscribe to the proposition that the Interstate Commerce Commission should be permitted to invade the rights presently reserved for state commissions in connection with train and station abandonments and intrastate rates and fares."

H. E. Gilbert, international president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, spoke to more than 500 members of the brotherhood and its Ladies' Society at the union's Southern states convention here.

IN HIS SPEECH he belabored sections of the Smathers Bill aimed at railroad aid. "Section three of the bill would take from state commissions the right to set freight rates on interstate commerce. This is another serious invasion of states rights which would stem from state the right to regulate intrastate rail rates and service."

Gilbert said the railroad industry needs "relief" in some areas and added that the bill, with the exception of some sections, will benefit the industry.

He charged "railroads are using every available means to get out of the passenger business. It is frightening how successful they have been in eliminating many important trains and, given a way to avoid state regulation, they can break the back of the service we have left. The passenger train could fast become a memory."

The railroad union leader said a section of the bill in Congress would empower the Interstate Commerce Commission to rule on train and station abandonment in certain cases.

"MOST STATES are aware of the problem and want to keep what little service they have left. State commissons are better able to check the poverty and no patronage claims advanced by carriers seeking to reduce or eliminate service.

"We have cases on record where trains were conveniently left out of local timetables even though they operated daily. The railroad then went before the state board to plead no patronage. However, the board ruled the carrier deliberately tried to lose business and ordered the passenger service continued."

He said the answer to many of railroading's financial problems lies in a better selling job to the public.

"A rededication to the principle of public convenience and necessity must replace the present policy that every phase of railroad operation has to yield a handsome profit."

The meeting which is scheduled to last through Saturday will emphasize discussions on railroading economics, unemployment and legislation.

AT A BANQUET tomorrow night the speaker will be W. J. Weil, general secretary and treasurer of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen.

Other national officers who will address the group representing 10 states will be Mrs. Lillian Kemp of Tacoma, Wash., grand president of the Ladies' Society; Ray Scott, general secretary and treasurer and A. M. Lampley, vice president national legislative representative.

More than 500 members of the brotherhood and its Ladies' Society were present at today's meeting.

OPEN 'GRASS ROOTS' DRIVE

McGowan Sees Revived States Righters Holding Vote Wedge

By BERRY REECE
Daily News Staff Writer

The 1960 presidential election will be close enough for the newly-revived State's Rights movement here to throw it into the House of Representatives, Judge M. M. McGowan said here today.

The Hinds Circuit Judge, a leader in the 1948 and 1956 State's Rights movements, announced yesterday a steering committee met Tuesday in Jackson to "organize a 'grass roots' SR movement in every county in Mississippi."

He said today there would be an organizational meeting in Hinds County in early January.

There is also planned: 1) a permanent SR headquarters in Jackson and 2) a drive to attract especially youth to the movement.

SIMILAR TO 1948

The object is a revival of the same purpose as the original 1948 State's Right Party throughout the South. This was to withhold electoral votes from both major parties and throw the presidential election into the House of Representatives, where proportionately strong Southern strength could sway the election.

The 1948 southwide movement, which secured the electoral votes of Mississippi and three other states, ran former South Carolina governor, now Sen. Strom Thurmond, as presidential candidate, and the late Gov. Fielding Wright, of Mississippi, as vice-president.

In 1956, McGowan spearheaded in Mississippi the smaller SR movement—whose candidates were Sen. Harry Byrd of Virginia and Rep. John Bell Williams of Mississippi—which got 43,000 votes and took several counties here.

Attending the Thursday meeting in the Deposit Guaranty Bank Building were McGowan, Brandon Mayor John McLaurin, Jackson attorney Russell Moore, and Clay Tucker of Woodville.

President pro tem of the state Senate, Earl Evans; Sen. L. B. Porter, of Newton County; and Rep. Joe Moss, of Hinds County are also prominent in the current movement, but could not attend the rally-meeting, McGowan said.

The State's Righters are not currently in contact with similar movements in any other states. "We hope to spearhead the movement," Judge McGowan said, adding, "There is a lack of cohesion among Southerners we hope to change."

Despite the almost 2-1 sweep of both houses of Congress in November, Judge McGowan thinks this trend towards the national Democrats will change by 1960 and a close race will give vote-withholding SR candidates a chance.

SEES TIDE TURNING

"There will be a revulsion against the Democrats by 1960," said the Judge. He also thinks the Republicans will run New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller for president, which will make the 1960 race "very close" between the major parties.

The long-range purpose of the SR movement, McGowan asserted, is to "break the stranglehold of the two national parties," and effect a re-allignment of voting interests in the country.

"A major effort will be made to attract as many young people as possible to the movement," he said.

Judge McGowan said that after the first of the year organizations of states rights committees will start functioning statewide. He said some form of central or corresponding organization is to be maintained in Jackson.

Similar To 1948 Moves

"The actual purpose of the movement varies little, if any, from 1948," he explained. "That is, that the Democratic Party machinery of each Southern state withhold their electoral votes from the nominees of the party and dedicate them to Southern states rights candidates for president and vice president."

Judge McGowan said, "The ultimate purpose of course is to throw the election of president and vice president into the House of Representatives and thus bring about a complete realignment of political forces in our country."

The movement in 1948 had Senator Strom Thurmond (D., S. C.), then governor, and the late Gov. Fielding L. Wright of Mississippi as presidential and vice presidential candidates. They won the electoral votes of four states and one from Tennessee.

In the 1952 presidential election, Judge McGowan and other Democratic leaders formed an organization of Democrats for Eisenhower. Like others, Judge McGowan retained his Democratic status on the state level under a 1948 states rights sponsored bill permitting that.

On National Level

Judge McGowan said the revived movement is aimed at the national Democratic Party and not the Mississippi Democratic Party, which has refused to follow the parent organization on its civil rights and other anti-Southern proposals.

Discussing revival of the states rights movement, Judge McGowan said, "We are sliding helplessly into a one party system in America."

"That means," he asserted, "a socialistic government."

"There can be but one party in a planned socialist society, for you can't have but one set of planners," he said. "The master minds of socialism who control both major parties do not care which one wins. But the very thought of throwing the election into the House strikes terror in their hearts.

Compromisers Are Foes

"Compromisers are our most deadly enemies," Judge McGowan asserted. "The heel of tyranny has temporarily shifted from Arkansas to Alabama, where the Lyndon Johnson-Sam Rayburn civil rights compromise is reaping its harvest of despotism and oppression.

"The states rights group of Mississippi is a political organization operative solely at the national political level," he explained. "It has not and will never set itself up as a judge for the people of Mississippi as to the kind or quality of its officers or institutions."

States Righters Are Reactivated

Mississippi Group Would Withhold Electoral Votes

TO REALIGN POLITICS

Jackson, Miss., Bureau

JACKSON, Miss., Dec. 12.—A movement to withhold Southern electoral votes from both major parties in an effort to force realignment of the political forces of the nation has been revived in Mississippi.

Circuit Judge M. M. McGowan of Jackson revealed Friday that a states' rights group has been reactivated and will proceed with organization work at the grass roots in the 82 counties.

States Rights Affected By Obscure Measure

By HOWARD SUTTLE
Daily News Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — An obscure bill now before the Senate Agriculture Committee may turn out to be the vehicle for abolishing one of the few remaining rights of the states.

The bill is co-sponsored by Senators Neuberger and Morse, of Oregon, which would abolish future trading in onions. A similar bill already has passed the House.

The attack on futures trading in onions arose because of the belief of some onion growers that the trading depresses onion prices. The issue has been hotly debated since 1956 and both Agriculture Committees have held hearings.

There are only about 12,000 commercial onion growers, the bulk of the crop being produced in New York, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and Texas. Not too many Congressmen have become excited about the matter. Few have attended the hearings and apparently the onion bill passed the House mostly because of the belief that more voters are against onion trading than are for it. But this was before the constitutional issue arose.

Offhand, it would seem that prohibiting futures trading in a minor commodity could not affect states' rights but it could. Here is how.

COURT RULES

In 1922, the Supreme Court held that an act to regulate trading in grain futures unconstitutional. Chief Justice Taft said in his decision that the statute was unconstitutional because futures trading is intrastate commerce and the law attempted to regulate intrastate commerce.

The decision that futures trading in any commodity is intrastate commerce still stands. But Chief Justice Taft also said in his opinion that if Congress found futures trading directly affected and interfered with interstat ecomerce, Congress might regulate futures trading to do away with such interference.

Congress acted on the Chief Justice's suggestion and approved the Grain Futures Act (now the Commodity Exchange Act), and incorporated in the new law findings of fact to show that future trading, even though it was intrastate commerce, directly affected interstate commerce and should be regulated. Chief Justice Taft upheld the Grain Futures act in a case titled "Board of Trade vs. Olson." The principle laid down also was upheld in subsequent decisions.

But in no case had the Supreme Court ever held that Congress has the right to prohibit intrastate commerce as distinguished from the right to regulate it.

ANOTHER BLOW

If the bill to prohibit futures trading in onions is approved by Congress and upheld by the Supreme Court, the Court must hold that not only has Congress the right to regulate intrastate commerce, but to prohibit it altogether. Thus, another devastating blow would be dealt to the dual system of government.

The constitutional aspects of this question were not raised in the House at all, except in debate on the floor and then only in a perfunctory way. That probably is the reason that the Southerners on the House Agriculture Committee paid comparatively little attention to the measure. In fact, most of the opposition to the bill came from Republican members of the Committee. The constitutional issue was raised in testimony before the Senate Committee but again only one or two Senators were present at the time and little attention was paid to the arguments on this phase of the controversy.

There are several Southerners on the Senate Agriculture Committee, which now has the bill under consideration after hearings late in March. These include Senators Allen J. Ellender. (D-La.), chairman; James O. Eastland (D-Miss.) Olin O. Johnston (D-S. C.) Spessard L. Holland (D-Fla.) Herman Talmadge, (D-Ga.).

Whether these Senators realize the implications of the proposal to do away with futures trading in onions is not known, but the Court as it is presently constituted, the power of Congress to prohibit intrastate commerce could easily be upheld.

States Rights Debate Brews For Governors

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., May 17 (AP)—A proposal for return of some specialized functions from federal to state control may spark a states rights dispute at the National Governors Conference opening here Sunday.

Gov. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine said his state and some others of small population are concerned over taking over functions which would necessitate additional tax loads.

HE REFERRED to a proposal that would entail states being cut in on the federal tax on telephone service, and abandonment of the federal vocational training program and subsidization of municipal sewage plants.

Muskie said Southern states ought to look at this question closely before going all out for states rights.

"But I'm afraid the Southern states, because of integration, will not want to make any concessions for fear of weakening their position in regard to states rights," he said.

Muskie said the federal programs involved are based on a broad principle of need rather than on states' individual ability to pay.

The question will be discussed Monday at a round-table parley of the governors after a report by New Hampshire Gov. Lane Dwinell, head of a committee which has studied it for the governors.

House Okays Bill Guarding States Rights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ignoring veto threats, the House passed a bill Thursday designed to prevent the Supreme Court from knocking out state laws not in direct conflict with federal laws on the same subject.

The bill, cleared by a roll-call vote of 240-155 after three days of debate, now goes to the Senate where indications were it wouldn't be nearly so popular.

There were predictions during House debate that the states rights measure would be vetoed if it gets to President Eisenhower desk, since the Justice and Labor departments have opposed it.

The bill was introduced by Rep. Howard W. Smith (D-Va) on the opening day of Congress last year and was approved by the House Judiciary Committee last month by a split vote. It had the backing of Southern Democrats and most Republicans. They said it was necessary to preserve the constitutional rights of state legislatures.

Opponents called it an open invitation to state legislatures to enact laws removing the teeth from federal states dealing with labor, civil rights, railroads, agriculture and integration.

In brief, the bill says that unless Congress specifically says so, no federal law shall be interpreted as superseding state laws on the same subject unless the state act is in direct and positive conflict with the federal law and the conflict cannot be reconciled.

Canvass Puts Rights Group At Demo Helm

States Righters have won control of the state's Democratic Party machinery, placing 39 members on the Democratic Executive Committee to 33 for the Loyalists, according to an official canvass of election returns.

Confirmation of the States Righters' victory came Tuesday morning after a meeting of a subcommittee of the Alabama Democratic Executive Committee for the purpose of officially certifying returns from the June 3 runoff election.

The formal canvass shows that States Righters added seven seats to the 32 they won in the May 6 primary, and that the Loyalists gained 10 over the previous total of 23.

SECOND DISTRICT

Victors in the Second Congressional District, of which Montgomery County is a part, are J. E. Brantley, John F. Britton, Howard Haygood, C. J. Kettler and J. B. Nix Jr.

Only 30 votes divided Kettler, who had a total vote of 29,444, from sixth place contender Henry Heller, with 29,414.

The complete official count, in addition to Kettler and Heller, includes:

Second Congressional District: Brantley, 31,766; Britton, 29,985; Charles W. Eiland, 28,380; Haygood, 30,487; Clifford A. Herren, 28,493; W. M. Hodgson, 29,112; Nix, 29,674; and Albert L. Roemer, 28,109.

Fourth Congressional District: Robert M. Alton Jr., 24,100; Travis L. Arnold, 21,814; Tom Cooley, 19,356; Albert J. Winfield, 24,249.

Seventh Congressional District: Robert F. Blake, 19,656; Robert A. Cummings, 20,687; Bill Fite, 19,427; Fred C. Folsom, 17,089; Fuller Kimbrell, 20,775; John W. Miller, 20,386; D. F. Mobley, 17,625; Cliff Palmer, 17,991; John D. Petree Jr., 22,203; James E. Shotts Sr., 18,478; Edgar Vickery, 18,634; Benjamin Grady Wilson, 19,978.

Eighth Congressional District: Thomas D. McDonald, 25,739 and Dan Daving, 18,791.

Ninth Congressional District: Barron Bethea, 49,212; T. O. Ellis, 37,739; John Golden, 48,733; Lawrence E. McNeil, 52,860; and Raymond Weeks, 40,803.

KIMBRELL RE-ELECTED

Fuller Kimbrell, a former cabinet member of Gov. James E. Folsom, was re-elected to the committee in the Seventh District, but Fred C. Folsom of Cullman, a nephew of the governor, was defeated in the runoff.

Kettler of Luverne and Nix of Evergreen in the Second District are States Righters. Others include Alton of Tallassee, and A. J. Winfield of Anniston, Fourth District; Bethea, Golden and McNeil, all of Birmingham, Ninth District.

Loyalists elected are:

States Rights Measure Still Is Up In Air

Senate Demos Due To Decide Fate This Week

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10 (UPI)—The Senate Democratic Policy Committee will decide this week the fate of the so-called states rights measure — one of the chief hurdles facing Congress in its race toward adjournment.

One informed source said today it was still very much up in the air" whether the Senate will take up any of the pending measures to nullify some recent decisions of the Supreme Court.

The Senate leadership was under strong pressure from both congressional and non-congressional sources to take action on the legislation. But any court-limiting bill almost certainly would set off a floor fight that could dash any hope of an adjournment by Saturday night or at least early next week.

Other major bills that could cause a delay are measures involving science education, farm, and social security. Other important legislation either was slated for quick enactment or a pigeonhole.

On the non-legislative front, the House was scheduled to act Wednesday on the contempt citation voted by House influence investigators against millionaire Bernard Goldfine, the gift-giving friend of Presidential Assistant Sherman Adams.

Also still to be acted on was the foreign aid money bill. The House voted slightly more than $3 billion for the program, but the Senate Appropriations Committee upped the figure by $440 million.

While the committee action was a tactical victory for President Eisenhower, who denounced the House action, the measure still must be approved by the full Senate and then go to a joint conference committee.

In order to speed work on the legislative chores still remaining, Acting Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield (Mont.) warned the Senate that it will "come in early and stay late" all this week.

The legislation to curb the effects of the recent court decisions seemed most likely to set off an all-out Senate floor fight that could delay the session well beyond the target dates.

The House already has passed a sweeping states' rights bill. Its measure would stipulate that federal laws shall nullify state laws only when Congress specifically says so or when there is a direct conflict between the two.

The House bill would also reinstate state anti-subversive laws nullified by the high court's controversial 1956 Steve Nelson decision. The omnibus legislation would cover both future and past federal and state laws.

The Senate Judiciary Committee has approved two bills similar to the House-approved measure.

Sen. John A. Carroll (D., Colo.) and other senators have promised a fight if either measure is called up for debate.

Bitter States' Rights Fight Faces Senate

BY ROULHAC HAMILTON

WASHINGTON — Will a bitter, session-ending debate blow the dome off the United State Capitol?

Or will a compromise of sorts, approved Friday by the Senate Judiciary Committee, temporarily settle the Supreme Court controversy and the states' rights issue—as Senate leaders hope?

Those questions were being asked on Capitol Hill Saturday, and they are important in determining when Congress will adjourn sine die, and the mood in which it quits.

There is strong evidence that a group of Southerners, among whom is Sen. Strom Thurmond, will attempt on the Senate floor to open the door to a debate which could be more explosive than was the civil rights debate of a year ago.

They will do this by offering, as an amendment to the Bridges "compromise" approved Friday by the Judiciary Committee, the text of the House-approved, and much stronger, Smith States' rights bill—and possibly by offering as an amendment the text of the hotly controversial Jenner-Butler bill.

That bill has been approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee, but for three months, majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex) has refused to schedule it Congress specifically forbade that or unless the state laws were in diametric and irreconciable conflict with federal law.

It is the text of this bill which South Carolina's Thurmond already has served notice he will offer as an amendment to the Bridges bill when the latter is called up. The Thurmond move is certain to touch off debate. The length and bitterness of the floor fight will be determined largely by Majority Leader Johnson's ability to conciliate.

The Jenner-Butler bill would take away the high court's jurisdiction to review cases involving the admission of lawyers to practice in a state bar. It also would reverse the effects of several high court decisions by amending laws to make congressional committees the judge of pertinency of questions to witnesses, redefine the Smith Act's terms to make prosecutions easier, and revive the state sedition laws struck down by the Nelson decision.

If it is offered as an amendment to the Bridges bill, it will be even more controversial than the Smith bill — but it also would appear to have substantially less chance of winning Senate approval. But the offering of either — and Thurmond is determined that one will be offered no matter what the majority leader says — could touch off a donnybrook for Johnson in the closing days of this session.

for action. It appeared unlikely, however, that Johnson can get away with a similar refusal on the Bridges bill, and if it is scheduled, he would have no way other than persuasion to prevent the offering of either the Smith or Jenner-Butler bill texts as amendments.

Johnson frankly hopes the Bridges bill will sidetrack the two others to curb or reverse the court. He hopes the Bridges bill will avert a filibuster, and cut the bitterness of debate, and that the House would accept it if it passes the Senate. It has, incidentally, been endorsed by the administration, which opposes the two stronger bills.

The Bridges bill would restore to the states the right to enforce their anti-sedition laws. It would reverse the effects of the Steve Nelson decision, in which the Supreme Court struck down 42 state sedition laws on grounds that the federal government had pre-empted the Communist-prosecuting field by enactment of the Smith Act. The Bridges bill states that Congress did no such thing.

The Smith bill approved last month by the House and now resting in the Senate Judiciary Committee, also would do that. But it goes further, containing another sweeping states' rights provisions, declaring the states could operate in the same statutory field with the federal government unless

HOUSE PASSES BILL INCREASING STATES' RIGHTS

Curb on Court Okayed Despite Veto Threat

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ignoring veto threats, the House passed a bill Thursday designed to prevent the Supreme Court from knocking out state laws not in direct conflict with federal laws on the same subject.

The bill, cleared by a roll-call vote of 240-155 after three days of debate, now goes to the Senate where indications were it wouldn't be nearly so popular.

There were predictions during House debate that the states' rights measure would be vetoed if it gets to President Eisenhower's desk, since the Justice and Labor departments have opposed it.

The bill was introduced by Rep. Howard W. Smith (D-Va) on the opening day of Congress last year

THE ROLL CALL

On passage of bill strengthening states' rights in fields covered by federal law:

LOUISIANA

For—Boggs, Brooks, Hebert, Morrison, Passman, Thompson, Willis.

MISSISSIPPI

For — Abernethy, Colmer, Smith, Whitten, Williams, Winstead.

and was approved by the House Judiciary Committee last month by a split vote. It had the backing of Southern Democrats and most Republicans. They said it was necessary to preserve the constitutional rights of state legislatures.

'REMOVING TEETH'

Opponents called it an open invitation to state legislatures to enact laws removing the teeth from federal statutes dealing with labor, civil rights, railroads, agriculture and integration.

This contention was denied emphatically by proponents, who beat off all efforts to limit the bill's scope.

In brief, the bill says that unless Congress specifically says so, no federal law shall be interpreted as superseding state laws on the same subject unless the state act is in direct and positive conflict with the federal law and the conflict cannot be reconciled.

It would apply, if finally enacted, to almost all past acts of Congress since few of them contained an antipre-emption clause. An amendment by Rep. Emanuel Celler (D-NY) to prevent the measure from applying to past federal laws was beaten by a voice vote.

POSITIVE LANGUAGE

The only amendment adopted spelled out in positive language that federal laws against subversion or sedition shall not supersede state laws in those areas.

The amendment was originally proposed by Rep. Francis E. Walter (D-Pa) as a substitute for the entire bill, but the House rejected that move by a nonrecorded vote of 157-93. Then, on motion of Rep. Edwin Willis (D-La), the House added Walter's provision to the original bill by standing vote of 206-88.

The bill had its origin in a Supreme Court ruling growing out of the conviction of Steve Nelson, western Pennsylvania Communist party leader, under a Pennsylvania sedition law. The court upset the conviction on the ground that the federal government had taken over the field of prosecuting sedition offenses.

Boutwell urges Dixie resistance

Boutwell sounded the call at a meeting with mem- ers of Jefferson's legisla- tive delegation last night at Highlands Methodist Church when he reiterated his proposal for Alabama taking the lead in such a movement.

The veteran state senator and Democratic nominee for lieutenant governor said that when he takes office next January he would seek a con- ference of Southern gover- nors, attorneys general, con- gressmen, state legislators and others to press the fight.

He urged that present a united front on these problems faces declared Boutwell.

AS FOR PASSAGE of more segregation measures, Boutwell pointed out that "We already have the laws that we need to maintain segregation on the statute books."

Boutwell, in referring to Atty. Gen. John Patterson, Democratic nominee for governor, said, "I think Patterson is completely honest and will have a good administration."

Both Dumas and Boutwell cited the fact that the people of Jefferson County and the state had turned down bond issues for schools.

"I THINK one of the big reasons for this is that the people have lost confidence in the men who are running the state government," asserted Dumas, but added that he believes most of them "are completely honest."

"I think the reason the people elected John Patterson is they believe he will give them an honest administration," continued Dumas.

Edwards, co-author of the Lackey-Edwards bill, which created the Alabama Education Commission for a long-range study of school needs, lauded the work being done by legislators and citizens making the study.

HE PREDICTED the results of this study, and recommendations to be made to the incoming Legislature, would go a long way toward helping solve the school financing problem.

"If we can ever find out just where the school money is going, then I think we will have enough to meet our school needs," added Edwards.

PERRY, IN response to a question from the audience concerning the right-to-work law, said "I think there is less sentiment for repeal of the right-to-work law than there has been for some time."

Sessions disclosed there was a movement underway to write the right-to-work law into the State Constitution.

Regarding the integration threat, Sessions declared "I think we ought to do like our forefathers did and tell the federal government to just pass any law you want to, because we're not going to have it. We want you people to help us and not put all the burden on our shoulders."

LOCKE, BEARING down hard for maintaining segregation, rapped action of U. S. Atty. Gen. Rogers in going directly against the suggestion by President Eisenhower for a "slow down" in the integration drive.

Locke applauded Boutwell's plan for unity through the the South in maintaining segregation, adding:

"But segregation is only one phase of a bigger and more vital question, and that is whether rights of the individual states will go down the drain."

Rast, who stressed his stand for segregation, reemphasized his stand for removing the State Conservation Department from politics.

"IT'S DIFFICULT to get government out of politics," Rast said, adding, "but we must make certain that our conservation lands are not parceled out to a favored few."

"I was very impressed with what John Patterson said about saving money and plugging up the holes," added Rast. "And that's what we must do."

Circuit Judge Whit Windham, one of the large audience of men and women who listened to the legislators, urged action to wipe out the "loan sharks." He said he had testified before legislation committees for 30 years "to get something done about this problem, and nothing has been done."

He asserted that one of the reasons was that loan companies "retain" some of the newly-elected legislators.

Darius Thomas, Birmingham industrialist, during the question and answer period, criticized Alabama Sens. Lister Hill and John Sparkman for not taking "more forceful action" in the recent fight to restrain the U. S. Supreme Court. He asked Dumas what could be done.

Dumas replied, "The ultimate remedy is at the polls, and the people get the kind of government they vote for."

State Rights Bill Shelved In Senate

As Group Backs Milder Version

WASHINGTON, Aug. (UPI).—The Senate Judiciar Committee today shelved broad House-approved "state' rights" bill and voted 8 to 4 fo a milder legislative slap a recent Supreme Court de cisions.

The committee approved measure by Sen. Styles Bridges R., N. H., to uphold state anti- subversive laws even if they cover the same area as Federal statutes. This was similar to one section of a double- barreled bill which passed the House July 17 by a 241-155 vote.

Stronger Provision Out

The provision grew out of the Supreme Court's reversal of Steve Nelson's Pennsylvania conviction as a Communist leader. The high court held that Federal laws took precedence over state statutes in the matter.

However, the Senate committee sidetracked a more far-reaching House provision. It would state that no Federal act could be interpreted as excluding state laws on the same subject unless the act said so specifically or there was a "direct and positive conflict" which could not be reconciled.

To Seek Senate Action

Before approving the Bridges bill, the committee agreed to a stipulation by Sen. John Carroll, D., Colo., that the group would not offer the House bill as an amendment to its own measure on the Senate floor.

Sen. James O. Eastlond, D., Miss., chairman, said he would try to get Senate action on the bill before adjournment, now expected about Aug. 16. He also told newspapermen the agreement would not bar any individual committee member from asking the Senate to adopt the House bill as an amendment to the Bridges proposal.

Bill Not Retroactive

The Bridges bill was amended by the committee, he said, to keep it from being retroactive. He noted that the statute of limitations had expired on most cases where Federal law was held to have pre-empted state law after the Nelson decision.

Approval of the watered-down version, it was learned, was aimed at improving the legislation's chances in the Senate. The Justice Department approved the anti-subversion provision but opposed the broader one.

House Votes To Curb Court on States Rights

By C. P. TRUSSELL

(Copyright 1958 by The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON—The House passed Thursday a bill designed to curb Supreme Court findings that federal statutes nullified state laws. The vote was 241-155. It was a victory for a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats.

Voting for the bill were 100 Democrats and 141 Republicans. Opposing it were 109 Democrats and 46 Republicans.

The measure now goes to the Senate, where its future is in doubt because of the lateness of the 85th Congress' last session.

The House action was accompanied by other congressional attacks upon Supreme Court rulings.

In the closing battle on the House floor, opponents, including some key men of both parties, warned that a presidential veto, despite strong Republican support of the adopted legislation, was certain.

The House, in its final action, approved a principal measure frowned upon by the White House, but added to it provisions that had administration support.

The House gave much of three days of debate to disagreement with the 1956 Supreme Court decision that gave a new trial to Steve Nelson, a Communist leader who had been convicted and sentenced to prison under Pennsylvania's anti-sedition law. The Supreme Court decided that Congress had intended to let federal laws—for instance the Smith Act that made sedition and other subversive activities a crime—preempt the state laws.

Pennsylvania's anti-sedition law, and similar statutes of most of the other states, were nullified by this decision. The pending legislation concentrated upon the Nelson case but also took cognizance of cases in other fields to a degree where opponents called it a general states' rights measure that might curb the Supreme Court even in cases involving integration.

Rep. Howard Smith, (D-Va), author of the act the Supreme Court put above Pennsylvania law, was also author of the measure that the House adopted Thursday. Further it was supplemented by an amendment specifically focus particularly upon the Nelson case.

Rep. Francis E. Walter, (D-Pa) heading the House unAmerican activities committee, had won approval by the House judiciary committee of his so-called "Nelson" bill. But the House rules committee, headed by Smith, had not released it for floor action.

Thursday Walter offered his "Nelson" bill as a substitute for the far-reaching text of the Smith measure. Rep. Edwin E. Willis, (D-La), floor leader for the Smith bill, countered with a proposal that the Walter measure be added to the Smith bill instead of taking its place. He won by 209-88. Later the Walter substitute, to stand alone, lost by a vote of 157-93, and simply was attached as a caboose to the Smith measure.

The Walter bill had full approval of the Department of Justice and, apparently, of the White House, while the Smith bill had no support from either of those quarters.

It was charged that the Smith bill, if enacted, could guarantee precedence to state laws as far reaching as to include acts regarding the marketing of agricultural products, the movement of natural gas, the size of trains and the number of passengers that railroads could run, the conduct of labor relations, the handling of aliens, aviation, trucking, the merchant marine, the control of waterpower, regulation of radio and television, mining, control over Indian tribes, and many other pursuits.

Southerners And States Rights Allies Win

By ROULHAC HAMILTON

WASHINGTON — A modern miracle occurred in the House Tuesday afternoon as that body voted by an overwhelming margin to take up a Southern-sponsored, Southern-backed bill to restore some measure of states rights by preventing Supreme Court invalidation of state laws on the same subject as federal statutes.

A final vote on the bill, hotly fought by the Northern "liberal" bloc in the House, will not occur, however, until later this week. The immediate action, adopting ground rules for consideration of the bill, merely opened the way for six hours of general debate on it.

But the margin by which the resolution, or rule, was adopted, 264-118, indicated that the bill itself stands an excellent chance of passage. Such an action would be a personal triumph for veteran Rep. Howard W. Smith (D-Va), who has tried for four years to get the bill before the House.

The entire six-man South Carolina delegation in the House supported the move to take up the Smith bill, which is designed to prevent federal laws from invalidating state laws unless they are in direct conflict.

The bill was inspired by Supreme Court decisions, in the Steven Nelson and other cases, holding that the federal government has exclusive jurisdiction in all matters where there are both state and federal laws.

The measure is only 74 words long, but the unusually long six hours of general debate granted on it by the rule guaranteed that the record of debate on it probably will be several thousand times longer.

Opponents of the measure, fighting the rule for its consideration, contended that it was "a devastating piece of legislation," but its proponents argued that its passage was important to "the fundamental principles of our government."

Rep. William M. Colmer, (D-Miss.), Smith's right-hand man on the powerful House Rules Committee and chairman of the semi-secret Southern Strategy Committee, told the House the bill would serve as a "stop, look and listen sign" to the Supreme Court, which he said has been in recent years "going far afield" in decisions "nullifying" state law.

He is proud of the fact that he is the only four-degree alumnus of Washington and Lee University.

Chief Judge Holds State Rights Creed

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 2 (AP)—John W. Eggleston, new Chief Justice of the Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals, says he is "a liberal conservative" who deplores "the encroachment the Federal Government has made on states' rights.

"Despite the 10th amendment, the Federal Government and the Federal courts have trespassed upon the authority which was reserved to the states," Eggleston said last week shortly after he became Chief Justice upon the death of Edward W. Hudgins.

Eggleston, 72, was appointed to the Supreme Court by Gov. George C. Peery in 1935.

He thinks that among the most important opinions he wrote for the court was one in 1936, in Hunton vs. Commonwealth, upholding the right of the State to levy a tax on dividends received from public service corporations.

In 1953 he wrote a precedent-making opinion, in United Construction Workers vs. Laburnum Construction Corp., upholding the right of a State

Confusion Reigns Supreme Over Efforts To Curb Court And Save States' Rights

By ROULHAC HAMILTON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — A London fog on a bad night would be somewhat clearer than Tuesday night's situation in the Seante with regard to legislation to curb the Supreme Court and protect states' rights.

There was definite action by the Senate Judiciary Committee which appeared to advance the Southern cause. But there was backstage maneuvering, pushing and pulling which so beclouded the issue that it was difficult to tell whether any real advance had been made.

Out of the confusion, one clear fact appeared to emerge: a head-on clash between Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D., Tex.) and Sen. Strom Thurmond, who sometimes constitutes himself as a one-man minority within Johnson's party, appeared to be very much in the making.

What such a clash would produce, no one could say for certain. Thurmond could touch off a filibuster which would block adjournment interminably, and possibly be fruitful in gaining a point for the Southern bloc. He could, on the other hand, produce a situation which would result in no legislation at all protective of states' rights or restrictive of the high court.

The Senate situation developed Tuesday in this way:

The Judiciary Committee approved two states' rights bills, one aimed directly at the Supreme Court and the other at lower federal courts. The latter would limit federal constitutional questions the grounds on which a defendant could under state law could petition a lower federal court for a writ of habeas corpus, in contrast to present law which permits such petitions on any grounds.

The former was a modified version of a bill by Sen. John L. McClellan (D., Ark.), of which Thurmond and Sen. Olin D. Johnston were co-sponsors, which was virtually the same as the House-approved bill by Rep. Howard Smith (D., Va.) to protect the validity of state laws where federal laws on the same subject fail specifically to invalidate them or where the two are in irreconcilable conflict.

The Judiciary Committee, in sending that bill to the floor, struck out a provision which would have made the bill retroactive, thus nullifying the effects of the high court's Steve Nelson case decision, striking down anti-sedition laws in 42 states on grounds that federal anti-sedition laws had pre-empted that field.

The Smith bill included that provision — and when Judiciary Chairman James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) rushed over on the floor to advise Thurmond that "we've approved the bill you wanted," Thurmond tartly replied, "You haven't reported the Smith bill."

Thurmond earlier had warned the Senate that he would offer the Smith bill's text as an amendment to the Bridges bill. That bill, sponsored by Sen. Styles H. Bridges (R., N.H.), merely would nullify the effects of the Nelson decision with respect to anti-sedition laws of the states.

It is generally believed that Eastland, working in cooperation with majority leader Johnson, maneuvered the Bridges bill onto the Senate calendar as a token, compromise offering which might avert a bitter session-end filibuster.

Thurmond, apparently, has other ideas. After Thurmond had rebuffed Eastland's approach on the McClellan bill, the majority leader spent the afternoon trying to get an opportunity to talk to the South Carolinian. Thurmond would have none of it. He didn't, he told Johnson — somewhat to the leader's consternation — want to talk "until we have something on the Smith bill."

The Senate Democratic Policy Committee met Tuesday afternoon and, according to Johnson, "discussed all four Supreme Court bills but did not act on them." That indicated to some that Johnson plans to bring up no states rights or high court bills in the closing days of the session; to others that the majority leader is bargaining.

The latter seemed to be the best guess. Johnson would settle for the Bridges bill, gladly, but he can't figure the impact of Thurmond's plans to offer the Smith bill as an amendment. The Texan might go so far as to let the McClellan bill go to the floor instead. But Thurmond insists, with some backing from Senate parliamentarian Charles Watkins, that this might preclude him from offering the Smith bill as an amendment.

Thurmond, perhaps strangely, was having some difficulty in picking up support for his position from fellow Southerners—although Sen. Olin D. Johnston, a judiciary committee member, well may be expected to support him on any effort to put the Smith bill to a vote—so long as that effort didn't seem headed for destruction of the whole states' rights effort.

On the other hand, Thurmond was busily engaged during the afternoon with conferences with such people as Minority Leader William F. Knowland (R-Calif.), who wants some states' rights legislation passed before he goes off to California to campaign for governor of that state.

There was a hint that Thurmond was really willing to compromise—but how, he was not saying, nor was he letting Johnson know it. On the other hand, there was a hint that Johnson suspected Thurmond would compromise, but the majority leader couldn't figure out exactly how.

If all of this added up to anything, it was this: the leader of 47 Democrats and the leader of a one-man Democratic minority were headed for another smashing collision, if they could find each other in the fog.

Un-American Quiz In Atlanta Flops!

By TREZZVANT W. ANDERSON
(Courier Roving Reporter)

ATLANTA, Ga.—A prominent Negro Bishop expressed disgust at procedure during a House Un-American Activities hearing which failed to show any significant Communist ties on the part of Negroes in the South.

AME Zion Bishop C. Ewbank Tucker of Louisville, an able attorney, even defended several white defendants: Eugene Feldman, editor of the Southern Newsletter; Perry Cartwright, business manager of the Newsletter; John E. Hester Jr., Chicago, and Carl T. Braden, Louisville integrationist.

BISHOP TUCKER also was counsel for Braden and his wife in his successful fight against a sedition charge.

The brilliant presiding Bishop of the 10th Episcopal District said the hearing was "intended to put fear into the hearts of white people who might speak up for integration and the Supreme Court decision. He blasted subcommittee members, Representatives Edwin Willis (D., La.) and William Tuck (D., Va.) as extreme segregationists.

Representative Francis E. Walter (D., Pa.), chairman of the House Un-American Activities Committee, said his group had been under fire for failing to include in its probe the Ku Klux Klan, White Citizens Councils and other groups that defy the Constitution.

The accusation was made in an open letter to a Congressman, signed by 150 Negro leaders in the South who asked that the hearings not be held unless it also investigated the abuses to Negroes.

REPRESENTATIVE Donald Jackson (R., Calif.) commented that after looking at some of the names of the Negro signers, he saw "some who had been associated with Communists." He did not name these persons.

Of the 11 witnesses who testified before the subcommittee, only one was a Negro. He was Hunter O'Dell, district manager of the Protective Industrial Insurance Co. of Montgomery, Ala. Mr. O'Dell invoked the Fifth Amendment when asked if he was a Communist.

Dr. Martin Luther King Sr., a spectator, said the hearings would certainly drive a wedge between the Negroes and their white friends. "I see another long, hard 10 years ahead of us," he said.

MR. BRADEN told The Courier that he and his wife did not intend to halt their work for integration, despite charges made by the committee.

Chief investigator George Williams told your reporter: "We've heard some mighty fine things about your paper," for its work in beleaguring communism.

LIVINGSTON TELLS BAR

Ouster Asked For Judges Who Ignore States Rights

ATLANTA, Feb. 21 (AP)—An Alabama Jurist called today for the removal of federal judges who ignore states rights, and Sen. John Stennis (D-Miss) urged greater care in their selection.

Stennis joined Chief Justice Ed Livingston of the Alabama Supreme Court in addressing a panel session of a southern regional meeting of the American Bar Assn.

Livingston said the United States should act swiftly to "rid ourselves . . . of the justices and judges who have been brainwashed to the extent that they can no longer tolerate states rights, and who substituted for established law their own concept of morality, economy and social intercourse among peoples."

The Alabama chief justice, an elected official, offered no plan for replacing present judges, nor did he say how they should be chosen. But he reminded his audience of lawyers that the Senate has "tremendous power over nominations to the federal courts and can control absolutely the question of what man shall sit as judge."

Stennis said a bipartisan commission should replace the attorney general as chief adviser to the President concerning appointments to the federal bench. And he declared the senate must set up higher standards for Supreme Court justices. Too many times, the senator said, experienced and talented jurists from state courts are excluded from consideration "when the idea of political reward dominates the selection process. . ."

Stennis urged greater support from the bar association and the public of his Senate resolution calling out minimum qualifications for Supreme Court justices. If would require that "at least one of each two successive nominees. . . have at least 10 years of judicial service." He conceded that its chances for early passage are doubtful without more support from the bar and the public.

Augustine T. Smythe, Charleston, S.C., attorney, urged lawyers to halt a "distressing deterioration in the matter of the right of the individual" which he said has taken place in the past few years. Smythe addressed a luncheon meeting.

State's Rights Chief Denies Race Baiting

By JOHN B. McDERMOTT
Herald Political Writer

The chairman of the Florida State's Rights Party emphatically denied Monday that his organization engages in race-baiting and said he will welcome a legislative investigation.

Stanley Postisil, head of the SRP, said his organization has tried diligently to purge its membership of any individuals who attempted to use it for stirring up racial agitation.

His announcement followed action by a Legislative Investigating Committee which called for investigations of the Ku Klux Klan, the State's Rights Party and other groups.

Rep. Cliff Herrell of Miami introduced a resolution urging the investigations. The committee, headed by Sen. Charley Johns, passed it unanimously at the closing session Friday of a three-day hearing on alleged Communist infiltration into the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Postisil said his group will cooperate with the legislators and will answer questions on the witness stand without seeking refuge behind constitutional guarantees covering freedom of speech and assembly.

Postisil claimed his organization has close to 200,000 members in Florida. Headquarters is in North Miami.

Righters set up society to hold race line

ATLANTA, May 23—(AP)—A States Rights and pro-segregation society which could become a state or national political party received its charter yesterday.

It is the Society of States Rights Democrats of America, Inc.

The charter pledges the society to support and uphold segregation of the races.

Reuben A. Garland, an Atlanta attorney and one of the incorporators, said he will ask the state Democratic Executive Committee at its meeting tomorrow to become the governing body of the society.

John Sammons Bell, state Democratic chairman, said the resolution would not be considered today by the committee. He said the group's only business would be adoption of rules for the Sept. 10 primary.

THE PROPOSAL MAY be presented at the state convention if Garland wants it brought up, Bell said. He added that if Garland wants to withdraw from the party and affiliate himself with the society "he may do so without any action on the part of the Democratic Committee."

Andrew A. Smih of Savannah and Ray F. Cross of Wildwood in Dade County were the other incorporators.

Garland said the society was established for Democrats who believe in states rights and segregation. The society, he said, would provide a means for them to cast their votes for the principles in which they believe.

"SHOULD THE corporation become activated as a political party," Garland said, "we will not be leaving the party."

Garland termed the society "the first step toward preparation for a fight that will come only if forced upon us by the leftists and so-called liberals of the Democratic Party who long sinse have demonstrated their willingness to destroy the Constitution in order to humiliate us."

THE CHARTER STATES that if the society becomes a political party no primary will be held to compete with regular Democratic nominees except by a three-fourths vote of the board of governors.

Also provided for are methods of calling a national convention to nominate candidates for president and vice president, for organizing in other states and for setting up a national executive committee.

S. C. States' Rights Fight 170 Years Old

By W. D. WORKMAN JR.
Editorial Correspondence

COLUMBIA — The Constitution of the United States was ratified by South Carolina 170 years ago this month—but with an emphasis on states rights which has characterized South Carolinians through all those years.

The formal ratification was accomplished in a three paragraph statement signed by Thomas Pinckney, as president of the ratification convention, and by John Sandford Dart, as secretary. But more indicative of the real concern of the South Carolinians were several paragraphs appended to the statement of ratification.

Of particular significance, then and now, were these two statements:

"And whereas it is essential to the preservation of the rights reserved to the several states, and the freedom of the people under the operations of a general government that the right of prescribing the manner, time and places of holding elections to the federal legislature, should be forever inseparably annexed to the sovereignty of the several states. This convention doth declare that the same ought to remain to all posterity a perpetual and fundamental right in the local, exclusive of the interference of the general government except in cases where the legislatures of the states shall refuse or neglect to perform and fulfill the same according to the tenor of the said Constitution.

STATES RIGHTS

"This convention doth also declare that no section or paragraph of the said Constitution warrants a construction that the states do not retain every power not expressly relinquished by them and vested in the general government of the Union."

But in addition to these statements of principle, the South Carolina ratification convention had some suggestions to make concerning national taxation:

NO DIRECT TAXES

"Resolved that the general government of the United States ought never to impose direct taxes, but where the monies arising from the duties, imposts and excise are insufficient for the public exigencies nor then until Congress shall have made a requisition upon the states to assess, levy and pay their respective proportions of such requisitions. And in case any state shall neglect or refuse to pay its proportion pursuant to such requisition then Congress may assess and levy such state's proportion together with interest thereon at the rate of six per centum per annum from the time of payment prescribed by such requisition. . ."

The convention then added this lasting admonition:

"Resolved that it be a standing instruction to all such delegates as may hereafter be elected to represent this State in the general government to exert their utmost abilities and influence to effect an alteration of the Constitution conformably to the foregoing resolutions."

Alabama Vote Poses Threat of Party Bolt in '60

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 5 (AP).—States Rights Democrats demanding independence from the national leadership have regained control of party affairs in Alabama an dopened the door for a possible bolt again in 1960.

Complete returns from Tuesday's Democratic runoff primary gave the States Righters 39 seats o nthe incoming State Democratic Executive Committee. It takes 37 votes on the 72-member committee for a majority.

The States Righters' return to power after eight years of national party loyalist dominatio ngave them the votes to rewhich has bound Alabama to the national party in the last two presidential elections.

States Rights spokesmen sought to minimize talk of a new party revolt like the one in 1948 when Alabama's 11 presidential electors, all Democrats, voted for the independent Thurmond-Wright presidential ticket.

The States Righters said their immediate goal is to make Eisenhower Democrats eligible to seek office again in the Democratic primaries under the existing loyalty oath, they were barred from the party elections this year because they voted Republican in 1956.

Progress Made On Laws To Safeguard States' Rights

BY JAMES W. DOUTHAT
Special to The News

WASHINGTON — Advocates of states' rights are encouraged by the unprecedented progress in Congress of legislation intended to protect state laws against federal encroachment.

The legislation, directed at the judicial doctrine of "federal preemption" of powers traditionally vested in the states, has been approved by the House Judiciary Committee. t has bipartisan support in both the House and Senate and its backets plan to speed the measure toward enactmen in every way possible.

Its passage is regarded as essential by those who believe that government should not be centered in a giant Washington bureaucracy but should, so far as possible, be administered at the state and local level by officials more familiar with the problems

The measure, authored by Rep Smith (D-Va.), provides that a state law shall not be nullified merely because Congress has passed a federal statute in the same field.

Rep. Smith introduced the measure on Jan. 6, 1955, in an effort to stop the erosion of state powers by judicial rulings. He wanted to assure that a state law, not in conflict with a federal law, could be enforced in a state court for the protection of its citizens.

What inspired the introduction at that particular time was a decision by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court (later upheld by the United States Supreme Court) invalidating a Pennsylvania statute directed against Communistic activity. The state law could not be enforced, it was held, because there was a federal antisedition law; therefore, the federal government had exclusive jurisdiction. This had the effect of outlawing similar legislation in 46 other states.

Strangely enough, Rep. Smith was the author of the 1940 federal antisedition statute, and it was shocking news to him that it prevented states from dealing with communists. It even specified that "nothing in this title shall be held to take away or impair the jurisdiction of the courts of the several states under the laws thereof."

The decision, however, was in line with what has been the trend in recent years toward transferring more and more authority to Washington from state and local governments. President Eisenhower has sought to reverse this trend by encouraging the shifting away from Washington of essential functions that can better be handled "back home." He has appointed a Commission on Inter-Governmental Relations, which already has made some recommendations and is plannig more.

Rep. Smith emphasizes that his present bill is directed at the "disease itself" and not merely at the anti-sedition ruling, which he described as "merely a sympton of a dangerous disease that threatened to destroy completely the sovereignty of the states."

The "disease," he makes clear, is the judicial doctrine that whenever Congress enacts legislation on any subject its jurisdiction becomes exclusive and no state law can be enforced.

"In late years," he points out, "Congress has legislated pretty well all over the waterfront. Congress has stretched the interstate commerce laws and the general welfare laws to the point where they cover all the ills of mankind.

"It must be obvious that, with the multitude of subjects with which the Congress is now dealing, it is merely a question of time before the states will de deprived of practically all enforcement laws for the protection of the health and welfare of their local citizens."

The need to end federal "preemption" is perhaps more apparent in the field of labor relations than in most others. Employment is esentially a local relationship betwen local parties living and working under local conditions with other local people —all subject in most respects to local law.

Their employment, however, has become increasingly regulated from Washington. In the area of labor relations, federal control has been fast becoming complete to the exclusion of the states.

Senator Byrd (D-Va.), makes this terse comment: "If our form of government is to be preserved the 'preemption doctrine' must be outlawed."

Canvass Shows—

States Righters Won 39-32 Edge

MONTGOMERY, June 10 (UPI)—States Righters won a 39-32 edge on the powerful Democratic Executive Committee in the June 3 Democratic primary runoff, paving the way for abolition of the loyalty oath and posing a threat to national party unity in 1960, an official canvass showed today.

The canvass showed the States Righters won all eight seats in the First, Third and Fourth Districts and took five in the Second, three in the Sixth and seven in the Ninth.

The Loyalists won three in the Second, eight in the Fifth five in the Sixth, seven in the Seventh, eight in the Eighth and one in the Ninth.

One member of the 72-member committee was listed as uncommitted to either side.

Dr. Robert A. Cummings of Cordova said he was a "loyal Democrat" who would not classify himself as either a Loyalist or States Righter. But he said he favored parts of the oath while opposing other parts. Listing himself as an independent in regards to the oath.

The States Righters ran for election on a platform calling for abolition of the oath which binds candidates to support both national and state tickets.

The canvass showed Atty. Gen. John Patterson won the Democratic nomination for governor with 315,353 votes to Circuit Judge George Wallace's 240,451. Patterson, making his first statewide race, collected the highest number of votes in Alabama history.

State Sen. Albert Boutwell of Birmingham swept into the lieutenant governor's chair with 313,401 votes to 201,031 for state Sen. E. W. Skidmore of Tuscaloosa.

Pretty Leeds housewife Bettye Frink, making her first political race, defeated Rep. Charles (Pete) Mathews of Ashland 258,221 to 238,535 for the office of secretary of state.

New Party Would 'Transport' Negroes to Liberia!

34 d

By JOHN E. ROUSSEAU

NEW ORLEANS, La.—A new political party, embodying principles of the now defunct Dixiecrats, the States Rights and Nationalists, has been organized and has taken the name, "The American Party." This not-yet-publicized group has distributed union-printed handbills in several state-supported public institutions.

One of its planks in a 27-point platform is to "transport Negroes to Liberia."

Stating that the Liberty Bell is the national emblem of the American party, the handbill's contents are reprinted, in part:

"Sampson, Awake! The Philistines are upon you! Your national hair has been trimmed by the politicians in Washington and you have lost your strength.

"Yes, Uncle Sam, you've lost your leadership among the world's nations. The reds, pinks and punks that have wormed their ways into our national government have taken away your heritage that has been given to you by the men and women in 1776! You've lost your constitutional rights, your state rights, and now you are on the verge of losing your dearest possession—your freedom of assembly, free speech, free press, free worship and right of trial by jury!

". . . Today, you are confronted with King George III, the despot who enslaved the colonists before the American Revolution! But, you now face a new group of Caesars and tyrants of every type! You could have spotted them out! Some have sailed yachts, 'my friends!' Some have played pianos! Some have played golf! Some hold membership cards in numerous communist-front organizations; some are active in the NAACP, in the Urban League and trick 'humanitarian drives' for your money to support foreign enemies.

". . . While you listened to 'Satchmo' and 'King Cole' and 'Little Richard' you were being bound by unseen hands and delivered to the 'boys' who control the conventions of smoke-filled rooms!

"When nine black-robed men and nine little Negro children can summon more power of courts, armed soldiers and injunctions than 160 millions of citizens, then you can be assured, American, you have lost your country, indeed!

"But, you can still save the remnants and pieces that are left about! Yes, Sampson, you can go to the registration office and register in the American party."

Several of the planks in the American party's tentative platform are:

"States Rights in every phase of constitutonal provision; direct election of President, Vice President and all Federal Court justices; referendum on all matters effecting any state or national policies; complete investigation of any nominatons or candidates for office.

" . . . Establish the right of people to associate with people of their own choice.

"Establish and finance a national home in Liberia for American Negroes; giving them a lump endowment to each, transport their movable assets, liquidate their resources and provide industrial, scientific, commercial and humanitarian aid to them until they have erected a substantial republic of recognition among the nations of the world."

SPX RESEARCH ASSOCIATES

Senator Seeks Quiz Into Research Group's Attack On Supreme Court

Advertiser Post Montgomery Ala

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Hennings (D-Mo) called Wednesday for an investigation of SPX Research Associates, whose document attacking the Supreme Court as a tool for communism wound up in a Senate pamphlet.

Thomas R. Hutton, a former Air Force Intelligence officer and ex-newspaper correspondent and editor, said at Stanwood, Wash., that he sent in the controversial report to the Senate Internal Security subcommittee. Sept. 4 1957

But Hennings said more information is needed: "We should find out where the money comes from and who the other members of the organization are."

STUDY OF ORIGIN

An aide to Sen. Watkins (R-Utah) said he too is inquiring into the origin of the study and its handling. It was printed separately from the subcommittee's main report, but in a form that Hennings said might give the impression it bore the seal of Senate approval.

The study was offered for the subcommittee record Feb. 28 by subcommittee counsel J. G. Sourwine. It was accepted by Sen. Hruska (R-Neb), the only member present at the time.

At the time, the subcommittee was considering a bill by Sen. Jenner (R-Ind) aimed at limiting the power of the Supreme Court in some areas.

DECISIONS CITED

The Jenner bill was prompted by a series of recent court decisions in the field of subversion.

The SPX document, entitled "The Supreme Court as an Instrument of Global Conquest," says these decisions were of great help to communism.

One of them held that states can not enforce laws against subversion that this is a field for the federal government alone.

The Jenner bill would strip the court of power to review lower court decisions in this and four other areas related to alleged subversive activities.

SCHOOL DECISION

The SPX paper also refers critically to the court's order against racial segregation in public schools.

It said in its conclusions: "In the paralytic effect of its pro-Communist decisions, on state and federal agencies of internal security, the United States Supreme Court is the most powerful, and potentially determinative, instrument of Communist global conquest by paralysis."

Hutton, director of SPX Associates, was an Air Force colonel in World War II. At one time he was the Washington correspondent for the Houston Post Dispatch and Binghamton, N.Y., Press and later editor of the latter paper.

MET IN ALASKA

He said at his home in Washington State that he and other intelligence officers who met Soviet officers in Alaska during the war discovered that "the Soviets had instituted a 10th principle of warfare — to break the enemy's resistance without fighting."

SPX stands for Soviet Principle Tenth, he said and "since 1943 we've been documenting Russia's application of this principle."

Sen. Hennings, in calling for an inquiry, said the SPX letterhead indicates it has offices in New York, Berlin and Hong Kong and "a considerable amount of money must be involved in the operation."

Sen. Long Fears Integration Issue To Trigger Third Party

WASHINGTON (AP)—The possibility that the school integration controversy may trigger a third party movement in the South was raised Sunday by Sen. Russell B. Long (D-La.).

Sen. Spessard L. Holland (D-Fla.) predicted that despite wide disagreement with their Northern colleagues Southern Democrats will not bolt the national party.

Long said in a recorded local television program that if the Democratic National Committee persists in recognizing Camile Gravel Jr. as its Louisiana member "that, of course, could lead to all sorts of misunderstandings."

Asked if there might be a third party movement brewing, Long replied: "If the national committee in Louisiana whom the Democratic committee says does not represent them at all, it's entirely possible that the state committee might tell the national committee, 'Why, you fellows don't represent us either.'"

The Louisiana committee voted to remove Gravel from his national party job because of his reputed moderate views on integration. But Democratic National Chairman Paul M. Butler said Gravel will continue to be recognized as Louisiana's member unless two-thirds of the national group votes to oust him.

Butler also has been at odds with Democratic Gov. Orval E. Faubus of Arkansas who spoke Saturday of the possibility of a third party movement in the South by the time of the 1960 presidential election.

Faubus said he personally has tried to discourage such a movement. But he said the attitude of national leaders may drive millions of Southerners out of the party in the next two years.

As an indication of sentiment in his state, Long predicted Louisiana will act to close its public schools if they are ordered integrated.

He said that, "People down there just don't propose to have any of it. . .and they're going to resist it the strongest way."

Holland, who won renomination over former Sen. Claude Pepper in a primary in which Pepper was called a moderate on integration, said he doesn't expect Southern Democrats to find any common ground with Butler on the issue. Butler has been urging the adoption of stronger civil rights plank by the party in 1960.

"We're never going to get agreement among the Democrats on the civil rights issue," Holland said in an interview.

"But we're not going to quit the Democratic party. We're not going into any third party and sacrifice the important chairmanships and seniority that Southerners hold in Congress."

Florida Third Party Move Frowned On By Gov. Faubus

MILTON, Fla. (AP)—A citizens council call for a third political party with Arkansas Gov. Orval E. Faubus as its head received no encouragement from Faubus.

About 70 members of the Santa Rosa County Council signed the resolution at a meeting Monday night.

But Faubus said Tuesday at his home town of Huntsville, Ark., that the Milton action wouldn't have any affect on my attitude."

He previously had said he is a loyal member of the Democratic Party, which "has always been big enough to hold people with different attitudes."

Faubus is scheduled to speak in Crestview, 30 miles east of Milton, next Saturday at an old folks picnic. About 50 of the 200 persons at the council meeting said they would sell Faubus-for-president flags at the picnic.

The council proposal said that "the present Democratic Party no longer represents or even countenances the philosophies of our Southern people and Paul Butler, chairman of the present Democratic Party, has made this crystal clear in numerous public statements."

The resolution also said that the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People is "using minority power to control our national government and to destroy our system of Anglo-Saxon civilization."

The call for a third party was opposed at the meeting by State Sen. Newman C. Brackin of Crestview. He said he believed in protecting "our segregated school system," but that he thought "we should stick together to solve this problem."

CHALLENGES COMMITTEE — Edward C. Taylor, right, of 325 Belmont Ave., Newark, a witness before the House Committee on Un-American Activities, confers with his attorney, Hubert T. Delaney, former New York judge. Mr. Taylor was later ejected from the hearing after challenging the Committee to investigate segregationist group.

Statement leads to uproar at hearing

By STEVE W. DUNCAN

NEW JERSEY

"They could do much for the furtherance of [illegible] investigating the Ku Klux Klan and the White Citizens Councils.

"The only thing I advocate is the immediate overthrow of jim crow."

A 39-year-old Newark man who caused an uproar at the stormy three - day House Committee on Un - American Activities hearings made this assertion Thursday after he was forcefully ejected from the hearing room.

The ejection was touched off when Edward C. (Eddie) Taylor, 325 Belmont Ave., a witness before the Committee, referred to U.S. Marshal Joseph Job as Wyatt Earp.

• • •

EARLIER, Mr. Taylor charged the Committee with "aiding and abetting" the activities of the Klan, the White Citizens Councils and Southern segregationists.

Subcommittee members conducting the hearings here were Representatives Edward E. Willis (D-La.), chairman, and Gordon Scherer (R-Ohio).

Before the talkative Mr. Taylor was hurried out of the hearing room for his apparently embarrassing references to racial issues he said, "I'm confronted today by a Southern Manifesto signer."

• • •

WHEN Hubert T. Delany, former New York judge, protested the forceable ejection of his client, Mr. Taylor, Marshal Job threatened to eject him also.

"I won't stand to have a marshal threaten to throw me out of this court," Mr. Delany told committee members.

Subcommittee members, who praised Marshal Job at the conclusion of the hearings, agreed with Mr. Delany that he had a right to discharge his duty toward his client.

However, Richard Arens, 43-year-old Committee counsel, cut short two New York attorneys who attempted formal protests of the treatment accorded Mr. Delany.

• • •

MR. TAYLOR, one of 16 witnesses subpaenaed to appear before the Committee, was identified as a director of the New Jersey Negro Labor Council.

During his brief appearence before the Committee, Mr. Taylor repeatedly cited his rights and privileges under the First and Fifth Amendments, and on occasion the Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments in refusing to answer questions.

"Have you ever used any name other than the name Edward Taylor?" Mr. Arens asked the Alabama - born witness at one point.

"I decline to answer that question under the rights and privileges granted me under the Fifth Amendment," replied Mr. Taylor.

• • •

MR. TAYLOR then said he was "a little bit suspicious of the motives of this Committee" because what he termed their refusal to investigate segregationist groups.

"Are you now a member of the Communist Party" Mr. Arens wanted to know.

"I feel," replied the witness, "that you are attempting to pry into my affairs."

After Mr. Taylor declared that one of the subcommittee members was "a Southern Manifesto signer," Mr. Arens attempted to quieten the witness.

"I haven't shut up since I was run out of Alabama," retorted the hefty witness.

• • •

AT THIS point, Congressman Scherer noted that he had supported civil rights measures in the House of Representatives.

"This makes it difficult for me to do what I've been doing," Rep. Scherer noted.

"Then you didn't do it in good faith," answered Mr. Taylor.

When the committee counsel asked to give his place of birth, Mr. Taylor said:

"Mr. Arens, I was born in a state where yesterday (Wednesday) the Rev. Martin Luther King was attacked and beaten."

• • •

THE WITNESS next accused Mr. Arens of trying to put words in his mouth, declaring:

"White people have been putting words in my mouth every since I've been black, and I'm getting damn sick and tired of it."

Rep. Willis interrupted; "We're not going to desecrate this courtroom with this language."

Mr. Taylor turned to the spectators and apologized, adding, "I refuse to apologize to this Committee."

Minutes later Mr. Taylor was hustled out of the hearing room.

• • •

HERE IS HOW it happened: Mr. Taylor was attempting to protest the treatment accorded three persons on the first day of the hearing who were ejected by Marshal Job.

Pointing to the marshal, he said, "You tell your man Wyatt Earp there . . ."

Marshal Job then cut short the witness' testimony.

• • •

ON WEDNESDAY Marshal Job ordered William J. Clark, 64 Seventh Ave., out of the hearing after asserting that the man made obscene gestures while a witness was testifying.

When the Rev. Stanley J. Hallett of Newark's Trinity Methodist Church protested, he was also ejected.

The third man ordered out of Wednesday's hearing was William Coggins, 18 Gardner Ave., Jersey City.

The following day the Rev. Mr. Hallett was again ejected when the marshal charged that he was circulating literature.

HIGH COURT TESTS INQUIRIES' POWER

Hears Cases of Quaker and Ex-Vassar Teacher Who Defied Legislators

By ANTHONY LEWIS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18— The Supreme Court heard arguments today on the power of a Virginia legislative committee to investigate "racial activities" and of the House Committee on Un-American Activities to investigate communism in education.

The two cases are part of a series exploring the constitutional limits and other limits on legislative investigations.

The Virginia case today concerned David H. Scull, a Quaker who refused to answer thirty-one questions put by the Committee on Law Reform and Racial Activities. He was held in contempt and sentenced to ten days in jail and a $50 fine.

Mr. Scull was asked, among other things, whether he belonged to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, had given money for lawsuits attacking school segregation or was associated with B'nai B'rith, the American Civil Liberties Union and other groups.

Agree on Point at Issue

His counsel, Joseph L. Rauh Jr. of Washington, said that the job of the Supreme Court was to evaluate the repressive effect of such questions on constitutionally guaranteed freedom of speech and association against the interest of the state in getting the answers.

The court seemed to agree with this formulation, and opposing counsel, Leslie Hall of Alexandria, Va., accepted it.

Mr. Rauh's main argument was that the state committee had no valid interest. It was set up by the same special session of the Legislature that enacted Virginia's program of "massive resistance" to integration in 1956. Mr. Rauh said that the committee's purpose was simply to "stop integration."

He said he had never been able to get a clear statement from the chairman, Delegate James M. Thomson, of any legitimate interest of the committee. He quoted Mr. Thomson, a segregationist leader, as having said he was out to "bust" the N. A. A. C. P.

Mr. Hall said that all the contentions about the purposes of the Thomson committee and other Southern investigating bodies were beside the point because there was no evidence in the record of their purpose and argument on it was speculative.

The resolution setting up the Thomson committee ordered it too low into the tax exemptions of racial organizations, into the inspiring of lawsuits and into the effects of racial integration.

Mr. Hall said the state plainly had an interest in those matters, which outweighed any harm that might come to Mr. Scull by answering—a harm Mr. Hall questioned.

Vassar Teacher Convicted

The Federal case arose from the refusal of Lloyd Barenblatt, a former psychology instructor at Vassar College, to tell the House committee whether he was or had been a Communist party member. He was sentenced to six months in prison and a $250 fine for contempt.

Edward J. Ennis of the American Civil Liberties Union represented Mr. Barenblatt and Philip B. Monahan argued for the Government. Both focused on three principal questions.

First, Mr. Ennis said, the contempt conviction must fail because the committee had not explained to Mr. Barenblatt why the questions were pertinent to its investigation.

Mr. Monahan argued the pertinence of the questions had been perfectly clear to Mr. Barenblatt, though not stated directly to him.

Second, Mr. Ennis argued that the House had never authorized an investigation by the committee into the "delicate area of education." He noted that the authorizing resolution spoke only of investigating "un-American propaganda."

Mr. Monahan conceded the vagueness of the authorizing resolution but said the entire House had nevertheless clearly approved an inquiry into education.

Finally, counsel argued whether the investigation had violated the First Amendment's guarantees of free speech and thought.

Mr. Ennis said the committee was investigating "not Communist subversion but Communist thought." Mr. Monahan said the interest of the Federal Government in education, through many aid programs, said the real threat of communism, had justified an investigation.

Aubrey Williams Charges Un-American Committee With Threatening Tradition

The House Un-American Activities Committee has been charged with being a threat to the American Tradition.

"I know of nothing that is doing more to destroy the American Tradition than this particular committee", said Aubrey W. Williams of Montgomery, Ala., president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc.

Mr. Williams spoke at a meeting in Hollywood, Calif., called to protest the Un-American Committee "hearings" scheduled to begin there this week. The meeting was sponsored by the Citizens Committee to Preserve American Freedoms.

Tyrants, Oppressors

Said Mr. Williams, the House Committee has "re-introduced into America old practices used by tyrants and oppressors from time immemorial, the professional informers and the proscription of citizens. This we thought we had forever buried with the end of the reign of terror of the French Revolution."

"The Committee claims," Williams stated, "they are looking for communists, but their real purpose is the extermination of all liberal thinking wherever it appears, in government, in schools, radios, colleges, television, or the press."

"The activities of this committee," said Mr. Williams, "has made us a nation of scaredy-cats. . . . No young person will join anything anymore that stands for anything remotely like the bill of rights . . . He would be scared somebody would write a letter to the FBI and report him be belonging to an subversive organization. . .

Hitchhikers

"We have become a nation of hitchhikers on the Freedom Train. We don't want to say anything, we just want to ride, hoping nobody will ask us any questions."

Reign of Terror In South

Mr. Williams reviewed the committee hearings held recently in Atlanta. He stated there was "something farcial about a newspaper headline describing these hearings which read: 'Hungarian Tells of Terror of Red Rule', when the committee holding the hearings had just been welcomed by Gov. Griffin and Attorney General Cook, leaders among Southern politicians responsible for the reign of terror which today grips the South."

Mr. Williams charged that the Committee "had no time to look into the brutal beating to death of a Negro in a Mississippi jail; the bombing of Rev. Shuttlesworth's home and church; the 7 bombings in Montgomery, Ala. the 12 bombings in Birmingham; no time to investigate the White Citizens Councils or the Klu Klux Klan. or the brazenly un-American efforts of a member of the Alabama legislature. Sam Englehart, trying to abolish Macon County in order to deny the members of the Tuskegee faculty and their families the right to vote."

Un-American

"I charge," continued Williams, "that every act of denying Negroes the right to attend an integrated school, to sit where they please on a public carrier, to register and vote, is an un-American act and subversive; I charge that every organization that carries on propaganda and commits overt acts designed to obstruct the carrying out of federal laws or court mandates is committing an un-American act and subversive and it should be investigated and those members of the Congress of the United States who signed it be publicly censored . . .

"When candidates for the state's highest offices declare that, if elected, they will close the public schools before they will allow the Federal law to be carried out,, you have as clear a picture of defiance of the central government as one could care to find.

U.S. Court Upholds College Red Probes

Appeals Judges Split 5-4 On House Panel's Inquiry

WASHINGTON Jan. 16 (AP)—The U.S. Court of Appeals today upheld by a narrow 5-to-4 decision the authority of the House Committee on Un-American Activities to investigate communism in the nation's schools and colleges.

It also ruled that the Supreme Court's so-called Watkins decision never meant to strike down the congressional resolution establishing the House committee.

The appeals court handed down its ruling in upholding for the second time the contempt conviction of Lloyd Barenblatt, a former teacher at Vassar College.

Barenblatt, now of New York, refused to tell the committee in 1954 whether he ever had been a Communist and whether he had belonged to the party's Heldane Club while a student at the University of Michigan.

The appeals court upheld his conviction earlier. But the Supreme Court ordered it to review the case in the light of its decision in the case of John T. Watkins, Illinois labor leader.

The high court held in the Watkins decision that a witness was entitled to know the purpose of a congressional committee's investigation and receive an explanation of the manner in which questions he was asked were pertinent to the inquiry.

Barenblatt's attorney argued before the appeals court that the Supreme Court had, in effect, struck down the resolution creating the Committee on Un-American Activities.

He cited the decision by Chief Justice Earl Warren, who said the resolution setting up the committee stated only vaguely the committee's investigative authority. The attorney said this criticism had the force of law.

But the appeals court said that if the court had intended to strike down the resolution, it would have said so in so many words, it would not have left so vital an issue to inference or interpretation.

The majority decision was written by Circuit Judge Walter M. Bastion.

Bastion said Barenblatt was fully aware of the purposes of the committee and why he was appearing before it.

2D DISTURBANCE AT RED HEARINGS

Witness Ejected in Newark for Remark on Marshal—6 Silent on Party Ties

By MILTON HONIG

Special to The New York Times.

NEWARK, Sept. 4—For the second successive day, hearings being conducted in the Federal Courthouse here by a subcommittee of the House Committee on Un-American Activities were highlighted by an outbreak.

Today's disturbance was started by a witness, Edward C. Taylor of Newark, president of the New Jersey Negro Labor Council. While being examined by Richard Arens, counsel for the committee, Mr. Taylor waved a hand in the direction of United States Marshal Joseph Job and shouted to the committee:

"You tell your man Wyatt Earp there——"

The rest of his remarks were lost in the commotion that resulted. Mr. Job, sitting near by, jumped out of his chair and ran over to the witness.

"Listen you," he shouted. "Out!"

Counsel Is Warned

The marshal took hold of Mr. Taylor, who weighs close to 300 pounds, and with the assistance of several deputies started walking him out of the courtroom.

Hubert T. Delaney, former Justice of the Domestic Relations Court in New York City and counsel for Mr. Taylor, objected to Representative Edwin E. Willis, Democrat of Louisiana, and Representative Gordon H. Scherer, Republican of Ohio, the members of the subcommittee.

"I'll throw you out too," Marshal Job shouted as he continued to lead the witness, with the help of his deputies, out of the courtroom and the building.

"The witness has made insulting and jeering remarks," Representative Willis noted.

Wyatt Earp, famed United States Marshall of frontier days, is now the subject of a television series.

The Rev. Stanley Hallett, assistant pastor of the Trinity Methodist Church in Newark, who was one of three men ejected yesterday by Mr. Job, was told today to stay out of the courtroom for the duration of the hearings, which are scheduled to end tomorrow.

Marshall Is Accused

The order was given by Mr. Job after he found Mr. Hallett in the courtroom with mimeographed copies of a letter and statement the minister said he had sent to United States Attorney General William P. Rogers.

The letter charged the marshal with "creating an atmosphere of intimination and disquiet" by the "use of threats of physical violence."

Mr. Taylor and five other witnesses during the day-long session refused to testify about alleged Communist activities. They took refuge in the First and Fifth Amendments to the Constitution. The First upholds freedom of speech and assembly and the Fifth protects against self-incrimination.

Testimony was heard from an underground informer for the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He was Dennis L. James of Newark, who said he was an accountant for the Port of New York Authority. He said that in cooperation with the F. B. I., he became a member of the Labor Youth League in Newark in 1950. Mr. Arens said said the league was the "youth arm of the Communist party."

The other witnesses were Mrs. Evelyn Skoloff Goldberg of Newark, John C. Karakos of Bloomfield, N. J., a self-employed cook; Joseph A. Alfone Jr., of Succasunna, N. J., a quality control analyst; Manuel Campor of Newark, a printer, and ohn F. Norman of Maplewood, N. J., a printer.

Williams Urges Abolishment Of Un-American Committee

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—The House Un-American Activities Committee has been charged with being a threat to the American tradition.

"I know of nothing that is doing more to destroy the American tradition than this particular committee," said Aubrey W. Williams of Montgomery, Ala., president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, Inc.

Mr. Williams spoke at a meeting in Hollywood, Calif., called to protest the Un-American Committee "hearings" scheduled to begin there this week. The meeting was sponsored by the Citizens Committee to Preserve American Freedoms.

Said Mr. Williams, the House Committee has "reintroduced into America old practices used by tyrants and oppressors from time immemorial, the professional informers and the proscription of citizens. This we thought we had forever buried with the end of the reign of terror of the French Revolution.

"The Committee claims," Williams stated, "they are loiking for communists, but their real purpose is the extermination of al liberal thinking wherever it appears, in government, in schools, radios, colleges, television, or the press."

"The activities of this committee," said Mr. Williams, "has made us a nation of scaredy cats . . . He would be scared somebody would write a letter to the FBI and report him as belonging to a subversive organization . . .

Mr. Williams reviewed the committee hearings held recently in Atlanta. He stated there was "something farcical about a newspaper headline describing these hearings which read: 'Hungarian Tells of Terror of Red Mule,' when the committee holding the hearings had just been welcomed by Gov. rGiffin and Attorney General Cook, leaders among Southern politicians responsible for the reign of terror which today grips the South."

"I submit that all of these acts are un-American acts and are subversive and a proper subject for a committee on un-American activities, and unless the committee which bears this title and which is charged with investigating un-American activities, investigates such un-American acts as these, it forfeits its right to the name it bears and shows itself unworthy of public trust."

Summons Follows Publication of Wife's Book

Probers Call Segregation Foe

LITTLE COMPTON, R.I. — (AP) — Carl Braden of Louisville, Ky., active for many years in the Southern integration movement, says he and his wife have been summoned to appear before the House Committee on Un-American Activities July 30 in Atlanta.

Braden said the summons was dated July 22, eight days after publication of a book by his wife, Anne, titled "The Wall Between," which tells about integration.

The couple, vacationing in Rhode Island with their two small children, issued a statement saying the Atlanta hearing "like . . . similar hearings conducted in the South by Sen. James O. Eastland (D., Miss.) . . . are apparently designed to harass white people working to bring about peaceful integration in the southern states."

Braden said he will appear in Atlanta Wednesday and challenge "the committee's right to harass not only us but other white Southerners working to uphold the law of the land."

Mrs. Braden's appearance before the committee was postponed, Braden said, "after we refused to go unless the committee provided transportation for the children."

The book by Mrs. Braden tells the story of their purchase of a Louisville home and its transfer to a Negro.

The house was bombed after the Negro family moved in. Not long after that Braden was fined $5,000 and sentenced to 15 years for advocating sedition. The conviction was upset because of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling that state sedition laws are unconstitutional.

Braden is a former copy editor for The Louisville Courier-Journal.

150 Leaders Tell House Committee:

"Defend The Rights Of All Or Stay Out Of The South"

NEW ORLEANS, La. —One hundred and fifty colored leaders from all of the southern and border states, and the District of Columbia, have signed an open-letter to the United States House of Representatives concerning the hearings announced by the House Un-American Activities Committee for Atlanta this week.

Congressmen were urged to use their influence "to see that the House Committee stays out of the South—unless it can be persuaded to help defend us against those subversives who oppose our Supreme Court, our federal policy of civil rights for all, and our American ideals of equality and brotherhood."

• • •

"WE ARE acutely aware", said the open-letter, "of a shocking amount of un-American activity in our southern states. To cite only a few examples, there are the bombings of the homes, schools, and houses of worship of not only Negroes, but also of our Jewish citizens; the terror against Negroes in Dawson, Ga.; the continued refusal of boards of registrars in many southern communities to allow Negroes to register and vote; and the activities of White Citizens Councils encouraging open defiance of the United States Supreme Court.

"There is nothing in the record of the House Committee," the letter continued, "to indicate that it will investigate these things. On the contrary, all of its activities suggest that it is much more interested in harassing and labeling as 'subversive' any citizen who is inclined to be liberal or an independent thinker.

"FOR THIS reason, we are alarmed at the prospect of this committee coming South to follow the lead of Senator Eastland, as well as several state investigating committees, in trying to attach the 'subversive' label to any liberal white southerner who dares to raise his voice in support of our democratic ideals."

Among those who signed the letter were:

Dr. Herman H. Long, Tenn.; Bishop Edgar A. Love, Baltimore, Md.; Mrs. Andrew W. Simkins, Columbia, S. C.; The Rev. F. L. Shuttlesworth, Birmingham, Ala.; E. D. Nixon, Ala.; the Rev. S. P. Bob Nix Shows His Profile of Courage

Representative Robert N.C. Nix, Philadelphia Democrat, showed courage in casting the only vote against citing Carl Braden of Louisville, Ky., for contempt of Congress for refusing the three-day hearings of the House Un-American Activities Committee in Atlanta.

The committee, headed by Rep. Francis E. Walter of Pennsylvania, appears bent on harrassing Southern white liberals but will not investigate the subversive activities of the White Citizens Council or the Ku Klux Klan.

Braden, formerly a copy editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, was convicted by Kentucky courts of sedition because he acted as the straw man in the purchase by a colored family of a home in a white neighborhood in Louisville.

The theory of the state's case was that Braden's act tended to incite rioting. His conviction was set aside by the Supreme Court.

WHEN PRESIDENT Mordecai W. Johnson of Howard University testified before a House committee on the bill providing for the Federal Government to give Freedmen's Hospital to the university and construct a new 500-bed hospital, he disclosed the six-point program for the university which the House Appropriations Committee has approved.

Of the six major objectives, only the hospital deal has been delayed. If Congress had passed the bill at this session, the new hospital could not have been readied for operation befor the beginning of the 1962-63 school year. But the union, representing a minority of the 654 non-professional employees at Freedmen's, who are under Federal civil service, jockeyed and got a delay until the next Congress convenes in January.

THE FIVE POINTS of the program which have been accomplished are:

1. Negotiations have been completed for Howard to have one-third of the teaching facilities (265 beds) in the District of Columbia General Hospital, and use of these facilities has begun.

2. A new dental building has been erected, and Congress has provided funds for its full equipment.

3. A new pre - clinical medical building has been erected and is in usen and the old preclinical medical building is being renovated so as to blend the two buildings into an interrelated unit.

4. Congress has provided for building up the pre - clinical teaching staff in medicine and dentistry.

5. The Secretary of Health Education and Welfare now has under consideration an item for the 1960 appropriation for doubling the clinical staff in medicine and dentistry.

PERRY W. HOWARD, Washington attorney, represented John Bitonti of Detroit before the Senate Labor Rackets Committee. Bitonti, who borrowed $40,000 from the Teamsters welfare funds, was accused of borrowing $50,000 and giving Jimmy Hoffa, the union's president, $10,000.

Belford V. Lawson, another Washington attorney, represented Herbert Grossberg of Chicago, chief accountant of the union, and Max Stern of Detroit.

Capt. Norman E. Parner of Portsmouth, Ohio, and Baltimore, has assumed command of the 631st Quartermaster company at Fort Drum, N.Y., after a three - year tour of duty in Germany.

Capt. Arthur C. Longmire, an F-100 jet pilot, of Cleveland, transferred from the Langley Air Force Base to Seymour Johnson Air Force Base, Goldsboro, N.C. An Ohio State graduate, Longmire was recently integrated into the Regular Air Force.

Major Steven B. Mayo of New York City, executive officer of the First Battalion, Sixth Calvary Regiment, Fort Knox, Ky., has been selected to serve as a National Guard adviser in Boston, effective in October.

SIX COLORED officers were among the Army lieutenant colonels who have been selected as eligible personnel for promotion to colonels. They are:

Nichols, Infantry, Staff Officer, New York Military District; Louis J. Beasley, Chaplain, Fort Devens, Mass.; Charles S. Finch, Medical Officer, Okinawa, and John F. Harris, Medical Officer, Kaiserslautern, Germany.

9 Negroes subpenaed here for Un-American hearing

The largest numebr of Negroes ever subpenaed at one time by the House Committee on Un-American Activities, has been handed supenaes for the committee's hearings here in Los Angeles, which start Sept. 2 in the federal building.

The committee has subpenaed Don Wheeldin a newspaperman, Cyril Briggs, former managing editor of the California Eagle, Horace Alexander, 1954 candidate for California Secretary of State on the Independent Progressive Party ticket, Herschel Alexander, Mrs. Charline Mitchell, Mrs. Elizabeth Jackson, Admiral Dawson, Clarence Young, and Charles Mosely.

In addition, the committee has subpenaed Mrs. Marilyn Talley, who is white, but who is married to a Negro civil rights figure, Manuel Talley.

In all, subpenaes have been issued to 70 persons.

The committee stems fresh from the widely protested Atlanta hearings which 200 southern Negro leaders protested in an "Open Letter to the U. S. House of Representatives," published in the Washington Post, were designed to harass integrationists and to set back the "struggle to secure full and equal rights."

The open letter declared the "un-American activity" in the South to be "the bombings of the homes, schools, and houses of worship of not only Negroes, but also of our Jewish citizens; the terror against Negroes in Dawson, Ga.; the continued refusal of boards of registrars in many southern communities to allow Negroes to register and vote; the activities of White Citizens Councils encouraging open defiance of the United States Supreme Court."

[illegible] the most concerted opposition to a hearing the committee has encountered in its existence, although the committee has been rebuffed in Detroit and Boston, and in Detroit had terminated the hearing ahead of schedule, reported because of public demonstrations.

Two Los Angeles congressmen sit on the committee, Congressman Clyde Doyle, of the 23rd district, and Rep. Donald E. Jackson, of the 16th district.

Although he presided over the Boston meeting and acknowledged in a telegram to California State Senator Richards that the Atlanta hearing was an "outgrowth" of the Boston hearing, Doyle did not attend the hearing in Atlanta.

His office in Huntington Park, Los Angeles told the Tribune this week that he will not attend next month s hearing either, but will go abroad "on a committee assignment" as soon as Congress adjourns and will not return until October.

UNOPPOSED IN NOVEMBER

Doyle won on both tickets in the June primary, defeating James Rocke, Compton real estate man on the Democratic ticket, and Theodore Okerson, an accountant, on the Republican ticket.

Although recent penetration of the Southeast area 16 miles into Compton has resulted in Negroes comprising the majority in the district, no Negro has ever opposed Doyle for the Congress seat.

The local Citizens Committee to Preserve American Freedom, with headquarters at 617 N. Larchmont st., issued a statement this week, urging Los Angeles groups and organizations to oppose the hearings and started a drive for signatures to a petition demanding the committee's abolition.

The committee quoted Aubrey W. Williams, president of the Southern Conference Educational Fund, at New Orleans, as saying that the committee accomplishes no purpose except to "get people fired" who appear before it, and "thereby serve notice on all others that this is what will happen to you if you come out in the open and show your hand."

On Atlanta Hearings Results

SCEF Prexy Challenges Rep. Walter To Debate

Aubrey Williams of Montgomery, Alabama, President of the SCEF has challenged Chairman Walter of the House Committee on Un-American Activities Committee to a debate.

Chairman Francis E. Walter today telegraphed Mr. Williams "Your complaint against the recent hearings of this committee in Atlanta caused me to conclude that the hearings must have been very good and effective."

Mr. Williams telegraphed in reply, "I continue to hold the lowest possible opinion of the results accomplished. I feel the public should know what the facts are.

"I therefore suggest that you meet me in open debate, and you present the evidence which causes you to hold that its works in Atlanta was 'good and effective' and I will present evidence that it was a complete failure so far as its revealing anything new and of value on what communists are doing, and that what it did do was what the two hundred Negro leaders charged it would do, namely cooperate with segregationists, Klu Kluxers and white citizens council leaders in trying to discredit and harass white Southerners who are supporting federal law and the mandates of the federal courts."

Williams suggested that the debate take place in the National Press Club of Washington. D. C.

UN-AMERICAN SUBCOMMITTEE

Negro leader is accused in delinquency case

A widely-known Negro insurance executive, who made headlines during August when he was called before a House un-American subcommittee in Atlanta, was arrested here Wednesday morning and charged with contributing to the delinquency of three minor children.

Det. Capt. G. L. Pattie said Hunter O'Dell, 35, of Montgomery, and a female companion, Luellen Brock, 34, of 136 14th-ct. n., were transferred from the city jail to the County Jail this morning on contributing warrants.

O'Dell and his companion were arrested shortly after midnight Tuesday, Pattie said, after a complaint was filed at City Hall indicating that the couple were drinking and behaving indecently in the presence of three minor children.

The children, according to Pattie, are Luellen Brock's by a former marriage. He added that they are 13, 6 and 4 years old.

Pattie said the arrests were made by himself, Det. T. H. Cook and Officer W. W. Reese.

O'DELL, A FORMER student at Xavier University, in Louisiana, and a former merchant seaman, was one of eight persons called before the House subcommittee during August to answer to charges of being "top-level Communists."

O'Dell, known for his efforts to speed integration, invoked the Fifth Amendment when he was questioned about communistic activity, and riled the subcommittee when he suggested they "leave him alone and delve into un-American activities shrouding the suppression of Southern Negroes."

DURING THE subcommittee hearings O'Dell was represented by his Birmingham attorney, Orzell Billingsly.

Det. T. H. Cook said O'Dell claims to be a representative of the Protective Insurance Co. of Montgomery, but he added that a check revealed O'Dell to be on an extended leave of absence from the company.

County Jail authorities said bond for both would be set at $300 some time today.

CRUSADE FOR CITIZENSHIP- MACON COUNTY

Abolish Tuskegee As City, Proposal Talked

Birmingham Herald
Birmingham Ala

MONTGOMERY, Aug. 8 (AP)—A legislative racial study committee heard a suggestion today that Macon County might be left intact and the county seat of Tuskegee abolished instead.

The idea was discussed briefly but left unacted on by the special interim committee which is considering what measures if any should be undertaken to keep Negroes in Macon from gaining political control.

8-8-1958

Under a recently approved constitutional amendment, the Legislature has the power to gerrymander the county out of existence or reduce it in size to break up the heavy concentration of Negroes there. They outnumber white residents of the county nearly 7-1.

P/D

Sen. Broughton Lamberth of Tallapoosa County told his fellow committee members that the City of Tuskegee might be abolished instead of the entire county.

Macon County Rep. J. J. Rodgers, who said he would go along, observed that county could have an unincorporated town as a county seat.

Lamberth's remark came during a discussion of a newly filed Federal court suit challenging constitutionality of a 1957 legislative act which has all but eliminated Negro voting in Tuskegee.

The law left only about a dozen registered Negro voters in Tuskegee by rearranging the city limits and excluding more than 400 voters who formerly took part in city elections.

ALA. STATE SENATOR URGES ABOLITION OF TUSKEGEE

A suggestion to abolish the city government of Tuskegee Ala., to prevent Negroes from gaining control of the City was made by State Sen. Broughton Lambert of Alexander City. The suggestion followed a recently filed suit challenging the constitutionality of a 1957 legislative act that re-arranged Tuskegee's City limits to exclude practically all Negro voters.

CRUSADE FOR CITIZENSHIP-MACON COUNTY
COMMITTEE ON MACON COUNTY ABOLITION

Text Of Macon County Report

Following is the full text of the report adopted Thursday by the Legislative Committee on Macon County for presentation to the Legislative Council, which will forward the report on to the new Legislature when it meets in January 1959. (See story on Page 1.)

Your committee has held meetings in the counties of Montgomery, Russell, Lee, Elmore, Bullock, Tallapoosa and Macon. We have consulted with expert authorities on various phases of the question involved. We have invited all public officials of the various counties involved to appear before the committee at these hearings. Due notice was given of each hearing and anyone present at the hearings was given opportunity to be heard.

We first wish to thank the officials, individuals and groups of the various counties for the cooperative and helpful manner in which we were received and treated and for the suggestions made by them.

Our first meeting for public hearing was held on the 14th day of February, 1958. Only one witness appeared at this hearing. He spoke in behalf of the Tuskegee Civic Assn.

The substance of his testimony was that the Negro citizens of Macon County desired that the boundaries of Macon County be left as they are; that the Tuskegee Civic Assn. is willing to work with public officials and other citizens interested in the development of Macon County; that the office of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. is located at the same place where the NAACP office was located when it was in Tuskegee; and, he admitted on being questioned by a member of the Committee that one of the aims of the Tuskegee Civic Assn. is to integrate schools.

Further public hearings were held in the counties of Tallapoosa, Montgomery, Bullock, Elmore, Lee and Russell, in that order. The Sub-Committee on Judiciary met in open session with officials and citizens of Macon County at the County Courthouse in Tuskegee. These public hearings were held in an effort to determine the sentiment of the people of the counties involved and to give interested citizens opportunity to contribute valuable information to the committee.

Based on the testimony of the witnesses appearing before the committee at the various hearings, the committee concludes that the sentiment of the people is essentially the same in all counties involved, and the sentiment is that the committee and the Legislature should take whatever action necessary to accomplish the purposes for which this committee was established, even to the partition or abolition of Macon County. The committee feels that we should try one or more of the numerous alternatives mentioned, outlines of which are attached to this report as an exhibit, before taking the drastic step of abolition.

Engelhardt

A number of fact-finding subcommittees were established by the committee as a whole. They have reported to the committee and copies of their reports are attached for information only.

The committee finds that the conditions in Macon County are serious, largely as a result of the activities of certain elements in Tuskegee Institute and the Veterans' Hospital in Tuskegee; that if these elements would, or could be made to cease and desist their activities which are, in the unanimous opinion of this committee, detrimental, the citizens of Macon County, both white and colored, could live in peace and harmony and make progress together to their mutual benefit as was the case from the establishment of Tuskegee Institute by Booker T. Washington in 1881 to "Black Monday" on May 17, 1954; that the attitude and actions of the Federal Civil Rights Commission will, of necessity, have a bearing on the future actions of the Legislature in this matter and that in the opinion of this committee the Legislature of Alabama will not tolerate interference in Macon or in any other county in Alabama by the Federal Civil Rights Committee. The interest of all citizens of Alabama, white or colored, will best be served by Alabama authorities and not by authorities who have no understanding of our problems, which problems are not of our own making but are problems brought about largely by outsiders who are not interested in the welfare of the people of Alabama.

The committee recommends that the "Standby Committee" recommended in the report of the Sub-Committee on Judiciary should be created. The Legislative Council is requested to cause to be drafted appropriate legislation to accomplish the following:

The creation of a permanent "Macon County committee to consist of the Representatives in the House from the counties of Montgomery, Elmore, Tallapoosa, Lee, Russell, Bullock and Macon, along with the senators from the 28th, 10th, 27th, and 26th Senatorial Districts. The senator from the 26th Senatorial District should serve as chairman of the committee.

The permanent "Macon County Committee" should meet on the call of the chairman or at such other time as a majority of the committee may decide and at the place or places designated by the chairman.

The permanent Macon County Committee should have the duties and responsibilities of continuing the study of conditions in Macon County and the contiguous counties particularly and the state as a whole generally with the view of keeping current information on the problems of segregation. It should follow very closely the activities of the recently created Federal Civil Rights Commission and make recommendations from time to time to the Legislature to meet any changing conditions or emergencies that may arise in Macon County. The permanent Macon County Committee should be directed to report to the Legislative Council at least once each year its opinion on conditions in Macon County, along with any recommended legislative action it feels needed at the time.

The chairman of the Macon County Committee shall cause to be printed sufficient copies of this report to furnish every member of the incoming Legislature with a copy of same at the organizational session in January, 1959. Copies of the various sub-committee reports are on file with the Legislative Reference Service and are made available to any member of the Legislature desiring them.

(Signed by: Sen. Sam Engelhardt of Macon, chairman; Rep. H. James Hall of Montgomery, vice chairman, and Sens. Vaughan Hill Robison of Montgomery, Brouthton Lamberth of Tallapoosa and Joe Smith of Russell, and Reps. J. J. Rodgers of Macon; J. A. Crook and M. B. McClendon of Bullock; Charles Adams and Tom Johnson of Tallapoosa; D. W. Ward and Roberts Brown of Lee; Jack Law and Hardaway Johnson of Tallapoosa; Joe Dawkins, Joe Goodwyn and Wilbur Nolen of Montgomery.)

Tuskegee Event Set For June 24

Defender

Chicago Ill.

TUSKEGEE INSTITUTE, Ala. —The first anniversary celebration of weekly mass meetings, sponsored by the Tuskegee Civic Association since June 25, 1957, will be held at the Greenwood Missionary Baptist church, of which the Rev. Raymond F. Harvey is the pastor, Tuesday evening, June 24.

The principle message will be brought by C. G. Gomillion, president of the Tuskegee Civic Association. Sharing the program will be the Revs. S. T. Martin, pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church (and the first mass meeting speaker), K. L. Buford, pastor of the Butler Chapel AME Zion church, and C. W. Kelly, pastor emeritus of the Greenwood Missionary Baptist church.

The weekly mass gatherings which began one year ago at the Butler Chapel church, the birthsite of Tuskegee Institute, grew out of requests by scores of local Negro citizens to the TCA, who sought direction and leadership from the 20-year-old organization.
